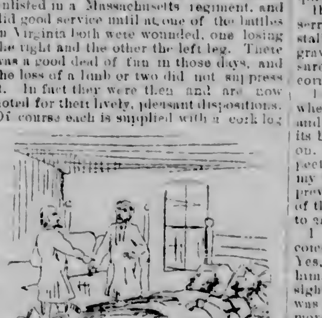
Harbinger of right good cheer,
Dauntless little Monitor!

Deathless strife! Its thunders rolled
Round the world in echoes cold,
Rolling on in history's track.
Sunk the ships, the sailors gone,
Who with matchless blood and brawn
Fought the monster Merrimac.

Facts and Figures.



... to eight. Of the colored troops enlisted one out of every seven died of disease. The proportion among the white troops was one to fifteen.

Now that we are brushing up these figures, it will be well enough to remember how many men were furnished by each State, and the following list will show:

Maine	71,745
New Hampshire	31,[illegible]
Vermont	[illegible]
Massachusetts	151,[illegible]
Rhode Island	24,811
Connecticut	52,270
New York	4[illegible]
New Jersey	79,511
Pennsylvania	[illegible]
Delaware	13,8[illegible]
Maryland	4[illegible]
West Virginia	30,[illegible]
District of Columbia	16,872
Ohio	317,133
Indiana	19[illegible],147
Illinois	258,217
Michigan	90,119
Wisconsin	96,118
Minnesota	2[illegible]
Iowa	[illegible]
Missouri	1[illegible]
Kentucky	7[illegible]
Kansas	20,0[illegible]
Total	2,[illegible]

In the number of her sons sacrificed in the cause of the Union Vermont led all the other States by a heavy per cent., with the exception of Kansas.

Vermont's proportion per thousand contributed to the total of deaths in action was 5[illegible]; that of Ohio 2[illegible]; that of New York 3[illegible]. Massachusetts ...

Fun on Wooden Legs.

... came along and relieved them from their dilemma, and each arrived safely at their homes.

At another time the two brothers arrived one evening in Newburyport and put up at a hotel which was for some reason so crowded that they were obliged to accept a double-bedded room with two strangers. The brothers retired first, and in the spirit of fun one took the two cork legs and placed them in the bed so that the feet projected several inches beyond the foot-board, and then lay there awaiting results. After a time the two strangers were shown to the room, and proved to be two countrymen. They had nearly completed preparations for retiring when one of them stepping along to extinguish the light caught sight of the feet. Glancing on the bed he saw that the man was resting his head on the pillow. He turned to his companion, remarking, "Great Scott! See what they have put in this room with us! Here is a fellow eight feet long!"

Daniel Pratt.

Among the war reminiscences of the late Daniel Pratt, not the least humorous and interesting was that which occurred at one of the forts south of Alexandria in the fall of 1862. The Fourteenth Massachusetts Regiment, afterward the First Massachusetts Regiment of heavy artillery, was stationed at this place, and when the "Great American Traveler" put in an appearance, the boys—many of whom knew him, and all, of course, had heard of him—gave him a rousing time. They made a banquet for ...

Frightened on Picket.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for August 28—"Piety Without Display."

The subject for the lesson on the 28th instant may be found in the first fifteen verses of the sixth chapter of Matthew. Time, summer of A. D. 28. Place, Mount of Beatitudes.

SPECIAL MENTION.

Alms-giving. Alms here means acts of kindness to the poor, the giving of money, food, clothing, or any such supply to the destitute. The history of the word "alms" is singularly interesting. In the original meaning of the Greek it was the quality of mercy. The practice of the Hellenistic Jews limited the word (eleemosyne) to money gifts. It passed with this meaning into European languages in various forms, "aumone," "almosn," and at last the word of six syllables and rich fullness of meaning contracts and collapses into our modern English "alms." (Ellicott.) Alms-giving is abundantly enforced as a religious duty both in the Old and the New Testaments. (Abbott.) Whilst you can not argue the genuineness of a man's religion from the fact of his alms-giving, because the hypocrite gives "alms," you can argue the worthlessness of a man's religion from the neglect of his alms-giving. (Thomas.) Alms-giving was held in high honor among the Jewish people. At their feasts they never forgot the poor (Esther ix. 22). By poet and prophet the virtue was accounted as a good evidence of genuine piety (Psalm xli. 1), and this was why it was appropriated by the Pharisees ...

NO, OH NO,

"YOU WILL NEVER SELL THEM" IS WHAT SOME FOLKS SAID ON SEEING OUR MAMMOTH STOCK OF BASKETS, OVER 12,000 IN NUMBER. BUT WHERE ARE THEY TO-DAY? Our Cash Drawer answers, SOLD!

The same skepticism prevailed when we opened our magnificent Spring stock of goods, replete in all the Novelties and Styles one could find on city counters or all that city trade could ask for. Where are they to-day? Again our Cash will answer, SOLD!

OUR LADY FRIENDS APPRECIATE JUST SUCH A CLASS OF GOODS AS WE CARRY. THEY APPRECIATE IT BECAUSE WE CARRY SUCH A VARIETY OF NO TWO ALIKE PATTERNS IN DRESS GOODS. WE CARRY THEM BECAUSE WE HAVE THE UNRIVALLED MEANS OF DOING SO, AND ALWAYS WILL. IT TAKES GRIT TO DO IT AND NOW WE ARE PREPARING TO RECEIVE OUR MAMMOTH FALL STOCK ABOUT SEPT. FIRST.

We are in grand shape to show them because we have cleaned nearly out on staple goods.

Our Eastern Buyer is only watching the markets and soon all the latest novelties will be received by the importers. Do not be induced to buy too early as it is a fact undisputed by anyone familiar with the laws of trade that the market days of retail buyers commence about Sep. 1st.

REMEMBER Friends, that we are watching the markets and study your every want, and we'll soon convince you of this.

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.

Marine Jottings.

The largest steamboat in the world is to be built for the Fall river line. It will be called the Puritan, and will be 404 feet long at the water line. She will have 355 state rooms and all modern improvements. She will cost $1,500,000.

A petrified anchor was grappled up near Green Bay, a few days since, and it is presumed to be the Griffon's, lost 308 years ago. It was constructed from a young maple tree, having three branches from the root. Another bar was fastened on resembling a round top wooden stool. On the bottom was fastened the flukes, which were bars of oak crossing each other and filled with stones to weigh it down.

It is understood that Capt. Vanderhoef last week accepted the proposition of Sandusky parties, and will deliver the Thos. Friant to them here on Oct. 1st. The Friant has become the most popular boat which ever touched at this port, because of her speed, staunchness, and the accommodating spirit of her owner and commander, Capt. Vanderhoef, and were the Friant to be taken off the Petoskey and Charlevoix run without the assurance that her place would be filled by as good or better boat, there would be universal regret. We are glad to state however, that Capt. Vanderhoef will this winter build a larger and faster boat and have her ready by the opening of navigation to take the Friant's place on the route. He has not yet decided on her dimensions, but she will probably have double the carrying capacity, and more than double the power of the Friant. The enterprising captain will never rest satisfied until he has a boat which can run from the mouth of Pine river to the Petoskey dock—18 miles—in an hour without hurrying her at all.—Record.

Religious.

Congregational Church.

There will be preaching at the Congregational church next Sunday morning and evening. Remember the Thursday evening prayer meeting.

Elsewhere.

Preaching next Sunday morning and evening at the Ironton M. E. church, by Rev. S. Steel, of Northport. Also at Johnson's, at 11 o'clock and at Black's at 3:30 o'clock.

Masonic.

Special communication of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M., next Tuesday evening, Sept. 6th, for work on third degree.

W. A. Smith, W. M.

Hasings from Hayes.

John Fish was the first man in Hayes to thresh his grain this fall.

Burgess will be a station on the D. C. & E. R. R. All she has to do is to spread her wings in each direction and connect Charlevoix to Petoskey.

Mrs. J. S. Webster has gone to Ohio visiting friends.

Abram Letts, an old homesteader on Bear lake, sold his farm, and started for Missouri last Monday.

Jacob Greensky is lying very low with consumption.

The mound-builders seem to have made G. O. Scott's farm headquarters for supplies. He has discovered several hundred more of their caches.

Mrs. E. Lewis, of Geneva, N. Y., is visiting her sister, Mrs. G. O. Scott.

Frank Kane, highway commissioner, has resigned, and the town board will appoint a man to fill the vacancy next Saturday.

—The Hay Fever Association met at Michell's Hall, Petoskey, yesterday.

By a law passed at the recent session of the state legislature, justices of the peace are authorized to draw orders for witness fees directly on the county treasurer. By the old plan accounts had to go to the board of supervisors before they could be paid.

On Saturday last Prof. C. B. Cochran and wife left Charlevoix to return to their home near Philadelphia, Pa. While in Philadelphia he expects to purchase a large assortment of chemically pure drugs and chemicals and other goods, for the firm of F. A. Cochran & Co., with which he is connected. Prof. Cochran is professor of the State Normal School, at West Chester, Pa., and also state inspector of foods. For the past eight years he has had considerable experience as a purchaser of drugs and chemicals, of New York and Philadelphia manufacturers. The customers of the firm which he represents will have the benefit of this experience.

The Wakefield Medal.

The Sentinel still has the Mary Wakefield medal fund open for subscription and with pleasure publishes it as far as heard from:

Captain Beatty,	$5 00
Hon. John S. Dixon,	5 00
Capt. M. Kehoe,	5 00
Dr. J. A. Carlstein,	2 00
Rev. W. G. Clarke,	1 00

We shall hold it open for subscriptions until a suitable amount is secured. Let us hear from others.

The Game and Fish Laws.

The printing of the new compilation of the fish and game laws has been unavoidably delayed, and to answer the numerous inquiries which are constantly being received from all parts of the state in reference to various provisions of the laws, as amended at the last session of the legislature, the following synopsis of the laws, as they are now in force, has been prepared. The compilation, which is all prepared, will be printed within a few weeks and will be placed in the hands of deputy wardens for distribution.

GAME.

The following are the open seasons when it is lawful to take the kinds of game mentioned: Deer, lower peninsula, Nov. 1 to Dec. 1; upper peninsula, Oct. 1 to Nov. 15. Hounding and jack-shooting, and killing while in any waters, and killing by pits or traps, prohibited.

Ruffed Grouse—(partridge)—Sept. 1 to Jan. 1; Pinnated Grouse (prairie chicken)—Sept. 1 to Nov. 1; Quail—Nov. 1 to Jan. 1; Wild Turkey—Oct. 1 to Jan. 1; Ducks—wild ducks, wild geese or other water fowl, or snipe, Sept. 1 to Jan. 1.

The exportation of deer, grouse, quail and wild turkey killed contrary to law is forbidden and is punishable. Game is not to be kept for sale after eight days succeeding the time limited for killing.

Common carriers are subject to fine for transporting game unlawfully killed.

Proof of possession of game or fish out of season is prima facia evidence of the violation of the laws protecting the same.

FISH.

The following are the open seasons when it is lawful to take the kinds of fish mentioned:

Bass—(black, strawberry, green or white bass)—between March 1 and June 15 can be caught only by hook and line.

Speckled Trout—May 1 to Sept. 1; Land-locked Salmon—May 1 to Sept. 1; Grayling—June 1 to Nov. 1.

Speckled or brook trout or grayling can be caught only by hook and line, and it is unlawful to catch in any manner, or at any time, or have in possession brook trout or grayling, California trout or land-locked salmon of a size less than six inches in length. Brook trout or grayling are not to be caught for the purpose of sale or shipment.

Proof of possession of any fish at any time when the catching is prohibited is made prima facia evidence of a violation of the law. The fine varies from ten dollars to one hundred dollars.

It is unlawful to take or kill any fish at any time by the use of any explosive substance, or any substance or device which has a tendency to stupefy the fish.

The spearing of any fish is prohibited during the months of March, April, May and June, in any waters of the state, except lakes Michigan, Superior, Huron, Saint Clair and Erie and Saginaw Bay. The use of seines, pound nets, gill nets or any species of nets is prohibited, except in lakes Michigan, Superior, Huron and Erie, and the bays and harbors connected with those lakes, and in Saginaw Bay and the Sault Ste. Marie, Saint Clair, Saginaw and Detroit rivers.

It is unlawful to fish with nets, or any other device for catching fish, within a radius of three hundred feet of any fish shute or ladder, or dam to which it is attached; and it is also made unlawful to place weir-dams or weir-nets across any stream, in such a manner as to obstruct the free passage of the fish, or so as to extend a distance from the channel bank of more than one-third the breadth of the main channel.

The meshes of the parts of pound or trap nets, commonly called the lead, the funnel and the heart, shall not be less than five inches in extension, and the part called the pocket shall not be less than three and one-half inches in extension. Pockets with meshes of not less than two and one-half inches in extension may be used for taking perch, herring and pickerel. The meshes of gill nets shall not be less than four and three-fourths inches in extension. The meshes of seines shall not be less than three and one-half inches in extension.

Base Ball.

On Thursday of last week, our citizens witnessed the most exciting and hotly contested game of the season, between the Cheboygan and Charlevoix teams. At the sixth inning the score stood 7 to 4 in favor of Charlevoix, and the following three innings they never crossed the plate, while the Cheboygan's gradually walked up, until the last inning when a man was put out when coming in from third that would have tied the score. The score stood, Charlevoix, 7; Cheboygan, 6.

On Friday our boys were again victorious although the game was not as interesting as the day before. Our boys did some great batting, but the many errors on both sides allowed the scores to run up. A passed ball by Klock let in 3 scores for Cheboygan, and another by Miller let in two for Charlevoix. The score by innings:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Charlevoix	1	4	1	1	0	0	[illegible]	0	3	—13
Cheboygan	0	0	2	0	2	3	0	0	2	—9

Ironton.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Ironton Helping Hand Society, at their special meeting August 22d.

Whereas, A divine and mysterious providence has seen fit to remove from our midst by the hand of death, our friend Mary E. Friel, whom we all respected and loved and whose loss we mourn.

Resolved, That this society deeply deplores the unhappy circumstances which have attended her long illness and death, and

Resolved, That we tender the bereaved parents and relatives the sincere and heartfelt sympathy of this Society in the hope that a higher consolation may be richly imparted to each wounded heart.

Resolved, That the secretary be instructed to furnish a copy of these resolutions to the parents of the deceased and to the county papers for publication.

Circular.

Headquarters Baxter Post, G. A. R.,
Charlevoix, Michigan, Aug. 30, 1887.

All members of Baxter Post, and other Soldiers and Sailors in this vicinity, who desire to attend the annual Re-union of the Soldier's and Sailors' Association of Northwestern Michigan at Reed City on Sept. 6, 7 and 8, are invited to meet at the law office of E. H. Green on Friday evening, Sept. 2d, to make the final arrangements concerning the attendance. By order of

B. H. Krebs, Adjutant pro tem.
E. H. Green, Commander.

An Explanation.

As Dr. Preston has circulated the report that an examination of my back made by him and Drs. Carlstein and Chamberlain some months ago and that they all agreed that there was nothing the matter of me but laziness, and that I could work as any man. The report has injured me in different ways, and the Drs. certificate will prove that the report is false.

W. J. Bradley.

NOTICE.

The undersigned certify on their honor, to whom it may concern, that they some months past made an examination of the case of W. J. Bradley and found him suffering to the best of their judgment and belief from a deceased condition of spine, located in the lumbar or lower portion of spinal column. It is sometimes called spinal irritation and various other names according to the different tissues of the spinal cord that may be affected or involved. It is a disease which incapacitates the subject more or less for the performance of physical exercise. A subsequent examination recently made has coincided with and confirmed their former opinion.

Dated Charlevoix, Mich., Aug. 16th A. D. 1887.
P. C. Chamberlain, M. D.
J. A. Carlstein, M. D.

In addition to the foregoing they further state that Dr. Preston was present and participated in the consultation.

—Six hundred and thirty trains pass through Petoskey monthly, not including the dummy.

Our line of staple dry goods is complete. B. See.

The Property known as the Sweetland Sanitarium, on the South upper terrace in the village of Charlevoix, is for sale or rent. Enquire of E. H. Green, Charlevoix, Mich. tf

Horse for Sale.

A six year old gray mare, weight, 1,200 pounds; good, sound, kind and gentle. A good work horse, and a perfect horse for ladies' driving. Inquire at this office.

We would call the attention of the ladies to our fine line of flannel and woolsie dress goods. B. See.

Come and get some roast ox on labor's grand holiday Sept. 5.

—Bring your basket of provisions. Labor will furnish the meat.

—Capitalists and corporations have their Bacchanalian feasts and banquets. Labor will banquet on roast ox.

—We ask the hearty co-operation of toil, Labor day, Sept. 5. You are requested to lay aside your tools and give that day to labor reform. ***

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. Notice is hereby given that by an order of the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix, made on the 8th day of August, A. D. 1887, six months from that date were allowed for creditors to present their claims against the estate of Henry Bennett late of said county deceased and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said Probate Court at the Probate office in the village of Boyne City, for examination and allowance, on or before the 9th day of January next, and that such claims will be heard before said Court, on Monday the 3d day of October, and on Monday, the 9th day of January, next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of those days.

Dated, August 8th, A. D. 1887.
JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. Notice is hereby given, that by an order of the Probate court for the county of Charlevoix, made on the 15th day of August A. D. 1887, six months from that date were allowed for creditors to present their claims against the estate of Henry Wagner, late of said county, deceased, and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said Probate Court, at the Probate office, in the village of Boyne City, Charlevoix county, Michigan, for examination and allowance, on or before the Sixth day of February next, and that such claims will be heard before said court on Monday, the Third day of October, 1887 and on Monday, the Sixth day of February, 1888 next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of those days.

JAMES A. KEAT,
Dated Aug 15th, A. D. 1887. Judge of Probate.

CLOTHING.

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.

My Prices are so Low that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

New Fall Dry Goods

NOW ARRIVING.

We were never before in such good condition to offer BARGAINS. Our stock is CLEAN, FRESH, and being Constantly Replenished.

We offer the choicest and most complete stock of

GROCERIES!

and our PRICES are LOWEST For BEST GOODS.

Our stock of CROCKERY is being overhauled.

Special drives in WHITE GRANITE EARTHENWARE, This Week.

J. L. HURD & CO.

BARGAINS!

In the largest stock of NEW GOODS ever before received in Charlevoix.

FOR THE PUBLIC BENEFIT

We have purchased our stock of FALL and WINTER GOODS a week or so earlier than usual. While other stores are advertising Clearance Sales of their old stock we are advertising Bargains in an unusually elegant stock of Dry Goods, Carpets & Clothing.

Our Stock is HERE,

AND AWAITING YOUR INSPECTION. WE ARE PROUD TO SAY TO THE LADIES THAT WE HAVE AS FINE A LINE OF DRESS GOODS AS CAN BE FOUND IN ANY CITY.

FALL AND WINTER SUITS FOR MEN, YOUTHS & CHILDREN, of all the latest styles.

In Ladies Furnishings & Bazaar Goods we have a long list of Bargains.

Before purchasing elsewhere, give our store a call,

ALICK ROSENTHAL,
LEWIS BLOCK.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO.—19 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1887. WHOLE NO. 928

NEW Drugs, Stationery,
NEW Confections, Cigars,

F. G. HINES & CO. Druggists.

EMREY BROS.

Boots and Shoes for almost nothing, to close out.

We have a number of pairs of Boots and Shoes which we will almost give away as we are closing them out.

We are also going out of

CROCKERY

and have a complete assortment which must be sold

WE WILL NOT TAKE A BACK SEAT ON SUMMER DRY GOODS. PRICES ALWAYS LOW.

IN GROCERIES and Provisions we can suit you, as we receive Fresh Goods weekly.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

DON'T

BUY FALL GOODS TILL YOU SEE OURS.

We Hold our Custom because our Prices are Always Low.

OUR FALL ASSORTMENT OF GENERAL MERCHANDISE now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces EVERYTHING usually found in a General Store.

Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours.

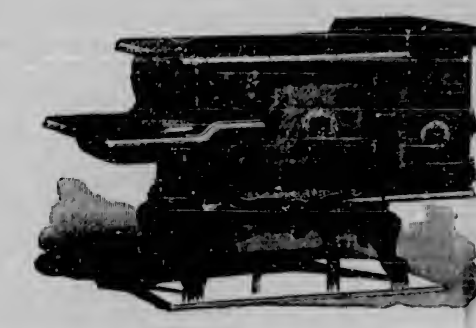
Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

YOU'D BETTER HEAR US!

LISTEN!

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $ $ $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.



HERE we show one of our New stoves. One of the finest Kitchen Stoves ever made. Yes, we can safely say the finest. But we leave you to judge, come and see for yourselves. Make our store your stopping place, you are always welcome, and your welcome does not depend on you buying anything. Price and quality guaranteed on everything.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

The Best Groceries

At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture

AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

---

WANTED!

Everyone to know that we are here and doing Business, and will do just as we agree to by one and all. We keep GROCERIES and PROVISIONS, FLOUR AND FEED, CROCKERY AND GLASSWARE.

Choice Butter and Fresh Eggs a Specialty. Call on us or order by Telephone.

WILL SEE & CO.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY SMITH & PARMELEE, Charlevoix, Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
One year $1 50 | Six months $ 75
Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—The cry is still for rain.

—Bernard Burns is erecting a residence on the north side.

—Black bass in large numbers are being caught in Round Lake.

—The Methodist ministers are at Petoskey attending Conference.

—Henry Barth is erecting a residence near the Wilcox boat house.

—L. D. Bartholomew & Co., the hardware men, have a new pictorial advertisement this week. Read it.

—Marshal See handed his resignation to the Council on Thursday last, and his successor will be elected to-morrow evening.

—John Cooper had the third and fourth fingers of one of his hands cut off at Smithson's shingle mill, on Saturday. Dr. Carlstein was called.

—The ninth annual fair of the Western Michigan Agricultural and Industrial Society, will be held at Grand Rapids, Mich., September 19, 20, 21, 22 and 23.

—Aldrich Sisters, at their popular millinery and dress-making establishment, in the Ingleside building, have received a full new line of goods which they desire the ladies to call and inspect.

—The steamer Gracie Barker has done a big business this season, carrying about 4,000 passengers a week between Bay View, Petoskey and Harbor Springs during the busy time. She has not missed a trip.

—It has been suggested that during the days of the forthcoming county fair, a pioneer association be organized. Grand Traverse and Antrim counties have such associations, why should not Charlevoix?

—Major Green, Commander, and sixteen members of Baxter Post, G. A. R., left Monday for Reed City, to attend the reunion of the Northern Michigan Soldiers' and Sailors' Association, of which Major Green is commanding officer.

—Boyne Citizen: The new mail route from here to Charlevoix which commenced the 1st inst., will prove a great convenience, especially during the winter. Under the former condition of things it took about four days to send a letter to and receive an answer from Charlevoix, 16 miles distant. Mail leaves here at 7 a. m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, and returning on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays arrives at 3 p. m. It is anticipated that the route will be made daily on the opening of navigation next year.

—Major F. M. Peale, a noted patron of the turf from Carlisle, Ky., is again a sojourner at his annual hay fever retreat, the Fountain City House. He is a jovial good fellow and takes a laudable pride in being recognized as a pilgrim from the land of brave men, beautiful women and fast horses. His friends at the Fountain City House assert that he receives many mysterious packages from home marked: "Glass—Handle Carefully." It is believed however, that the packages contain no dynamite, as the Major is known to be a relentless foe of Anarchy and Socialism.

—The marriage of Mr. Al. T. Washburn, the popular young Charlevoix merchant, and Miss Jennie L. Matthews, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Matthews, of 641 Third ave., Detroit, occurred at the home of the bride, Monday eve., at seven o'clock. The ceremony was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Grinnell of First Baptist church, Detroit. The happy couple took the City of Mackinac the same evening for a trip of the lakes intending to arrive at Charlevoix this afternoon on the City of Grand Rapids. The bride will meet a great many warm friends at Charlevoix whom she has made upon frequent visits to her uncle, Major Green, who will be glad to welcome her here again as Mrs. Washburne. The Sentinel joins in the universal congratulations.

—The report of the Michigan Indian Agent, Mark W. Stevens, of Flint, will favor the industrial school system of teaching the Indians. It will also show that the Indians in the upper peninsula are more prosperous than those in the southern part of the state, and Mr. Stevens attributes it to the fact that in the north, lands are held under a restrictive patent, while the Indian landowners in the south hold their property in fee simple. Landsharks find them an easy prey, while the restrictive patent protects their more unfortunate brothers. Stevens will recommend that no more property be deeded to Indians in fee simple. There are now 25,000 thousand acres of land subject to allotment on the L'Anse reservation, 6,000 in the Isabella and other lands in Emmet and Charlevoix counties. Out of 1,000 Indian children of school age but 169 are in the government schools of which there are now eight in operation. They cost about $4,000 a year. The amount spent last year for various benefits was about $6,000.

—Bishop Ninde will preach at Bay View, Sunday.

—Sidewalk building is still the order of the day.

—Miss Inie Gage will teach in the Charlotte schools the coming year.

—Mrs. M. P. Burns, of Traverse City, is visiting her son, H. S. Harsha.

—Mrs. W. H. Downer and son returned to their home in Lake Geneva, Wis., yesterday.

—The Rifenburg Milling Co. have completed a fine and substantial dock on their river front.

—The Charlevoix cigars manufactured by Phillips, are coming to the front with local dealers.

—J. T. Kirkpatrick returned last week Wednesday from a visit with relatives and friends in Canada.

—B. F. Ingalls, of Boyne City, will leave Saturday for California, to take up his permanent residence there.

—R. W. Kane left Monday for Flint to attend the annual reunion of the State Business Men's Association.

—D. S. Way has a variety of photographic views of the Labor Day procession which are going off like hot cakes.

—H. H. Vannornam is lying very low with paralysis at his home in Norwood Township, and his recovery is doubtful.

—A. T. Washburne & Co. in their large advertising space, call attention to the mammoth line of cloaks they expect soon.

—D. Sherwood & Co., the boot & shoe dealers, present some truths for your consideration in their advertising space in this issue.

—The steamer Friant will give an excursion to Bay View Sunday, for the benefit of those wishing to attend the M. E. annual conference.

—Since June 1st, A. J. McLeod has shipped over $3,000 worth of meat from Chicago, and has slaughtered to the value of $1,200 besides.

—Alick Rosenthal has received his line of fall and winter cloaks and jackets. The ladies should give him a call. Notice his new announcement.

—The base ball team has disbanded for the season, closing up a record which unquestionably constitutes them the champion club of Northern Michigan.

—Benzonia college opens the year under very favorable circumstances. Prof. Stephen B. Harvey, from Hillsdale college has been engaged as principal, with a competent corp of assistants. The fall term begins Oct. 4th.

—V. F. Thurston has removed his ice cream and fruit stand to Bridge Street, between the Bridge St. House and the Newman House, and keeps a full line of Ramsdell's fruit, and the best ice cream and confectionery.

—The Annual reunion and campfire of the Antrim County Soldiers' and Sailors' Association will be held at Eastport Sept. 14th, 15th and 16th. There will be addresses by Rev. H. S. Mellon, J. J. McLaughlin, R. Leavitt, H. B. Hudson and Rev. W. H. McCartney. The camp-fire in the evening is expected to be an enjoyable feature of the occasion.

—Work has begun on the new buildings of the Acme Woolen mills which will be moved to Traverse City this fall. A. W. Wait has the contract. The main building will be 60 x120 feet, the center of this, 30 by 120, will be two stories high, this upright, above the wings, will be iron sides; all roofs will be of iron, all walls of brick; there will be a two story wing, of brick, 40x30 feet, iron roof.

—Among the recent arrivals at the Fountain City House are Judge Walter F. McEntire, of St. Louis, Mo., and his beautiful bride. They have been enjoying their honeymoon on the crystal waters of this upper lake region and express themselves as charmed with their trip and with the delightful atmosphere and surroundings of Charlevoix. We believe the Judge is a democrat in politics, but we will venture to temper the violence of his "offensive partisanship" by the historical remark once made by the governor of North Carolina to the governor of South Carolina.

—The Record gives this record of farming at Cross Village: Father Weleamp, who has been at the head of the Indian mission at Cross Village for forty years, and who for 25 years has kept an accurate record of the results upon the Mission farm, which has been cultivated by the brothers of the convent under his personal oversight, testifies that the average yield of wheat upon the Mission farm for more than twenty years has exceeded thirty bushels to the acre: Oats, 60 bushels; rye, 27; barley, 26; potatoes, 400; beets, 400; carrots, 400; turnips, 500; ruta bagas, 500; and timothy hay, 2½ tons. The Mission farm giving these results is not the best land by any means in Emmet county, but it has the advantage of being stumpless and highly cultivated.

Neighborhood News.

Boyne Citizen: The firm of Long & Draper, of South Arm, has been changed to A. L. Draper & Co. with W. S. Johnson of Sutton's Bay, as the Co. —Capt. Jepson, of the Clara Belle, has concluded to locate here and has moved into the Fuller place on Lake street.

Charlevoix Summer Resort Items.

Eighty boarders at the Belvedere.

Miss Ladd has returned to Ann Arbor.

Gen. King and family leave this afternoon.

Miss Stevens of Detroit, is visiting Miss Marie Heaton.

H. L. Bishop, wife and sons, returned to Kalamazoo, yesterday.

Geo. E. Stockbridge was called to New York by telegram, Monday.

Prof. Jones of the State University has returned to remain until the 15th.

One touch of Autumn makes the whole world think of getting home to town.

Mrs. D. Boudeman and family and Dr. Backus and wife return home to-morrow.

S. C. Moffatt and wife of Reading, were guests at Breezy Point cottage, yesterday.

Miss Antha DeCamp of Ovid, and Miss Etta Rowan of Petoskey, dined at the Belvedere Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Brace Brown of Blissfield are visiting the latter's aunt, Mrs. H. P. Parmelee.

Mrs. Arthur Funk, son and daughter of Bloomington, Ills., are at the Belvedere for the hay fever season.

Resorters are remaining later this year than ever before. Three fourths of the cottages were still open yesterday.

I. R. Krum, wife and daughter and Luman Burr and wife of the Chicago resort are boarding at the Belvedere now that the Club House is closed.

Henry H. Smith, of Washington, journal clerk of the House of Representatives, spent a part of last week on the resort. He is highly pleased with Charlevoix and will bring his family with him to spend next season.

Rev. Dr. Brank and wife of St. Louis who have been spending a few pleasant weeks at the Heaton cottage, return home this week. Dr. Brank is the pastor of one of the leading Presbyterian churches in St. Louis and is a zealous Charlevoix resorter.

Advertising and the Cash System.

A merchant of long experience in selling dry goods said recently: "I have tried fancy cards, almanacs and circulars, but the best of all advertising mediums is the newspaper. I pay special attention to my newspaper advertisements and change them every week. The city in which I do business is too small to support a daily newspaper, but I utilize the columns of the weeklies to the best advantage. As it regards the benefit of newspaper advertising over all other mediums there can be no two opinions. When other plans fail of desired results, not so the newspaper. It circulates everywhere, and advertisements, if properly displayed, are sure to be read. Advertisements appearing in reputable journals seem to possess an authority and command an attention which is entirely lost in a circular. The former speaks with positiveness; the latter seldom makes an impression, and is thrown aside without a thought.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

There will be no services at the M. E. church next Sabbath. An opportunity will be offered for members of the church and others to attend conference services at Petoskey returning home in the evening.

Congregational Church.

There will be preaching at the Congregational Church next Sunday, morning and evening, Rev. Dr. Mather preaching at one of the services. Prayer meeting Thursday evening.

Baptist Church.

Services as usual next Sunday, morning and evening. Sunday school immediately after the morning services. The Tuesday evening meeting will be devoted to the study of the Sunday School lesson. Prayer meeting Thursday evening. Non-attendants at other places of worship are cordially invited to join with us in these services.

"What is it Good For?"

Detroit Tribune: "What is the G. A. R. good for, anyway?" asks a democratic editor. Well, it is good for the country, and several other things. It is good for the old soldiers to dwell together in unity; it is good to perpetuate the memory of the deeds of those who died in their country's service; to keep alive the best patriotic sentiment of the nation; to meet together under the old flag which they fought for and saved and swear at the altar to protect it against traitors and treason; to look after and provide for the soldier's widow and brother comrades in sickness or distress, etc.

What is the G. A. R. good for, do you ask? Why, my poor benighted, erring brother, the G. A. R. during the past year disbursed over $253,000 in charity out of its own pocket and over 26,000 worthy people were its beneficiaries. Some of this fund went to relieve the distressed in the sunny south; was distributed among the Charleston sufferers; yea, even among those who fought on the other side.

What is it good for, do you still ask? Why, bless you, it is good for a life as long as the life of its last comrade and as noble and proud a record as the historian ever wrote.

Cull shingles and lumber for sale cheap, or will exchange for farm produce. Apply at Burns & Scroggie's livery barn. tf

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

NOTHIN' TO SAY.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Nothin' to say, my daughter! Nothin' at all to say!—
Girls that's in love, I've noticed, ginerly has their way!
Yer mother did, afore you, when her folks objected to me—
Yit here I am, and here you air! and yer mother—where is she?

You look lots like your mother: Purty much same in size;
And about the same complected; and favor about the eyes.
Like her, too, about livin' here, because she couldn't stay;
It'll most seem like you was dead like her!—but I hain't got nothin' to say!

She left you her little Bible—writ yer name acrost the page—
And left her ear-bobs fer you, ef ever you come of age.
I've allus kep' 'em and gyarded 'em, but if yer goin' away—
Nothin' to say, my daughter! Nothin' at all to say!

You don't rikollect her, I reckon? No; you wasn't a year old then!
And now yer—how old air you? Why, child, not "twenty!" When?
And yer nex' birthday's in Aprile? and you want to git married that day?
. . . I wisht yer mother was livin'!—but—I hain't got nothin' to say!

Twenty years! and as good a gyrl as parent ever found!
There's a straw ketched onto yer dress there—I'll break it off—turn round.
(Her mother was jest twenty when us two run away!)
Nothin' to say, my daughter! Nothin' at all to say!—Century.

TRICKS IN POLITICS.

BY HAROLD I. CLEVELAND.

PART I.

"Ain't I a politician?"

That was the question of the Hon. Jake Slocum, as he sank back into his chair.

A student of the faces of politicians would not have mistaken Jake Slocum for anything else.

He was a politician in all that the name implies. His fox-shaped face, acutely pointed nose and bloodless lips; his small, twinkling eye, and thin, gray locks of hair, all betrayed the calling of the man.

In dress he wore a costume of modest pattern but stylish cut. Jewelry he eschewed save the gold band that glittered on one finger.

Pervading the man was an air of coarseness and gentility. He was so open in his manner of approach that honest men felt the chill of suspicion when in his company.

He was styled Honorable for his services to the High Taxation party, of which he was a leader in Jacp County. He had distinguished himself during legislative sessions in the Third House, and in the art of silencing the voice of the people he was an adept. With these qualifications he possessed also a lack of sensibility as to right and wrong that gave him a still stronger claim to the title of politician.

Despite his advantages for arbitration through these experiences, he was vulgar but strong. His power was that of the middleman who acts as the agent in unquestionable transactions between men's consciences and his Satanic Majesty.

He was unloved, but feared most by those who knew him best.

Yet as a politician he was honored for his unchanging partizanship. [illegible]

WAR REMINISCENCES.

Old Soldiers Rehearsing the Stirring Scenes Through Which They Passed.

Anecdotes of the Battle-Field, the Camp-Fire, and the Merry March.

A Friend to Remember.

BY SERGEANT ALEX. BLACKBURN.

Of wonderful battles, and wonderful men,
Our people have written again and again;
They have sung of our marches, and sung of our flag
Speaking much in pure truth, and some in pure brag.
Be it mine, in my humble, unrhythmical way,
To speak for a friend who has not had his say
A foreigner born, yet made subject to draft,
Who always brought cheer, yet never once laughed;
A kernel by rank, though private oft beat him—
Who furnished much drink, though none offered to treat him
Who was counted a friend to love and admire,
Yet never a foe could so quick draw our fire.

And strange as it seems, it will bear sayin' yet,
No foeman so oft felt the brave bayonet,
Whose good local head was true to the core,
And still there was none the Johnnies loved more.
You old soldiers know well what this all is about,
But recruits at our camp fire may be in some doubt;
I'll be plain in my speech from this word to the end,
I am talking of coffee, the soldiers' old friend.

In camp it was coffee to keep off the blues,
And soften the hard-tack, tough as soles on our shoes;
Over coffee we talked of the coming campaigns,
Of the battles we'd fought, their losses and gains.
The aroma so fragrant reminded of home,
And our dreams were made sweet of the peace yet to come;
Out on picket I see two men, bent on killing,
Relent as within they feel lack of filling.

The Johnnie wants coffee, and would relish a cracker,
While the Yank would give both for some "blackleg terbaccer;"
So he fixes his bayonet, for no other use
Than to hold out his hat and call for a truce;
"Hello, Johnnie," he shouts, till he hears "Hello, Yank!"
"Got terbaccer for coffee?" "Bet yer life," and a thank;
And then these fierce men, who would shoot one another,
Trade tobacco and coffee, like sons of one mother.

And just here a word about coffee mills,
Those cranky inventions the groceryman fills;
I don't understand the machines or their tricks,
[illegible]

... it as these soldiers do it. Put a sixteen-pound musket over your shoulder. Hang a cartridge box over your hips loaded with forty rounds of fixed ammunition. Sling on a haversack filled with a peck of cooked rations. Fold your wool blanket and your rubber blanket, and strap them over your shoulder. Add your canteen full of water. Here you have anywhere between sixty and eighty pounds weight. You wouldn't like this, young fellow, would you, on one of your pedestrian tours?

Moreover, the man who thinks that there is no difference in easily walking at will along the green roadside, and marching in a column in the middle of a dusty road, with a man before him, behind him, and on one or both sides of him, had better try both ways before forming his opinion.

The column moves on—cavalry at the front, artillery in the intervals, infantry strung out at the route-step, wagons at the rear, all toiling on. In the first hour you may hear talk, jokes, speculations about the campaign, etc. But the sun mounts higher and blazes down fiercely upon us. The air is full of dust; everybody is covered with it. The march grows painful. The canteens are empty. Thirst, weariness, heat, are upon you all at once. It is the perfection of misery in the soldier's life.

The ranks are silent; the laugh and jest have ceased. These men are suffering bodily torment. They grit their teeth; they clutch their muskets; they drag themselves along. Do they complain? Yes, in a mild way; else they would not be soldiers. They mutter to themselves; they grumble; but they keep on. How much nature can bear without the body fainting and failing, they have a hundred times found out.

The bugle sounds a halt; it is a ten-minutes' rest. They sink to the ground in their tracks, and make the most of the brief pause. A man in each company is loaded with a dozen canteens and dispatched for water. The bugle sounds again; we get up and wearily resume the march.

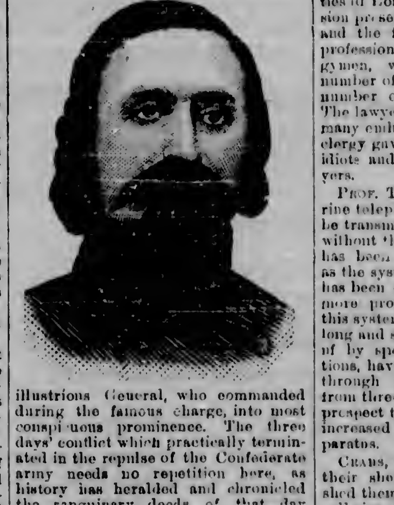
I have seen men fall with sunstroke at such a time, never to rise again. I have seen faithful soldiers tumble in their tracks, clear spent with weariness. How can I speak of these things [illegible]

How We Marched.

BY JAMES FRANKLIN FITTS.

[illegible]

General George E. Pickett.



Mrs. Pickett.

BITS OF SCIENCE.

[illegible]

REMINISCENCES OF PUBLIC MEN.

BY BEN: PERLEY POORE.

Among other anecdotes which have been handed down at Washington, was one of an incident at the table of President John Adams, when Gouverneur Morris, then a Senator in Congress from the State of New York, was one of the invited. It was at the time of the feud existing between the President and Gen. Hamilton, arising from animadversions of the latter upon the sudden compromise of our differences with the French Republic. Mr. Morris was called on by Mrs. Adams for a toast.

"Madame," said he, "I will give the health of my friend Hamilton."

The lady indignantly replied: "Sir, that is a toast never drank at this table."

"Suppose, then, madame," was the cool rejoinder, "we drink it now for the first time?"

"Mr. Morris," exclaimed the excited hostess, "if you persist I shall invite the ladies to withdraw!"

"Perhaps," retorted the imperturbable Senator, "it is time for them to retire."

The signal was given, and as the ladies rose in obedience to it, the Senator sprang from his seat and stumped on his wooden leg to the door, threw it wide open, and, with his constitutional boldness, fairly bowed Mrs. Adams and her lady guests out of the room.

Among the many stories told by Thurlow Weed about Martin Van Buren, was one narrating an incident which occurred on the deck of a Hudson River steamboat, on the way from Albany to New York. The merits of Mr. Van Buren were being discussed when the boat touched at Kinderhook and "The Little Magician," as he was called, came on board. One of the party had been dwelling upon his non-committalism, and complaining that "a plain answer to a plain question was never yet elicited from him. [illegible]

... himself has searched for an oak tree in a Surrey wood which was said to show a blood-red sap in memory of a murder committed in its vicinity. At all events, if a deed of blood had been committed near the spot, the tree in question had forgotten all about it, for no blood issued from its wound, and a disbelief in bleeding trees had to add itself to many another negative conclusion.

The peculiarities, no less than the existence, of trees admit of mythological explanation; and strangely abused those explanations often are. Here, for instance, is one of the jagged form of the oak leaves, an explanation of the same order as that which traces the minute holes in the leaves of the St. John's wort to the needle with which the devil pricked it as a punishment for its devil dispelling powers. The devil agreed with a man that he should have the latter's soul at the time when the oak leaves fell; but when he came to look at the oak in the autumn he found it still in leaf, nor did it part with its old leaves till the new ones began to sprout. In his rage and disappointment he scratched the leaves so vehemently that they have been in consequence jagged ever since.—Gentleman's Magazine.

In Central Soudan.

In shady nooks sit picturesque groups of natives in all kinds of combinations discussing the news of the day, haggling over a purchase, or busily engaged in embroidery or making up of gowns and trousers. This trade, we may note, is here entirely in the hands of men, who ply the needle with much skill. Farther on we meet a courtier gorgeously dressed, looking in his voluminous garments a very Falstaff in bulk, as he goes ambling past on his still more richly decorated horse, bent on a little exercise in the cool of the evening. Of the personal appearance of this aristocrat I shall not now speak, but we may take notice of the horse. By good-luck here happens to be one standing waiting to be [illegible]

FACTS ABOUT FANS.

[illegible]

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCES.

[illegible]

The Poor Little Ones.

We often see children with red eruptions on face and hands, rough, scaly skin, and often sores on the head. These things indicate a depraved condition of the blood. In the growing period children have need of pure blood by which to build up strong and healthy bodies. If Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is given the blood is purged of all bad elements, and the child's development will be healthy, and as it should be. Scrofulous affections, rickets, fever sores, hip-joint disease, or other grave maladies and sufferings are sure to result from neglect and lack of proper attention to such cases.

The tight laced woman has always good staying power.—Boston Gazette.

A Lovely Complexion.

"What a lovely complexion," we often hear persons say; "I wonder what she does for it?" In every case the purity and real loveliness of the complexion depends upon the blood. Those who have sallow, blotchy faces may make their skin smooth and healthy by taking enough of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" to drive out the humors lurking in the system.

In prohibition States liquor seems to be a drug.—Washington Post.

The best cough medicine is Piso's Cure for Consumption. Sold everywhere. 25c.

RADWAY'S PILLS,

For the cure of all disorders of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Bladder, Nervous Diseases, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Constipation, Costiveness, Indigestion, Biliousness, Fever, Inflammation of the Bowels, Piles and all derangements of the Internal Viscera. Purely vegetable, containing no mercury, minerals, or deleterious drugs.

A FINE, SURE MEDICINE.

[illegible] HENRY KENWORTH, Chebanse, Iroquois County, Ill.

What a Physician Says of Radway's Pills.

[illegible] DR. A. C. MIDDLEBROOK, Doraville, Ga.

DYSPEPSIA.

DR. RADWAY'S PILLS are a cure for this complaint. They restore strength to the stomach and enable it to perform its functions. The symptoms of Dyspepsia disappear, and with them the liability of the system to contract diseases. [illegible]

KIDDER'S DIGESTYLIN

A SURE CURE FOR INDIGESTION and DYSPEPSIA.

FOR CHOLERA INFANTUM.

[illegible]

WM. F. KIDDER & CO., Manufacturing Chemists, 83 John St., N.Y.

KIDDER'S PASTILLES. Sure relief ASTHMA. [illegible] Stowell & Co. Charlestown, Mass.

MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE.

Best in the World. Get the genuine. Every package has our Trade-mark and is marked Frazer's. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

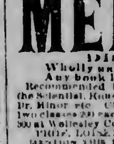
WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN

Cures Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Catarrh, Croup, Sore Throat,

RHEUMATISM,

Lame Back, Stiff Joints, Sprains, Bruises,

[illegible]



THOUSANDS say that Ely's Cream Balm cured them of HAY-FEVER. Apply Balm into each nostril.

MARVELOUS MEMORY DISCOVERY.

[illegible]

MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PAYNE ENGINES.

ENGINES AND BOILERS of all Sizes.

WRITE FOR CIRCULAR AND TELL US WHAT YOU WANT.

B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Drawer 1130, ELMIRA, N. Y.

BRANCH OFFICES: 10 South Canal Street, CHICAGO, Ill. 45 Dey Street, NEW YORK.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets

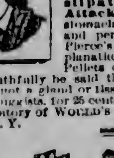
SIZE OF PELLETS.

THE ORIGINAL LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS!

Always ask for Dr. Pierce's Pellets, or Little Sugar-coated Granules or Pills.

BEING ENTIRELY VEGETABLE, Dr. Pierce's Pellets operate without disturbance to the system, diet, or occupation. Put up in glass vials, hermetically sealed. Always fresh and reliable. As a LAXATIVE, ALTERATIVE, or PURGATIVE, these little Pellets give the most perfect satisfaction.



SICK HEADACHE,

Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the stomach and bowels, are promptly relieved and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. In explanation of the remedial power of these Pellets over so great a variety of diseases, it may truthfully be said that their action upon the system is universal, not a gland or tissue escaping their sanative influence. Sold by druggists, for 25 cents a vial. Manufactured at the Chemical Laboratory of WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

BOILS CURED.

WILLIAM RAMICH, Esq., of Minden, Kearney County, Nebraska, writes: "I was troubled with boils for thirty years. Four years ago I was so afflicted with them that I could not walk. I bought two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, and took one 'Pellet' after each meal, till all were gone. By that time I had no boils, and have had none since. I have also been troubled with sick headache. When I feel it coming on, I take one or two 'Pellets,' and am relieved of the headache."

THE BEST CATHARTIC.

MRS. C. W. BROWN, of Wapakoneta, Ohio, says: "Your 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets' are without question the best cathartic ever sold. They are also a most efficient remedy for torpor of the liver. We have used them for years in our family, and keep them in the house all the time."

$500 REWARD

is offered by the PROPRIETORS OF DR. SAGE'S Catarrh Remedy

FOR A CASE OF CATARRH WHICH THEY CAN NOT CURE.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH.

Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery, and inflamed; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a nasal twang; the breath is offensive; smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. However, only a few of the above-named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, less understood, or more unsuccessfully treated by physicians. By its mild, soothing, and healing properties,

DR. SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY

CURES THE WORST CASES OF

Catarrh, "Cold in the Head," Coryza, and Catarrhal Headache.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE.

PRICE, 50 CENTS.

UNTOLD AGONY FROM CATARRH.

Prof. W. HAUSNER, the famous mesmerist, of Ithaca, N. Y., writes: "Some ten years ago I suffered untold agony from chronic nasal catarrh. My family physician gave me up as incurable, and said I must die. My case was such a bad one, that every day, towards sunset, my voice would become so hoarse I could barely speak above a whisper. In the morning my coughing and clearing of my throat would almost strangle me. By the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, in three months, I was a well man, and the cure has been permanent."

CONSTANTLY HAWKING AND SPITTING.

THOMAS J. RUSHING, Esq., 2902 Pine Street, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I was a great sufferer from catarrh for three years. At times I could hardly breathe, and was constantly hawking and spitting, and for the last eight months could not breathe through the nostrils. I thought nothing could be done for me. Luckily, I was advised to try Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and I am now a well man. I believe it to be the only sure remedy for catarrh now manufactured, and one has only to give it a fair trial to experience astounding results and a permanent cure."

THREE BOTTLES CURE CATARRH.

ELI ROBBINS, Runyan P. O., Columbia Co., Pa., says: "My daughter had catarrh when she was five years old, very badly. I saw Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy advertised, and procured a bottle for her, and soon saw that it helped her; a third bottle effected a permanent cure. She is now eighteen years old and sound and hearty."

... Sarsaparilla ... Prepared by ... Lowell, Mass. ... One Dollar.

DETECTIVES

[illegible] GRANNAN DETECTIVE ... Cincinnati, O.

JONES HE PAYS the FREIGHT ... Wagon Scales ... $60. ... JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

For a woman to say she does not use Procter & Gamble's Lenox Soap, is to admit she is "behind the times." Nobody uses ordinary soap now they can get "Lenox."

PENSIONS Send for Pension Laws to U. S. Claim Agents FITZGERALD & POWELL, Indianapolis, Ind.

PATENTS R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D.C. Instructions and opinions as to patentability FREE. 17 years' experience.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $1.50, FREE. Lines not under the horse's feet. Write Brewster Safety Rein Holder Co., Holly, Mich.

MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Dr. J. Stephens, Lebanon, Ohio.

MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PILES Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is a sure cure for blind bleeding or itching piles. Cure guaranteed. Price 50c and $1. At druggist's or mailed by WILLIAMS MFG. CO., Cleveland, O.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR.
ED F. PARMELEE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

CHARLEVOIX, SEPT. 7, 1887.

Poor McGarigle is still being hunted like a wild beast in Canada. He would be much more comfortable within the quiet walls of Joliet.

Mrs. Cleveland will not write anything for the press, it is emphatically announced from Washington. The President thinks one literary woman in the family is quite enough, and it really is one more than he wanted.

The old battered silk hat worn by Mr. Blaine on his trip through Pennsylvania during the last campaign, is kept in a glass case by the Republican Committee of that State. It will be a chilly time for Mr. Cleveland when that old hat gets into the next campaign.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage is at Bar Harbor with his family. His two handsome daughters dress in striking costumes, his son sports one of the biggest "blazers" at the Bar, and Mrs. Talmage also has handsome diamonds. The Talmage family seem disposed to enjoy all that is going.

The decision of the supreme court of Illinois in the case of the Anarchists will be announced at Ottawa Sept. 6. It is generally expected that the conviction, judgment and sentence of death will be affirmed. If such shall be the decision, an appeal will be taken to the supreme court of the United States.

The house in Springfield in which Mr. Lincoln lived when elected President has been conveyed to the State of Illinois, and a valuable collection of memorials of the martyr President will be preserved there perpetually. The trustees appointed to take charge of the matter have entered upon their duties. It is eminently fitting that the Lincoln homestead should become public property. It is a shrine to which every lover of liberty will be glad to make a pilgrimage.

This is what Francis Murphy, the well-known temperance apostle has to say of his third party prohibition friends: "The prohibitionists are always fighting the republican party. If I had to take my chances of doing good in a political way for the temperance cause I would join the republican party. I do not think the prohibitionists will ever elect a president." This is outside testimony from an undoubted temperance source that ought to have weight with thousands of well meaning temperance people. And it will have.

At her home at San Diego, California, Mrs. E. O. C. Ord possesses the celebrated Lone Star Corps flag which floated over General Butler's headquarters at New Orleans and other places during the great struggle. It is composed of two stripes, one of red and one of blue material, each about a yard wide. In the center is a large white star. The flag, as it now hangs in Mrs. Ord's back parlor, is somewhat tattered. A large piece is torn from off a lower corner, and the flag has many significant little holes made by dangerous minie rifle-balls.

A reporter for the Toledo Blade has had an interview with Robert T. Lincoln regarding the proposed nomination of the latter for President. Mr. Lincoln expressed himself emphatically as opposed to the movement, and while he did not declare, specifically, that he should decline the nomination, if tendered him, his expressions are certainly susceptible to that inference. In the conversation Mr. Lincoln said: "I have seen too much of the wear and tear of official life to ever have a desire to re-enter it. Though I was but a boy when my father became President, I can well remember the tremendous burden he was called upon to bear. True, the conduct of the war made the cares of the office then infinitely more exacting; but I have seen enough of the inside of Washington official life to have lost all desire for it. The Presidential office is but a gilded prison. The cares and worry out-weigh, to my mind, the honor which surrounds the position. All official life is infinitely wearisome. I had my fill of it while a member of Mr. Arthur's cabinet, and I made up my mind at that time that, when my official term was completed, I should return to Chicago and end my days there in the practice of my profession. * * * I do not think there is any likelihood of my receiving the nomination. The men who make the tickets could hardly do so without exacting certain pledges and those pledges I would not give. I think that would soon end all talk of myself. I doubt whether there has been for years, a presidential candidate for whom personal pledges were not made, either by himself or by his friends. Perhaps it is not true of Garfield—his nomination was peculiar."

Northern Michigan News.

The work of grading the road bed for Mr. Ward's new railroad, from Alba to the Michigan Central, is being steadily pushed forward.

Elk Rapids is waiting patiently for the G. R. & I. officials to make up their minds whether or not they will build that railroad. As it is now, the town is on the rugged edge of uncertainty.

If our railroad fails to reach us this fall, the winter approaching will without a doubt be the snuggest we have ever experienced in Elk Rapids. Make your calculations accordingly, and should the projected enterprise terminate this fall you will be so much the better off.—Progress.

Mancelona Herald: Carpenters, bricklayers and masons have had little reason to complain of lack of employment in this village during the season. So great has been the demand that at times it has been almost impossible to find workmen.

A Bellaire man has bought some dynamite cartridges which he proposes to sow in Intermediate lake for the benefit of the sea-serpent recently seen there. When they go off the monster will want to go too, it is thought, and an attempt will be made to capture him.—Evening News.

There was a reunion of soldiers and sailors held at Roscommon two weeks ago at which about 200 veterans—mostly from towns along the line of the Michigan Central road—were assembled. It was voted to hold the reunion next year on the third Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of August, at Cheboygan.

"Ticket!" called out a G. R. & I. conductor to a tottering, white-haired man the other day, as a passenger train slowed up at Big Rapids. "Why, I gave you my ticket when I got on at Mancelona," said the old man querulously. "Oh, no, uncle," replied the sharp conductor, "Nobody got on at Mancelona but a little boy." "I know it; I'm that boy."—Evening News.

Boyne Citizen: Mrs. C. Coan, an aged widow lady living all alone on her place about three miles east of here, met with a serious loss on Wednesday through the burning of her house and contents. The fire is reported to have spread from burning underbrush, and all that was saved was a trunk and two chairs. Mrs. Coan is now stopping with her son, John Dorenburg, of Bay Springs.

A prominent Petoskey lawyer missed his family cat; and soon afterward acquired a rich and fragrant aroma all over the house. Eventually he found the cat. It was dead ripe, having in some manner got down between the studding in the walls. The said p. p. l. cut a hole in the wall big enough to drive an ox cart through before he struck the spot where the unfortunate Tom was imprisoned.

A Republican reporter while in Petoskey on Saturday learned that a bloody affray occurred at the Arlington in the morning, brought on by a colored waiter. During the excitement two or three parties received severe wounds about the head while one of the cooks came near having his arm severed in twain. The wounded are laid up for repairs. The trouble it is said grew out of an order for a guest.

Improvements are being made on the dock at Mackinac City with a view to preparing it for the new railroad transfer, which will run next season. One side of the pier has been torn down and it will be enlarged. Two steam dredges are at work dredging out to a distance of 500 feet, increasing the depth from 12 to 20 feet. The Michigan Central are doing the work, employing about seventy-five men, but the transfer will be a joint affair, taking both G. R. & I. and M. C. trains across the straits to St. Ignace.

In speaking of when he was a boy, Good John, the oldest Indian in Mason county, says: "No white men here, some Detroit, some Mackinaw, four houses Chicago; Chippewa Indian Mackinaw, Ottawa here, way down Kalamazoo; Pottawatomie Chicago. Mason county, no much Indian! plenty bear, wolf, deer, coon, otter mink; plenty fish. No coat, no shoe; squaw make moccasin, weave shirt. Me mader Ottawa; me papa Chippewa. By'mr my coat, shirt come Mackinaw; Indian go for him. Pere Marquette bury here; cedar tree so high grave; now wash down Lake Michigan."—Evening News.

The success of every town depends almost wholly on the efforts put forth by its citizens. The town must be advertised, not spasmodically, but continuously. Every man who comes into the place should be offered some inducements to stay and make it his home. Give us anything but a sleepy lifeless country burg where the citizens and business men oppose incorporation, or fire protection, or in fact any good thing that will cost them a cent, and who apparently live and care only for the dollar that may chance to come within their reach. It is the live, energetic and public spirited men that build up towns and get on in the world.

Petoskey Record: The Connable family will be pretty widely dispersed this winter. Mr. and Mrs. Connable and Walter, will spend the winter in the south. Mrs. Stanton will probably be with her son in Chicago. Arthur and Ralph will manage the business here, and Alfred will be in school at Ann Arbor.——A black bear haunts the swamps and thickets near Wequetonsing, but attends strictly to his business of hunting berries. It is said that there is not nearly as many young couples go botanizing from that resort as formerly, and the sparking is all done on cottage steps and in row boats now.——Certain of the brethren asseverate that Alderman Spencer when over to Charlevoix last week at the Masonic school of instruction, could'nt tell the difference between Crouter's drug store and the Thomas Friant. What's the matter with a fellow who cannot distinguish between a two-story frame drug store and a one-story steamboat? We wouldn't ask if he was not basely trying to shift the story on to poor Bowman. The Masonic brethren swear he is a teetotaler, and that it was caused by over fatigue. P'r'aps. We move the appointment of a committee of investigation with Alderman Daly as chairman, all the same.——J. E. Darrah has taken time by the forelock and gone into camp about a mile west of Carp lake with 18 men and 6 teams. He has a million and a half of round timber to get out into Cecil Bay, and about 300 thousand near the water tank above Pelston.——Despite the introduction of electric lights in Petoskey and Cheboygan, the consumption of kerosene oil has largely increased during the past year in this inspection district.——Philo French, who has been on a six weeks visit to Pittsburg, returned Friday night. He says he spent all his money and had to come whether or not.——Emanuel Episcopal church has called Rev. C. T. Stout of Toledo, and he is expected to assume the duties of the rectorship in about a fortnight.

Correspondent Grand Rapids Eagle: Less than fourteen years ago I went over the G. R. & I. R. R. to Petoskey, on the opening trip, with Gov. Bagley's inspection party. Gen. Geo. W. Cass, Hon. J. N. McCullough and some others prominent in the Pennsylvania Central and Continental Improvement Companies, were of the party. The terminus at Petoskey was at the foot of a maple tree, and men were just then busy in putting lumber upon the ground for the first building, near where now is the station. It was a cool night, there was snow on the ground, and after a hurried inspection (by the Governor, of course) we started back to go round to Traverse City. Somebody on that car served up a delicious meal of speckled trout and the proper accompaniments. That was about fifteen years after the inception of that railroad enterprise. Its initial organization was that in 1856 of a company in Grand Rapids, of which John Ball was President, Wm. H. Withey, Vice President, and Peter R. L. Pierce, Treasurer. The Directors were Wm. A. Richmond, John Ball, Daniel Ball, John M. Fox, Wilber Foster, Charles Shepard, Wm. H. Withey, Frank E. Gilbert, F. W. Worden, A. H. Hovey, Geo. Coggeshall, Geo. C. Evans, and A. B. Watson. The Commissioner's were S. L. Withey, J. W. Pierce, A. Platt, David Burnett and Boardman Noble. Just cast your eye over that list and see how many of them are alive to-day. Engineer Innes that season surveyed a preliminary line as Newaygo. He estimated the cost from Grand Rapids to Traverse City at $4,010,000 via Newaygo, or $3,914,970 via Croton. Later a route further east was selected. Soon came on the war, and some ten or twelve years passed before active railroad construction began north of Grand Rapids. At first it went hard and slow. It was hard to get money for the work. Two or three extensions of time to earn the land grant were asked for and given. There was a struggle then between several parties to get to the front and secure that grant. The stepping in of Pennsylvania railroad capitalists, the re-organization of the railroad company and the formation of the syndicate called the Continental Improvement Company finally gave the impetus which it owed to success. Scold about the men and money that did it as much as we may, cry out against "land grabbers" and "bloated capitalists" as we will, who would now turn the wheels of progress in Northern Michigan back fifteen or twenty years to begin anew? Who but a fanatic, an ignoramus or an idiot? Look at Grand Rapids, more than quadrupled in wealth, by railroads! Look at these growing villages and these thriving manufacturing enterprises, helped into existence and pushed steadily on, by railroads! Study for a moment the divisions of labor and and the great field created for so many classes of laborers in this region, by railroads! Think of these and of the interdependence, and all the relations existing between them and then answer—who would turn back the wheels?

ICE CREAM PAR EXCELLENCE.

We would respectfully inform the public that, we have at considerable expense, prepared and suitably furnished our Band Pagoda as an Ice Cream parlor, and have placed it at the head of all similar institutions in Charlevoix. It will be open for the use of the public at all times save on Wednesday evenings, when there will be a Grand Concert by the Band. Our cream will be as good as can be made. Just received a large lot of Ice Cream Packages holding from one quart to one or more gallons, which will be loaned to customers for safely carrying cream to their homes. The quality of our cream speaks for itself. Our stock of foreign and domestic Fruits is always large and of the best quality. We carry as fine a line of confectionery, nuts, etc., as can be found in town.

Respectfully,
O. W. SMITH.

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

STANDARD TIME.

Charlevoix and East Jordan.
STR. NORTH STAR, ... CAPT. MO. THOMPSON.
Leaving Charlevoix at 6:30 a m and 1:30 p m and returning leave East Jordan for Charlevoix at 9:30 am and 4 p m, touching at intermediate points both ways.

Charlevoix and Boyne City.
STR. JOSEPH BORDEN ...... CAPT. LEWIS GEARD.
Leave Charlevoix at 6:30 a m. and 1 p. m., and Boyne City at 9:30 a.m., 4 p. m., touching at way ports.

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan.
STR. THOS. FRIANT, ... CAPT. B. VANDEVENTER.
MORNING: Leave Harbor Springs, 7:30; Petoskey, 8:00; Charlevoix, 9:30; arrive, East Jordan 11:30.
AFTERNOON: Leave East Jordan 1:30; Charlevoix, 4:00; Petoskey, 5:30; arrive, Harbor Spring, 6:00.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE.
PROP. LAWRENCE, ... Capt. Geo. Thorp.
Going North, Chicago, Fridays 8 p m; Charlevoix, Sundays 3 p m; Cheboygan, Mondays 4 a m.
Going South, Cheboygan, Mondays 4 p m; Charlevoix, Tuesdays 8 a m; Milwaukee, Wednesdays 4 p m; Chicago, Thursdays 12 m.
Emrey Bros., agents, Charlevoix.

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS.
CITY OF GRAND RAPIDS, ... Capt. O. E. Wilbur.
Going North, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays: Leave Traverse City 7 a m; Northport 9:30; Charlevoix 11:30; Petoskey 1:30 p m; Harbor Springs 2; Cross Village 4:30; Mackinac Island 7:45 arriving at St. Ignace 8:20.
Going South, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays: Leave St. Ignace 6 a m, Mackinac Island 7, Cross Village 10:15, Harbor Springs 12:45 p m, Petoskey 1:15, Charlevoix 2:45, Northport 5:15 p m, arriving at Traverse City at 7:45 p m.
J. L. Hurd & Co., Agents, Charlevoix.

Bank of Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security
Is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its Capital and conservative management.

Its Officers
Never Speculate. Their business creed is: That to Speculate with ones own money, is folly; that to do so with the money of others, is criminal.

Security in Banking
Is the question of first importance to both Bankers and Depositors; and, believing that it furnishes unusual guarantees, therefore,

This Bank Invites
People generally to intrust their money to its keeping. Just liberality will mark its dealings.

This Bank Will
Borrow Investment money when desired, paying as large interest thereon as shall be compatible with safe use of the money.

Parties Seeking
Productive employment for money, and desiring to escape the expense and trouble of the management of private investments, will find attractive security in this Bank's

Investment Notes,
Now earning Five per cent. yearly interest. These notes afford investors much more perfect security than Savings Bank deposits.

We Solicit Your Patronage.

Farming Lands

500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.

These lands are timbered with beach and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets

By Water and Rail

And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.
The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the center of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is

Not a Wilderness by any Means.

It contains a population of 250,000 souls and is rapidly filling up with settlers from almost every state in the Union.

Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.

Send for English or German Pamphlet. Address
W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner,
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.
TITLE PERFECT.

160 Acres in MARION
Township For Sale at a Bargain, Terms to suit.

MONEY TO LOAN ON
Approved Real Estate Security.
THEODORE R. CHAPIN,
Boyne City.

JOHN CONNOR,
Fashionable
Boot and Shoe
MAKER.
Hand Sewed French Calf Gaiters, $5; Man's Kip and Calf Boots, $4.50; Half-soling, 50 cents. Defy competition.
All Work Guaranteed.

ONCE MORE TO THE FRONT!

WITH AN ENTIRELY NEW STOCK OF
DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS,

Which I have just purchased for CASH, getting the lowest prices & best discounts.

And I propose to give my Customers the benefit of all bargains.

No shelf-worn or old goods for you to select from. I hereby extend an invitation to all my friends and old customers to call and examine my goods and get prices.

Cor. Bridge & Main sts.

VERY RESP'Y,
B. SEE.

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. Notice is hereby given that by an order of the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix, made on the 8th day of August, A. D. 1887, six months from that date were allowed for creditors to present their claims against the estate of Henry Bennett late of said county deceased and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said Probate Court at the Probate office in the village of Boyne City, for examination and allowance, on or before the 9th day of January next, and that such claims will be heard before said Court, on Monday, the 3d day of October, and on Monday, the 9th day of January, next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of those days.
Dated, August 8th, A. D. 1887.
JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. Notice is hereby given, that by an order of the Probate court for the county of Charlevoix, made on the 15th day of August A. D. 1887, six months from that date were allowed for creditors to present their claims against the estate of Henry Wagner, late of said county, deceased, and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said Probate Court, at the Probate office, in the village of Boyne City, Charlevoix county, Michigan, for examination and allowance, on or before the Sixth day of February next, and that such claims will be heard before said court on Monday, the Third day of October, 1887 and on Monday, the Sixth day of February, 1888 next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of those days.
Dated Aug 15th, A. D. 1887. JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Sheriff Sale.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a writ of fieri facias issued out of the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, in favor of Hiram V. Rifenburg, against the goods and chattels and real estate of Adelbert B. Upright and Ida C. Emrey, in said County, to me directed and delivered, I did, on the 26th day of June, 1887, levy upon and take all the right, title and interest of the said Adelbert B. Upright and Ida C. Emrey, in and to the following described real estate, that is to say lots 126, 127, and 91, in Upright & Hurlbut's Addition to the Village of Charlevoix, the undivided ½ of Lot 2, Section 23, Town 34 North, of Range 8 West, North ½ of South East ¼ of Section 29, Town 31 North, of Range 7 West, Charlevoix Co., Michigan, also 20 shares of stock in the Charlevoix Manufacturing Company, a corporation existing in accordance with the laws of the State of Michigan, said shares representing $25 each. All of which I shall expose for sale at public auction to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House in Boyne City in said county, on the [illegible] day of September A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.
Dated, Aug 4, 1887.
D. H. JERRUE, Sheriff.
By Wm. Schmidt, Deputy Sheriff.
CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys for Plaintiffs. [106]

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the money secured by a certain mortgage, dated the 2d day of August, 1883, executed by Levi House, and Emily House, his wife, of the Township of Hayes, county of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, to Edwin M. Clark, of Charlevoix, Michigan. Said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for said county of Charlevoix, in Liber Eight (8) of Mortgages, on page one hundred and ninety-one, (191) on the 25th day of August, 1883, and said mortgage was, on the 25th day of October, 1883, duly assigned by said Edwin M. Clark to Martha J. Ayers, of Plattsburg, Clinton county, New York, said assignment was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said county, on the 25th day of October, 1883, in Liber ten (10) of Mortgages, on page four hundred and eighty-five, (485) and said mortgage is now due and owned by the said Martha J. Ayers. And, whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said Mortgage at the time of this notice, is the sum of Two Hundred and Nineteen Dollars and sixty-two cents, ($219.62) of principal and interest, and no proceedings having been instituted at law or in equity, to recover the debt now remaining due, or any part thereof: Now therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises in said mortgage described, as all of those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the Township of Hayes, in the county of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Lot three, (3) and the south-west quarter of the north-east quarter, of Section Nineteen, (19) in Township Thirty-four, (34) North, of Range Seven (7) West, containing seventy (70) acres, more or less, according to the United States survey, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with the costs of this foreclosure, and the stipulated costs therein mentioned, which will be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the Village of Boyne City, in said county of Charlevoix, that being the place where the Circuit Court in and for said county is held, at one o'clock in the afternoon, on the 15th day of November, 1887.
Dated, August 17th, 1887.
MARTHA J. AYERS, Assignee.
J. M. CLARK, Attorney for Assignee.

CHARLEVOIX
Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Henry Bennett, O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls, A. Buttars,
A. R. Upright, A. Fox,
F. A. Smith.

CAPITAL $25,000
SURPLUS 2,009

The liabilities of Stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art. 3174, Sec. 40 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. Superior facilities for the transaction of every legitimate branch of Banking business extended to our customers on terms as favorable as are consistent with safety.
Drafts drawn direct on the leading commercial cities of the world in large or small amounts. Money to loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest.
We respectfully solicit your patronage.

CORRESPONDENTS:
NATIONAL PARK BANK - - - NEW YORK.
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK - - - CHICAGO.
NAT. CITY BANK - - - GRAND RAPIDS.
DETROIT NAT. BANK - - - DETROIT.

CROSS & SONS.,
Buy and Sell all kinds of
Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.
Charlevoix, - Mich.

WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK
DETROIT, - - MICH.
$500,000 TO INVEST IN BONDS
Issued by cities, counties, towns and school districts of Michigan. Officers of these municipalities about to issue Bonds will find it to their advantage to apply to this Bank. Blank bonds and blanks for proceedings supplied without charge. All communications and inquiries will have prompt attention.
May 87. S. D. ELWOOD, Treasurer.

Take The Sentinel.

DAN'L S. WAY,
Photographer.
In Bradbeer's Gallery.
Photographs of all sizes taken.
Old Pictures copied and enlarged.
CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,
ARCHITECT
AND CONTRACTOR,
—ON—
Chalevoix Summer Resorts.
I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.
I employ only first-class workmen, both
Carpenters and Painters.
Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention
J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller
Offer a
Mammoth Stock
OF
BOOTS, SHOES
and other
FOOT WEAR,
--AT--
LOWER PRICES
Than can be found elsewhere in the County.
We have just secured a
FIRST-CLASS
SHOEMAKER,
And will make Repairing a specialty.
We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.
NOTHING SHODDY.
Fox & Miller.

RIFENBURG
MILLING CO.
Charlevoix, Mich.
Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealer
3 EXTRA GRADES
OF
FLOUR
Feed, Corn Meal, Graham
We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL
Litney & Steimel
LIVERY,
And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.
Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the
BEST BOATS!
The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references
I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the
LEAST MONEY!
All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.
LEAVE ORDERS
with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you
Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.
J. BEAUVAIS.

BETTER THAN MEDICINE!
KEEP YOUR
FEET WARM.
You can't enjoy good health unless you clothe the feet properly.
D. SHERWOOD & CO.
have just received the finest line of Fall and Winter
BOOTS & SHOES
ever brought to Charlevoix. Give them a call.

A. J. McLEOD,
Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail
All kinds of
FRESH MEATS,
SALT PORK,
SMOKED & SALTED
HAMS,
Dried and Smoked
BACON, DRIED BEEF,
Bologna, Head Cheese,
Sausage.
Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.
Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.
A. J. McLEOD.

Washburn & Ackert,
FOUNDREYMEN,
MACHINISTS,
And Manufacturers of The
Charlevoix Plow.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!
Builder and Manufacturer of
BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.
Sheet Iron Work given special attention.
MARINE WORK
a specialty.
HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

DAILTHORPE GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st. Charlevoix. Office hours 8 to 10 a m; 6 to 8 p m.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Postoffice.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 293, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No 101, R. A. M. meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 136, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.
President—Byron See.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strong.
Financial Secretary—B. Suffield.
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Eddings, W. A. Brown and E. Y. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Geo. W. Crouter, B. W. Miller, S. M. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Bordon.
All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Every convenience for the travelling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
Lorenzo Cook, Manager
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE.
W. C. Newman, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - Mich.
Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and Dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. E. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

SURVEYORS

J. R. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. (Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.)

DENTIST

N. J. PERRY, Dentist. Office in Weed's Drug Store, Charlevoix, Mich.

Land for Sale.

I have 5 acres just east of the cemetery, one mile from town, nearly all cleared, which I will sell cheap for cash, or approved paper. Address
JAMES METCALF, Charlevoix.

For Sale.

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix tf

Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette R. R.

"Mackinac Short Line."

Only direct line between the east and south and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

Going West read down			Going East read up
	5 45 pm	Detroit	11 10 am
7 00 am	6 50 am	St Ignace	8 30 pm	8 55 pm
10 25	8 52	Newberry	6 21	2 05
12 20	9 49	Seney	5 15	12 35
	10 42	Reedsboro	4 15
3 25	11 31	Au Train	3 20	9 05
5 30	12 40	Marquette	2 15	7 00
	12 50 pm	Marquette	2 00 pm
	1 55	Ishpeming	12 58
	4 10	L'Anse	10 40
	5 30	Houghton	9 20
	6 35	Calumet	8 15

Connections made with M T Co's boats, M C & G R & I R R & M H & O
E. W. ALLEN, Gen Pass Agt, Marquette

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card for Petoskey.

IN EFFECT, JULY 1887.

Leave Going North *6 05 a m, 5 02 p m, 8 05 p m
Leave Going South 8 50 a m, 2 15 p m, †10 55 pm
* daily. † daily except Saturday.

Michigan Central

The Direct Route Between Mackinaw City & Detroit Jackson, The South and East.

Trains leave Mackinaw City 8 a m daily except Sunday and 10 p m daily arriving at

Detroit	9.10 p m and 11 a m
Jackson	10.30 p m and 11 20 a m
Toledo	10.55 p m and 1 45 p m
Buffalo	8.15 a m and 8.27 p m
Cincinnati	6.55 a m and 6 40 p m

WAGNER PALACE SLEEPING AND PARLOR CARS.
D W JOHNSTON, Mich. Pass Agt. O W RUGGLES, G. P. & T. Agt,

A Japanese Magician.

Stories of oriental magic have always their own fascination. One is half inclined to credit wise men of the east with possessing a tradition of occult science long lost among the restless changes of the west. Such a story now came under my notice. The khedive sent for me one evening, and said:

"I have something curious to tell you. There is a Turk here in Cairo who wears a ring which he pretends is gifted with magic virtues. I have seen him and the ring—it is a plain hoop of gold set with a red stone, which is said to have come from Mecca. The Turk also showed me a plate of silver engraved with verses from the Koran. He explained that he could not work the charm himself, but required a child under 10 years of age. The child takes the ring, the silver plate is put on his head, and in a little while the color of the stone changes to white. Thereupon the child looks into the stone, and sees in it visions, and can answer any questions."

The khedive went on to say, that, being quite incredulous, he asked for permission to take the ring home and try it in private. The owner consented. So the khedive took the ring to Ismailia palace, where there happened to be a little girl 8 years old belonging to the nurse—an ignorant child, unable to read or write. When the plate of silver was laid on her hand, almost immediately she cried out, "The stone has turned to white." The khedive then asked questions about persons whom the child had not seen, and received correct descriptions. Another person present asked:

"How many children have I?"
"Two sons and a daughter."
"That is right. What is the elder son like?"
"He wears a coat with a row of buttons down the front, and striped trousers, and has a saber?"
"What is the second son like?"
"He has a coat with two rows of buttons in front, little gold cushions on his shoulders and an anchor embroidered on his coat."

The one was in the Turkish army, the other in the Turkish navy, and both were absolutely unknown to the child. Collusion was impossible; for even a wizard would find it hard to penetrate into the ladies' apartment of the khedive's palace. Moreover the questions were too rapid and too varied to admit of shuffling or guessing answers. The khedive's conclusion was: "I cannot believe it, and yet I cannot understand it."

After some talk about English mesmerists and clairvoyants, the khedive related that once, before he came to the throne, he consulted a soothsayer in company with the minister of war.
"What is the news for Egypt?" he asked.
The soothsayer demanded two minutes delay, and then replied: "War with Abyssinia."
"Will the Egyptian army conquer?"
"Give me six minutes," replied the sorcerer.
At the end of that time his face became very troubled, his voice faltered, and his whole body shook as he answered: "The Egyptians will be defeated and their army destroyed; only a small remnant shall be left." The prince laughed at the prophecy and forgot it, but two months later the same minister of war showed him a dispatch from upper Egypt stating that the army had been utterly routed, and four battalions out of six annihilated. After showing the dispatch the minister remarked: "Do you remember our friend the sorcerer?" and the prince recollected. Now as khedive he regards the thing as a curious coincidence.—Court Life in Egypt.

A Baptist Transformation.

Some fifty years ago (writes a veteran) the orthodox Church people in this town, which is not far from Boston, were much disturbed at a movement to organize a Baptist church from among them, and a little congregation of that faith had already been gathered, which was receiving accessions from the old church. The pastor in charge of the Baptist church took courage, and assured the brethren that if they would only subscribe liberally and build a meeting-house, "Parson P.'s chickens will all turn to ducks."—Harper's Magazine.

Napoleon After Waterloo.

Whether any course was open to Napoleon after the disaster at Waterloo other than that which he adopted, a second abdication, is certainly very doubtful. Had he taken the precaution to dissolve the chamber before setting out on the campaign, he probably could have rallied the nation and protracted the struggle. But the chambers were unfriendly; any parliamentary body is naturally unfriendly to a military despotism, and, at that juncture, nothing less than a military despotism could possibly have saved France from the calamity of the restoration of the Bourbons by foreign bayonets. Hence, unless Napoleon should execute a new coup d'etat, there was nothing for him but abdication.

On the 15th of July, 1815, Napoleon surrendered himself on board the British man-of-war Bellerophon. Of his appearance and bodily condition during the two months of his stay on this vessel we have an interesting account in the narrative of Captain Maitland, who commanded the ship. Maitland describes him as "a remarkably strong, well-built man, about five feet seven inches high, his limbs particularly well formed, with a fine ankle and very small foot, of which he seemed rather vain, as he always wore, while on board the ship, silk stockings and shoes. His hands were also very small, and had the plumpness of a woman's rather than the robustness of a man's. His eyes light gray, teeth good, and when he smiled, the expression of his countenance was highly pleasing; when under the influence of disappointment, however, it assumed a dark, gloomy cast. His hair was of a dark brown, nearly approaching black, and, though a little thin on the top and front, had not a gray hair among it. His complexion was a very uncommon one, being of a light, sallow color, differing from any one I ever met with. From his having become corpulent he had lost much of his personal activity, and if we are to give credence to those who attended him, a very considerable portion of his mental energy was also gone. It is certain his habits were very lethargic while he was on board the Bellerophon; for, though he went to bed at 8 or 9 o'clock in the evening, and did not rise until about the same hour in the morning, he frequently fell asleep on the sofa in the cabin in the course of the day. His general appearance was that of a man rather older than he then was."—Scribner's

Additional Local News.

The D. C. & E. engineer corps yesterday began the survey of the Ironton spur of the railroad.

Mrs. Litney & Carr invite the ladies to call and see their new stock of fall and winter millinery.

Bridge street on the morning of Labor Day was in fine shape. It was thoroughly cleaned and sprinkled before seven o'clock.

L. E. Allen went to the "Soo" Monday, to help out C. E. Mitchell in the superintendence of his government contract there.

—Tom Palmer returned last week from Two Rivers, Wis., and left on our table several specimens of wood type manufactured there.

—On Sunday, W. C. Newman, received a telegram from Detroit announcing the fatal illness of his sister. He left Monday for her bedside.

—S. M. See, after the close of the Reed City campfire, which he is attending, will go to Wisconsin for a visit among friends. Sam deserves a vacation.

—The Charlevoix SENTINEL has kept apace with the times this summer and given more resort news than any other Northern Michigan weekly. Editors Smith and Parmelee are hustlers.—Daily Resorter.

—It looks like water works to see Amos Fox standing in his front yard watering his new lawn with a garden hose, but the delusion is dispelled by going to the rear of the premises and finding a man at the force pump.

—A slip of the pencil last week made us state that another St. Louis Judge instead of Judge Clover, was a welcome guest at the Fountain City House. Judge Clover is always among friends when at Charlevoix.

—On the last two days of August Fred J. Meech, with Jack Papluaw as guide, fished the Jordan river, catching about two hundred fine trout, two of which measured seventeen inches in length each, while several measured over a foot.

—Geo. W. Miller knows how to conduct a clothing establishment. His lines of clothing and gents furnishing goods are always full, and his books show a steadily increasing trade. George deserves it, and his friends are glad of it.

—Mrs. Oscar Upright has been appointed teacher in the first primary department of our schools for the next year, and Miss Nettie C. Gray, of Traverse City, as assistant in the 5th department. Otherwise the force remains the same as last year.

—Atwood news from the Breeze: Albert Harwood is driving team for Daniel Flanagin.——Kirby Bros. have received their new traction engine from Canton, O.——Miss Altha Wilkinson closed her school in the See district last Wednesday with a picnic.——There is to be a lawn ice cream social at Mrs. E. C. Beach's Friday evening for the benefit of the band.——Miss Ada Byers, Miss Olive Stebbins and Mr. Fred Stebbins have gone to Bay View to attend select school.——Charley Rogers has ordered two more Cincinnati buggies—one for himself and the other for Calvin Supernaw.——Miss Laura Carlisle, of Banks, has gone to Forest Home to teach a fall term of school where she taught the past summer. She expects to teach in her home district next winter.

—East Jordan Enterprise: Elisha Hawkes has taken the contract for building the new store on the corner of Maine and Esterly streets. He is now putting in the bay windows for the new M. E. parsonage.——The fair ground and track are beginning to assume shape and outlines, and another week, under the vigorous management of president Empey, will finish grading. The stumps and logs have already been disposed of, and nothing will remain but to clay the track and erect the buildings.——Uncle Sam Coulter has a seven acre field of potatoes on a flat. He also has a fine stream on high land near by. It occurred to him that it might be possible to irrigate the field, and on making the attempt, with very little trouble he succeeded in running a small stream in every furrow between the rows the whole length of the field. We expect to hear of his having a big crop, and hope he may. The man who mixes brains with his farming ought always to do well, and such men generally do.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

Cull shingles and lumber for sale cheap, or will exchange for farm produce. Apply at Burns & Scroggie's livery barn. tf

FOR SALE—One span of horses, one yearling colt, two spring colts, one yoke of oxen, two two-year old heifers, two yearling heifers; must be sold soon. Terms reasonable. Inquire at this office.

HEADLIGHT AND LITTLE DAISY Soaps. They are strictly pure. They are the cheapest soaps sold for the mony. Try them and get a ladies' water-proof gossamer free. For sale by Emrey Brothers.

THE PROPERTY known as the Sweetland Sanitarium, on the South upper terrace in the village of Charlevoix, is for sale or rent. Enquire of E. H. Green, Charlevoix, Mich. tf

Mrs. Litney & Carr cordially invite the Ladies to call and examine their mammoth new stock of fall and winter millinery. Their stock comprises everything in all the latest novelties in their line. It will pay you to inspect their goods before purchasing elsewhere. adv

Horse for Sale.

A six year old gray mare, weight 1,200 pounds; good, sound, kind and gentle. A good work horse, and a perfect horse for ladies' driving. Inquire at this office.

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. Geo. V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two Bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved that she is able now to do her own work."

Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at Dr. G. W. Crouter's

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; everybody said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds. Trial Bottles of this Great Discovery for Consumption free at Dr. G. W. Crouter's

THAT HACKING COUGH can be so quickly cured by Shiloh's Cure. We guarantee it.

WILL YOU SUFFER with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizer is guaranteed to cure you. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS, made miserable by that terrible cough. Shiloh's Cure is the remedy for you.

CATARRH CURED, health and sweet breath secured by Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. Price 50 cents. Nasal injector free Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

Land for Sale.

I offer for sale the south half of the south-east quarter of section seventeen, (17) in Township Thirty-three (33) North, of Range Eight (8) West, known as the "Weitzel place" in Marion. Apply to
THOMAS WEST,
12m3 457 Lafayette St., Grand Rapids.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter chapped hands chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter

W. H. FRANCIS
FURNITURE
—AND—
JOBBING SHOP,
Will also do
Contracting & Building,
In Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.
I keep in my shop a full set of hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc. on short notice.
Shop on South Terrace,
Opposite Sheriff Berdan's residence.

MILLINERY,
FANCY GOODS,
DRESS-MAKING.
We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.
DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.
ALDRICH SISTERS.
Inglesble Building.

C. H. Maddaugh,
MERCHANT TAILOR.
I have just received a fine line of Samples of first class Fall & Winter Tweeds. Call and look them over.
Fine Samples of
OVERCOATINGS!
now awaiting your inspection.
Call and see me, Satisfation Guaranteed.

CHARLEVOIX
Manufacturing Co.
Charlevoix, Mich.,
Manufacturers of
Sash and Doors,
Blinds, Mouldings etc.
NEWELL
Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails
kept in stock.
Window & Door Frames made to order.
All Kinds of
Building Material
Kept constantly on hand.
PLANS &
SPECIFICATIONS,
Furnished on application.
Cottages made a specialty
also contracting and building
Correspondence solicited.

New JEWELRY
AND
SILVER WARE.
I have just received a very fine stock of
Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc
which I will sell at Prices lower than the same goods can be purchased outside.
Did it ever occur to you that by patronizing home Merchants you were benefiting yourselves?
All classes of Repairing done quickly.
C. R. BELLINGER.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

W. A. REYNARD,
Has just received at his Fruit Store in the Lewis Block, a choice line of Vegetables and Fruits
OF ALL KINDS,
TO WHICH OTHERS WILL BE ADDED IN SEASON.
I will also keep in stock a full line of
Tobaccos and Cigars.
Butter and Eggs a Specialty.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY.

A NOVEL INVENTION! REQUIRES NO COOKING
For Collars, Cuffs, Shirt Bosoms and fine Laundry purposes, prepared by a New Process. The Celluloid Starch has no equal, look for our name and trade mark and take no other. SOLE MANUFACTURERS,
Will not stick to the iron or blister the goods, easy to use, makes your linen look like new at home. Ask your grocer for Celluloid starch. It is pure and economical.

HUMPHREYS'
DR. HUMPHREYS' BOOK
Cloth & Gold Binding
144 Pages, with Steel Engraving,
MAILED FREE.
Address, P. O. Box 1810, N. Y.

NO.	LIST OF PRINCIPAL NOS. CURES	PRICE.
1	Fevers, Congestion, Inflammations	.25
2	Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic	.25
3	Crying Colic, or Teething of Infants	.25
4	Diarrhea, of Children or Adults	.25
5	Dysentery, Griping, Bilious Colic	.25
6	Cholera Morbus, Vomiting	.25
7	Coughs, Cold, Bronchitis	.25
8	Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache	.25
9	Headaches, Sick Headache, Vertigo	.25

HOMEOPATHIC

NO.		PRICE.
10	Dyspepsia, Bilious Stomach	.25
11	Suppressed or Painful Periods	.25
12	Whites, too Profuse Periods	.25
13	Croup, Cough, Difficult Breathing	.25
14	Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions	.25
15	Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains	.25
16	Fever and Ague, Chills, Malaria	.50
17	Piles, Blind or Bleeding	.50
19	Catarrh, Influenza, Cold in the Head	.50
20	Whooping Cough, Violent Coughs	.50
24	General Debility, Physical Weakness	.50
27	Kidney Disease	.50
28	Nervous Debility	1.00
30	Urinary Weakness, Wetting Bed	.50
32	Diseases of the Heart, Palpitation	1.00

SPECIFICS.
Sold by Druggists, or sent postpaid on receipt of price.—HUMPHREYS' MEDICINE CO. 109 Fulton St. N.Y.

GRENADES! Two Sizes—Pints and Quarts.
Over Sixty Millions Sold.
PRICES.
Pints, - Per Doz., $10.00.
Quarts, - " " 15.00.
"STAR" Tubular Fire Extinguisher. Glass Tube, 19x2½ in. Holds 1 quart. In this device we combine the BEST QUALITIES of our famous Grenades with the NEW feature of having an article that can be used by Sprinkling. It is designed especially for use in Passenger Coaches and Dwellings. It is elegant in ornamentation. It is cheap and reliable. No rust; no corrosion possible.
Plain, $12.00 per doz.
Ornamt'd, 15.00 per doz.
The "Star" EXTINGUISHER Holds 5 gallons, and will force a stream through 6 feet of hose 45 feet with our pump, which is the best ever made. Needs no attention until used. Will not freeze, explode or get out of order. No rust or corrosion. Can be used by anyone.
Price, $80.00 Each.
"STAR" CHEMICAL. Just what is needed in every village, lumber yard, warehouse, etc. Fully equipped with Hose, Ax, Crow Bar, Lantern, etc. It is cheap, and reliable. Wt. 450 lbs.
PRICE $200.00 EACH.
Four years of practical use have demonstrated these to be the only reliable and thoroughly efficient Hand Fire appliances made. We use the same chemical liquid in all, and guarantee fully. Liberal discounts to agents. Send for circulars and testimonials.
The HARDEN HAND GRENADE CO.
81 & 83 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

STOVES!

AHEAD AGAIN!
THE Round Oak
Heating Stoves.
NEW STYLES
Cook Stoves!
Saws & Axes
Job and Tin Work.
L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

F. A. COCHRAN & CO.,
(Successors to PERRY WEED.)
Druggists and Pharmecists,
A FULL LINE OF
Drugs and Medicines
For Prescription Use.
PATENT MEDICINES, SOAPS, PERFUMES,
TOILET ARTICLES, CIGARS, STATIONERY.
Pure unadulterated Liquors for medical purposes.
We buy for LOWEST CASH rates and sell as low as the lowest.
Your Patronage Respectfully Solicited.

M. S. MOULTON,
WATCHMAKER & JEWELER,
Charlevoix, Mich.
Personal Atttention given to Watch Repairing.
Key-wind Movements changed to Stem-wind and warranted as good as the best.
JEWELRY Repairing done in the best manner.
Having had 30 years experience I am confident I can give the best of satisfaction

-MARVELOUS PRICES!-
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION
Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. The following books are published in neat pamphlet form, and all are printed from good type upon good paper. They treat of a great variety of subjects, and we think no one can examine the list without finding therein many that he or she would like to possess. In cloth-bound form these books would cost $1.00 each. Each book is complete in itself.
[illegible]
OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.
We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00; or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms
Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

BATH & BARBER
ROOMS.
Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.
If you want a good place to get a shave, hair dress or bath call and see me.
JAY L. PRICE.

NEW SHOP!
All kinds of Blacksmithing,
At the
Shop in the Foundry Building.
Horseshoeing a specialty.
ALL WORK GUARANTEED.
M. SCOTT.

WANTED!
Potatoes, Onions, Apples, Peaches and Blueberries.
We have an old established trade and can place stock to best advantage. Consignments solicited. Correspondence invited from shippers. Stencil and shipping tags furnished.
W. H. THOMPSON & CO.
Commission Merchants,
No. 166 South Water St,
CHICAGO, - - ILL.
References: Felsenthal, Gross & Miller, Bankers, Chicago, Ill.

JAS. A. GELLICK,
Dealer in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS.
We call Special Attention to our Old Kentucky Sour Mash
WHISKIES.
We also keep continually on draught
Milwaukee
Export and lager Beer.
Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

THE NEWS GRIST.

Important Happenings in Every Quarter of the Civilized Globe.

The Very Latest Intelligence Flashed Over the Telegraphic Wires.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

POLITICAL.

Meeting of the Iowa and Maryland Republican Conventions.

THE Iowa Republican Convention, which was held at Des Moines Aug. 24, heartily cheered every allusion to Blaine and Allison. Governor Larrabee and Lieutenant Governor Hull were renominated by acclamation. George S. Robinson was nominated for Supreme Judge on the fifth ballot, and Henry Sabin for Superintendent of Public Instruction on the third ballot. The platform embraces twelve resolutions. The suppression of the black vote in the South is viewed with alarm; the protective tariff and civil-service reform are approved; the Cleveland administration is denounced; the interstate commerce act is indorsed and anti-monopoly legislation in the State demanded; a liberal pension policy is favored, prohibition stoutly upheld; the usual message of sympathy extended to Gladstone and Parnell, and Governor Larrabee's administration commended.

LEWIS E. McCOMAS presided over the Maryland Republican Convention, which met at Baltimore August 24. The following ticket was nominated: For Governor, Walter B. Brooks, of Baltimore; for Comptroller, R. B. Dixon, of Talbot County; for Attorney General, Francis Miller, of Montgomery County. The platform arraigns the President for not calling to account Federal officers who have disregarded his instructions regarding active participation in politics, which alleged shortcoming on his part is held to be a confession that his civil-service reform utterances are insincere.

FERDINAND SNUBBED.

The Sultan Refuses the Prince Permission to Pay Him a Personal Visit.

A CABLE dispatch from Constantinople says: "M. Vulkovitch, the Bulgarian Agent, has handed to the Porte a telegram from Prince Ferdinand expressing his devotion to the Sultan and asking permission to come to Constantinople and pay his homage in person. Kiamil Pasha, the Prime Minister, telegraphed a reply informing the Prince that the Sultan cannot accede to his proposition. The Porte disapproves of his entry into Bulgaria without the sanction of the Porte and powers. Russia's reply to the last circular of the Porte suggested that an Ottoman commission and a Russian General should go to Sofia to secure conjointly and in a legal manner the election of a new Sobranje, which should elect a new prince. This proposal, being submitted to the powers, was sanctioned by France and Germany, but disapproved of by the other powers, who advised the Porte to adopt a policy of moderation and to await events."

Released on Bail.

A DISPATCH from Gardner, Ill., says: "Miss Sarah H. Dodge, the alleged slayer of Walter S. Babcock, the Chicago lumber merchant, waived a hearing and was admitted to bail in the sum of $10,000. The willingness of State's Attorney Carter to accept $10,000 bail is construed as a tacit admission that he does not believe Miss Dodge will be convicted of the murder by the court, and that the case will never get farther than the Grand Jury. Mr. Carter admitted as much. He said: 'It will be difficult to convict Miss Dodge, I fear. Babcock's friends will not prosecute her, but want to let the matter drop. He refused to make any statement against her. She can claim the shooting was in self-defense or accidental, and there is no way of successfully contradicting her.' The true cause of the death [illegible]

A NUMBER of German Catholic priests in the Northwest have been interviewed regarding the approaching convention of German Catholics in Chicago. They deny that its purpose is hostile to the Irish element in the church or that there is any animosity existing between the German and Irish Catholics as classes.

SHERIFF KENDALL and his posse of nine were ambushed by the belligerent Utes near Glenwood Springs, Colorado. After a hard fight they escaped with a loss of three horses killed and four men wounded. The settlers are fleeing for their lives, and the hostiles are being reenforced.

ANOTHER outrage by the "White Cap" organization of Crawford County, Ind., has just been committed, says an Indianapolis telegram:

This time the victim is a lady teacher, who has been a resident of the county for years, and during the time has held many positions in the high schools of Southern Indiana. The lady is a widow named Wilson, and something of a society belle in the community. Among the pupils who attended her school last term was a lad named William Strong, and he appears to have become something of a favorite with the teacher; so much so, in fact, that the other pupils became jealous of him. Being naturally bright, he advanced more rapidly than his fellow-pupils, and this also led to increased jealousy. The idle talk which originated in the school-room was repeated at home, and the lady has received a peremptory order to leave the country at once. In the notice she received from the White Caps they accuse her of trying to awaken the love of the youth, knowing that he will come into possession of a handsome property when he is of age.

ATCHISON, Kan., was visited by a terrific hailstorm, and between $4,000 and $5,000 damage was done. Car windows were smashed, as were also church and store windows.

AUTHENTIC reports are extant of another big scheme, at the back of which is the Minnesota and Northwestern Railroad Company, says a St. Paul dispatch. It is well known that the road is surveying a new line to Duluth, and that next year a double track road will be built. On this line, according to reports, another suburb of St. Paul is to be built, much on the same plan as that of St. Paul.

SOUTH.

THE census of Knoxville, Tenn., shows the population to be 36,707.

SIX men were indicted at Woodstock, Va., for taking Senator Riddleberger from jail, and the Deputy Sheriff who delivered the keys to them has also been indicted.

WASHINGTON.

IT is stated in a Washington dispatch that a movement is being made all along the line in Grand Army circles to have the existing system of pension payments changed so as to have them made monthly instead of quarterly. The argument in favor of this change is based upon the assumption that it would be more convenient for the pensioners to receive their money from the Government as their monthly bills become due. The pensioner who receives $8 a month and lives in rooms or in a house rented for that sum would gladly devote it to payment on that account, as a matter of convenience to himself as well as to other parties interested. Those who receive larger or smaller pensions, depending upon that certain income for the defraying of certain expenses, would also be better accommodated than by the present system. This argument seems to be accepted by the G. A. R. posts the country over, and the probability is a petition founded upon it will be in readiness to be presented to the Fiftieth Congress next December.

POLITICS.

HENRY GEORGE was nominated for Secretary of State by the New York State United Labor Convention at Syracuse, on the "Clarendon Hall Platform," on which he made his canvass for Mayor of New York. The Socialists of the metropolis have passed resolutions denouncing the exclusion of their delegates from the convention, and propose to put a ticket of their own in the field.

DURING the three years ended July 30 45,373 postmasters were appointed. The total number of postoffices in the country is 58,157.

HENRY GEORGE declares himself well satisfied with the work of the convention, which nominated him for Secretary of [illegible]

[illegible]

PRESIDENTIAL PROSPECTS FOR NEXT YEAR.

There will assuredly be four parties in the field next year—the Republican, the Democratic, the Labor, and the political Prohibitionists. Either the Republicans or the Democrats will win. The other two parties will but be disturbing elements, drawing their strength from the two great parties.

It is probable that the political Prohibition party does more injury to the Republican cause than to the Democratic. The reverse is the case with the new Labor party. Its chief strength lies in the cities, of course; and in the few places where it placed candidates in the field at municipal elections last spring it drew heavily upon the Democratic strength—notably in New York City and Cincinnati. It will probably be fair to accept the estimate of 75 and 25 per cent. as the proportions of Labor votes drawn from the Democratic and the Republican parties respectively.

The Democratic candidate for the Presidency will undoubtedly carry the entire South. That section is still solid, and it will not do for the Republicans to base any calculations upon a victory in Virginia, West Virginia, or Tennessee, or any State of the late Confederacy.

The Republicans can carry with ease next year the same States that cast [illegible]

[illegible]

Hendricks and his friends to "open the books." Thus far the only discrepancy discovered was in the case of a disbursing clerk, who is a Democratic appointee of the present administration, and whose cash was found short some $20. The examiners, however, are strongly of the opinion that the discrepancy was due to a clerical error, and pointed to the fact that the clerk has disbursed some $800,000 in the past two years. The accounts of the disbursing clerks of the Interior Department, who have disbursed about $6,000,000 per annum for many years past, were found correct to a penny. It may be remembered that the count of money in the Treasury when it was turned over to Mr. Jordan disclosed an apparent deficiency of two cents, but that the money was afterward found in a dark corner of the vault. Well, when the recent count was completed on the transfer from Mr. Jordan to Mr. Hyatt a shortage of $2.50 was discovered, and a clerk was required to make up the deficiency. This, of course, was in addition to the amount which he had been assessed as his share of the cost of that magnificent silver punch bowl and ladle which was given to the retiring Treasurer by his grateful and admiring subordinates.—Washington telegram to Inter Ocean.

Only Half the Reason.

The Louisville Courier-Journal is having a hard time to account for the [illegible]

[illegible]

MARKET REPORTS.

[illegible]

HANGED, BUT NOT DEAD.

A Strange Story of How a Texas Murderer Escaped Death on the Gallows.

[Fort Worth (Texas) special.]

Campbell Langley, father of the once notorious and not yet forgotten Bill Langley, removed to Bell County, Texas, from near Lexington, Lee County, Texas, twelve years ago. During his residence in Lee and Bell counties he has been known as a well-to-do farmer and an upright citizen. Campbell Langley to-day told a story to some of the leading citizens which, but for his well-known Christian character, would be put down as wildest fiction. He says that his son, Bill Langley, who was publicly hanged twelve years ago in Giddings, Lee County, by Sheriff Jim Brown, in the presence of several thousand people, was not hurt at all, but was allowed to escape.

The father says when the Supreme Court and the Governor refused to intervene in Bill's behalf a rich uncle in California came to the rescue with $4,000, with which he worked upon the sympathy of the sheriff charged with the execution of the sentence; that the friends of Bill were permitted to arrange things so that when the drop fell the weight of the body fell upon the iron loop supported by an appropriate body harness in such a way that he escaped physically unhurt. When he had drawn his legs up and down two or three times the attending physicians pronounced him dead, and he was turned over to his friends for interment. [illegible]

RIGHTS OF BALL-PLAYERS.

[illegible]

THE NEW ULM MASSACRE.

[illegible]

[illegible]

THE GREEN DIAMOND.

The Fight for the League Base-Ball Championship Grows in Interest.

The Western Clubs in the East—Pitchers' and Catchers' Records—Notes of the Game.

[CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.]

The close of the eighteenth week of the League pennant race for 1887 finds the Western clubs doing battle upon Eastern grounds with their Eastern rivals. The Detroit team still leads the League clubs in the race, and the Philadelphia team by splendid work has passed Mike Kelly's men in the struggle for front place and is now close upon the heels of the New York giants for third place. It would surprise no one to see the Phillies in third place and leading both New York and Boston before another week passes.

The Chicago team closed its third home season last week upon the Chicago grounds in the final games of the series begun on Saturday, the 13th inst., with Detroit, and it is needless to say that these games will exist for many a day to come in the recollection of all who witnessed them. In team work, in brilliancy of fielding, in [illegible]

[illegible]

WHY HE QUIT.

No, thankee; I guess I won't take none;
I've took a bit of a change;
And I don't feel wusser fer it,
Although yer may think it strange.

I know 'tis a good while, pardner,
Since yer an' me hes met;
An' though I refuse to licker,
I'm tickled ter see yer. You bet."

But say, how's the boys at ther diggins?
The same old bummers, I s'pose,
Good-hearted an' full of ther dickens,
An' not much stuck on close.

Let's see, the last time I saw yer
Was out on the Yellerstone branch;
Yer struck me up at Howry's,
When he was runnin' the ranch.

Well, yes, we did have a bender,
An' painted that there town red;
An' yer got out with a busted arm,
An' me with a busted head.

But yer want ter know the reason
That I come down so quick,
And knocked off the drinkin' business,
And did it up so slick.

Well, I don't mind if I tell you,
But mebby you'll think it queer;
But if yer do it won't matter,
For blamed as I know if I keer.

Yer know when I quit ther diggins
I had considerable dust;
An' soon as we run inter Sisco
I just struck out for a bust.

I went ter buckin' the tiger,
But quicker nor it takes to tell,
I was knocked plum out of a thousan'
By a slick lookin' gamblin' swell,

Well, that kinder hurt my feelins,
But yer bet I didn't kick;
I was kinder stuck on ther feller,
He did it up so slick.

An' I just kep' on a bettin',
An' drinkin' their pizen grog,
'Till I was drunk as a fiddler,
An' busted dead as a log.

Well, I set there half snoozin',
When another feller come in—
A kind of a rickety feller,
That was pretty well soaked with gin.

He went ter drinkin' an' bettin',
An' puttin' up ther cash,
While that slick feller sat smilin'
An' takin' it to like a flash.

They'd been at it about ten minits,
An' had called for their second gin,
When ther door was pushed wide open,
An' a little gal come in.

She walked rite up ter ther table,
[illegible]

[illegible]

pany upon his track. Not only that, but it may be the means of saving my life as well."

He had no idea then of the importance of the letter he had just written. But the time was coming when he would know.

CHAPTER VI.
MR. BRITT'S "MESSAGE."

Mr. Britt stood in the door of his wife's darkened apartment. His face was scowling and his manner mirrored the condition of his mind, as he glanced back in the shadows where his wife sat bolstered up in her chair.

Outside the sun was shining brightly, and the broad bosom of the river mirrored the glowing orb as it rose higher and higher in the heavens. But no faint ray of the genial sunshine pierced the darkness that lingered in the octagon room.

The shutters were tightly closed, the curtains closely drawn, and far back in her shadowy corner sat Mrs. Britt, her gray face looking grayer still by contrast with the dark coverings of her chair.

"Susan," said Britt, in a deep, harsh voice, "do you dare to tell me that you defy me?"

"Call it by what name you choose, I shall speak the truth at last. I cannot, I dare not, die with your secret on my soul."

"Driveling idiot. Poor, weak fool," he muttered, clenching his hands. "Do you know that you will provoke me into doing you mischief? And what then, what then, think you, will happen?"

"That will be nothing. What care I for life. I died long years ago—in reality. But I say that before I go somehow, some time, justice shall be done."

"And I say, Susan, sooner than that you betray my secret I will kill you as you sit there in your chair."

Britt took a step toward the corner where his wife sat.

Tattie came suddenly out from behind the curtains of the bed, waving her hands.

"Oh, Pa Britt."

Britt recoiled.

"What, Tattie, you here?"

"Yes. What ails the Pa of Paradise Court? What makes you so cross with poor ma?"

"Poor ma is in a tantrum, Tattie, and makes me cross."

Tattie laughed.

"I'll put her in Paradise," said the fool- [illegible]

[illegible]

"Yes."

"Well, on what grounds now do you base your claims for a new hearing? Nothing common will suffice."

"Nothing common will be attempted," said Winkle, grimly. "Whereas, we formerly contested the claim on the ground of the deceased having come to his death by his own hand, we now charge fraud—false pretense. We now claim that the death of Jonathan Udderzook was not proven—that, in fact, there was no death. We base our claims for a new trial on evidence lately discovered, which convinces us that Jonathan Udderzook is alive to-day."

The lawyer stared hard at the speaker, as if he thought that gentleman had suddenly gone daft.

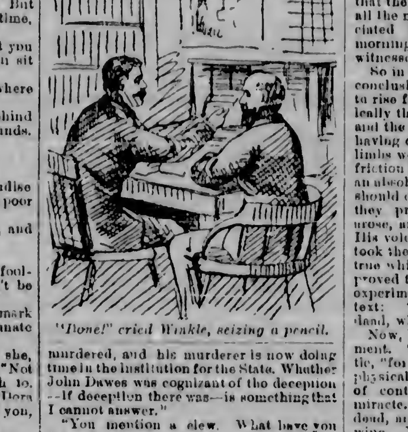
"Not alive!"

"Alive."

The lawyer drummed on the baize-covered table.

"He must have had accomplices. A fraud of this magnitude could not have been successfully carried out without help from somebody. Have you any idea who could have assisted in the deception?"

"There was at that time a man by the name of John Dawes, who took an active part in the suit against the company. But shortly after the final decision in favor of the Widow Udderzook John Dawes was

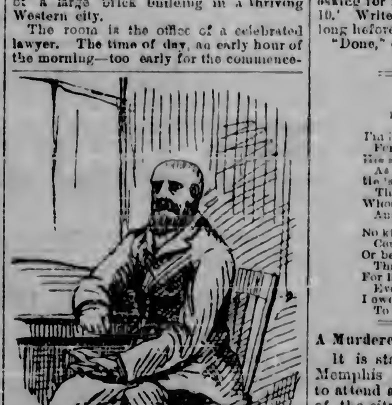


"Dunn!" cried Winkle, seizing a pencil.

[illegible]

NUMBER 10; OR, ANOTHER MAN'S CRIME.

[illegible]



Nothing had been did letters.

[illegible]

"WE ARE WITNESSES."

Discourse by Rev. Dr. Talmage at the Hamptons.

The World Will Be Brought to God Not Through Argument, but Through Testimony—The Christian's Weapon in the Conflict Is Faith, Not Logic.

THE HAMPTONS, Aug 21.—"The Facts Proved" is the subject of discourse by the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., to-day. His text is from Acts xv, 3: "We are witnesses." Following is his sermon in full:

In the days of George Stephenson, the perfector of the locomotive engine, the scientists proved conclusively that a railway train could never be driven by steam power successfully and without peril; but the rushing express trains from Liverpool to Edinburg, and from Edinburg to London, have made all the nations witnesses of the splendid achievement. Machinists and navigators proved conclusively that a steamer could never cross the Atlantic ocean; but no sooner had they successfully proved the impossibility of such an undertaking than the work was done, and the passengers on the Cunard and the Inman and the National and the White Star lines are witnesses. There went up a guffaw of wise laughter at Professor Morse's proposition to make the lightning of heaven his errand boy, and it was proved conclusively that the thing could never be done; but now all the news of the wide world, by Associated Press, put in your hands every morning and night, has made all nations witnesses.

So in the time of Christ it was proved conclusively that it was impossible for Him to rise from the dead. It was shown logically that when He was dead He was dead, and the heart and the liver and the lungs having ceased to perform their offices, the limbs would be rigid beyond all power of friction or arousal. They showed it to be an absolute absurdity that the dead Christ should ever get up alive; but no sooner had they proved this than the dead Christ arose, and the disciples behind Him, heard His voice and talked with Him, and they took the witness stand to prove that to be true which the wiseacres of the day had [illegible] ment and everything reminds you of what you have lost. Get your mind off of it! They might as well advise you to stop thinking. You cannot stop thinking, and you cannot stop thinking in that direction. Take a walk in the fresh air! Why, along that very street or that very road she once accompanied you. Out of that grassplot she plucked flowers, or into that show window she looked, fascinated, saying "Come, see the pictures." Go deeper into business! Why, she was associated with all your business ambition, and since she has gone you have no ambition left. Oh, this is a clumsy world when it tries to comfort a broken heart! I can build a Corliss engine, I can paint a Raphael's "Madonna," I can play a Beethoven's "Symphony" as easily as this world can comfort a broken heart. And yet you have been comforted. How was it done? Did Christ come to you and say: "Get your mind off this; go out and breathe the fresh air; plunge deeper into business?" No. There was a minute when he came to you—perhaps in the watches of the night, perhaps in your place of business, perhaps along the street—and he breathed something into your soul that gave peace, rest, infinite quiet, so that you could take out the photograph of the departed one and look into the eyes and the face of the dear one, and say: "It is all right; she is better off; I would not call her back. Lord, I thank thee that thou hast comforted my poor heart."

There are Christian parents here who are willing to testify to the power of this Gospel to comfort. Your son had just graduated from school or college and was going into business, and the Lord took him. Or your daughter had just graduated from the young ladies' seminary and you thought she was going to be a useful woman and of long life; but the Lord took her and you were tempted to say: "All this culture of twenty years for nothing!" Or a little child came home from school with the hot fever that stopped not for the agonized prayer or for the skillful physician, and the little child was taken. Or the babe was lifted out of your arms by some quick epidemic, and you stood wondering why God ever gave you that child at all, if so soon He was to take it away. And yet you are not repining, you are not fretful, you are not fighting against God.

What has enabled you to stand all the [illegible]

Some time ago Prof. Henry, of Washington, discovered a new star, and the tidings sped by submarine telegraph and all the observatories of Europe were watching for that new star. Oh, hearer, looking out through the darkness of your soul, canst thou see a bright light beaming on thee? "Where?" you say, "where? How can I find it?" Look along by the line of the cross of the Son of God. Do you not see it trembling with all tenderness and beaming with all hope? It is the Star of Bethlehem.

Deep horror then my vitals froze,
Death struck, I ceased the tide to stem,
When suddenly a star arose—
It was the Star of Bethlehem.

Oh, hearer, get your eye on it. It is easier for you now to become Christians than it is to stay away from Christ and Heaven. When Mme. Sontag began her musical career she was hissed off the stage at Vienna by the friends of her rival, Amelia Steininger, who had already begun to decline through her dissipation. Years passed on, and one day Mme. Sontag, in her glory, was riding through the streets of Berlin, when she saw a little child leading a blind woman, and she said: "Come here, my little child, come here. Who is that you are leading by the hand?" And the little child replied: "That's my mother; that's Amelia Steininger. She used to be a great singer, but she lost her voice, and she cried so much about it that she lost her eyesight." "Give my love to her," said Mme. Sontag, "and tell her an old acquaintance will call on her this afternoon."

The next week in Berlin a vast assemblage gathered at a benefit for that poor blind woman, and it was said that Mme. Sontag sang that night as she had never sung before. And she took a skilled oculist, who in vain tried to give eyesight to the poor blind woman. Until the day of Amelia Steininger's death Mme. Sontag took care of her and her daughter after her. That was what the queen of song did for her enemy.

But, oh! hear a more thrilling story still. Blind, immortal, poor, and lost—thou who, when the world and Christ were rivals for thy heart, didst hiss thy Lord away—Christ comes now to give thee sight, to give thee a home, to give thee Heaven. With more than a Sontag's generosity He come now to meet your need. With more than a Sontag's music He comes to plead for thy de- [illegible]

[illegible]

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for September 4—"Trust in Our Heavenly Father."

[From Chicago Standard. By Rev. J. M. Coon.]

The subject for the lesson for the 4th of September may be found in the sixth chapter of Matthew, from the twenty-fourth to the thirty-fourth verses. Time, summer, A. D. 28. Place, Mount of Beatitudes.

SPECIAL MENTION.

The Sermon on the Mount.—It is claimed by some that no analysis can be made of this discourse of Christ, and that none should be attempted. But we may be quite sure that this greatest sermon by the greatest of preachers is not a mere throwing together of incoherent and broken parts, however good in themselves. The following is one of the best outlines of the whole sermon:

The book of Matthew presents Jesus as Messiah-King as does no other book of the Bible. It seems unmistakably to be constructed around this idea.

In the first chapter we have the King's genealogy, allowing his hereditary right to the throne. In the second are the facts of the King's birth. In the third and fourth chapters, the King having come to full age, is inducted into office by baptism and temptation. In the fifth, sixth, and seventh we have the King's "inaugural address," setting forth the principles, or laws, of citizenship in His kingdom.

I. The citizen of the kingdom.
1. His character (Matt. 5: 1-12).
2. His influence (Matt. 5: 13-16).
II. The law of the kingdom as to morals.
1. As to immutability (Matt. 5: 17-20).
2. As to murder (sixth commandment) (Matt. 5: 21-26).
3. As to adultery (seventh commandment, Matt. 5: 27-32).
4. As to divorce (Matt. 5: 31, 32.
5. As to oaths (Matt. 5: 33-37.
6. As to retaliation (Matt. 5: 38 42).
7. As to hatred (Matt. 5: 43 48).
III. The law of the kingdom as to religion.
1. Almsgiving (Matt. 6: 1-4).
2. Prayer (Matt. 6: 5-15).

[illegible]

CLOAKS, CLOAKS, CLOAKS.

Short Cloaks, Long Cloaks, Medium Cloaks.

CLOAKS FOR BABIES, CLOAKS FOR CHILDREN, CLOAKS FOR BLUSHING MAIDENS,

CLOAKS FOR THE MARRIED, FOR THE SINGLE, CLOAKS FOR THE FALL, FOR WINTER, JACKETS FOR ALL,

Soon, at The Live Dry Goods House of

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.

LABOR'S HOLIDAY.

The Observance of "Labor Day" at Charlevoix a Marked Success.

Monday was a red-letter day for organized labor of the Pine Lake region. Although but two assemblies were out in force—those of East Jordan—the crowd was augmented by laborers from field and shop, who belonged to no organization.

Before 10:30, the boats were all in, bringing crowds, the Clara Belle bringing the East Jordan Assembly. At eleven the procession formed as follows:

1. Consolidated bands.
2. Carriages with clergy and orators.
3. Charlevoix Fire Department.
4. Petoskey Base Ball Club.
5. Charlevoix Base Ball Club.
6. East Jordan Assembly K. of L.
7. Charlevoix Assembly K. of L.
8. Citizens on foot and in carriages.

The route was through Bridge street to Parmelee's grove, on the north side, where the opening exercises were held, which included the welcoming address by Rev. W. H. McCartney.

THE BARBECUE.

Early Sunday afternoon, a pit, six feet long, three feet deep, and about as wide, had been dug at one of the angles of the park; a pile of dry block-wood was near. At four p. m. a fire was kindled in the pit, and the dry block-wood was thrown in. The fire was fed steadily until after midnight, when a solid bed of glowing coals, filling the pit, threw out a flood of heat that prevented a near approach to it. Crotched standards were erected at either end, and a large, corn-fatted and neatly dressed ox, with a heavy green sappling passing through it from flank to neck, was placed in the crotches. Over all was placed a tin screen or "Dutch oven," and the roasting was begun.

A bar run through one end of the sappling served the purpose of turning the mammoth roast as required, and the chef de cuisine from time to time applied a solution of seasoning.

Visitors to the grove in the early morning found the ox well roasted, and still kept warm by the glowing embers.

THE FEAST.

At the conclusion of the morning ceremonies baskets were brought forth, and their contents spread for the noon meal. President McLeod did the carving, and soon steaming and juicy portions of the roast were distributed among the large audience, and eaten with a relish.

But a short time elapsed before the joints were dissected, and the bones, bearing rich and liberal quantities of meat, taken home by those who desired them. The barbecue was a success in every particular.

THE AFTERNOON.

The afternoon programme was intended for the grove, but after reassembling there, the lowering clouds threatened rain, and the meeting adjourned to the rink, where the problem of capital and labor was ably discussed by Rev. Mr. Deyo, Mrs. Barghorn, and F. D. Phillips.

THE DAY.

The day thus set apart by organized labor will be perpetuated as a labor holiday. The idea is a happy one, as the cause it represents is a righteous one. We may expect that hereafter the 5th of September will partake of the nature of a National holiday, and annually assemble the hosts of laborers throughout the Union.

Under existing treaties with Great Britain, the extradition of McGarigle, the Chicago boodler, cannot reasonably be expected. The Illinois authorities have been reported as endeavoring to interest the state department in the case in order to secure his surrender on the ground of comity. There is no reason to believe that Canada would accede to to the request if it were to be made; and the established practice of the state department discourages applications of this nature. A government which itself refuses to surrender fugitive criminals when there are no treaty provisions covering the case can not consistently ask other nations to make an exception to the same rule. The uniform practice at Washington has been to restrict the privilege of extradition to governments which have entered into treaty engagements to that effect.

Last Chance.

My organ, which is still at C. H. Meddaugh's tailor shop. Though worth $50, will be sold with stool, for $25, cash, if taken within ten days.

H. M. MARTINDALE.

Swimmers and Swimming.

From the Youth's Companion.

It is not every one who can learn to swim like Byron, Franklin, Sir Cloudesley Shovel, Leander, Mary Wakefield, and the other historic swimmers. In order to perform such feats as they did, a person must have buoyant flesh, not too heavy bones, great wind, cool nerves and much practice. In a school of fifty boys there are always a few who can swim a great deal easier and longer than the rest, and there are some long, strong, bony fellows who are tired in twenty strokes.

Byron owed his power in the water chiefly to the buoyancy of his flesh, but partly to the muscular development of his arms and chest. He was a superb creature from his waist upward. In swimming the Hellespont he was in the water one hour and ten minutes, and came out, as he used to boast, very little the worse for his voyage. Indeed, he had several swimming adventures in his life which were more difficult than the one which he performed in imitation of Leander. Once on Brighton beach he was exhausted in battling with the surf, and would have been drowned but for some by-standers who formed a line for his rescue.

Cloudesley Shovel's grand exploit was probably due to masculine strength and great practice. He was a cabin-boy on board Amiral Narborough's ship during the naval war between England and Holland, two hundred years ago. Narborough was lost unless he could get word to a portion of his fleet which was near, but out of sight behind a high piece of land. No boat could have lived in the fierce fire of the fleets, and there was no possible way of communicating an order except by swimming. The admiral called for volunteers, and among those who sprang forward was his own cabin-boy, a vigorous, handsome lad of eighteen. He had been a cobbler's apprentice and had run away to sea.

"What can you do my fearless lad?" asked Admiral Narborough.

"I can swim, sir," replied the youth; "and if I'm shot, I can be easier spared than any one else."

That answer with the look that accompanied it, settled the question. In another minute or two with the order in his mouth, the lad swam out of sight, into the dense smoke of the battle, followed by the cheers of the crews. He brought the reserve fleet into action in time, gave his country another victory, won for himself a lieutenant's commission. His remains now lie in Westminster Abbey, with a monument over them bearing the name of Admiral Sir Cloudesley Shovel.

Mary Wakefield's brave act on Lake Michigan, a month or two ago, was not exactly a feat in swimming. When she sprang from the burning steamer into the lake with the captain's child, six years of age, in her arms, she laid hold of a piece of wood, and had to use both her hands in clinging to it. The child she held up by her teeth in its clothes, and thus encumbered she struck out boldly for shore. On her way she met a rescuing boat, which stopped to take them in.

"Hurry away to the others; I can take care of the child!" she cried.

She reached the shore safely with her charge, and was soon ready to bear a most efficient hand in caring for the perishing survivors as they arrived by the boats. This was a rare and noble act of courage and endurance, for the water was little above the freezing point in that northern region.

No, we cannot all do these grand and noble things. Some of us can, however, if we try the right way, and honor the doers.

Col. John B. Towers, principal keeper of the penitentiary, aided and abetted in one of the most cruel jokes of the war. The federals were leisurely firing shells into some confederate works, and the bombs were falling and bursting in such uncomfortable nearness that soldiers had dug holes in the ground and were hiding as best they could. The colonel and some of his friends got hold of an unexploded shell and stuffed it full of fuse. When the next report was heard, the fuse was touched off, and after a moment the bomb was dropped into the mouth of one of the "gopher" holes where soldiers were sheltered. "Zip-zip-zip-z-z-zip-zip-zip zip!" went the fuse for several minutes. Howl after howl went up as the soldiers expected to be blown to pieces. After a while the spluttering fuse burned out and things quieted down.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

Marine Jottings.

10—Schr Arctic, 140 cords wood, Master to Milwaukee.

10—Schr Melvina, 290 cords wood, W. L. French to Kenosha.

10—Schr Fleetwing, 40 cords bark, Smithson to Milwaukee.

10—Schr Mocking Bird, 140,000 ft hardwood lumber, John Nicholls to Chicago.

10—Schr Sell, 156 cords bark, French & Sutton to Kenosha.

12—Schr Oneida, 200 cords bark, French to Kenosha.

16—Eaglewing 225,000 ft hardwood lumber, Glenn & Porter to Chicago.

17—Schr Addie, 300,000 ft hardwood Pine Lake Lumber Co, to Michigan City.

17—Schr Racine, 100 cords wood, 75 cords bark, Downer to Chicago.

17—Schr Stampson, 250,000 ft hardwood lumber, Pine Lake Lumber Co. to Chicago.

19—Schr Taylor, 8,000 posts Downer to Chicago.

6—Schr John L. Green, 70,000 ft hardwood, Perkins & White to Sheboygan.

19—Schr John Schuette 540 tons iron, Pine Lake Iron Co. to Milwaukee.

19—Schr Radical, 4,500 ties, Downer to Chicago.

19—Schr Lollie Pratt, 20,000 ft elm lumber Glenn & Porter to Chicago.

20—Schr Dandy, 21 cords wood, Master to Sheboygan.

20—Schr Evening Star, 180,000 ft hardwood, Pine Lake Lum Co Sheboygan

23—Schr Florence Smith, 65 cords wood, Master to Milwaukee.

23—Schr Arctic, 140 cords wood, Waldron to Milwaukee.

21—Schr Merchant, 50 cords slabs Master to Escanaba.

20—Schr Mocking Bird, 138,000 ft hardwood lem John Nicholls to Chicago.

29—Schr John Schuette, 525 tons pig iron, Pine Lake Iron Co. to Chicago.

30—Schr Monitor, 500,000 hoops, Wilson Hoop Co. to Milwaukee

30—Schr John L. Green, 75,000 ft hardwood lumber Perkins & White to Sheboygan.

30—Schr F. M. Smith 65 cords wood, Master to Milwaukee.

Hemlock is fast becoming an important article of manufacture in Michigan. It is estimated that 100,000,000 feet will be put in Michigan streams the coming winter.

The Connecticut grand army posts are a unit in supporting the proposed pension bill, almost identical with that vetoed last winter by President Cleveland. There are 10,000 veterans in the state. Not a cheering out-look for Mr. Cleveland in Connecticut next year.

Of the 820 delegates to the national democratic convention next year the south will have 306. When it comes to the electoral college it brings nearly all the electoral votes cast for the democratic candidate. Hence the south must be kept solidly democratic or there is no hope for democracy.

Chicago Journal, Saturday: Sixty thousand baskets of peaches arrived and were on market to-day. The total for the week was 280,000 baskets, and the Michigan crop is yet far from being marketed. The native melon crop is unusually large and the melons are the finest in flavor that has been seen in years.

If the democrats attempt to coerce the G. A. R. veterans into marching under Cleveland's banner at the St. Louis parade they will probably wish they hadn't. The affair would probably end as it did at Wheeling, where the democrats tried to run the soldier's reunion in the interests of the democratic party. The G. A. R. is not going to St. Louis on any political mission whatever, and it will not be coerced nor entrapped into any democratic scheme. If the democratic managers in St. Louis carry out their plans proposed they are a lot of big fools.

Dr. Rice, of Beaver Lake, Wis., the locality where Guiteau and the Scovilles used to spend their summers, stated recently that he had exceptionally good opportunities to observe Guiteau's daily life and the working of his mind, and that he was, long before the tragedy, satisfied that he was insane. Dr. Rice is a little tardy in proclaiming his views; but he will not be able to change the fixed popular belief that Guiteau was as sane when he did the shooting as any man is who kills another. He was sane enough to know what he was doing, and richly deserved the punishment he received.

Here is a French story with four distinct morals: Four flies were in search of a breakfast. One found some jelly and regaled himself. The jelly was not genuine and the fly turned upon his back. The second fly, seeing the sad fate of his friend, resolved to eat plain bread. But there was so much alum in the bread that he, too, turned over and breathed his last. The third fly attacked a glass of beer, but the aloes laid him out cold. The fourth fly, seeing that everything eatable was tampered with resolved to commit suicide. He found some German fly paper on which was inscribed "Death to Flies." He partook freely, but the more he ate the better felt. He stuck to fly paper and lived to a good old age.

St. John says: "We are fighting the republican party now." What else has he been doing for the last few years? He isn't paid $50 per speech for doing anything else. If he were honestly engaged in the temperance cause, or, leaving that matter entirely out, if he were honestly engaged in the work of building up a third party, do you suppose he would spend his whole time in republican states, trying to break down the republican majorities and build up the democractic party in those states? Why is it that he didn't go to Texas? Why doesn't he go to Tennessee, or Mississippi or some some other southern state where prohibition is an issue? Because they are already democratic states. That is why.

The New York Tribune very cautiously says: "So far as the League pennant is concerned, it seems at this point to be anybody's race. 'Anybody' in this case means the five leading clubs—those of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and Detroit. The chances of all seem to be about equally good. Friends of each can find sufficient reasons in support of their favorite to convince at least themselves that the others are sure not to be foremost when the season ends. The situation is decidedly more interesting than it would be if one club had so great a lead that the others had no chance at all of catching up."

Cloaks for everybody just received at the popular clothing house of Alick Rosenthal's.

CLOTHING.

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.

My Prices are so Low that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

New Fall Dry Goods

NOW ARRIVING.

We were never before in such good condition to offer BARGAINS. Our stock is CLEAN, FRESH, and being Constantly Replenished.

We offer the choicest and most complete stock of

GROCERIES!

and our PRICES are LOWEST For BEST GOODS.

Our stock of CROCKERY is being overhauled.

Special drives in

WHITE GRANITE EARTHENWARE, This Week.

J. L. HURD & CO.

—OUR—

CLOAKS ARE HERE,

AND AWAITING YOUR INSPECTION. WE ARE PROUD TO SAY TO THE LADIES THAT WE HAVE AS FINE A LINE OF NEW CLOAKS AS CAN BE FOUND IN ANY CITY.

Our CLOAKS are THE GREATEST BARGAINS!

And the largest stock of Cloaks ever offered here.

ALL OUR GOODS ARE OF THE

LATEST MAKE

AND BEST VALUE.

of all the latest styles.

In Ladies Furnishings & Bazaar Goods we have a long list of Bargains.

Before purchasing elsewhere, give our store a call,

ALICK ROSENTHAL,

LEWIS BLOCK.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO.—20 | CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1887. | WHOLE NO. 929

SCHOOL BOOKS

SCHOOL BOOK

BUY YOUR SCHOOL SUPPLIES AT HEADQUARTERS. WE HAVE EVERYTHING NEEDED IN THE SCHOOL ROOM, AT UNIFORMLY LOW PRICES.

F. G. HINES & CO.

We will furnish the new books adopted by the board at introduction prices. Remember that we sell everything that can be called for in any of our Schools.

SCHOOL BOOK

SCHOOL BOOKS

EMREY BROS.

Boots and Shoes for almost nothing, to close out.

We have a number of pairs of Boots and Shoes which we will almost give away as we are closing them out.

We are also going out of

CROCKERY

and have a complete assortment which must be sold

WE WILL NOT TAKE A BACK SEAT ON

SUMMER DRY GOODS.

PRICES ALWAYS LOW.

IN GROCERIES and Provisions we can suit you, as we receive Fresh Goods weekly.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

DON'T

BUY FALL GOODS TILL YOU SEE OURS.

We Hold our Custom because our Prices are Always Low.

OUR FALL ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours.

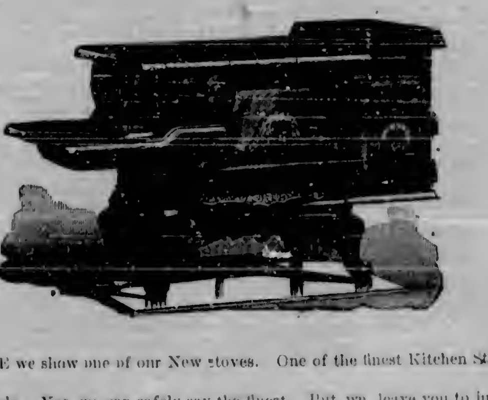
Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

YOU'D BETTER HEAR US!

LISTEN!

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $ $ $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES, & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.



HERE we show one of our New stoves. One of the finest Kitchen Stoves ever made. Yes, we can safely say the finest. But we leave you to judge, come and see for yourselves. Make our store your stopping place, you are always welcome, and your welcome does not depend on your buying anything. Price and quality guaranteed on everything.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

The Best Groceries

At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture

AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

WANTED!

Everyone to know that we are here and doing Business, and will do just as we agree to by one and all. We keep

GROCERIES and PROVISIONS, FLOUR AND FEED, CROCKERY AND GLASSWARE.

Choice Butter and Fresh Eggs a Specialty. Call on us or order by Telephone.

WILLSEE & CO.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year $1 50 | Six months $ 75

Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Additional local news on our fifth page.

—Will Aldrich now has a "case" on the Chicago Inter Ocean.

—John Weed left for a Detroit visit Monday, with Dr. O. B. Weed.

—Miss Emma Todd left Monday for her Cheboygan home to remain.

—Charlevoix post office will be raised to the presidential class, Oct. 1.

—F. G. Hines & Co., are leaders on school books and supplies. Notice their new announcement.

—Antrim county voters will probably have a chance to exercise their franchise on the liquor question this year.

—J. Reed and B. A. Emrey have with them a neice from Jeanerette, La. Miss Rose Stokoe, who will winter here.

—The store of Alick Rosenthal will be closed from Monday morning until six p. m. Tuesday, owing to the Jewish holidays.

—C. H. Whitford, of Hayes, has been granted back pension amounting to about $150, and an increase from $4 to $10 per month.

—R. C. Hathaway, Grand Master of Michigan has been making a tour among the Masonic Lodges of the upper peninsula. He was at Petoskey, Saturday.

—During the fair at East Jordan, the steamer Friant will run excursions every day, leaving here at ten and returning leave East Jordan at two, excepting on the last day of the fair when the boat will wait until three. Round trip tickets are fifty cents, good during the fair.

—Potatoes are estimated to yield 29 per cent of the average crop in southern counties, 42 per cent in central counties, and 45 per cent in the northern. The average for the state, 33 per cent. Of winter apples there will be about one-half, and the late peaches three-fourths of an average crop.

—The I. O. G. T. Lodge of Elk Rapids has taken earnestly hold of the subject of local option. It has appointed committees which have prepared petitions and placed them in the hands of temperance workers in every township in the county. These are being circulated, and the question will no doubt be submitted to the voters of the county at no distant day.

—L. D. Bartholomew already has received some most valuable specimens of fruit from the farms of John Hammond, of Eveline, and O. D. Hilton and J. Bolten, of Norwood, to send to the Grand Rapids Exposition. Mr. Bartholomew wants to make a shipment Friday, and desires further contributions toward the Charlevoix county exhibit. The specimens already received cannot be excelled by any locality of Michigan.

—The new liquor law goes into effect September 28th. After that date an officer can enter any saloon found open after hours, and on legal holidays, and arrest proprietor and bar-keeper without warrent, or making complaint. The side door racket is also played out. The opening of any entrance whatever, front door, back door, side door, or window, is a violation of the law, and it becomes the duty of all officers to promptly arrest violators without waiting for complaint or warrant.

—The Chicago & West Michigan railroad is out with announcements of special rates to the national reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic at St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 27, 28 and 29. Department Commander Rutherford announces that the committee on transportation has arranged to leave all matters connected with transportation in the hands of that road. Supt. Gavett announces a round trip rate from Grand Rapids of $9.75, and Big Rapids $10.75. It would appear that the G. R. & I. has made no rate to the veterans up this way.

—The annual excursion of the D. L. & N. railroad arrived Tuesday, and was a greater success than ever. The first excursion, three years ago, brought about four hundred. Last year the number was about eight hundred, and Mr. Wood, the popular travelling passenger agent who originated these popular excursions and has conducted them all, said he would have "four figures" this year. And so he did, for the total number was 1,050. The first train, which arrived at eight in the evening, contained sixteen coaches, and the second had eight. An indication of Petoskey's ability to take care of people is shown by the fact that notwithstanding there were hundreds of hay fever exiles here and three or four hundred attending the conference, the thousand people who arrived after dark were all supplied with rooms in less than an hour. The excursionists speak in highest praise of Mr. Wood's indefatigable efforts for their comfort and accommodation.—Independent.

—Stephen Lavarnway, an old resident of Echo township, died recently.

—Byron See is having manufactured for him a full line of cloaks. Read about it in his new ad.

—Alick Rosenthal is booming his large stock of cloaks. See what he says about them and then go and see them.

—Major E. H. Green of Charlevoix, was elected an honorary member of St. Bernard Commandery, K. T., Chicago, last week.

—F. J. Meech is putting in a furnace. The heater was made by the Charlevoix Iron Works and is a model of its kind.

Abel W. Chew, of Hayes, has been employed to teach the Boyne Falls school for the nine months term beginning this week.

—The Charlevoix county fair to be held at East Jordan, Sep. 20-1-2, is open to all northern Michigan, and many attractions will be offered.

—F. E. Fogg, formerly of East Jordan, is doing a land office business in Ashland, Wis. In addition to his real estate business he is getting out a directory of the city.

—Grand Rapids papers announce the engagement of C. E. Gill, general freight agent of the G. R. & I. and Miss Delia Davis, of Elk Rapids.—Herald. It is quite true, Tom, and the wedding takes place this afternoon. Progress.

—The preliminary examination for pupils designing to enter the 5th Department who were not present at the final examination in June, will be held at same place and hour, on Saturday, Sept. 17, instead of Friday the 16th as previously announced.

—The Baxter Post delegation who attended the Reed City soldiers' reunion, returned Thursday, and report having had a glorious good time. A member of Col. Lombard Post, of Petoskey, told the writer that our boys looked so well and behaved so well that he was proud to live within eighteen miles of them.

—The girl who works—God bless her! She is brave and active. She is not too proud to earn her own living, nor ashamed to be caught at her daily dask. She is studious and painstaking and patient. She smiles at you from behind counter or desk. There is a memory sewn into each silken gown. She is like a beautiful young mountaineer already far up the hill, and the sight of her should be a fine inspiration for us all. It is an honor to know this girl—to be worthy of her regard. Her hands may be stained with factory grease or printer's ink, but it is an honest hand and a helping hand. It stays misfortune from many homes; it is the one shield that protects many a forlorn little family from the almshouse and asylum.

—Progress: Everyone was shocked and grieved Tuesday to learn that W. C. Lewis, book-keeper for the Elk Rapids Iron Co., was an embezzler to the amount of $1,200. He was a prominent member of the church, a teacher in and superintendent of the Sunday school, and belonged to one of the first families in Elk Rapids. When confronted with the crime he admitted its truth, but could offer no excuse in justification, as, in fact, there was none. Messrs. H. H. and E. S. Noble, the resident members of the company, have slept little for weeks, knowing that something was wrong with the books, but not knowing upon whom to place the crookedness. Monday morning the affair was brought to a focus, and in the afternoon a warrant for his arrest was issued, and the prosecuting attorney sent for, and preparations made to push the matter. We believe that nothing ever occurred in town which has hurt the Nobles more than this affair. They had advanced Lewis from position to position until he had one of the most important in their power to give, and had known and looked after him from boyhood, and both regretted the measures they were compelled to take, but had no alternative. We have never seen two gentlemen more deeply pained than the two Nobles over what was clearly their duty to perform.

—Petoskey Record: The experiment of the East Jordan Enterprise in imitating the "fine-type, all-at-home-strictly-local" style of the Mancelona Herald, seems to have been a failure, for it returns to patent bowels and brevier dress in its last issue. Probably Bro. Slussar will kick; but we imagine that Dixon followed his lead long enough to discover that if he held his own against the Sentinel and Journal, he must abandon the plan. The "all-at-home print" is all right on general principles, but except in special cases, will not work in a new, sparsely settled, and poor country. Doubtless Mr. Slussar has done well with the Herald on that plan, but the conditions are exceptional. If a really well edited, newsy, enterprising quarto, like the Charlevoix Sentinel for instance, were to be planted alongside the Herald, and had capital enough to wait for a year or so while building up its circulation, Mr. Slussar would inevitably be driven to the necessity of abandoning his present policy. Most farmers in this wooden country are as yet poor, and being unable to take a number of papers, want a county paper that will not only furnish county and local news, but give the family plenty of miscellaneous reading. These publishers in Northern Michigan, therefore, who are meeting this actual need of the people, are not necessarily fools as has been sometimes intimated by Bro. Slussar.

—Mr. Vanhorman who was stricken with paralysis over a week ago, is no better and no hope of his recovery is entertained.

—J. M. Harris has returned to Ironton, where has been hired as principal for the winter term of school. Miss Mattie O'Neil, of this place, has the primary department.

—The first fall meeting of the Charlevoix Teacher's Association will be held at the High school room in Charlevoix on Friday evening, Sept. 30th, and Saturday morning following. The programme will be given next week. This will be the annual meeting, and it is to be hoped teachers will give it their favorable attention. The value of a Teacher's Association has been demonstrated during the past year.

—Grand Rapids Democrat: On Thursday evening last, Mr. Clayton E. Gill, of this city, and Miss Delia Davis, of Elk Rapids, were married in that city by the Rev. A. J. Eldred, of Cadillac, assisted by Rev. O. J. Golden. The affair was an elaborate though quiet one, none but the most intimate friends being present. Mrs. Gill is a beautiful and accomplished lady, and Mr. Gill is well-known as the popular general freight agent of the G. R. & I. railroad. Mrs. Gill received congratulatory telegrams from all over the country, including Mrs. Francis Hodgson Burnett, the gifted authoress, who cabled from London, England; Miss Marguerite Hall, the famous vocalist, who has recently delighted London audiences; and Miss Gertrude Hall, whose recent poetical contributions to the Century met with such marked success, and made her well-known throughout the land. The presents were elegant. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Gill will be at home to their numerous friends at 27 Madison avenue, this city.

Charlevoix Summer Resort Items.

The Belvedere closed yesterday and there's a good deal of dissatisfaction lying around loose on the resort over the fact. Thirty boarders will take their meals elsewhere for the next two weeks and a number of hay fever patients returned home Monday because the hotel closed.

John W. Goss, wife and family of Rochester, N. Y., arrived Sunday intending to remain three weeks. Owing to the closing of the hotel they found quarters elsewhere. Mr. Goss expects to build a cottage on the resort next summer.

The following cottages are still open: Alnsworth, Bardeen, Barnes, Bishop, Bixby, K. Brooks, DeGolyer, Mrs. Gulley, Mrs. Heaten, Jones, Mahon, Olney, Parmelee, Sears, Smiley, Sutliff, Wier, Willcox and West.

A Pretty Wedding, by Which Charlevoix is the Gainer.

From the Detroit Evening Journal:

The marriage of Mr. Albert T. Washburne, of Charlevoix, to Miss Jennie Louise Matthews, of this city, took place Monday evening at the residence of the bride's parents on Third-ave. The parlors were profusely decorated with flowers and plants, the place where the ceremony was performed being transformed into a bower of foliage with a floral altar, and the whole separated from the remainder of the room by bands of white ribbon. The bridal party, consisting of Mr. Guy Allen, usher, the groom with Mr. Harry Bingham, his best man, the bride, attended by her sisters, the Misses Carrie and Winnifred Matthews, and the parents passed through the parlors to the altar, where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Z. Grinnell. Then followed congratulations and an elegant repast, and at 10 p. m. the couple departed amid a shower of rice, to take passage on the Alpena for their future home. The bride wore a white silk robe, with train, and carried a boquet of bridal roses. The bridemaids wore blue and pink satin.

The Methodist Conference.

The annual session of the Michigan Conference of the M. E. Church closed yesterday at Petoskey. The session has been an unusually interesting one, notwithstanding the sorrow manifested on all hands for the death, since last Conference, of Bishop Harris and Dr. H. M. Joy.

The Conference, territorially, occupies the western half of the Lower Peninsula. Numerically, it is composed of 286 clerical and 264 lay members, the latter branch meeting only quadrennially to elect lay delegates to the general conference. There are 264 pastoral charges, divided into nine presiding elders' districts. Preaching is regularly maintained at about 500 appointments. There are 26,993 members, 373 churches, and 176 parsonages, valued at $1,548,788; 208 Sunday schools, with 5,879 officers and teachers, and 49,177 scholars.

At this session, six delegates, four clerical and two lay, were elected to the General Conference, which meets once in four years, and holds its next session in New York, commencing May 1, 1888. This is a delgated body from over 100 conferences, and represents 1,999,377 communicants and 14,075 ministers of the church.

The following are the important appointments in this locality: Charlevoix, G. S. Barnes; Traverse City, W. Hansom; Petoskey, D. O. Ball; Norwood, B. H. Whitman; Northport, J. Eagle; Ironton, to be supplied by John Derrance; Harbor Springs, John Robinson; Frankfort, Howe; Elk Rapids, Eldred. Presiding Elder, Sherman. J. T. Iddings goes to Reading. This list is secured at the moment of our going to press, and is not as full as desired.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX. MICHIGAN

"PAPA'S BOY."

BY BURT ARNOLD.

Around the house, from morn till night,
A merry child doth roam ;
His voice is sweet, his spirit's light,—
The blessing of my home.
His mother's passed to realms above,
Where all is peace and joy,
The child alone is left to love ;
He now is "Papa's Boy."

His bright blue eyes and golden hair
Are never out of sight,
He's mounted now upon my chair,
And asking, "Papa, write!"
He's placed his little cheek 'gainst mine,
Is showing me a toy ;
Alas! how can I write a line?
He says : "Write, Papa's Boy."

At eve he nestles in my lap,
While shadows gather 'round ;
And there enjoys his little nap
Till tea-bell makes its sound.
Then—half awake and half asleep,
With glance so sweetly coy,
He rubs his eyes,—scarce half a peep,—
And murmurs : "Papa's Boy."

Oft on a morn, I lie and doze,
Build castles in the air
Think what I'd do, were I to lose
The cherub sleeping there
The least faint stir that I can make,
He hails with infant joy.
Puts out his arms for me to take,
And, "Kiss Papa's Boy."

A GHOST STORY.

BY CLARA MERWIN.

Ten years ago I was in the first sorrow of my life. When the grave closed over my parents I thought that there was no place left for me in the world. I was rich, young, and my friends and my own reflections in the glass told me

...

I thanked Warden, however, and assured her that I was not in the least afraid; and she, with a well-relieved face, left me alone. I heard her footsteps echoing down the corridor—they died away, and I was now out of reach of all human help, for in this distant room, in this far-away wing, no possible sounds could reach any other inhabitants of Clifton's Vale.

In all my girlhood I was brave; even in the sad depression of my sorrow, I had never known physical fear; nevertheless, when the last of Warden's footsteps echoed out and died, and that profound stillness followed which can be oppressive, I had a curious sensation. I did not call it fear; I did not know before that grim and pale-faced tyrant; but it made me uncomfortable, and caused my heart to beat irregularly. The sensation was this: I felt that I was not alone. Of course it was fancy, and what have I to do with fancy? I determined to banish this uncomfortable feeling from my mind, and, stirring the fire to a cheerful blaze, I drew one of the black-oak chairs near it and sat down.

Warden had looked so pale and frightened before she left me that out of consideration for her feelings I had allowed her to leave the jewels which I had worn that evening on the dressing-table. There they lay, a set of very valuable diamonds. There was an old-fashioned mirror on the mantel-piece, and as I sat by the fire I saw the reflection of my diamonds in the glass. As I noticed their sparkle again that strange sensation returned, this time more strongly, this time with a cold shiver. I was not alone. Who was in the Tapestry room? Was it the ghost? Was the story true, after all? Of course I did not believe it. I laughed aloud as the thought came to me. I felt that I was getting quite

...

WAR ANNALS.

Old Soldiers of Both Armies Fighting Their Battles Over Again.

Anecdotes of the Battle-field, the Weary March, and the Cheerful Camp-fire.

Grant.

BY JAMES FRANKLIN FITTS.

Stoutest captain of that time,
Foot the offering of my rhyme,
And my tribute, faint yet true,
Comes unbidden unto thee.

Strong upon the Western field,
Coquette Victory had to yield
To thy wooing, rough and rude,
With a steady heart pursued.

Fierce the tides of battle ran
Just across the Rapidan ;
Ne'er such human sacrifice
Greeted the Republic's eyes.

Pleased, aghast with grief and fears,
Half the sorrowing land in tears—
Must this slaughter still increase ?
"Yes," he answered, "That way, peace!"

So he conquered ; peace at last
Like a benison was cast
O'er the weary, stricken land,
Peace angelic, sweet, and bland.

So he conquered. Give him praise,
Standing in those direful days
Like a tower against the wind,
Cruel only to be kind.

Patient, strong, serene, unmoved,
Right arm of the cause he loved ;
Praise is wanting, fame is scant
Unto thee, unequaled Grant!

Yes—and who, when strife was done,
Welcomed back each erring son ;
Mild, and merciful, and kind,
Eager every wound to bind ?—
Ne'er decry him—cease the rant—
That was grand Ulysses Grant!

—Chicago Ledger.

Reptile and Insect Enemies.

...

"The stars in their courses fought against Sisera." President Lincoln was fond of quoting these words from the Scripture, as suggestive of the silent, unnoted influences that enter into the great game of war. When such are counted up, the great evils and sufferings of the Union and her in overcoming nature herself, and withstanding the attacks of the reptiles and the insects of the South, ought not to be overlooked.

History deals so little with these things that the world will never know the extent of the evils and sufferings of the American soldier.

It tells about great campaigns and large movements; it tells how many were killed and wounded in a battle; but you look in vain for some account of the dreadful sufferings of the men who waded the Chickahominy swamps, who held their ground on the Mississippi, amid the poison of its malarial bottoms and insects, who hung resolutely to the territory acquired by hard knocks, in "the Louisiana low lands low," the Florida swamps, and the Carolina marshes. All these things the comrades know, but it is hard to make the people understand them.

These men simply illustrated the strength of the American character. There was never a time when a dangerous service was demanded—a scout through a trackless swamp, or a detail on some necessary service in an unhealthy region—but a dozen would volunteer for one that was wanted. The proud record of the American soldier is that of devotion—the absolute giving of himself to the cause.

All honor to him!

JAMES FRANKLIN FITTS.

Wasted by War.

General Grant died at the age of 63. General Logan died at the age of 63. General Hancock died at the age of 61. General McClellan died at the age of 60. General Halleck died at 59. General George G. Meade died at 57. General George H. Thomas died at 54. General W. T. Sherman is the only one of the few greatest generals of the

...

GREAT "CROOKS."

Romantic Ideas Dispelled by an Experienced Criminal.

[Philadelphia Times.]

I was looking over the criminal list the other day of the convicted professionals confined in New York State. They were numerous enough, but their crimes were contemptibly small. To make your Vidocq, you must have first your great criminal and his great crime. The American Vidocq makes himself, with those two essentials left out; and having opportunity to talk with one of the alleged great criminals, he confirmed my belief in the visionary character of these shrewd and clever rascals with no greater effort than revealing his own stupidity. I hunted up another, a professional who has repeated his offenses sufficiently to entitle him to any other distinction than that of an honest man. I would mention that he wears stripes now, except that it might draw from the value of his statements in the minds of some who are too easily prejudiced. Anyway he is a better authority than the police, whose vanity in their own capacity may be a proper pride, but leads to some mighty tall lying.

"The fact is that professional thieves and rogues are not numerous in any locality, and if crime were the sole source of support for the few hundreds who are so classed, most of them would be hungry many times every year.

...

As soon as they acquire that sort of thing they know enough to be honest.

The Cloud Changed Things.

A bad drouth prevailed in southeastern Dakota a number of years ago. It was feared that the few settlers in that region at that time would lose all their crops. Elder Blodgett, who had charge of a church and also a livery stable at a small Missouri River town, held a special meeting one Sunday afternoon to pray for rain. People came from miles around. Before the services began two men got into an argument, near the freight warehouse in which the meeting was to be held concerning the relative merits of different kinds of beaver traps. The discussion grew warm and one of them said:

"Mebby you think I don't know nothing 'bout traps?"

"You don't talk 'sif ye was overstocked."

"I know a thunderin' sight more'n you do 'bout 'em!"

"Yer a sight better liar nor I am, too!"

"I'll show ye!"

They both stood up and went at it when the Elder came rushing out and said:

"Here, no fightin' no fightin! We're gathered here on a sacred and a solemn mission; the whole country is dryin' up an' it's goin' to take earnest prayer to get rain. D'ye think it will do any

...

REMINISCENCES OF PUBLIC MEN.

BY BEN: PERLEY POORE.

Tom Corwin once illustrated in a speech the different positions on the slavery question taken by the Democracy in Ohio and in New York, by narrating Uncle John Shelby's adventures in "running down" a deer. The ground, he said, was covered with six inches of snow, on which the rain had fallen and been frozen, forming a crust sufficiently strong to bear his weight. In the morning he discovered the tracks of a deer, and started after it with the determination of running it down. After describing the course taken, and detailing different incidents that occurred during the chase, he said that about noon he felt somewhat weary and hungry, and, standing his gun against a fence, he jumped into a cornfield and pulled some roasting ears, on which he proposed to make a meal.

"What, Uncle John, snow on the ground and roasting ears? That won't do," said one of the company.

"Hold on, boys," said Uncle John; "I've made a little mistake, and got two stories mixed!"

Mr. Corwin thought that the Democracy had gotten their positions on slavery slightly mixed—that there was snow in New York and roasting ears in Ohio.

Judge Douglas said one day that the first and last duel ever fought in Illinois was in 1820, at Belleville, between

...

"The Proper Study of Mankind Is Man,"

Says the illustrious Pope. If he had included woman in the list, he would have been nearer the truth, if not so poetical. Dr. R. V. Pierce has made them both a life study, especially woman, and the peculiar derangements to which her delicate system is liable. Many women in the land who are acquainted with Dr. Pierce only through his "Favorite Prescription," bless him with all their hearts, for he has brought them the panacea for all those chronic ailments peculiar to their sex, ... By druggists.

You can always distinguish the young lady who rules the household by her marshal air.

Five dollars can be saved every year in boots and shoes by using Lyon's Heel Stiffeners; cost only 25c.

... Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. By druggists. 50c.

The Frazer Axle Grease is better and cheaper than any other at double the price.

Do Not Neglect

That tired feeling, impure blood, distress after eating, pains in the back, headache, or similar affections, till some powerful disease obtains a firm foothold, and recovery is difficult, perhaps impossible. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the defender of health, in time to banish all bad feelings and restore you to perfect health.

"When I took Hood's Sarsaparilla that heaviness in my stomach left, the dullness in my head and the gloomy, despondent feeling disappeared. I began to get stronger, my blood gained better circulation, the coldness in my hands and feet left me, and my kidneys do not bother me as before." O. W. HULL, Attorney at Law, Millersburg, O.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

Ely's Cream Balm

Is worth $1000 to any Man, Woman or Child

...

The treatment of many thousands of cases of those chronic weaknesses and distressing ailments peculiar to females, at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., has afforded a vast experience in nicely adapting and thoroughly testing remedies for the cure of woman's peculiar maladies.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the outgrowth, or result, of this great and valuable experience. Thousands of testimonials, received from patients and from physicians who have tested it in the more aggravated and obstinate cases which had baffled their skill, prove it to be the most wonderful remedy ever devised for the relief and cure of suffering women. It is not recommended as a "cure-all," but as a most perfect Specific for woman's peculiar ailments.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic, it imparts strength to the whole system, and to the womb and its appendages in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop girls," housekeepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, exhaustion, prostration, hysteria, spasms and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womb. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a legitimate medicine, carefully compounded by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. It is purely vegetable in its composition and perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the system. For

...

For a woman to say she does not use Procter & Gamble's Lenox Soap, is to admit she is "behind the times." Nobody uses ordinary soap now they can get "Lenox."

CLOAKS, CLOAKS, CLOAKS.

Short Cloaks, Long Cloaks, Medium Cloaks.

CLOAKS FOR BABIES, CLOAKS FOR CHILDREN, CLOAKS FOR BLUSHING MAIDENS,

CLOAKS FOR THE MARRIED, FOR THE SINGLE, CLOAKS FOR THE FALL, FOR WINTER, JACKETS FOR ALL,

Soon, at The Live Dry Goods House of

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.

LABOR'S HOLIDAY.

The Observance of "Labor Day" at Charlevoix a Marked Success.

Monday was a red-letter day for organized labor of the Pine Lake region. Although but two assemblies were out in force—those of East Jordan—the crowd was augmented by laborers from field and shop, who belonged to no organization.

Before 10:30, the boats were all in, bringing crowds, the Clara Belle bringing the East Jordan Assembly. At eleven the procession formed as follows:

1. Consolidated bands.
2. Carriages with clergy and orators.
3. Charlevoix Fire Department.
4. Petoskey Base Ball Club.
5. Charlevoix Base Ball Club.
6. East Jordan Assembly K. of L.
7. Charlevoix Assembly K. of L.
8. Citizens on foot and in carriages.

The route was through Bridge street to Parmelee's grove, on the north side, where the opening exercises were held, which included the welcoming address by Rev. W. H. McCartney.

THE BARBECUE.

Early Sunday afternoon, a pit, six feet long, three feet deep, and about as wide, had been dug at one of the angles of the park; a pile of dry block-wood was near. At four p. m. a fire was kindled in the pit, and the dry block-wood was thrown in. The fire was fed steadily until after midnight, when a solid bed of glowing coals, filling the pit, threw out a flood of heat that prevented a near approach to it. Crotched standards were erected at either end, and a large, corn-fatted and neatly dressed ox, with a heavy green sappling passing through it from flank to neck, was placed in the crotches. Over all was placed a tin screen or "Dutch oven," and the roasting was begun.

A bar run through one end of the sappling served the purpose of turning the mammoth roast as required, and the chef de cuisine from time to time applied a solution of seasoning.

Visitors to the grove in the early morning found the ox well roasted, and still kept warm by the glowing embers.

THE FEAST.

At the conclusion of the morning ceremonies baskets were brought forth, and their contents spread for the noon meal. President McLeod did the carving, and soon steaming and juicy portions of the roast were distributed among the large audience, and eaten with a relish.

But a short time elapsed before the joints were dissected, and the bones, bearing rich and liberal quantities of meat, taken home by those who desired them. The barbecue was a success in every particular.

THE AFTERNOON.

The afternoon programme was intended for the grove, but after reassembling there, the lowering clouds threatened rain, and the meeting adjourned to the rink, where the problem of capital and labor was ably discussed by Rev. Mr. Deyo, Mrs. Barghorn, and F. D. Phillips.

THE DAY.

The day thus set apart by organized labor will be perpetuated as a labor holiday. The idea is a happy one, as the cause it represents is a righteous one. We may expect that hereafter the 5th of September will partake of the nature of a National holiday, and annually assemble the hosts of laborers throughout the Union.

Under existing treaties with Great Britain, the extradition of McGarigle, the Chicago boodler, cannot reasonably be expected. The Illinois authorities have been reported as endeavoring to interest the state department in the case in order to secure his surrender on the ground of comity. There is no reason to believe that Canada would accede to the request if it were to be made; and the established practice of the state department discourages applications of this nature. A government which itself refuses to surrender fugitive criminals when there are no treaty provisions covering the case can not consistently ask other nations to make an exception to the same rule. The uniform practice at Washington has been to restrict the privilege of extradition to governments which have entered into treaty engagements to that effect.

Last Chance.

My organ, which is still at C. H. Meddaugh's tailor shop. Though worth $60, will be sold with stool, for $25, cash, if taken within ten days.

H. M. MARTINDALE.

Swimmers and Swimming.

From the Youth's Companion.

It is not every one who can learn to swim like Byron, Franklin, Sir Cloudesley Shovel, Leander, Mary Wakefield, and the other historic swimmers. In order to perform such feats as they did, a person must have buoyant flesh, not too heavy bones, great wind, cool nerves and much practice. In a school of fifty boys there are always a few who can swim a great deal easier and longer than the rest, and there are some long, strong, bony fellows who are tired in twenty strokes.

Byron owed his power in the water chiefly to the buoyancy of his flesh, but partly to the muscular development of his arms and chest. He was a superb creature from his waist upward. In swimming the Hellespont he was in the water one hour and ten minutes, and came out, as he used to boast, very little the worse for his voyage. Indeed, he had several swimming adventures in his life which were more difficult than the one which he performed in imitation of Leander. Once on Brighton beach he was exhausted in battling with the surf, and would have been drowned but for some by-standers who formed a line for his rescue.

Cloudesley Shovel's grand exploit was probably due to masculine strength and great practice. He was a cabin-boy on board Admiral Narborough's ship during the naval war between England and Holland, two hundred years ago. Narborough was lost unless he could get word to a portion of his fleet which was near, but out of sight behind a high piece of land. No boat could have lived in the fierce fire of the fleets, and there was no possible way of communicating an order except by swimming. The admiral called for volunteers, and among those who sprang forward was his own cabin-boy, a vigorous, handsome lad of eighteen. He had been a cobbler's apprentice and had run away to sea.

"What can you do my fearless lad?" asked Admiral Narborough.

"I can swim, sir," replied the youth; "and if I'm shot, I can be easier spared than any one else."

That answer with the look that accompanied it, settled the question. In another minute or two with the order in his mouth, the lad swam out of sight, into the dense smoke of the battle, followed by the cheers of the crews. He brought the reserve fleet into action in time, gave his country another victory, won for himself a lieutenant's commission. His remains now lie in Westminster Abbey, with a monument over them bearing the name of Admiral Sir Cloudesley Shovel.

Mary Wakefield's brave act on Lake Michigan, a month or two ago, was not exactly a feat in swimming. When she sprang from the burning steamer into the lake with the captain's child, six years of age, in her arms, she laid hold of a piece of wood, and had to use both her hands in clinging to it. The child she held up by her teeth in its clothes, and thus encumbered she struck out boldly for shore. On her way she met a rescuing boat, which stopped to take them in.

"Hurry away to the others; I can take care of the child!" she cried.

She reached the shore safely with her charge, and was soon ready to bear a most efficient hand in caring for the perishing survivors as they arrived by the boats. This was a rare and noble act of courage and endurance, for the water was little above the freezing point in that northern region.

No, we cannot all do these grand and noble things. Some of us can, however, if we try the right way, and honor the doers.

Col. John B. Towers, principal keeper of the penitentiary, aided and abetted in one of the most cruel jokes of the war. The federals were leisurely firing shells into some confederate works, and the bombs were falling and bursting in such uncomfortable nearness that soldiers had dug holes in the ground and were hiding as best they could. The colonel and some of his friends got hold of an unexploded shell and stuffed it full of fuse. When the next report was heard, the fuse was touched off, and after a moment the bomb was dropped into the mouth of one of the "gopher" holes where soldiers were sheltered. "Zip-zip-zip-z-z-zip-zip-zip-zip!" went the fuse for several minutes. Howl after howl went up as the soldiers expected to be blown to pieces. After a while the spluttering fuse burned out and things quieted down.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

Marine Jottings.

10—Schr Ariel, 140 cords wood, Master to Milwaukee.

10—Schr Melvina, 230 cords wood, W. L. French to Kenosha.

10—Schr Fleetwing, 40 cords bark, Smithson to Milwaukee.

10—Schr Mocking Bird, 140,000 ft hardwood lumber, John Nicholls to Chicago.

11—Schr Sch, 150 cords bark, French & Sutton to Kenosha.

12—Schr Oneida, 200 cords bark, French to Kenosha.

16—Eaglewing, 225,000 ft hardwood lumber, Glenn & Porter to Chicago.

17—Schr Addie, 100,000 ft hardwood Pine Lake Lumber Co., to Michigan City.

17—Schr Racine, 100 cords wood, 75 cords bark, Downer to Chicago.

17—Schr Stampede, 250,000 ft hardwood lumber, Pine Lake Lumber Co., to Chicago.

14—Schr Taylor, 8,000 posts Downer to Chicago.

6—Schr John L. Green, 70,000 ft hardwood, Perkins & White to Sheboygan.

19—Schr John Schuette 540 tons iron Pine Lake Iron Co. to Milwaukee.

14—Schr Radical, 1,500 ties, Downer to Chicago.

19—Schr Lillie Pratt, 20,000 ft elm lumber Glenn & Porter to Chicago.

20—Schr Handy, 21 cords wood, Master to Sheboygan.

20—Schr Evening Star, 18,000 ft hardwood, Pine Lake Lumber Co. Sheboygan.

23—Schr Florence Smith, 65 cords wood, Master to Milwaukee.

23—Schr Ardie, 110 cords wood, Walsh to Milwaukee.

24—Schr Merchant, 50 cords slabs MastSc to Escanaba.

26—Schr Mocking Bird, 150,000 ft hardwood lumber John Nicholls to Chicago.

29—Schr John Schuette, 525 tons pig iron, Pine Lake Iron Co., to Chicago.

30—Schr Moonlight, 500,000 hoops, Wilson Hoop Co. to Milwaukee.

30—Schr John L. Green, 75,000 ft hardwood lumber Perkins & White to Sheboygan.

30—Schr F. M. Smith 65 cords wood, Master to Milwaukee.

Hemlock is fast becoming an important article of manufacture in Michigan. It is estimated that 100,000,000 feet will be put in Michigan streams the coming winter.

The Connecticut grand army posts are a unit in supporting the proposed pension bill, almost identical with that vetoed last winter by President Cleveland. There are 10,000 veterans in the state. Not a cheering out look for Mr. Cleveland in Connecticut next year.

Of the 820 delegates to the national democratic convention next year the south will have 306. When it comes to the electoral college it brings nearly all the electoral votes cast for the democratic candidate. Hence the south must be kept solidly democratic or there is no hope for democracy.

Chicago Journal, Saturday: Sixty thousand baskets of peaches arrived and were on market to-day. The total for the week was 280,000 baskets, and the Michigan crop is yet far from being marketed. The native melon crop is unusually large and the melons are the finest in flavor that has been seen in years.

If the democrats attempt to coerce the G. A. R. veterans into marching under Cleveland's banner at the St. Louis parade they will probably wish they hadn't. The affair would probably end as it did at Wheeling, where the democrats tried to run the soldier's reunion in the interests of the democratic party. The G. A. R. is not going to St. Louis on any political mission whatever, and it will not be coerced nor entrapped into any democratic scheme. If the democratic managers in St. Louis carry out their plans proposed they are a lot of big fools.

Dr. Rice, of Beaver Lake, Wis., the locality where Guiteau and the Scovilles used to spend their summers, stated recently that he had exceptionally good opportunities to observe Guiteau's daily life and the working of his mind, and that he was, long before the tragedy, satisfied that he was insane. Dr. Rice is a little tardy in proclaiming his views; but he will not be able to change the fixed popular belief that Guiteau was as sane when he did the shooting as any man is who kills another. He was sane enough to know what he was doing, and richly deserved the punishment he received.

Here is a French story with four distinct morals: Four flies were in search of a breakfast. One found some jelly and regaled himself. The jelly was not genuine and the fly turned upon his back. The second fly, seeing the sad fate of his friend, resolved to eat plain bread. But there was so much alum in the bread that he, too, turned over and breathed his last. The third fly attacked a glass of beer, but the aloes laid him out cold. The fourth fly, seeing that everything eatable was tampered with resolved to commit suicide. He found some German fly paper on which was inscribed "Death to Flies." He partook freely, but the more he ate the better felt. He stuck to fly paper and lived to a good old age.

St. John says: "We are fighting the republican party now." What else has he been doing for the last few years? He isn't paid $50 per speech for doing anything else. If he were honestly engaged in the temperance cause, or, leaving that matter entirely out, if he were honestly engaged in the work of building up a third party, do you suppose he would spend his whole time in republican states, trying to break down the republican majorities and build up the democratic party in those states? Why is it that he didn't go to Texas? Why doesn't he go to Tennessee, or Mississippi or some some other southern state where prohibition is an issue? Because they are already democratic states. That is why.

The New York Tribune very cautiously says: "So far as the League pennant is concerned, it seems at this point to be anybody's race. 'Anybody' in this case means the five leading clubs those of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and Detroit. The chances of all seem to be about equally good. Friends of each can find sufficient reasons in support of their favorite to convince at least themselves that the others are sure not to be foremost when the season ends. The situation is decidedly more interesting than it would be if one club had so great a lead that the others had no chance at all of catching up."

Cloaks for everybody just received at the popular clothing house of Alick Rosenthal's.

C L O T H I N G.

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.

My Prices are so Low

that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

New Fall Dry Goods

NOW ARRIVING.

We were never before in such good condition to offer BARGAINS. Our stock is CLEAN, FRESH, and being Constantly Replenished.

We offer the choicest and most complete stock of

GROCERIES!

and our PRICES are LOWEST For BEST GOODS.

Our stock of CROCKERY is being overhauled.

Special drives in

WHITE GRANITE EARTHENWARE, This Week.

J. L. HURD & CO.

---OUR---

CLOAKS ARE HERE,

AND AWAITING YOUR INSPECTION. WE ARE PROUD TO SAY TO THE LADIES THAT WE HAVE AS FINE A LINE OF NEW CLOAKS AS CAN BE FOUND IN ANY CITY.

Our CLOAKS are THE GREATEST BARGAINS!

And the largest stock of Cloaks ever offered here.

ALL OUR GOODS ARE OF THE

LATEST MAKE

AND BEST VALUE.

of all the latest styles.

In Ladies Furnishings & Bazaar

Goods we have a long list of Bargains.

Before purchasing elsewhere, give our store a call.

ALICK ROSENTHAL,

LEWIS BLOCK.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO.--20 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1887. WHOLE NO. 929

SCHOOL BOOKS

SCHOOL BOOK

BUY YOUR SCHOOL SUPPLIES AT HEADQUARTERS. WE HAVE EVERYTHING NEEDED IN THE SCHOOL ROOM, AT UNIFORMLY LOW PRICES.

F. G. HINES & Co.

We will furnish the new books adopted by the board at introduction prices. Remember that we sell everything that can be called for in any of our Schools.

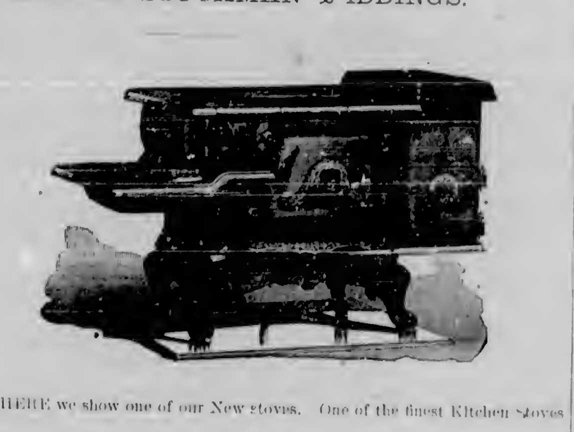
SCHOOL BOOKS

YOU'D BETTER HEAR US!

LISTEN!

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $$$ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES, & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.



HERE we show one of our New stoves. One of the finest Kitchen Stoves ever made. Yes, we can safely say the finest. But we leave you to judge, come and see for yourselves. Make our store your stopping place, you are always welcome, and your welcome does not depend on your buying anything. Price and quality guaranteed on everything.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

EMREY BROS.

Boots and Shoes for almost nothing, to close out.

We have a number of pairs of Boots and Shoes which we will almost give away as we are closing them out.

We are also going out of

CROCKERY

and have a complete assortment which must be sold

WE WILL NOT TAKE A BACK SEAT ON

SUMMER DRY GOODS.

PRICES ALWAYS LOW.

IN GROCERIES and Provisions we can suit you, as we receive Fresh Goods weekly.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

DON'T

BUY FALL GOODS TILL YOU SEE OURS.

We Hold our Custom because our Prices are Always Low.

OUR FALL ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

Remember: Our Goods are the Best, Our Prices the Lowest, Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours.

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

The Best Groceries At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture

AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE

AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

WANTED!

Everyone to know that we are here and doing Business, and will do just as we agree to by one and all. We keep GROCERIES and PROVISIONS, FLOUR AND FEED, CROCKERY AND GLASSWARE.

Choice Butter and Fresh Eggs a Specialty. Call on us or call by Telephone.

WILL SEE & CO.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year - $1.50 | Six months - $ .75

Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Additional local news on our fifth page.

—Will Aldrich now has a "case" on the Chicago Inter Ocean.

John Weed left for a Detroit visit Monday, with Dr. D. B. Weed.

Miss Emma Todd left Monday for her Cheboygan home to remain.

Charlevoix post office will be raised to the presidential class, Oct. 1.

—F. G. Hines & Co., are leaders on school books and supplies. Notice their new announcement.

—Antrim county voters will probably have a chance to exercise their franchise on the liquor question this year.

J. Reed and R. A. Emrey have with them a neice from Jeanerette, La. Miss Rose Stakoe, who will winter here.

—The store of Alick Rosenthal will be closed from Monday morning until six p. m. Tuesday, owing to the Jewish holidays.

—C. H. Whitford, of Hayes, has been granted back pension amounting to about $450, and an increase from $4 to $10 per month.

—B. C. Hathaway, Grand Master of Michigan has been making a tour among the Masonic Lodges of the upper peninsula. He was at Petoskey, Saturday.

—During the fair at East Jordan, the steamer Friant will run excursions every day, leaving here at ten and returning leave East Jordan at two, excepting on the last day of the fair when the boat will wait until three. Round trip tickets are fifty cents, good during the fair.

—Potatoes are estimated to yield 29 per cent of the average crop in southern counties, 42 per cent in central counties, and 45 per cent in the northern. The average for the state, 33 per cent. Of winter apples there will be about one-half, and the late peaches three-fourths of an average crop.

—The I. O. G. T. Lodge of Elk Rapids, has taken earnestly hold of the subject of local option. It has appointed committees which have prepared petitions and placed them in the hands of temperance workers in every township in the county. These are being circulated, and the question will no doubt be submitted to the voters of the county at no distant day.

L. H. Bartholomew already has received some most valuable specimens of fruit from the farms of John Hammond, of Eveline, and O. D. Hilton and J. Bolten, of Norwood, to send to the Grand Rapids Exposition. Mr. Bartholomew wants to make a shipment Friday, and desires further contributions toward the Charlevoix county exhibit. The specimens already received cannot be excelled by any locality of Michigan.

—The new liquor law goes into effect September 28th. After that date an officer can enter any saloon found open after hours, and on legal holidays, and arrest proprietor and bar-keeper without warrent, or making complaint. The side door racket is also played out. The opening of any entrance whatever, front door, back door, side door, or window, is a violation of the law, and it becomes the duty of all officers to promptly arrest violators without waiting for complaint or warrant.

—The Chicago & West Michigan railroad is out with announcements of special rates to the national reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic at St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 27, 28 and 29. Department Commander Rutherford announces that the committee on transportation has arranged to leave all matters connected with transportation in the hands of that road. Supt. Gavett announces a round trip rate from Grand Rapids of $9.75, and Big Rapids $10.75. It would appear that the G. R. & I. has made no rate to the veterans up this way.

—The annual excursion of the D. L. & N. railroad arrived Tuesday, and was a greater success than ever. The first excursion, three years ago, brought about four hundred. Last year the number was about eight hundred, and Mr. Wood, the popular travelling passenger agent who originated these popular excursions and has conducted them all, said he would have "four figures" this year. And so he did, for the total number was 1,050. The first train, which arrived at eight in the evening, contained sixteen coaches, and the second had eight. An indication of Petoskey's ability to take care of people is shown by the fact that notwithstanding there were hundreds of hay fever exiles here and three or four hundred attending the conference, the thousand people who arrived after dark were all supplied with rooms in less than an hour. The excursionists speak in highest praise of Mr Wood's indefatigable efforts for their comfort and accommodation.—Independent.

—Stephen Lavarnway, an old resident of Echo township, died recently.

Byron See is having manufactured for him a full line of cloaks. Read about it in his new ad.

—Alick Rosenthal is booming his large stock of cloaks. See what he says about them and then go and see them.

—Major E. H. Green of Charlevoix, was elected an honorary member of St. Bernard Commandery, K. T., Chicago, last week.

—F. J. Meech is putting in a furnace. The heater was made by the Charlevoix Iron Works and is a model of its kind.

—Abel W. Chew, of Hayes, has been employed to teach the Boyne Falls school for the nine months term beginning this week.

—The Charlevoix county fair to be held at East Jordan, Sep. 20-1-2, is open to all northern Michigan, and many attractions will be offered.

—F. E. Fogg, formerly of East Jordan, is doing a land office business in Ashland, Wis. In addition to his real estate business he is getting out a directory of the city.

—Grand Rapids papers announce the engagement of C. E. Gill, general freight agent of the G. R. & I. and Miss Delia Davis, of Elk Rapids.—Herald. It is quite true, Tom, and the wedding takes place this afternoon.—Progress.

—The preliminary examination for pupils designing to enter the 5th Department who were not present at the final examination in June, will be held at same place and hour, on Saturday, Sept. 17, instead of Friday the 16th as previously announced.

—The Baxter Post delegation who attended the Reed City soldiers' reunion, returned Thursday, and report having had a glorious good time. A member of Col. Lombard Post, of Petoskey, told the writer that our boys looked so well and behaved so well that he was proud to live within eighteen miles of them.

The girl who works—God bless her! She is brave and active. She is not too proud to earn her own living, nor ashamed to be caught at her daily dask. She is studious and painstaking and patient. She smiles at you from behind counter or desk. There is a memory sewn into each silken gown. She is like a beautiful young mountaineer already far up the hill, and the sight of her should be a fine inspiration for us all. It is an honor to know this girl—to be worthy of her regard. Her hands may be stained with factory grease or printer's ink, but it is an honest hand and a helping hand. It stays misfortune from many homes; it is the one shield that protects many a forlorn little family from the almshouse and asylum.

—Progress: Everyone was shocked and grieved Tuesday to learn that W. C. Lewis, book-keeper for the Elk Rapids Iron Co., was an embezzler to the amount of $1,200. He was a prominent member of the church, a teacher in and superintendent of the Sunday school, and belonged to one of the first families in Elk Rapids. When confronted with the crime he admitted its truth, but could offer no excuse in justification, as, in fact, there was none. Messrs. H. H. and E. S. Noble, the resident members of the company, have slept little for weeks, knowing that something was wrong with the books, but not knowing upon whom to place the crookedness. Monday morning the affair was brought to a focus, and in the afternoon a warrant for his arrest was issued, and the prosecuting attorney sent for, and preparations made to push the matter. We believe that nothing ever occurred in town which has hurt the Nobles more than this affair. They had advanced Lewis from position to position until he had one of the most important in their power to give, and had known and looked after him from boyhood, and both regretted the measures they were compelled to take, but had no alternative. We have never seen two gentlemen more deeply pained than the two Nobles over what was clearly their duty to perform.

—Petoskey Record: The experiment of the East Jordan Enterprise in imitating the "the-type, all-at-home-strictly-local" style of the Mancelona Herald, seems to have been a failure, for it returns to patent bowels and brevier dress in its last issue. Probably Bro. Slussar will kick; but we imagine that Dixon followed his lead long enough to discover that if he held his own against the Sentinel and Journal, he must abandon the plan. The "all at home print" is all right on general principles, but except in special cases, will not work in a new, sparsely settled, and poor country. Doubtless Mr. Slussar has done well with the Herald on that plan, but the conditions are exceptional. If a really well edited, newsy, enterprising quarto, like the Charlevoix Sentinel for instance, were to be planted alongside the Herald, and had capital enough to wait for a year or so while building up its circulation, Mr. Slussar would inevitably be driven to the necessity of abandoning his present policy. Most farmers in this wooden country are as yet poor, and being unable to take a number of papers, want a county paper that will not only furnish county and local news, but give the family plenty of miscellaneous reading. Those publishers in Northern Michigan, therefore, who are meeting this actual need of the people, are not necessarily fools as has been sometimes intimated by Bro. Slussar.

—Mr. Vanaurnum who was stricken with paralysis over a week ago, is no better and no hope of his recovery is entertained.

—J. M. Harris has returned to Ironton, where has been hired as principal for the winter term of school. Miss Mattie O'Neil, of this place, has the primary department.

—The first fall meeting of the Charlevoix Teacher's Association will be held at the High school room in Charlevoix on Friday evening, Sept. 30th, and Saturday morning following. The programme will be given next week. This will be the annual meeting, and it is to be hoped teachers will give it their favorable attention. The value of a Teacher's Association has been demonstrated during the past year.

—Grand Rapids Democrat: On Thursday evening last, Mr. Clayton L. Gill, of this city, and Miss Delia Davis, of Elk Rapids, were married in that city by the Rev. A. J. Eldred, of Cadillac, assisted by Rev. O. J. Golden. The affair was an elaborate though quiet one, none but the most intimate friends being present. Mrs. Gill is a beautiful and accomplished lady, and Mr. Gill is well-known as the popular general freight agent of the G. R. & I. railroad. Mrs. Gill received congratulatory telegrams from all over the country, including Mrs. Francis Hodgson Burnett, the gifted authoress, who cabled from London, England; Miss Marguerite Hall, the famous vocalist, who has recently delighted London audiences; and Miss Gertrude Hall, whose recent poetical contributions to the Century met with such marked success, and made her well known throughout the land. The presents were elegant. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Gill will be at home to their numerous friends at 27 Madison avenue, this city.

Charlevoix Summer Resort Items.

The Belvedere closed yesterday and there's a good deal of dissatisfaction lying around loose on the resort over the fact. Thirty boarders will take their meals elsewhere for the next two weeks and a number of hay fever patients returned home Monday because the hotel closed.

John W. Goss, wife and family of Rochester, N. Y., arrived Sunday intending to remain three weeks. Owing to the closing of the hotel they found quarters elsewhere. Mr. Goss expects to build a cottage on the resort next summer.

The following cottages are still open: Ainsworth, Bardeen, Barnes, Bishop, Bixby, K. Brooks, DeGolyer, Mrs. Gulley, Mrs. Heaton, Jones, Mahon, Olney, Parmelee, Sears, Smiley, Sutliff, Wier, Willcox and West.

A Pretty Wedding, by Which Charlevoix is the Gainer.

From the Detroit Evening Journal.

The marriage of Mr. Albert T. Washburne, of Charlevoix, to Miss Jennie Louise Matthews, of this city, took place Monday evening at the residence of the bride's parents on Third-ave. The parlors were profusely decorated with flowers and plants, the place where the ceremony was performed being transformed into a bower of foliage with a floral altar, and the whole separated from the remainder of the room by bands of white ribbon. The bridal party, consisting of Mr. Guy Allen, usher, the groom with Mr. Harry Bingham, his best man, the bride, attended by her sisters, the Misses Carrie and Winnifred Matthews, and the parents passed through the parlors to the altar, where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Z. Grinnell. Then followed congratulations and an elegant repast, and at 10 p. m. the couple departed amid a shower of rice, to take passage on the Alpena for their future home. The bride wore a white silk robe, with train, and carried a boquet of bridal roses. The bridesmaids wore blue and pink satin.

The Methodist Conference.

The annual session of the Michigan Conference of the M. E. Church closed yesterday at Petoskey. The session has been an unusually interesting one, notwithstanding the sorrow manifested on all hands for the death, since last Conference, of Bishop Harris and Dr. H. M. Joy.

The Conference, territorially, occupies the western half of the Lower Peninsula. Numerically, it is composed of 286 clerical and 264 lay members, the latter branch meeting only quadrennially to elect lay delegates to the general conference. There are 264 pastoral charges, divided into nine presiding elders' districts. Preaching is regularly maintained at about 500 appointments. There are 26,933 members, 373 churches, and 176 parsonages, valued at $1,518,788; 208 Sunday schools, with 5,879 officers and teachers, and 49,177 scholars.

At this session, six delegates, four clerical and two lay, were elected to the General Conference, which meets once in four years, and holds its next session in New York, commencing May 1, 1888. This is a delegated body from over 100 conferences, and represents 1,996,377 communicants and 14,075 ministers of the church.

The following are the important appointments in this locality: Charlevoix, G. S. Barnes; Traverse City, W. Hanson; Petoskey, D. O. Hall; Norwood, B. H. Whitman; Northport, J. Eagle; Ironton, to be supplied by John Dorrance; Harbor Springs, John Robinson; Frankfort; Rowe; Elk Rapids, Eldred. Presiding Elder, Sherman. J. T. Iddings goes to Reading. This list is secured at the moment of our going to press, and is not as full as desired.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

"PAPA'S BOY."

BY [illegible]

Around the house, from morn till night,
A merry child doth roam;
His voice is sweet, his step is light,—
The blessing of my home.
His mother's passed to realms above,
Where all is peace and joy,
The child alone is left to love:
He now is "Papa's Boy."

His bright blue eyes and golden hair
Are never out of sight,
He's mounted now upon my chair,
And asking, "Papa—write!"
He's placed his little cheek 'gainst mine,
Is showing me a toy.
Alas! how can I write a line?
He says: "Write, Papa's Boy."

Above he nestles in my lap,
While shadows gather round;
And there enjoys his little nap
Till tea bell makes its sound,
Then—half awake and half asleep,
With glances so sweetly coy
He rubs his eyes,—scarce half a peep,—
And murmurs "Papa's Boy."

Oft on a morn I lie and doze,
Build castles in the air,
Think what I'd do, were I to lose
The cherub sleeping there.
The least faint sigh that I can make,
He hails with infant joy,
Puts out his arms for me to take,
And "[illegible] Papa's Boy."

A GHOST STORY.

BY CLARA MERWIN.

Ten years ago I was in the first sorrow of my life. When the grave closed over my parents I thought that there was no place left for me in the world. I was rich, young, and my friends and my own reflections in the glass told me that I was pretty. Of course, I had many acquaintances; what rich young girl has not? But acquaintances and friends differ widely. I did not care for the people who flattered and made much of me, but I turned, even in the first days of my trouble, to one friend. She, too, was young and handsome. We were schoolmates, but since leaving school we had seen little of each other, but when my parents died and Martha Clifton wrote to me tenderly out of her full heart, I answered back her love. She asked me to stay with her, and I went. How peaceful were those days spent in her beautiful home! The house and place were called Clifton's Vale. The house was many centuries old. Its architecture was remarkable; its rooms curious. It was a rambling old place, and of course it had a ghost. It stood in the midst of very lovely grounds, overlooking wood and river. Altogether it was one of the most lovely show-places in Newton.

I staid with the Cliftons for a couple of months, and during that time the house was quiet, visitors were few—they eschewed company for my sake. At the end of two months I left them, comforted and helped, and with many promises of a return by and by. Circumstances, however, too varied and too many to mention, prevented that second visit taking place for a couple of years. At the end of that time a great longing came over me to see Martha Clifton again. I must write to her and promise a visit. I did so, and by return of post I got a short but very characteristic reply:

DEAREST HATTIE:—Of course I long to see you, but unfortunately the house is full. Large as it is, it is crammed from cellar to attic. My dear, I don't want to refuse you. I do long to see you. Will you sleep in the Tapestry room? for it is empty. I dare not put anybody else there, but I don't think you, Hattie, will be afraid of the ghost. If the Tapestry room will do, come, and a thousand welcomes—I can put up your maid.

Your loving friend,
MARTHA CLIFTON.

To this letter I made a short answer. I do not believe in the ghost. The Tapestry room will do beautifully. Expect me to-morrow. The next evening I arrived at Clifton's Vale in time for dinner. The Tapestry room looked charming. I fell in love with it on the spot, and vowed laughingly that the ghost and I would make friends. My maid, however, looked grave over my jesting remarks, it was plain that she believed in supernatural visitations. Gayety of heart, however, was over me. I could not resist the influence of my old friend's company. I felt happier than I had been since my parents death, and after a very delightful evening, retired to my room, feeling brave enough to encounter any number of ghosts that might choose to visit me. The Tapestry room was quite away from the rest of the house—it was at the extreme end of the wing. No other bedrooms were in the wing. There was a smoking-room, a morning-room, and a little oriel chamber, which Mrs. Clifton, in her early married life had curiously fitted up for herself, but now seldom occupied. Neither did she believe in the ghost, but she confessed that this little oriel chamber had an eerie feeling.

The morning-room opposite, cheerful and pretty enough, was unused. Its furniture was antique, it belonged to a by-gone day, and its inhabitants were dead. The smoking-room also was deserted; even the fumes of tobacco had left it, the judge preferring a more central apartment in the modern part of the house. Altogether this wing of the old house seemed dead. Visitors only came to it out of curiosity, they paid brief visits, and preferred doing so in broad daylight. It must have been quite a hundred years since the Tapestry-room in the far end of this wing had been slept in. Old as the other rooms in the wing looked, the Tapestry-room bore quite the palm of ancient appearance. There was not an article of furniture in it, not a chair, not a table, which must not have seen the light of centuries.

The furniture was all of the blackest oak, the bedstead, the usual four-poster on which our ancestors loved to stretch themselves. But the curious feature of the room, that which gave it its name, was the tapestry. Not an inch of the walls was to be seen; they were hung completely with very ancient and very faded tapestry. There was a story about this tapestry. One Dame Clifton, of long, long by-gone day had worked it, with the help of her maidens. She had come to an untimely end on the very day on which the great work of her life had been completed.

It does not matter to this story what became of the proud and fair dame, but it was her ghost which was said to haunt the wing and the Tapestry chamber in particular. Warden, my maid, as she helped me to undress, looked quite pale with terror. "They do say, ma'am, as Dame Clare Clifton appears with her head tucked under her arm, and threads from the old tapestry hanging to her fingers, she dressed in gay silk, that don't rustle never a bit, though 'tis so thick it might stand all alone, they do say. 'Tis awful lonesome for you, Miss, to sleep here alone, and I'll stay with you with pleasure if it come to that, though my nerves aren't none of the strongest."

I thanked Warden, however, and assured her that I was not in the least afraid, and she, with a well-relieved face, left me alone. I heard her footsteps echoing down the corridor—they died away, and I was now out of reach of all human help, for in this distant room, in this far-away wing, no possible sounds could reach any other inhabitants of Clifton's Vale.

In all my girlhood I was brave; even in the sad depression of my sorrow, I had never known physical fear, nevertheless, when the last of Warden's footsteps echoed out and died, and that profound stillness followed which can be oppressive, I had a curious sensation. I did not call it fear; I did not know before that grim and pale-faced tyrant; but it made me uncomfortable, and caused my heart to beat irregularly. The sensation was this: I felt that I was not alone. Of course it was fancy, and what have I to do with fancy? I determined to banish this uncomfortable feeling from my mind, and, stirring the fire to a cheerful blaze, I drew one of the black-oak chairs near it and sat down.

Warden had looked so pale and frightened before she left me that out of consideration for her feelings I had allowed her to leave the jewels which I had worn that evening on the dressing-table. There they lay, a set of very valuable diamonds. There was an old-fashioned mirror on the mantel-piece, and as I sat by the fire I saw the reflection of my diamonds in the glass. As I noticed their sparkle again that strange sensation returned, this time more strongly, this time with a cold shiver. I was not alone. Who was in the Tapestry room? Was it the ghost? Was the story true, after all? Of course I did not believe it. I laughed aloud as the thought came to me. I felt that I was getting quite silly and nervous. There was nothing for me but to get into bed as quickly as possible.

I was about to rise from my easy chair and go over to the old-fashioned four-poster, when again my attention was attracted to the glass over my head. It was hung in such a way as to reveal a large portion of the room, and I now saw, not the diamonds, but—something else. In the folds of the dim and old-worn tapestry I saw something move and glitter. I looked again; there was no mistaking it—it was an eye, a human eye, looking fixedly at me through a hole in the canvas. Now, I knew why I felt that I was not alone. There was some one hidden between the tapestry hangings and the wall of the chamber. Some one, not a ghost. That eye was human, or I had never looked on human eye before. I was alone with a thief, perhaps with worse, and gems of immense value lay within his reach. I was absolutely alone, not a soul could hear the most agonized cry for help in this distant room. Now, I knew, if I had ever doubted it before, that I was a very brave woman.

The imminence of the peril steadied my nerves which a few minutes before were beginning to quiver. I neither started nor exclaimed. I felt that I had in no way betrayed my knowledge to my terrible guest. I sat perfectly still, thinking out the situation and my chances of escape. Nothing but consummate coolness could win the victory, and I resolved to be cool. With a fervent and passionate cry for succor I rose from my chair, and going to the dressing table, I slipped several costly rings off my fingers. I left them scattered carelessly about. Then I put the extinguishers on the candles—they were wax, and stood in massive silver candle-sticks. The room, however, was still brilliant with the light of the fire on the hearth. I got into my bed, laid my head on the pillow, and closed my eyes.

It may have been ten minutes—it seemed more like an hour to my strained senses—before I heard the faintest movement. Then I discovered a little rustle behind the tapestry, and a man got out. When he did so I opened my eyes wide, at that distance he could not possibly see whether they were open or shut. He was a powerful man, very tall and of great breadth.

He had a black beard, and a quantity of black hair. I also noticed a peculiarity; among his raven locks was one perfectly white. One thick, white lock hung back off the forehead—so white was it that the fire instantly revealed it to me.

The man did not glance toward the bed; he went straight, with no particular quiet, to the dressing-table. I closed my eyes now, but I heard him picking up my trinkets and dropping them again. Then he approached the bedside. I felt him come close, I felt his breath as he bent over me. I was lying on my side, and my eyes were shut, I was breathing gently.

He went away again, and returned to the dressing-table. I heard him rather noisely strike a match, then with a lighted candle in his hand he once more approached the bed. This time he bent very low, and I felt the heat of the flame as he passed the candle softly before my closed eyes. I lay still, however; not a movement, not a hurried breath betrayed me.

I heard him give a short, satisfied sigh, and again, candle in hand, he returned to the dressing-table. Once more I heard the clinking sound of my jewels as they fell through his fingers. There was a pause, and then—for no reason that I could ever explain—he left the diamonds untouched on the table and went to the door. He opened the door and went out. I did not know what he went for—perhaps to fetch a companion, certainly to return—but I did know that my opportunity had come. In an instant, quicker than thought, I had started from my feigned sleep; I was at the door, I had bolted and locked it. There were several bolts to this old-fashioned door, there were even chains. I drew every bolt, I made every rusty chain secure. I was not an instant too soon. I had scarcely fastened the last chain, with fingers that trembled, before the thief returned. He saw that he had been outwitted and his savage anger knew no bounds. He kicked at the door and called on me wildly to open it; he assured me that he had accomplices outside and that they would soon burst the old door from its hinges, and my life would be the forfeit.

To my terror I perceived that his words were no idle boast. The door, secured by its many fastenings on the one side, was weak on the other; its hinges were nearly eaten through with rust, they needed but some vigorous kicks to burst them from their resting-places in the wood. I knew that I was only protected for a few minutes, and that even if the thief was alone he had but to continue to assail the door as vigorously as he was now doing for a little longer to gain a fresh entrance into my chamber. I rushed to the window, threw up the sash, and bent half out. Into the clear, calm air of the night I sent my strong voice. "Help! help!—thieves!—fire!—danger!—help! help!"

I shouted these words over and over, but there was no response except an echo. My room looked into a distant shrubbery; the hour was late, and the whole household was in bed. The thief outside was evidently making way with the rusty hinges and I was preparing, at the risk of any consequence, the moment he entered the room to leap from the window, when I heard a dog bark. I redoubled my cries. The bark of the dog was followed by footsteps; they came nearer, treading down fallen branches, which cracked under the welcome steps. The next instant a man came and stood under the window, and looked up at me. He was probably a villager taking a short cut to his home. He stood under the window, and seemed terrified; perhaps he took me for the ghost. He was not, however, all a coward, for he spoke, "What is wrong?" he said.

"This is wrong," I answered, "I am in extreme danger. There is not a moment to lose. Go instantly, and wake up the house, and say that I, Miss Coyle, am in extreme danger in the Tapestry wing. Go at once—at once!"

I spoke distinctly, and the man seemed to understand. He flew away, the dog following him. I threw myself on my knees, and in the terrible moments that followed I prayed as I had never prayed before. Would the man be in time? Must my young life be sacrificed? Ah! no, I heard joyful sounds; the thief's attacks on the door ceased suddenly, and the next instant the Judge's hearty voice was heard, "Let me in, Hattie! What is wrong, child?"

I did let him in, and his wife, and several alarmed looking servants who followed after. We instantly began to look for the thief, but mystery of mysteries—he had disappeared. That terrible man with the black hair and white lock over his forehead had vanished as completely as though he had never been. Except for the marks which he had made with his feet on the old oak door there was not a trace of his existence. I believe the servants doubted that he had even been, and only thought that the young lady who was foolish enough to sleep in the Tapestry room had been visited by a new form of the ghost. Be that as it may, we never got a clew to where or how the man had vanished.

* * * * * * *

Three years later I was again on a visit to Clifton's Vale. This time I did not sleep in the Tapestry room. I now occupied a most cheerful, modern, and unghost-like room, and but for one circumstance my visit would have been thoroughly unremarkable.

This was a circumstance which seems in a wonderful way to point a moral to my curious tale. I paid my visit to the Cliftons during the assizes. Judge Clifton, as one of the most influential country magnates, was necessarily much occupied with his magisterial duties during this time. Every morning he went early into L——, the town where the assizes were held. One morning he told us of a case which interested him.

"He is a hardened villain," he said; "he has again and again been brought before me, but he has never yet been convicted. He is unquestionably a thief; indeed, one of the notorious characters in the place; but he is such a slippery dog no jury has yet found him guilty. Well, he is to be tried again to-day, and I do hope we shall have some luck with him this time."

The Judge went away, and it came into his wife's head and mine to pay a visit to the court and see for ourselves the prisoner in whom he was interested. No sooner said than done. We drove into L——, and presently found ourselves in the crowded building. When we entered the case under discussion had not begun, but a moment after a fresh prisoner was ushered into the dock.

What was the matter with me? I found my sight growing dim; I found myself bending forward and peering back. The sensation of a couple of hours of mortal agony returned to me again. Who was in the prisoners' dock? I knew the man. He was my guest of the Tapestry room of three years ago. There he stood, surly, indifferent, with his vast breadth and height, his raven-black hair, and that peculiar white lock flung back from his brow. He did not glance at any one, but kept his eyes on the ground. I could not contain myself; I forgot everything but my sense of discovery. I started to my feet, and spoke.

"Mr. Clifton, I know that man; he was in my room three years ago. Do you remember the night when I got the terrible fright in the Tapestry chamber in your house? There is the man who frightened me. I could never forget his face. There he stands."

Whatever effect my words had on the Judge, there is no doubt at all of their remarkable significance to the prisoner. His indifference left him; he stared with wide-open and terrified eyes at me. All his bravado left him, he muttered something, his face was blanched; then suddenly he fell on his knees and covered his face with his hands.

My evidence was remarkable and conclusive; and that day, for the first time, Hercules Strong was committed to prison. He had long been the terror of the neighborhood, and no one regretted the just punishment which had fallen on him. What his subsequent career may be I know not; this is the present end of my strange story.

The very parents who speak so bitterly of the encouragement given to young men's extravagance by the modern college life have carefully trained their sons for just the life which they have found. Usually men in moderate circumstances, they have never compelled their sons to earn a dollar in their lives, or to know the cost or value of money, or to deny themselves anything within their reach, or to do anything except spend money when a favorable opportunity offered. The sons, passing for the first time beyond the father's eye, and able to plead circumstances which parents cannot deny from personal knowledge, are in a fair position to deplete the paternal pocket-book, and have never been trained to refrain from improving such an opportunity. It is not for his own selfish gratification that the son joins this or that college society, or takes all the college papers, or "goes with the nine" to watch an intercollegiate game in another college town, or does any of the other things for which his father has to pay,—not at all; it is only because he would be ostracized in college if he refrained from such indulgence. Such are the statements which accompany the periodical petitions for checks; and the father, finding it easier to curse college extravagance than to take the trouble of ascertaining the true state of the case, continues his mistraining of the boy by paying his bills until, at the end of the college course, the son is turned loose upon the world, to find at last what a dollar really means.—The Century.

WAR ANNALS.

Old Soldiers of Both Armies Fighting Their Battles Over Again.

Anecdotes of the Battle-field, the Weary March, and the Cheerful Camp-fire.

Grant.

BY JAMES FRANKLIN FITTS.

Stoutest captain of that time,
Poor the offering of my rhyme,
And my tribute, faint yet free,
Comes unbidden unto thee.

Strong upon the Western field,
Coquette Victory had to yield
To thy wooing, rough and rude,
With a steady heart pursued.

Fierce the tides of battle ran
Just across the Rapidan,
Ne'er such human surf [illegible]
Crested the Republic's [illegible]

Stunned, aghast with grief and fears,
Half the sorrowing land in tears—
Must this slaughter still increase?
"Yes," he answered, "That way, peace!"

So he conquered; peace at last
Like a benison was cast
O'er the weary, stricken land
Peace angelic, sweet, and bland.

So he conquered. Give him praise,
Standing in those direful days
Like a tower against the wind,
Cruel only to be kind.

Patient, strong, serene, unmoved,
Right arm of the cause he loved;
Praise is wanting, fame is scant
Unto thee, unequaled Grant!

Yes—and who, when strife was done,
Welcomed back each erring son;
Mild, and merciful, and kind
Eager every wound to bind?
Ne'er decry him—cease the rant—
That was grand Ulysses Grant!
—Chicago Ledger.

Reptile and Insect Enemies.

If the Union armies had had no larger task set before them than to overcome the armies of the Southern Confederacy, I do not think the war would have lasted as many years as it did.

Their labor was very much larger than that. They fought not only armed enemies, but also nature herself, who interposed vast mountain ranges and deep, swift rivers between them and the Confederacy. They fought especially those who went to the far South a debilitating climate and a length of torrid weather to which they were not accustomed. And they contended against myriads of winged and swarming things, to which their adversaries were used but which to the Northern boys were a dreadful torment.

The man who, in measuring the work achieved, does not take these extraordinary agencies into account, has only summed up half the truth.

Where shall we begin?

I have read somewhere that a Spaniard named Muscoro discovered the Delta of the Mississippi, some centuries ago; and that, finding clouds of winged insects with sharp stings in those low-lying lands, he gave them a name derived from his own, and called them mosquitoes.

We think they are a pest in our comparatively cool northern latitudes. Let the reader follow the track of our armies contiguous to the Gulf of Mexico, and, after suffering enough to understand the situation, let him try to estimate how much good Union blood was drawn down there during the war, in other ways than by the sword.

The lower part of Louisiana, traversed with streams, covered with lakes and swamps, with frequent regions of pestiferous deposit, bred the things by millions. In these unhealthy lands thousands of soldiers not only contended with the enemy but battled with fever and malaria, and were tormented with the bites of winged and creeping things. It cost much blood to open the Mississippi; but for every soldier killed there were three sent to the hospital, poisoned by the malaria or the insects.

And flies. I could realize something about the plagues of Egypt after seeing them. They were about as bloodthirsty as the mosquitoes. In the trenches before Port Hudson we used to destroy them by the thousand, with powder scattered around and ignited. They attacked everything eatable; the fresh meat which was sent up to us was fly-blown and spoiled before it reached us.

Did the reader ever hear of a wood-tick? Did he ever happen to have one introduced into his leg?

They are plenty in Dixie. The soldiers couldn't always sleep at the St. Charles Hotel; and in sleeping on the ground they were apt to make too close an acquaintance with this little villain.

He is a red bug who, like some distinguished actors, always performs in two parts. After he has bored his way into you, you attempt to pull him out. His after part comes; but the forward part has entered to stay. He makes himself very painful, and frequently you will have to go to the doctor to get him dug out.

As a matter of course, snakes abounded. I suppose there were poisonous ones among them; whether so or not, it was apt to give a soldier a creepy sensation to get up in the morning and shake two or three out of his blankets.

There were some mysterious casualties which were enough to put everybody in a state of apprehension. We were led to expect danger from every quarter in a land so swarming with vegetable and reptile growths as this, our life being continually out of doors and exposed to every attack. On one of our marches in Western Louisiana John Cleveland, of my company, had his face either bitten by an insect or poisoned by a vine. The doctors were at a loss to tell just what was the trouble, though they thought there was some kind of poisoning. The man's face swelled to twice its natural size, and he died in a few hours.

As for the alligators, it must be admitted that, hideous as they looked, they seemed to be comparatively harmless. The negroes assured us that they always bathed in the streams infested by them (and no stream in Louisiana was too small to have alligators) without fear, and that the 'gators never touched them. With some reluctance the soldiers followed the advice of the negroes; and when a soldier of a Massachusetts regiment, bathing in Berwick Bay, had the calf of one of his legs neatly removed by the bite of something, a panic arose on the subject of bathing. The negroes explained this mishap by saying that it was not the bite of an alligator; it was that of an alligator-gar. The distinction seemed unimportant to most of us, and probably brought no consolation to the victim.

I well remember an alarm that was raised one night in a camp in Western Louisiana by the firing of a neighboring picket. The man insisted that somebody approached quite near his post; that he challenged, and the intruder would not halt; and then he fired. The night was dark, and the search that was made failed to disclose anything. The light of morning revealed the truth. A huge alligator, twelve feet long, lay dead within a few rods of the picket. An examination showed that the bullet had entered the eye, which is almost the only place where these mailed creatures can be successfully hit. It seemed remarkable that such a telling shot should have been delivered in the dark.

The occasion could not pass without a joke. Some of the soldiers declared that this alligator had come up from the bayou, which was some distance off, looking for a Brigadier General.

They are wonderfully hard to kill. On our way up the river to Port Hudson, the steamer passed the lower end of Prophet's Island, upon the long, sandy point of which a huge alligator lay basking in the hot sun. From the bow of the boat a dozen rifles were fired at him. The bullets struck the water, the sand, and the alligator, some of them rattling against his coat of mail. He lazily rose, waddled to the water, and slipped in, apparently unharmed.

"The stars in their courses fought against Sisera." President Lincoln was fond of quoting these words from the Scripture, as suggestive of the silent, unnoted influences that enter into the great game of war. When such are counted up, the great evils and sufferings of the Union soldier in overcoming nature herself, and withstanding the attacks of the reptiles and the insects of the South, ought not to be overlooked.

History deals so little with these things that the world will never know the extent of the evils and sufferings of the American soldier.

It tells about great campaigns and large movements; it tells how many were killed and wounded in a battle; but you look in vain for some account of the dreadful sufferings of the men who waded the Chickahominy swamps, who held their ground on the Mississippi, amid the poison of its malarial bottoms and insects, who hung resolutely to the territory acquired by hard knocks, in "the Louisiana low lands low," the Florida swamps, and the Carolina marshes. All these things the comrades know, but it is hard to make the people understand them.

These men simply illustrated the strength of the American character. There was never a time when a dangerous service was demanded—a scout through a trackless swamp, or a detail on some necessary service in an unhealthy region—but a dozen would volunteer for one that was wanted. The proud record of the American soldier is that of devotion—the absolute giving of himself to the cause.

All honor to him!

JAMES FRANKLIN FITTS.

Wasted by War.

General Grant died at the age of 63. General Logan died at the age of 60. General Hancock died at the age of 61. General McClellan died at the age of 58. General Halleck died at 53. General George G. Meade died at 57. General George H. Thomas died at 54. General W. T. Sherman is the only one of the few greatest generals of the war who has passed far beyond the fatal 63, and Farragut, its greatest naval hero, died at 69. Grant, Logan, Hancock, and McClellan were men who, in the ordinary course of nature and in circumstances of peaceful life, would have lived, if not to extreme, at least to advanced old age. They died years before the time naturally allotted to them. Meade and Thomas were of more fragile mold, and yielded earlier to the weaknesses of broken constitutions and to the causes that shortened their lives.

All the great generals of the war, says the Chicago Journal, who have died since its close evidently met premature deaths. All died suddenly, or after brief illnesses, and in each case, as in that of Logan, brain and nervous complications precipitated the fatal action of the disease. The case of Grant's lingering disease and death from cancer appears to be an exception to these uniform facts, but it is not. The cancer was as much a disease of the nervous as of the muscular tissues, and it was certain from its inception of a fatal termination. The cause of death, if not death itself, came unexpectedly, surprisingly, and out of the order of nature. Undoubtedly, the weight of such vast responsibilities as a high military command imposes—the exhaustion of brain and nerve power in planning, in watching, in the labor and anxiety of the march, in the pain, excitement, solicitude, peril, and mental torture of the battlefield, when every sense, perception, and power is stretched to its utmost tension—must impair the energies of the best constitutions and create points of weakness from which decay will spread and cause the fall of the entire structure earlier than the catastrophe would otherwise have occurred. As it is with the commanders, so it is with the soldiers who were in active service throughout the war. Their lives have, as a rule, been shortened by at least three times the length of the term of their service. Few of them have passed, or will pass, the fatal years that follow soon after the landmark of three-score, while the few who do cross it are far more than outnumbered by those who do not reach it.

The "Little Man."

A story was told the writer a year or two ago in the South by a Memphis gentleman, which, as it illustrates General Grant's simplicity of manner, is perhaps worth preserving. The gentleman's mother, a middle-aged lady, during the war was living near Memphis when General Grant was in command there, and she desired to go out beyond the lines and return in order to visit an invalid married daughter. She applied at General Grant's headquarters and was referred to a staff officer, who, after having heard her case, declined with rather a grand manner, and to her expostulations merely answered curtly, "Impossible!" The lady was downhearted under the circumstances, as may be imagined, and probably her countenance betrayed her feelings as she was going out across the piazza of the house that served as headquarters, for a plain-looking little man, apparently a hanger-on about headquarters, as she described him, wearing a private's blouse, accosted her and asked if he could do anything for her. She retold her errand. "Wait a moment," said he, as he left her and went into the house. A moment after he came out and handed her a pass, saying, "Take this; it will pass you through all lines." She thought it very kind indeed of this person to be at so much trouble for her, and she thanked him cordially. It was not until she had reached home, had opened the pass, which was signed "U. S. Grant," and shown it to her family and described the "little man," that she learned it was Grant himself who had befriended her.

Brothers Who Were Divided.

During the war there were several striking instances of family differences over the questions at issue, says the Philadelphia Times. John J. Crittenden, of Kentucky, had two sons, one in the Confederate and the other in the Union army. Right here in Pennsylvania we had a very notable case of the same sort. The two McAllister boys will be remembered by many of the Times' readers. They lived up in Juniata County. Tom McAllister was a member of our Legislature at least one term and then went South. Robert McAllister, his brother, drifted over into New Jersey and became a citizen of that State. When the war broke out Tom entered the Confederate army and became a Brigadier General. Robert McAllister stood by the Union and commanded a brigade on our side of the fight. Frequently these two brothers struck each other hard blows in the fierce furnace of war. Time after time they threw their brigades against each other with terrific force, each probably fighting the harder against the other for the pride in their cause, which the ties of blood not only did not diminish but increased.

But the most touching case comes to me from Montgomery, Ala. Colonel Tom Jones, who was General Gordon's chief of artillery, and a mighty strong soldier himself, tells it to me. I think it was Jones who fired the last artillery shots on the Confederate side at Appomattox.

In Bath County, Virginia, there lives a very prominent family by the name of Terrill. Before the war it cut considerable of a swath in the social and political life of that section. When the war broke out William H. Terrill, one of the sons, took to the Union side and soon became a soldier of great promise. He was killed while leading a brigade at Perryville, where the gallant Jackson fell, and where General Lytle, who wrote "I Am Dying, Egypt, Dying," was wounded. His death was a sad one, for he was just reaching after the flower of great fame. It is easy for me to recall the circumstances of his heroic fall when some of the bravest and the best of the Second Michigan Cavalry followed this gallant soldier to the unseen land.

General Terrill's brother went into the Confederate army, and while leading his brigade at Cold Harbor was killed. The father brought the remains of his two gallant sons home and buried them on the farm where both had spent their childhood days and where they had grown to manhood and there parted over a question of duty to state or nation. Both had laid down their lives for their sentiments. Between the simple graves of the two boys the father has erected a marble slab. A most touching inscription is cut in the white stone. It chides neither one. It expresses faith in the Creator and leaves Him to judge of his two heroes' conduct. It is a simple line and reads:

> God only knows which was right.

An Old Confederate.

There is living in the town of Dublin, Ga., says the Savannah News, an extraordinary man in the person of Captain J. M. Smith. He is about forty years old and has never drank tea, coffee, or milk, has never taken a chew of tobacco, has never played a game of any kind, has never gone fishing or hunting, has never been to a picnic, and has never seen a game of base-ball played. He has been a commercial traveler for the last seven years, and has traveled all over the United States and Central America. Captain Smith was a gallant officer in the Confederate army, and was the youngest captain in the service, he being at the time only fifteen years old. Just before the close of the war he was placed in command of a company of Yankees from Andersonville, who, in order to get out of prison, took the oath of the Confederate States and went into the army. The first opportunity they surrendered to the enemy. When night came on Captain Smith made his escape, and in so doing was shot and badly wounded by one of the guards. He dragged himself three miles to the Confederate lines. He was a member of General W. H. T. Walker's division, and was within a few steps of the General when he fell. When Sherman's army was on the north bank of the Chattahoochee and the Confederate forces on the south some one was wanted to go into the enemy's camp and find out what was going on. Smith volunteered his services, and getting on a log he floated across the river unobserved by the Yankee pickets, and awhile before day he returned with a Yankee officer's sword as evidence that he had been there, and also bringing valuable information. It was he who informed General Hood that the Yankees were not falling back, as was supposed, but were fixing to flank him by going down the river and crossing. He is also one of the men who went with Captain W. A. Fuller in the chase and capture of the noted engine thieves who stole the engine while the passengers were at dinner at Big Shanty, on the State Road, during the war. The thieves were afterward tried by court-martial and hanged in the city of Atlanta. Captain Smith was in thirty-six battles during the war, and was wounded three times. He is a fine man, hale and hearty.

The Death of Fighting Phil Kearny.

Late in the afternoon of September 1, in the midst of a tremendous thunder shower, the Third Corps stood across Lee's path to Chantilly.

Stevens' division of Burnside's corps had been driven back, and its brave leader killed.

Kearny was sent to regain the ground.

The daring General, desiring to know fully the nature of the ground in front and the position of the enemy before ordering his men forward, rode out alone to reconnoiter.

He came unexpectedly upon the enemy in the darkness.

He inquired what troops they were. They answered his question, but immediately discovered that he was a Federal officer. He turned his horse to ride away. They called upon him to halt, but he put spurs to his noble animal and dashed away into the darkness. Bullets came whistling after him, and poor Kearny, the bravest of the brave, and the idol not only of his own division but of the whole army, was killed.

His division waited anxiously some time for his return, but as he came not the worst was feared, and finally General Birney took command and led the men forward. They advanced and recovered the ground Stevens had lost.

In the morning the enemy sent the body of Kearny in under a flag of truce, for they respected his bravery, and his division wept over him like children.

No braver soldier than Phil Kearny ever lived. He had lost an arm in the Mexican war, during a charge upon a battery at San Antonio Gate, one of the defenses of the City of Mexico, and he was accustomed to go into battle with either his sword or his reins between his teeth.

He was never so happy as when the battle raged most fiercely about him.

The story was told that in one of the battles upon the Peninsula one of his brigadiers approached him and asked: "General, where shall I put my brigade?" "Anywhere," replied Kearny, his face glowing with smiles, "anywhere; there's beautiful fighting all along the line."

Living on Supposition.

As THE army was crossing South Mountain the day before the battle of Antietam, General McClellan rode along the side of the moving column. Overtaking a favorite zouave regiment, he exclaimed, with his natural bonhomie:

"Well, and how is the old Fifth this evening?"

"First rate, General," replied one of the zouaves. "But we'd be better off if we weren't living so much on supposition."

"Supposition?" said the General, in a puzzled tone. "What do you mean by that?"

"It is easily explained, sir. You see, we expected to get our rations yesterday, but as we didn't we're living on the supposition that we did."

"Ah, I understand; you shall have your rations, zou-zous, to-night," replied the General, putting his spurs to his horse to escape the cheers of the regiment. And he kept his promise.

YOU never hear of a strike among astronomers. The business is always looking up.

PITH AND POINT.

HOW MANY peas are there in a pint? One p.

EXPOSED to many a trying situation—The juryman.

MARRYING by proxy is what may be considered a proxy-mate bliss.

A DUTCHMAN repeated the adage—"Birds mit one fedder goes mid demselves."

"CANADA is the cheese!" shaggily cries an exchange. It may be—it may be—lots of skippers there.

A MUSTARD-PLASTER is not a very poetic subject, but, ah, how warmly it appeals to a man's feelings.

NOTHING goes so fast as time, so they say; and yet there are plenty of men who find no trouble in passing it.

AN exchange thinks there ought to be a change in the marriage ceremony. Leave the marriage ceremony alone—it is all rite.

SEVERAL people are laying claim to the first greenback ever issued, when everybody knows that the first green back ever issued was the frog.

HE: Dese heah kears are mighty dangerous, and hit's mostly do las' kear what's smashed up. She—Why don't dey leave off de las' kear, den?

IT is very difficult for a lady to enter and leave a carriage properly. It requires practice and a carriage. The carriage is the hardest part to acquire.

HE (anxiously)—Miss Jones, do you ever put your hair up in curl-papers? She (indignantly)—No, sir! never. He (tenderly)—Miss Jones, will you marry me?

SHE—I like this place immensely since they have the new French chef. He (weak in his French, but generous to a fault)—Waitah, bring chef for two!

ONE of the teachers in the school at Hampton, Va., recently asked one of the Indian pupils what Ills. stood for. "Elbows, I guess," was the unexpected reply.

HENRY BERGH has thirteen printed rules on "How to approach a kicking horse." If a man forgets one of them for the hundredth part of a second he is a goner.

BROWN—I detest that fellow Crape. Jones—The undertaker? Brown—Yes. He is all the time talking shop. Every time he meets me he inquires after my health.—New York Mail.

FIRST Kansas Woman—I didn't see you down at the caucus last night. Second Kansas Woman—No, couldn't get away. John wasn't feeling well, and I had to clear off the table and wash the dishes.—Tid-Bits.

AN elderly wit called to present his congratulations to a New York bank president on the latter's birthday. "Well, my friend," said the wit, "how old are you?" "Seventy-five." "Hum, seventy-five; well I hope you'll rise to par."

"MARIA, what did you do with that pie that was left from dinner yesterday?" "Threw it over the alley fence." "Just like you. Jim Sharkley's two dogs are dead this morning; and he accuses me of poisoning them."—Brooklyn Eagle.

AT a negro wedding in this city a short time ago when the words "love, honor, and obey" were reached the groom interrupted the preacher and said: "Read that again, sah; read it wunce mor', so's de lady kin ketch de full solemnity ob de meanin'. I'se been married befo'."—Griffin (Ga.) Times.

IF some men would only put the same amount of enthusiasm in sawing wood that they put into sitting on a plank and watching nineteen men play ball their wives could kindle the kitchen fire every twenty minutes through the twenty-four hours and still have kindlings to spare.—Journal of Education.

MRS. YOUNGBRIDE HONEYMOON (to husband, who is a railroad president)—And are you sure you will always, always love me more than you will any one else? Mr. Honeymoon (absently)—Impossible to say. You see, it is very doubtful whether the Inter-state law will allow me to make any discrimination.—Harper's Bazar.

OMAHA DRUGGIST—That was a strange blunder in Washington, wasn't it? Kansas Druggist—I didn't hear of it. "You didn't? Why, a prominent druggist there killed himself by taking a drink of aconite in mistake for whisky." "Well, he ought to have known better than to keep drugs in his stock. They are dangerous things."—Omaha World.

Copper.

Copper is to-day the cheapest article in the commercial world. The price is lower than it has ever before been in the history of the arts. Its low price has induced a wide range of new uses and an enlarged consumption in old channels. The attention of capitalists has been attracted to the comparatively low price of this metal, and it is hardly to be presumed that prices will remain as low for many months longer. The cause of the low price of copper seems to be largely from the mistaken policy of the large copper mining companies in presuming that the best way to keep up old-time dividends is to double the products of their mines. If they could adopt the policy of reducing their production, they would soon get a remunerative price from what they did mine. Again, notwithstanding the low price of copper, it is a somewhat notable fact that the price of copper wire, sheet, and bar copper has not fallen in proportion, and the consumers of the various products of copper have not been benefited from this fall in price so much as capitalists who control the copper rolling mills. Appreciating this point, some large Boston capitalists are erecting a fine plant for rolling copper at Lake Superior, and it is to be hoped that the consumers of this valuable metal will soon be able to participate in the advantages which low-priced metal affords.

An Affecting Scene.

An old fellow with a benevolent face sat in the business office of a large wholesale house. A young man entered and asked for employment.

"Have you any references?"

"No, sir."

"Recommendations of any kind?"

"No, sir."

"Then how do you expect to obtain employment?"

"By making a remarkable statement."

"What is it?"

"I have recently been discharged, but not on account of the Interstate law."

The old fellow almost upset his desk in springing to his feet, and, throwing his arms about the young man hoarsely whispered: "You shall have a half interest in my business. Thank heaven that you have at last found me."—Arkansaw Traveler.

DO NOT consider everything impossible that you cannot perform.

GREAT "CROOKS."

Romantic Ideas Dispelled by an Experienced Criminal.

[Philadelphia Times.]

I was looking over the criminal list the other day of the convicted professionals confined in New York State. They were numerous enough, but their crimes were contemptibly small. To make your Vidocq, you must have first your great criminal and his great crime. The American Vidocq makes himself, with these two essentials left out; and having opportunity to talk with one of the alleged great criminals, he confirmed my belief in the visionary character of these shrewd and clever rascals with no greater effort than revealing his own stupidity. I hunted up another, a professional who has repented his offenses sufficiently to entitle him to any other distinction than that of an honest man. I would mention that he wears stripes now, except that it might draw from the value of his statements in the minds of some who are too easily prejudiced. Anyway he is a better authority than the police, whose vanity in their own capacity may be a proper pride, but leads to some mighty tall lying.

"The fact is that professional thieves and rogues are not numerous in any locality, and if crime were the sole source of support for the few hundreds who are so classed, most of them would be hungry many times every year. Men who steal whenever they get a chance have always some other occupation, and it is a fact that the legitimate one is more profitable than the illegitimate one in nine cases out of ten." Thus began my informant, whose name you may look for a little further on.

"But in this city there is a vast army of professional criminals," I said, "men who are classified and whose industries have special forms, implying cunning and originality."

"My dear sir, you have been reading the newspapers or talking to detectives. There isn't a dozen. If really clever men—if men with a modicum of brains that belong to clever people—were to devote their talents to roguery society couldn't exist. The methods employed by thieves, for example, to attain their ends look very cunning and well planned to one to whom they are first revealed. But take any one of them and examine it and you will see how flimsy it is. A sneak thief wants to get into the till of a corner grocery. His accomplice comes with a tape line and begins to measure the sidewalk in front of the door, or to measure the wall, or comes in a wagon and begins to throw out a lot of boxes. The grocer steps out to inquire; is held in conversation, asked to hold the end of the measure or pass back the boxes; the sneak is in and away, and the trick is off. A saloon-keeper is known to keep a pocketbook stuffed with money in the inner pocket of his vest. The pickpocket knows it is a difficult place to touch. Two accomplices come in when he is alone, both of them laughing heartily—one with a tape measure. 'Well, that was a dead loss for me,' says one. 'Set 'em up.' They laugh, ask the saloon-keeper to drink, and explain that they were betting on the neighbor. The saloon-keeper becomes interested; the more so as rounds are being called, and then the loser wants to get even. A bottle of wine is staked and the victim asked to measure, the new bet being on his girth. Objection is taken to the vest; off it comes, and the sneak thief—a third party—soon has the leather."

"Now, that's artful, certainly," said I.

"No such a thing; it is most transparent and simple. It couldn't succeed were it not that the victim is a fool. But these are exceptional cases of such good planning as crooks can do. But, after all, suppose a man of brains—real brains, such as you know plenty of—were to devote himself to the planning of ways to get other people's money without an equivalent, and went at it with the energy that men give to the practice of their profession or to the pursuits of commerce, where would such schemes as this be? Nowhere. You hear of a great burglary. The newspapers which report it dwell upon the fact that it has been carefully planned and that the house had been plotted, for a diagram which the rascals had left in their flight was found. What's to hinder any man from learning every room and every door in New York City? There's the builder's plans, the insurance companies' plots, and the Building Department's open files. A little watching and a good deal of guessing makes up the rest of the burglar's knowledge. Of course his 'tools are of the finest workmanship.' Rats! The chances are ten to one that they consist of a bar of iron, which being carried by a burglar is called a 'jimmy;' a dark lantern, a copper hammer, a chisel, and a flask of powder and a handkerchief with holes in it to see through for a mask."

"But there are cases where men have gone further than make a few hasty preparations; have hired adjoining stores and tunnelled and burrowed into banks and vaults with infinite patience and labor."

"Bah! How many? You say ten and I say one. Whatever you say I will allow 10 per cent. But can you recall any?"

"Well, the Covington, Ky., bank."

"That's one. You can't go on."

"You say there are no good abilities in crooked work. How about forgers?"

"Now, there you strike upon the clever lot. At least they were, for they are nearly all in prison now. But let me tell you that professional forgers are very few—fewer than counterfeiters, in fact, who are practically exterminated, not because of the cleverness of the police, but because the mechanical work of making notes and bonds requires such an expensive plant, the founding of which attracts attention to itself. There are a few professional gangs of forgers, say half a dozen, in the history of the United States in a quarter of a century. The last one was the one you named. It was composed practically of three men—a 'scratcher,' one who does the writing, you know; an organizer, who plans and directs; and a third who covers up the tracks and helps the fellow who lays the 'paper down' to get away. The organizer in the gang I speak of was Fisher, a calm-faced, gentlemanly young fellow of good address and some superficial knowledge. Don't let anybody deceive you into thinking that any 'crook' is a polished gentleman, learned in the philosophies, conversant with the arts, and founded in literature. Why, there's Hungry Joe, the famous—well, notorious, then—bunko steerer. Why, he is an utter vulgarian; can't speak two sentences of grammatical English; nouns and verbs nearly always at war, and the objective pronoun in the nominative case invariably. He leads your cultured Oscar Wilde and your learned Charles Francis Adams up to the dealer like an unsuspecting lamb to a butcher's block. As soon as they acquire that sort of thing they know enough to be honest.

The Cloud Changed Things.

A bad drouth prevailed in southeastern Dakota a number of years ago. It was feared that the few settlers in that region at that time would lose all their crops. Elder Bledgett, who had charge of a church and also a livery stable at a small Missouri River town, held a special meeting one Sunday afternoon to pray for rain. People came from miles around. Before the services began two men got into an argument, near the freight warehouse in which the meeting was to be held concerning the relative merits of different kinds of beaver traps. The discussion grew warm and one of them said:

"Mebby you think I don't know nothing 'bout traps?"

"You don't talk 'sif ye was overstocked."

"I know a thunderin' sight more'n you do 'bout 'em!"

"Yer a sight better liar nor I am, too!"

"I'll show ye!"

They both stood up and went at it when the Elder came rushing out and said:

"Here, no fightin' no fightin'! We're gathered here on a sacred and a solemn mission; the whole country is dryin' up an' it's goin' to take earnest prayer to get rain. D'yo think it will do any good with this kind o' work goin' on? Come on in an' services will now begin."

They all went in and a very earnest meeting was held. Everybody prayed, Elder Bledgett half a dozen times. After a final appeal they filed out, and, as they did so, the Elder spied a dark rain-cloud low down on the southwestern horizon.

"There's a cloud comin'!" he shouted.

"That's so," yelled the others, "we're all right now!"

"You bet we are," replied the Elder, "I knowed earnest prayer would fetch it. Now where's them men that wanted to fight? Here, peel off yer coats an' go at it!"

"But we've concluded not to," replied one.

"Concluded not to! Well that's a thunderin' pretty note! An' after he called ye a liar, too! That won't do—you fellers have got to fight, so gimme your coat. I'm no ring here, brethren! Now pitch in, no pullin' hair, an' hurry up 'fore that rain gets here an' spiles the fun!"—Dakota Bell.

Christenings in Transylvania.

Two godfathers and two godmothers are generally appointed at Saxon peasant christenings, and it is customary that one couple should be old and the other young, but in no case should a husband and wife figure as godparents at the same baptism, but each one of the quartet must belong to a different family. This is a general custom but in some districts the rule demands two godfathers and one godmother for a boy, two godmothers and one godfather for a girl.

If the parents have lost other children before, then the infant should not be carried out by the door in going to church, but handed out by the window, and brought back in the same way. It should be carried by the broadest streets, never by narrow lanes, else it will learn thieving. The godparents must not look round on their way to church; and the first person met by the christening procession will decide the sex of the next child to be born, a boy if it be a man.

If two children are baptized out of the same water, one of them will soon die; and if several boys are christened successively in the same church, there will be war in the land as soon as they are grown up. Many girls denote fruitful vintage for the country when they have attained a marriageable age.

If the child sleeps during the baptismal ceremony, then it will be pious and good-tempered; but if it cries, it will be bad-tempered or unlucky; therefore, the first question asked by the parents on the return home from church is generally, "Was it a quiet baptism?" and if such had not been the case, the sponsors are apt to conceal the truth.

In some places the christening procession returning to the house of the parents finds the door closed. After knocking for some time in vain, a voice from within summons the godfather to name seven bald men out of the parish. When this has been answered, a further question is asked as to the gospel read in church; and only on receiving, "Let the children come to me," is the door flung open, saying: "Come in, you have harkened attentively to the words of the Lord."—Popular Science Monthly.

Sweet Lemons and Blood Oranges.

Strolling about the neighborhood of the Quincy Market my attention was attracted by the sign, "Blood Oranges, $7.50 a Box," which decorated the exterior of an importer's shop. I had always supposed the blood orange was a freak of nature, to be found semi-occasionally, like a yellow firecracker in a pack of the Golden Dragons brand; but this, it seems, was a mistake, for the dealer assured me that the ruddy fruit was a distinct variety.

"It is artificially produced," he said, "by grafting an ordinary orange tree with the pomegranate. The result is an orange like any other, so far as flavor is concerned, but with red juice that is visible through the skin. It brings a slightly higher price, because it is regarded as a curiosity. The people of Sicily cultivate it mostly. Yes, there are one or two queer kind of oranges I know of. The pine-apple orange, which has something of the pine-apple flavor, is finding its way into the market. Then there is the 'navel' orange, grown extensively in Southern California. It is considered particularly fine, and sells at corresponding prices. The most curious thing about it is the astonishingly accurate imitation of the human umbilicus which ornaments the extremity farthest from the stem. It is from this peculiarity that the variety takes its name. These navel oranges, by the way, are of the feminine gender, and have no seeds at all.

"I had a few sweet lemons in stock the other day," added the dealer. "They are quite a rarity. People in this part of the world have poor taste in tropical fruit, anyway. They will always pay more for a red banana than for a yellow one, though the former is considered an inferior fruit where both are grown. The lime, too, is far more prized in tropical countries than the lemon, but Northerners think it is only good for pickling."—Boston correspondence Iowa State Register.

A CALIFORNIA paper states that a petrified tooth of a shark was picked out of solid rock at a depth of thirteen feet while digging a well at Nipomo a short time ago. The tooth has retained its enamel and is highly polished.

REMINISCENCES OF PUBLIC MEN.

BY BEN: PERLEY POORE.

Tom Corwin once illustrated in a speech the different positions on the slavery question taken by the Democracy in Ohio and in New York, by narrating Uncle John Shelby's adventures in "running down" a deer. The ground, he said, was covered with six inches of snow, on which the rain had fallen and been frozen, forming a crust sufficiently strong to bear his weight. In the morning he discovered the tracks of a deer, and started after it with the determination of running it down. After describing the course taken, and detailing different incidents that occurred during the chase, he said that about noon he felt somewhat weary and hungry, and, standing his gun against a fence, he jumped into a cornfield and pulled some roasting ears, on which he proposed to make a meal.

"What, Uncle John, snow on the ground and roasting ears? That won't do," said one of the company.

"Hold on, boys," said Uncle John; "I've made a little mistake, and got two stories mixed!"

Mr. Corwin thought that the Democracy had gotten their positions on slavery slightly mixed—that there was snow in New York and roasting ears in Ohio.

Judge Douglas said one day that the first and last duel ever fought in Illinois was in 1820, at Belleville, between Alphonso Stewart and William Bennett. The seconds had made it up to be a sham duel. Stewart, one of the parties, was supposed to be in the secret, but Bennett, his adversary, believed it to be a reality. It was supposed that Bennett somewhat expected a trick, and after receiving his gun from his second, rolled a ball into it. At the word fire Stewart fell mortally wounded; Bennett was indicted, tried, and convicted of murder. A great effort was made to procure him a pardon, but Gov. Bond would yield to no entreaties, and Bennett suffered the extreme penalty of the law by hanging, in the presence of a great multitude of people. Judge Douglas gave great credit to the prosecuting attorney in this case as having prevented duelling in Illinois by making it a crime.

Thurlow Weed told a good story in the cloak-room of the Senate one day, about his crony, Dean Richmond, of Albany. Mr. Richmond had a son whose habits were not consonant with the railroad king's idea of prudence. He was sharp, shrewd, and witty, but was emphatically "one of the boys." The paternal purse was long, and his patience stretched out to equal dimensions, but finally the young Richmond wore out the patience, and was told that he must go to work and earn his own living. The old gentleman placed him on one of his railroad trains, and when the youngster had learned the duties of a conductor, promoted him to that station. One rule of the road was that no one should be dead-headed. Each passenger was compelled to produce a ticket, pay his fare, or show a pass signed by the president, Dean Richmond. A few days after young Richmond took charge of a train his father was among the passengers. In due course of time the conductor reached the seat occupied by the old gentleman, and, tapping him on the shoulder, ejaculated: "Ticket, sir?" Dean made no reply, other than by a good-natured smile. "Ticket," said the conductor, emphatically. "I have no ticket, you young rascal," said the old gentleman, warming up as he noticed the passengers giving attention to the scene, "and don't need any." "Have you a pass, then?" quoth the conductor. "No!" roared the now wrathy parent: "clear out, or I'll discharge you." "If you've neither ticket nor pass," responded the son, "you must pay your fare." Again the railroad president threatened to discharge the conductor unless he moved on. "Will you pay?" said young Richmond, reaching for the bell rope. "Pay your fare, or I'll put you off." Remonstrance was vain, and the president was compelled to pay fare on his own road. When his wrath had time to cool he was pleased at the young conductor's strict obedience to orders, and concluded to give him a better chance than punching tickets.

Henry Clay, at the urgent request of Kossuth, granted him an interview at his room at the National Hotel on the afternoon of January 9, 1852. Mr Clay had dressed himself, and, perhaps for the last time stood erect to meet the Magyar. He received the visitor with all his characteristic courtesy and cordiality, but said: "Gov. Kossuth, a dying man stands before you to protest against your doctrine of intervention." Kossuth replied in terms that affected Mr. Clay to tears, and both giving way to unrestrained emotion, they parted—to meet not again.

The impertinent coolness with which correspondents and stock speculators' agents seek information is illustrated by a story which Justice Harlan tells of a man who came to his house one night, an entire stranger, sent in his card, and when the judge came down bluntly told him that he proposed to make a fortune for himself and the judge if the latter furnished him information about a certain decision that was pending and was expected to affect stocks. He would furnish the capital and do the trading, dividing the profits equally. The justice was so completely taken aback by the man's cool impudence that he scarcely knew what to say, but the humor of the situation struck him at once, and he asked the caller if he would please stand up under the chandelier, where he could get a good look at his face. The stranger stood the scrutiny without flinching. Then said the judge, "My friend, you have asked something that is not only improper and impossible, but your proposition ought to tempt me to kick you out of my house. I scarcely know why I do not feel in the mood to do it. I do not think you are aware of the significance of your proposition, and therefore I shall not treat you as I otherwise would. I am not going to enter into a speculation with you, as that would be wrong, but I will tell you how you can get the information you seek before any one else." The man's face brightened up, when the justice continued: "On the day when the opinion is delivered—cannot tell you when that will be—come to the Supreme Court room and take a seat on the very first bench, then, as it is read, the sound will reach your ears first. Good evening. But wait a moment, sir; you should thank me for not kicking you downstairs."

Close After Him.

The great American condor lays its eggs on the surfaces of rocks 15,000 feet above the level of the sea. That's pretty high for eggs, but at the latest market quotations the common American hen wasn't very far below the condor. A rise of another cent or two a dozen will put the hen on top.—Burdette.

THE OLD-FASHIONED GARDEN.

A Plea for Its Revival—A Picture from Memory's Walls.

[From the Boston Transcript.]

Why, in these days of the revival of the antique, when the cottage puts on a garb of sawed shingle, and, bedizened in red paint, is called Queen Anne, and the daughter of fashion goes to the fancy dress ball, the kirmess and what not, in the costume of 100 years ago, does not some one really revive the old-fashioned garden in genuine form throughout, outside of poetry and stories? The old-fashioned garden contained hollyhocks, which stood upright, lifting cups of beauty to invite the wandering bee; tiger lilies, red with black spots upon them, after the manner of the leopard rather than the tiger whose taste runs to stripes, and from whose taste, likewise, people who don't want to be eaten run. The tiger lily, so Tennyson says, "heavily hangs;" and, perhaps it does in England, especially in the fall, when Tennyson describes it as so despondent, and when the smell of the mold comes up so strong under the gray lowering sky, and nature speaks of the passing of the year. But if the tiger lily "heavily hangs," we have not so noticed it in this country; it seems all the more a scarlet spark against the gloom of dark foliage, and the even darker gloom that seems to rise from the ground and hang around the feet of the plants, like the creeping up of death. The hollyhocks have no such assertion; they are timid, for their size, and rather beseeching in their aspect. The old fashioned garden must include the sunflower and the pink phlox. By no means leave out the southern-wood, or "boys' love," whose bruised leaves give forth a pungent odor which our grandmothers deemed a sovereign remedy for headache. The uproariously funny snapdragon would have to be there, of course, and the marigold. And who does not remember the Canterbury bells, whose bells of purple or white seemed of wax, so smooth and firm of texture were they? Then the monk's hood, so called, of rich blue, almost purple, into which the bees used to intrude themselves until they were almost out of sight, while to the astonished child who had noted the "tossy's" approach the blossom seemed to bounce about and growl as if bewitched. Lilacs we have still with us; fashion, which occasionally deviates into good sense, has set its approval upon the white lilac, and has taken the better-known purple into its good graces. Lilacs, which were considered eminently dooryard shrubs, used to be planted so close to the windows that one wondered why the tenants of old colonial times should have felt the need of shutters or curtains in the summer. Roses were common, and are common to-day; but the York-and-Lancaster either has disappeared altogether, or else has retreated into the most distant of rural districts. Occasionally one sees a York-and-Lancaster in the exhibitions at Horticultural Hall, but in gardens no longer are to be encountered the blossoms of mingled white and red, emblematical of the two houses. To have the garden and house in harmony, the latter should be old, with wainscot and all the rest of it. The Listener begs leave to say that if he has misnamed any of the old flowers the controversy about them ends here.

The City Boys in the Country.

I am not a professional summer resort tender or anything of the kind, but I am a plain man, that works and slaves in the lumber woods all winter and then blows it in, if you will allow the term, on some New York friends of my wife's who come down, as they state, for the purpose of relaxation, but really to spread themselves out over our new white coverlids with their clothes on, and murmur, in a dreamy voice: "Oh, how restful!"

They also kick because we have no elevated trains that will take them down to the depot, whereas I am not able and cannot get enough ahead or forehanded sufficiently to do so, as heaven is my judge.

They bring with them a small son, who is a pale, emaciated little cuss, with a quiet way of catching my 3-year-old heifer by the tail and scaring the life out of her that is far beyond his years. His mother thinks he will not live, mayhap, to grow up, and I hope she may not be disappointed. Still he has a good appetite, and one day last summer, besides his meals, he ate:

One pocketful green apples (pippins),
One pocketful green apples (Ben Davis),
Three large stems rhubarb,
One hatful green gooseberries,
Two ginger cookies, without holes,
Two ginger cookies, with holes,
One adult cucumber, with salt on same,
One glass new milk,
Two uncooked hen eggs, on half-shell.

I laid off all that day from haying in order to follow the little rascal around with a lead pencil and a piece of paper and see how much he would eat. That evening I thought what a beautiful night he selected for his death. The moon was slipping in and out through the frothy, fleece-lined clouds, and I could imagine the angels just behind the battlements putting the celestial bric-a-brac high enough up so that Henry couldn't get hold of it when he came. I had a slow horse concealed behind the barn, with which I intended going for the doctor. It was a horse with which I had failed to get the doctor in time on a similar occasion, and I felt that he could be relied on now.

Night settled down on the riproaring Piscataquis and deepened the shadows at the base of Russell Mountain. The spruce gum tree of the Moosehead Lake region laid aside its work for the day and the common warty toad of the Pine Tree State began to overestimate himself and inflate his person with the bugs of the evening, now and then lighting up his interior with a lightning bug. It was a glorious evening that little Henry had selected and set aside for his death. But he was really the only one in our house who slept well that night, and seemed to wake up thoroughly refreshed. He is still alive as I write and is coming down here in July emptier than ever.—Bill Nye.

IT has been demonstrated that platinum wire may be drawn so fine as to be invisible to the naked eye, although its presence upon a perfectly white card can be detected by the touch, and can be seen by the aid of a small magnifying glass when the card is held in such a position that the wire casts a shadow.

TILL the fifteenth century no Christians were allowed to receive interest money, and Jews were the only usurers.

THE first almanac was prepared by Regiomontanus in 1474.

Good for Hard Workers.

It is fully claimed and pretty well sustained that hard workers can accomplish almost twice as much and save themselves from illness and loss of time if they take [illegible] worth per day of the extract of the Moxie Nerve Food Plant, now creating so much discussion. The dealers say its sale is the largest ever known. If a nervous woman gets hold of a bottle she gets the whole neighborhood to talking about it, and a woman's curiosity has to be gratified if it costs the price of a bonnet.

St. John's Watch.

There was formerly an ancient English law which provided "that no man shall presume from henceforwards to dresse or to make wet any nets for to catch herrings before St. John's Day at midsummer, nor upon the same day and after that till the last of January, included, every one may freely dresse or make his nets."

Bonfires were lighted, round which the people danced on this night. The doors of houses were ornamented with flowers, and tables were set out in the roadway, covered with eatables provided by the richer inhabitants, and all passers by were asked to partake in token of unity and good fellowship. In the City of London there was a procession of armed men, numbering nearly two thousand, called St. John's Watch, and very glorious it must have looked, with cressets blazing and glittering armor, and swordsmen on horse and afoot; while the open windows resembled opera boxes on a popular night, displaying ladies richly dressed and glittering with gold and jewelry, who sat to see

[illegible]

This procession started from St. Paul's, passed down Cheapside to Aldgate, and back by Fenchurch street to Cheapside, and broke up on the appearance of daylight.—All the Year Round.

A Healthy Stomach

Is a blessing for which thousands of our dyspeptic countrymen and women sigh in vain. [illegible] Hostetter's Stomach Bitters [illegible] dyspepsia [illegible]

Derived Great Benefit.

"So you are from Montana?" said a ministerial-appearing man who was sharing his seat on an Eastern railroad with a Western man.

"Yes, sir."

"Are there any churches where you live?"

"Ye mean one o' these 'ere things with a long sharp p'int stickin' up'n the air like an o l-can?"

"Yes, sir."

"Oh, yes, we got one of 'em."

"Has it not been of untold benefit to the community?"

"I reckon yer 'bout right, stranger."

"Ah, I'm glad to hear you say it. I trust your church has been the means of healing discords and bringing about harmony among your people."

"Yo jes' bet it, stranger, it has. Ye see we have a big pony race every Sunday afternoon an' there was always a powerful lot o' fightin' an shootin' 'bout gitten 'em started even, so we laid out a hundred-yard co'rs' straight away from the church an' backed 'em up agin' it an' started 'em at the tap of a snare drum. Gosh, stranger! ye oughter see the little devils get down an' hump themselves when the min'ster hits that drum a welt!"—Dakota Bell.

Blowing Up Hell Gate

Has been a laborious and costly work, but the end justifies the effort. [illegible] Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" for acting upon the liver and purifying the blood.

A SPRING mattress, like a spring chicken, is in season all the year round.

No Trouble to Swallow

Dr. Pierce's "Pellets" (the original "little liver pills"), and no pain or griping. Cure sick or bilious headache, sour stomach, and cleanse the system and bowels. 25 cts. a vial.

IF you wish to be rid of a bothersome peddler, don't threaten to throw him out. Offer to buy him out instead.

If Sufferers from Consumption,

Scrofula, Bronchitis, and General Debility will try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and permanent benefit. [illegible]—W. A. HULBERT, M.D., Salisbury, Md.

THE first thing planted in the garden of Eden—Adam's foot.

Prof. Loisette's Memory Discovery.

No doubt can be entertained about the value and genuineness of Prof. Loisette's Memory System, as it is so strongly recommended by Mark Twain, Mr. Proctor, Hons. W. W. Astor, Judah P. Benjamin, Dr. Buckley, and others. For full details send for Prof. L.'s prospectus, at 237 Fifth Ave., New York. [illegible]

Odd Fellows' Excursion to Denver, Col. Via "Rock Island Route."

The C., R. I. & P. Ry. offers the grandest opportunity to see the wonderful mountain scenery of Colorado at smallest expense ever known. [illegible] E. A. HOLBROOK, G. T. & P. A., C., R. I. & P. Ry., Chicago, Ill.

THE State Analyst of the Massachusetts Board of Health examined nearly twenty proprietary opium cures, and found that all had for their main ingredient opium, except one which was called the double chloride of gold, but did not contain any trace of that metal. So the method of cure is that of gradual reduction, or probably in many instances merely the substitution of an expensive nostrum for the ordinary drug of the shops.—Health Monthly.

WALES was conquered by the Normans, who at that time ruled in England, in 1254, and was united to England in 1283.

"The Proper Study of Mankind is Man,"

Says the illustrious Pope. If he had included woman in the list, he would have been nearer the truth, if not so poetical. Dr. R. V. Pierce has made them both a life study, especially woman, and the peculiar derangements to which her delicate system is liable. [illegible] Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. [illegible] By druggists.

YOU can always distinguish the young lady who rules the household by her martial air.

FIVE dollars can be saved every year in boots and shoes by using Lyon's Heel Stiffeners, cost only 25c.

EASY, easiest to use, and cheapest, Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. By druggists. 50c.

THE Frazer Axle Grease is better and cheaper than any other at double the price.

Do Not Neglect

[illegible] Hood's Sarsaparilla [illegible]

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

The treatment of many thousands of cases of those chronic weaknesses and distressing ailments peculiar to females, at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., has afforded a vast experience in nicely adapting and thoroughly testing remedies for the cure of woman's peculiar maladies.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the outgrowth, or result, of this great and valuable experience. [illegible]

As a powerful, invigorating tonic, [illegible]

As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled [illegible]

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a legitimate medicine, carefully compounded by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. [illegible]

"Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases [illegible]

As a regulator and promoter of functional action, [illegible]

"Favorite Prescription," when taken in connection with the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and small laxative doses of Dr. Pierce's Purgative Pellets (Little Liver Pills), cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder diseases. [illegible]

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Large bottles (100 doses) $1.00, or six bottles for $5.00.

For large, illustrated Treatise on Diseases of Women (160 pages, paper-covered), send ten cents in stamps. Address,

World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., BUFFALO, N. Y.

Ely's Cream Balm

Is worth $1000 to any Man, Woman or Child suffering from CATARRH.

Apply Balm into each nostril.

3$ PANTS. 3$ SHOES.

HANDSOME, STYLISH PANTS made to order [illegible]

OUR FULL SEAMLESS SHOES beat the world. [illegible]

THE HUNTER MFG CO. CINCINNATI, O.

KIDDER'S DIGESTYLIN

A SURE CURE FOR INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA. [illegible]

FOR CHOLERA INFANTUM.

[illegible]

WM. F. KIDDER & CO., [illegible] N. Y.

MENTION THIS PAPER WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS.

TANSILL'S PUNCH 5¢

[illegible] Address R. W. TANSILL & CO., Chicago.

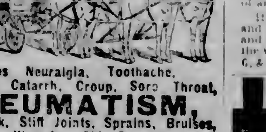
DR. BAIRD'S GRANULES

[illegible] FREE [illegible]

MENTION THIS PAPER WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS.

KIDDER'S PASTILLES. Sure relief ASTHMA. [illegible] Charlestown, Mass.

WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN



Cures Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Catarrh, Croup, Sore Throat, RHEUMATISM, Lame Back, Stiff Joints, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Wounds, Old Sores and All Aches and Pains.

[illegible]

It Cures You. That's the Idea!

Sold by Druggists. 50 cts. Song Book mailed free. Address WIZARD OIL COMPANY CHICAGO.

PENSIONS Send for Pension Laws to U. S. Claim Agents FITZGERALD & POWELL, Indianapolis, Ind.

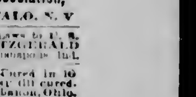
OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Dr. J. Stephens, Lebanon, Ohio.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $1.50, FREE. [illegible]

PATENTS R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D.C. [illegible]

MARLIN REPEATING RIFLE

BEST IN THE WORLD!



BALLARD Gallery, Hunting and Target Rifles. [illegible] Marlin Fire Arms Co., New Haven, Conn.

MARVELOUS MEMORY DISCOVERY.

Wholly unlike artificial systems. Any book learned in one reading. [illegible] PROF. LOISETTE, 237 Fifth Ave., New York.

WEBSTER'S Unabridged Dictionary.

A DICTIONARY 118,000 Words, 3000 Engravings, GAZETTEER OF THE WORLD [illegible] BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY [illegible] ALL IN ONE BOOK.

[illegible] G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

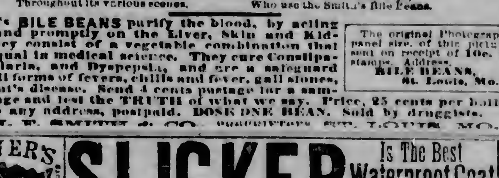
Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

C. N. U. No. 36—87

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.



This represents a healthy life. Throughout the various scenes. Just such a life as they enjoy Who use the Smith's Bile Beans.

Smith's BILE BEANS purify the blood, by acting directly and promptly on the Liver, Skin and Kidneys. They consist of a vegetable combination that has no equal in medical science. They cure Constipation, Malaria, and Dyspepsia, and are a safeguard against all forms of fevers, chills and fever, gall stones, and Bright's disease. [illegible] Price, 25 cents per bottle, mailed to any address, postpaid. [illegible] J. F. SMITH & CO. [illegible] ST. LOUIS, MO.

The original Photograph, panel size, of this picture sent on receipt of 10c. in stamps. Address, BILE BEANS, St. Louis, Mo.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER Is The Best Waterproof Coat Ever Made.

[illegible] A. J. TOWER, [illegible] Boston, Mass.

For a woman to say she does not use Procter & Gamble's Lenox Soap, is to admit she is "behind the times."

Nobody uses ordinary soap now they can get "Lenox."

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, SEPT 14, 1887.

On the next democratic ticket the name of Senator Garland or Gen. Lamar will be presented by the solid south for vice president without doubt.

Mr. Martin Ryerson, one of Chicago's oldest citizens and largest capitalists, died at Boston last week. He was 69 years of age, and had been a resident of Chicago since 1837.

Nine party conventions within the past two months have called for some restriction of immigration, the Iowa democrats being the last on the list. This question is forging to the front.

It is reported that an effort is being made by the G. A. R. to secure the payment of pensions monthly instead of quarterly as at present. It would not cost the government any more and the veterans think they could use their money to a better advantage if they could receive it every month.

Great Britain has hitherto been considered the chief danger to American iron manufacturers, but it is plain that Germany is to be in the future the source of an equally dangerous competition. The exports of manufactured iron to the United States from Germany in the first half of the current year were 110,000 tons, and our imports in the same time were 499,994 tons, so that Germany shipped a full fifth of the whole, and at prices below those of Great Britain. —Philadelphia Press.

A passenger who was caught out on a vessel in a late storm testifies as follows: "I immediately put a piece of gum in my mouth and began a rapid chewing, which had a pleasant and soothing effect and dispelled all feeling of nausea. I soon was made happy in the knowledge that it had prevented me from falling a victim of seasickness. I enjoyed the rolling of the vessel and stuck right to my gum during my trip." That settles it. Don't despise the day of small things. With your mouth full of chewing gum you can defy Neptune. The news is sure to give an immense impetus to ship building.

The are 400 Mormon bishops in Utah, 2,433 priests, 2,917 teachers and 6,854 deacons. Salt Lake City is divided into wards of eight or nine blocks each, and a bishop is put in charge of each ward. Under him there are two teachers, whose business is to learn the employment and income of every resident of the ward and report the same to the bishop. Then the bishop collects the tenth of each man's income and turns it in to the church authorities. The same complete system exists all over the territory. As the bishops get a good commission off their collections, they make very zealous and persistent collectors.

The cruisers built by the late John Roach received no favors from Secretary Whitney and his navy administration, but they are giving a pretty good account of themselves. His pet English plans for the Baltimore called for 10,750 horse-power. He sealed the requirement demanded of his favorite contractor down to 9,000 in letting the contract, with the condition that the work will be accepted if it shows 8,000 horse-power, and with power premiums to a large sum of it exceeds that limit. The Roach cruiser Dolphin was at first rejected for falling 61 tons below the required maximum. The Roach cruiser Boston, however, varied from the requirements on the other side. The contracts called for 3,500 horse power. The tests showed over 3,900. The builder was under no inducement of extra allowance for exceeding his contract demands, either.

The democratic party and its Administration have lodged the question of reducing texation for three years past, the debt as it fell due taking care of the surplus. The dexterous management of Secretary Fairchild is continuing this expedient through the autumn. Next winter all the rope is out. Speaker Carlisle and his democratic majority in the House must pass some bill reducing the revenue or face such a locking up funds in the Treasury as will risk a panic and be fatal to democractic chances in the next presidential election. Grover Cleveland and his party have reached the parting of the ways at last. They can neither dodge nor go backwards and the only path forward leads to a general attack on the tariff. This party policy was begun in Ohio, it will be continued in Pennsylvania and completed in Washington. In the issue which this policy will take, sharp and distinct, the Democratic party and Free Trade will be on one side Protection and the Republican party on the other. —Philadelphia Press.

Northern Michigan News.

Cheboygan is perfecting arrangements to have a dry dock.

No further developments in the Kalkaska and Elk Rapids railroad matter.

Dr. Nicholson of Boyne City has removed to Newberry, U. P., and settled for practice.

The Frankfort well is down about 1700 feet and is still going through limestone, with no salt.

The potato crop of Northern Michigan is the only product of its soil that may be called a failure.

The Mancelona Herald says R. A. Campbell of Petoskey, was in town last week, looking for a hotel site.

The frame is up for the new Catholic building at Harbor Springs, and it will be quite an imposing structure.

One farmer, living between two and three miles southwest of Petoskey has sold forty three dollars worth of green corn off one acre of ground this season.

Frankfort has organized a Building and Savings association, with $500,000 capital. This association is similar to the Traverse City B. & L. association, which has been in successful operation over three years.

Mr. C. W. Caskey has begun work upon the wing to Plank's Grand Hotel, which will add 200 more rooms to the capacity of that overgrown inn. It will extend back from the west end of the present structure about 200 feet.

The editor of the Frankfort Express, Hon. W. H. Frances, has returned from California where has been for some six months past, and will dispose of his interests at Frankfort, including the Express, and take his family back to the Pacific coast for a permanent home.

A number of the new cottages to be erected at Bay View are to be lathed and plastered, and finished off for permanent dwellings. The tendency now is toward a longer residence in Bay View, and we hear of some who intend to spend from four to six months of the year there.

Traverse City has been selected as the place for holding the re-union of the Northwestern Michigan Soldiers' and Sailors' association in 1888. Col. Lorin Roberts was elected commander. An honor worthily bestowed. Traverse City will give a cordial welcome to the old soldiers and sailors. —Herald.

Record: Mr. Ralph Connable is going south this fall to spend the winter, and will look carefully after health and business all along the coast from New Orleans to Tampa, Florida. His route will be via Cincinnati, and the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, to New Orleans, thence by coasters along the gulf shore.

We learn from a gentlemen who received a letter from Father Zorn who labored so hard with the Indians of Harbor Springs and vicinity, and has since been doing good work in Oceana county, that he is now at Mercy Hospital, Big Rapids, from which point it is more convenient for him to look after his charge.

While all the rest of Northern Michigan are waiting for the G. R. & I., the C. & W. M. the T. A. A. & N., the K. & E. R., the B. C. & E., and half a dozen other railroad companies to let them out of the woods. David Ward keeps right on grading the road to Alba across to the Michigan Central, asking no odds of anybody or any company. —Traverse Herald.

A week or two since we announced the retirement of Capt. Ed Bouchard from command of the steamer Lou A. Cummings. The item was all right then but not right now. A good many friends of the captain and patrons of the line protested, and C. W. Caskey, the owner of the boat, utterly refused to entertain the resignation, so the captain yielded to the pressure and will remain to the close of the season. —Manistique Pioneer.

Cheboygan Tribune: Owing to the disbanding of the other ball clubs in northern Michigan, the Cheboygan club ceased to do business at the old stand the first of the week. The venture was anything but a financial success, a result that was expected by many, but it seems some of the subscribers to the stock anticipated otherwise, and are now kicking against paying the assessments called for. Come to the front like honorable men, gentlemen.

Kalkaska Leader: An alarm of fire was sounded on the saw mill whistle, Thursday night of last week, which was promptly responded to, and after a sharp little fight the flames which had gained considerable headway in the engine room of the mill were subdued. The night watchman, Frank Shawbut discovered the fire, and prompt action by him and early assistance from others averted a serious loss. As it was, the damage was slight.

East Jordan Enterprise: We learn from good authority that Sheriff D. B. Jerrne has purchased a farm of 420 acres in Fairfield county, Ills.—The bridge near Miles' was burned, together with a stretch of plank road, the other day. The total loss is estimated at $400. Incendiarism is intimated. —W. S. Stripp has got a very bad hand. He ran a pitchfork through it some weeks ago, and as it healed apparently all right on the outside, he took no future care of it. It is said now that he is likely to lose his hand.

Petoskey Record: The railroad people never put a dollar into Bay View. The land was bought by the people of Petoskey, then a struggling little village, and they paid every cent necessary to secure the ground. The land was deeded as purchased in parcels to J. M. Metheany, and by him to the trustees of the camp meeting association. The founding of Bay View was not due to the prescience and liberality of the railroad managers; but was made possible by the liberality and sacrifices of the citizens of Petoskey. —Some lady friends of Mrs Cleveland from Buffalo, who were stopping at the Arlington last week, purchased of Mr. T. H. Corson a birch bark canoe, and the same was shipped to Mrs. Cleveland by express on Friday last. The boat was a very handsome specimen of Indian work, three feet in length and elaborately decorated with porcupine quills.

Record: Alderman Spencer gets back on Bro. Bowman and the Record in Friday's Resorter in great shape. He thinks our skull must be trepanned before anything can get into it; and he darkly intimates that Bro. Bowman was so razzle dazzled by the bright eyes of some of Charlevoix's fair daughters, that he didn't know himself from Spencer. He must have been in a bad way if he didn't know himself from Spencer, sure enough. But we have collateral evidence showing that it was Spencer who was rattled. The party took supper at the Fountain City House. The biscuits were crisp and delicious, but there was only one to a plate. Spencer eyed his for a minute and remarked, "Seems to me this is pretty thin for a 50-cent supper—one little biscuit! By thunder! I propose to have fifty cents worth if it takes all the help in the house to bring 'em. Here! you, hi! water! bring me another biscuit." For 20 minutes that tired girl trotted to and fro between Spencer's table and the kitchen, and one by one fifteen biscuits found their way under his vest. The meal over at last, Spencer strolled out and stepping up to the clerk's office with a proud consciousness that he had done his full duty, and got his 50 cents worth (or more) called for his bill. "Twenty-five cents," said the clerk. "Eh?" said Spencer, just say that again will you?" "A quarter sir." "Well, by gosh!" ejaculated the boot and shoe man, and a sickly sort of smile stirred the lower part of his countenance, and the load of biscuit began to set as heavy as lead on his conscience as well as his stomach. He's had dyspepsia all the time since, and hasn't got those biscuit digested yet. His stomach may recover its tone presently, but his conscience will not be any better till he sends Dick Cooper that other quarter he owes him for biscuit.

Petoskey Democrat: H. B. Chapman has just completed the largest and finest croquet ground in Petoskey. Dr. R. N. Patterson, who with his wife are now stopping at the Occidental hotel, has in his possession a tobacco pipe that possesses a very interesting history. It is made of laurel and inlaid in a beatiful manner with solid silver. The work was done by a federal prisoner at Andersonville, where Dr. Patterson was a surgeon during the war. The bowl is covered with scalloped silver work, at the top, and oblong plates on the sides and stem, on which are traced leaves and vines. On the front is a silver shield on which the coat of arms of the United States was skillfully engraved. The engraving has been worn away by carrying in the pocket and frequent handling. The only only tools this wonderful jeweler possessed were a pocket knife and a stone hammer. The silver was obtained by beating out a silver quarter to the requisite thickness. The Doctor values the pipe very highly, he having purchased it from the prisoner and presented it to a friend, at whose death it was returned to the purchaser. Through the kindness of a resident friend, we had the pleasure of examining this relic with a marvelous history. Mrs. Patterson is a cousin of Secretary Lamar. A few days ago we incidentally became informed of a new venture of a business nature, about to be engaged in by some of our monied men of Petoskey. We are not sure that the gentlemen interested in the enterprise will be at all pleased with our giving the matter publicity at the present time. The new venture referred to, is the erection of a mammoth grain elevator at Harbor Springs. The object aimed at is to buy corn, oats and feed of all kinds at Chicago, Milwaukee and other lake ports and have it shipped to the elevator at Harbor Springs in sufficient quantities to afford a winters supply for the farmers in Emmet county.

DRY GOODS!

New Goods arriving by every Boat from the Best Houses of East and West, to our already complete stock of Dry Goods.

Our Winter CLOAKS,

are being manufactured expressly for us and will be here in about a week, when we will show as good a line as you ever saw here

Cor. Bridge & Main sts.

VERY RESP'Y,

B. SEE.

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. [illegible] James M. Kent, Judge of Probate.

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. [illegible] Dated Aug 15th, A. D. 1887. James M. Kent, Judge of Probate.

Sheriff Sale.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a writ of [illegible] Dated, Aug 4, 1887. D. B. Jerrne, Sheriff. Cruickshank & Geier, Attorneys for Plaintiffs.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the money secured by a certain mortgage [illegible] Dated, August 17th, 1887. Martha J. Ayers, Assignee. L. M. Clark, Attorney for Assignee.

CHARLEVOIX Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS: Henry Bennett, John Nicholls, A. R. Upright, F. A. Smith, O. D. Wood, A. Buttars, A. Fox.

CAPITAL, ... $25,000
SURPLUS, ... 2,000

[illegible]

WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK DETROIT, MICH.
$500,000 TO INVEST IN BONDS
[illegible]
S. D. ELWOOD, Treasurer.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve. [illegible]

Land for Sale. [illegible] JAMES METCALF, Charlevoix.

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

Standard Time.

Charlevoix and East Jordan. [illegible]

Charlevoix and Boyne City. [illegible]

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan. [illegible]

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE. [illegible]

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS. [illegible]

Bank of Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security [illegible]

Its Officers [illegible]

Security in Banking [illegible]

This Bank Invites [illegible]

This Bank Will [illegible]

Parties Seeking [illegible]

Investment Notes, [illegible]

We Solicit Your Patronage.

Farming Lands

500,000 ACRES Of Splendid MICHIGAN LANDS For Sale By The G. R. & I. R. R.

50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.

By Water and Rail [illegible]

Not a Wilderness by any Means. [illegible]

Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.

W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner, GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.

TITLE PERFECT.

Land for Sale. [illegible] THOMAS WEST.

CROSS & SONS., Buy and Sell all kinds of Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc. Charlevoix, - Mich.

ICE CREAM PAR EXCELLENCE.

We would respectfully inform the public that we have at considerable expense, prepared and suitably furnished our Band Pagoda as an Ice Cream parlor, and have placed it at the head of all similar institutions in Charlevoix. It will be open for the use of the public at all times save on Wednesday evenings, when there will be a Grand Concert by the Band. Our cream will be as good as can be made. Just received a large lot of Ice Cream Packages holding from one quart to one or more gallons, which will be loaned to customers for safely carrying cream to their homes. The quality of our cream speaks for itself. Our stock of foreign and domestic Fruits is always large and of the best quality. We carry as fine a line of confectionery, nuts, etc., as can be found in town.

Respectfully, O. W. SMITH.

160 Acres in MARION Township For Sale at a Bargain. Terms to suit.

MONEY TO LOAN ON Approved Real Estate Security. THEODORE R. CHAPIN, Boyne City.

JOHN CONNOR, Fashionable Boot and Shoe MAKER. [illegible] All Work Guaranteed.

J. T. Kirkpatrick, ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR, —ON— Charlevoix Summer Resorts. [illegible] Carpenters and Painters. [illegible] J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller

Offer a Mammoth Stock OF BOOTS, SHOES and other FOOT WEAR, —AT— LOWER PRICES Than can be found elsewhere in the County.

We have just secured a FIRST-CLASS SHOEMAKER, And will make Repairing a specialty.

We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.

NOTHING SHODDY.

Fox & Miller.

Take The Sentinel.

RIFENBURG MILLING CO. Charlevoix, Mich. [illegible] 3 EXTRA GRADES OF FLOUR Feed, Corn Meal, Graham [illegible]

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL.
Litney & Steimel LIVERY, And Feed Barn Charlevoix, Mich. Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the BEST BOATS! [illegible] LEAST MONEY! All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made. LEAVE ORDERS [illegible] J. BEAUVAIS.

BETTER THAN MEDICINE! KEEP YOUR FEET WARM. You can't enjoy good health unless you clothe the feet properly. D. SHERWOOD & CO. have just received the finest line of Fall and Winter BOOTS & SHOES ever brought to Charlevoix. Give them a call.

A. J. McLEOD, Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail All kinds of FRESH MEATS, SALT PORK, SMOKED & SALTED HAMS, Dried and Smoked BACON, DRIED BEEF, Bologna, Head Cheese, Sausage. Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS. Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates. A. J. McLEOD.

Washburn & Ackert, FOUNDREYMEN, MACHINISTS, And Manufacturers of The Charlevoix Plow.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN Boiler Works! Builder and Manufacturer of BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS. Sheet Iron Work given special attention. MARINE WORK a specialty. HENRY BARTH, Prop. Charlevoix, Mich.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GEIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

HALSTHORPE GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & GALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st. Charlevoix. [illegible]

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post-office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake lodge No. 291, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

I. O. G. T.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 101, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 136, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7.30 p. m.
President—Byron See.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—R. Suffield.
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. R. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee [illegible], W. A. Brown and C. Y. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Geo. W. Crouter, W. Miller, S. M. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Bedau.
All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE, RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r. Charlevoix, - - - Mich. Every convenience for the travelling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE, Lorenzo Cook, Manager. Charlevoix, - - - Mich. The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE. W. C. Newman, Prop'r. Charlevoix, - - Mich. Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and Dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. E. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. R. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. (Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.)

DENTIST

N. J. PERRY, Dentist. Office in Wood's Drug Store, Charlevoix, Mich.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R.R.

Time Card for Petoskey.

IN EFFECT, JULY 1887.

[illegible]

Michigan Central

The Direct Route Between Mackinaw City & Detroit Jackson, The South and East.

[illegible]

WAGNER PALACE SLEEPING AND PARLOR CARS.
W. H. JOHNSTON, Mich. Pass Agt., Grand Rapids. O. W. RUGGLES, G. P. & T. Agt., Chicago.

DULUTH, SOUTH SHORE AND ATLANTIC R'Y.

"SOO-MACKINAW SHORT LINE."

Only Direct Route to Marquette and the Iron and Copper Regions of Lake Superior.

Traversing the most Picturesque portion of Upper Michigan through a country unequalled for Hunting, Fishing, Etc.

Two Through Express Trains daily in each direction to which are attached NEW, ELEGANT and COMMODIOUS OBSERVATION PARLOR CARS & WAGNER SLEEPING COACHES.

Tickets over this route are on sale at all principal ticket offices. Full information as to rates etc., maps and folders will be furnished. Address E. W. ALLEN, Gen Pass. and Tkt Agt, Marquette, Mich.

Fighting Fish.

The male stickleback is a prodigious warrior, and when he meets a rival of his own kind he engages with him at once in deadly warfare. Their battles, says Mr. Darwin, are at times desperate for these puny combatants fasten tight on each other for several seconds, tumbling over and over again, until their strength is utterly exhausted. Bold and pugnacious as they are, however, it is only the birds who thus fiercely contend with one another. Their demure little mates remain always perfectly pacific, gentle and even tempered. With the rough-tailed stickleback, the males while fighting swim round and round one another, biting and endeavoring to pierce each other's mailed skin with their raised lateral spines or lances. Small as they are, their bite is very severe, and inflicts a deadly wound upon their antagonist; and Mr. Noel Humphreys remarks that they use their lateral spines with fierce effect, so that he has seen one brave stickleback during a stout battle rip up his opponent from end to end, till the vanquished hero sank to the bottom and died ingloriously. It is during the moment of battle, and just before and after it, that the colors of all fighting animals become invariably most intense. The reason is plain; battle is joined during the mating season, and "before the face of maidens and of dames;" and, as in human tournaments, the ladies stand by to applaud the conquerors and to award their prowess. They are themselves the prize of the encounter they stimulate. Besides, the highest physical vigor and the highest excitement bring out the greatest beauty of both men and animals. The angrier you make a mandrill the more vividly tinted are his cheeks and callosities. The frilled lizards and flying dragons glow with all the brightest colors of the rainbow when you tease or annoy them. The turkey cock swells his crimson wattles and spreads his ruffled feathers to the utmost at sight of a rival or a mischievous boy. There is a little hot-tempered fish known as Betta pugnax and kept as a sort of domestic pet by the Siamese (much as the Christian English gentlemen of forty or fifty years since kept fighting cocks) to display its prowess for the edification of the Mongolian intelligence. "When in a state of quiet," says Cantor, "its dull colors present nothing remarkable; but if two be brought together, or if one sees its own image in a looking-glass the little creature becomes suddenly excited, the raised fins and the whole body shine with metallic colors of dazzling beauty, while the projected gill membrane, waving like a black frill around the throat, adds something of grotesqueness to the general appearance. In this state it makes repeated darts at its real or reflected antagonist. But both, when taken out of each other's sight, instantly become quiet." The fighting fishes, as the Siamese call them, are kept in globes like gold fish and fed from time to time with the larvæ of mosquitos. The Siamese are as wild after their combats as the Malays are for cockfighting, and often stake large sums, or even the freedom of themselves and families, on the prowess and skill of a particular betta. The license to exhibit fish fights is farmed by the government and brings in a considerable revenue to the king of Siam. —The Cornhill Magazine.

Marshall P. Wilder's photograph has been taken in London, and is now running a strong race in popular favor with the portraits of royalty itself. The humorist is ugly enough to capture the fashionable fancy.

Napoleon's traveling carriage which was captured at Waterloo by Field Marshal Blucher, is still in existence, near Silesia. Napoleon had left the carriage a short time before its capture, abandoning his hat, sword, and some valuables.

Dhuleep Singh has been sojourning at a hotel in Moscow under the name of Patrick Casey. He is endeavoring to obtain the support of the Russian Government in his effort to stir up a rebellion in India for the recovery of his former throne.

Ville Beaumont, an exiled French Count who claims to be able to trace his lineage back to the time of William the Conqueror, is now earning an honest living in the office of a Pittsburg architect, where he has the reputation of possessing rare ability.

The ghost of Mrs. Roxalana Druse, the Herkimer (N. Y.) County woman who was hanged for the murder of her husband, now pays nightly visits to the cell in which she was confined, and frightens all the jailers by moaning from mid-night till dawn. Or so the jailers say.

Miss Bertha von Hillern, the athletic landscape painter, has returned from California and settled down for the summer in her studio in the Shenandoah Valley, Va. She has been making a study of the famous trees of California, and will result in a number of charming pictures.

Walter Murray Gibson, the American Premier of the Hawaiian Kingdom, is said to be not only the power behind the throne, but ambitious to mount the throne itself. He persistently declines to be knighted or decorated, and is likely to be the leader in the anticipated revolt against Kalakaua.

C. P. Huntington, the railroad magnate, runs to all the fires in New York when able. He takes a morbid delight in seeing the flames leap and hearing them roar, and frequently remains for hours at conflagrations. Occasionally he is accompanied by Mrs. Huntington, who has the same desire in a modified form.

Gen. Moses Cleveland, the founder of the City of Cleveland in 1796, is to have a bronze statue in that city. The figure stands seven feet and six inches high. The General is represented standing erect with a staff and a surveyor's level in his hands. He is bareheaded, and is dressed in the ordinary outdoor garb of his time.

Fred Douglass recently said in Paris: "I have traveled through most of the countries of Europe, and whenever I am in the cars, in the theatres, in the ball-rooms, anywhere in fact, I find that I am treated always with courtesy, and not rarely with distinguished consideration. As far as I can see, a man is judged over here without any regard to the color of his hair, his eyes, or his skin."

Briggs Swift, President of the wrecked Fidelity Bank of Cincinnati, has had a previous unpleasant experience with law-breakers. At the time the Cincinnati Court-House was burning and the streets were held by the rioters Mr. Swift went up "to see what was going on," and was severely wounded by a musket-ball, from the effects of which he lingered for several weeks on the verge of the grave.

Additional Local News.

Rev. W. G. Clark is home again from his visit to Northville.

—John, Frank and Anna Moorehouse of Ironton, left Monday for Florida, where they go for their health.

Dr. H. B. Weed came up on the Detroit excursion last week and spent a few days with his mother and brothers.

—The woods are beginning to glorify themselves with brighter colors, and more of them, than the oft-bequoted rainbow.

—One of our farmers report that the rains will help a few pieces of late potatoes. The bulk of the crop, however, is beyond the need of rain.

—Al. T. Washburne and bride arrived on the Grand Rapids from Mackinac on Thursday and at once took possession of their neat and cosy home on Main street.

—O. W. Smith is steadily increasing his business. His place is already headquarters for all kinds of fruit, and from this out the choicest oysters may be found there.

—Only the President and three Trustees were in town Thursday night and no council meeting was held. Trustee Eaton was in Chicago, Newman in Detroit and See in Reed City.

—Rev. C. P. VanAuken, who has been laboring in the missionary field of the northern peninsula, returned last week, after a most successful season of a month among the young churches of the Congregational denomination.

—The Petoskey ball club is a bankrupt institution with liabilities several hundred dollars in excess of its assets. An earnest attempt however, will be made to pull it out of the hole by subscription and a series of entertainments this winter.

—Charles Hampton's Resorter, published this year at Petoskey, closed its third season on Saurtday last. The closing number contains a double leaded editorial in which it is announced that the first season the paper was run at a loss of $150 besides time and trouble, the second year it came out even and this year it will clear all expenses and leave $75 still due on advertising.

—Our neighbor the Journal, and the Petoskey Democrat have been engaged in a war of words over the allegation made by the Journal that Petoskey hotel and real estate men were seeking to destroy the fair fame of this, the fairest village of the north. It matters not, neighbors. The future of Charlevoix is written in the stars, and engraven on the firmament. Charlevoix will go right forward as irresistably as a northern glacier, and, when the railroad comes, as swiftly as the avalanche. A little talk will do no harm.

—Boyne Citizen: Miss Navada E. Patten, of Charlevoix, has been engaged to teach the Intermediate department in place of Miss Cooper. —Our genial prosecuting attorney took a bath on Sunday, and his friends are as pleased as he is with the result. His little two year old boy was throwing sticks from the Cheboygan dock for the dog to swim after, and in the dog's eagerness, was crowded in. Mr. Corbett was fortunately near, and jumped in and had the boy out in no time. This is the second time within a year that the youngster has been in the water, and his father had better teach him to swim pretty soon.

—A new code of government weather signals is in force, which is a decided improvement over the old code. The yellow flag means a wind of more than usual severity, but not sufficiently strong to be of damage to vessels if well prepared and well manned. The old red and black or storm signal, "means business." The pennants are direction flags. The red pennant indicates easterly winds; the white, westerly winds. When placed above or below the cautionary or storm flags, they suggest wind from the corresponding quadrants of the compass. Thus: the red pennant above indicates N. E.; below, S. E.; the same rule applying to the white, or westerly pennant.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

Cull shingles and lumber for sale cheap, or will exchange for farm produce. Apply at Burns & Scroggie's livery barn. tf

FOR SALE—One span of horses, one yearling colt, two spring colts, one yoke of oxen, two two-year old heifers, two yearling heifers; must be sold soon. Terms reasonable. Inquire at this office.

HEADLIGHT AND LITTLE DAISY Soaps. They are strictly pure. They are the cheapest soaps sold for the mony. Try then and get a ladies' water-proof gossamer free. For sale by Emrey Brothers.

THE PROPERTY known as the Swetland Sanitarium, on the South upper terrace in the village of Charlevoix, is for sale or rent. Enquire of E. H. Green, Charlevoix, Mich. tf

Mrs. Litney & Carr cordially invite the Ladies to call and examine their mammoth new stock of fall and winter millinery. Their stock comprises everything in all the latest novelties in their line. It will pay you to inspect their goods before purchasing elsewhere. adv

Horse for Sale.

A six year old gray mare, weight, 1,200 pounds; good, sound, kind and gentle. A good work horse, and a perfect horse for ladies' driving. Inquire at this office.

Thousands Say So.

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Dr. G. W. Crouter.

A Walking Skeleton.

Mr. E. Springer, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., writes: "I was afflicted with lung fever and abscess on lungs, and reduced to a walking Skeleton. Got a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which did me so much good that I bought a dollar bottle. After using three bottles, found myself once more a man, completely restored to health, with a hearty appetite, and a gain in flesh of 48 lbs." Call at Dr. G. W. Crouter's and Crouter & Harris' Drug Store and get a free trial bottle of this certain cure for all Lung Diseases. Large bottles $1.

FOR LAME BACK, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents.

SHILOH'S COUGH and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

SHILOH'S VITALIZER is what you need for Constipation, Loss of Appetite, Dizziness, and all symptoms of Dyspepsia. Price 10 and 75 cents a bottle.

CROUP, WHOOPING COUGH and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

DAN'L S. WAY, Photographer, In Bradbeer's Gallery. Photographs of all sizes taken. Old Pictures copied and enlarged. CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

W. H. FRANCIS FURNITURE —AND— JOBBING SHOP, Will also do Contracting & Building, in Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts. [illegible] Shop on South Terrace, Opposite Sheriff Beadon's residence.

MILLINERY, FANCY GOODS, DRESS-MAKING. We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention. DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates. ALDRICH SISTERS. Ingleside Building.

C. H. Maddaugh, MERCHANT TAILOR. I have just received a fine line of Samples of first class Fall & Winter Tweeds. Call and look them over. Fine Samples of OVERCOATINGS! now awaiting your inspection. Call and see me. Satisfaction Guaranteed.

CHARLEVOIX Manufacturing Co. Charlevoix, Mich., Manufacturers of Sash and Doors, Blinds, Mouldings etc. NEWELL Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails kept in stock. Window & Door Frames made to order. All Kinds of Building Material Kept constantly on hand. PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS. Furnished on application. Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building. Correspondence solicited.

New JEWELRY AND SILVER WARE. I have just received a very fine stock of Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc which I will sell at Prices lower than the same goods can be purchased outside. Did it ever occur to you that by patronizing home Merchants you were benefiting yourselves? All classes of Repairing done quickly. C. R. BELLINGER.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S LIVERY STABLE CHARLEVOIX. The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand. Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low. Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

W. A. REYNARD, has just received at his Fruit Store in the Lewis Block, a choice line of Vegetables and Fruits OF ALL KINDS, TO WHICH OTHERS WILL BE ADDED IN SEASON. I will also keep in stock a full line of Tobaccos and Cigars. Butter and Eggs a Specialty.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY. CELLULOID STARCH. A NOVEL INVENTION! REQUIRES NO COOKING. [illegible] THE CELLULOID STARCH COMPANY, NEW HAVEN, CONN. U.S.A. Will not stick to the iron or blister the goods, easy to use, makes your linen look like new at home. Ask your grocer for Celluloid starch. It is pure and economical.

HUMPHREYS' DR. HUMPHREYS' BOOK Cloth & Gold Binding. 144 Pages, with Steel Engraving. MAILED FREE. [illegible] HOMEOPATHIC [illegible] SPECIFICS. [illegible]

GRENADES! Two Sizes—Pints and Quarts. Over Sixty Millions Sold. PRICES. [illegible] "STAR" Tubular Fire Extinguisher. [illegible] Plain, $12.00 per doz. Ornament'd, 15.00 per doz. The "Star" EXTINGUISHER [illegible] Price, $60.00 Each. "STAR" CHEMICAL. [illegible] $200.00 EACH. [illegible] The HARDEN HAND GRENADE CO. 51 & 53 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

STOVES!

AHEAD AGAIN! THE Round Oak Heating Stoves. NEW STYLES Cook Stoves! Saws & Axes Job and Tin Work.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

F. A. COCHRAN & CO., (Successors to PERRY WEED.) Druggists and Pharmecists, A FULL LINE OF Drugs and Medicines For Prescription Use. PATENT MEDICINES, SOAPS, PERFUMES, TOILET ARTICLES, CIGARS, STATIONERY. Pure unadulterated Liquors for medical purposes. We buy for LOWEST CASH rates and sell as low as the lowest. Your Patronage Respectfully Solicited.

M. S. MOULTON, WATCHMAKER & JEWELER, Charlevoix, Mich. Personal Attention given to Watch Repairing. Key-wind Movements changed to Stem-wind and warranted as good as the best. JEWELRY Repairing done in the best manner. Having had 30 years experience I am confident I can give the best of satisfaction.

"MARVELOUS PRICES!" BOOKS FOR THE MILLION [illegible] OUR UNEQUALED OFFER. [illegible] "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

FRANK E. WOODS Bath & Barber Rooms Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS. Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House. [illegible] JAY L. PRICE.

NEW SHOP! All kinds of Blacksmithing, At the Shop in the Foundry Building. Horseshoeing a specialty. ALL WORK GUARANTEED. M. SCOTT.

WANTED! Potatoes, Onions, Apples, Peaches and Blueberries. We have an old established trade and can place stock to best advantage. Consignments solicited. Correspondence invited from shippers. Stencil and shipping tags furnished. W. H. THOMPSON & CO. Commission Merchants, No. 166 South Water St. CHICAGO, - - ILL.

JAS. A. GELLICK, Dealer in Choice Wines, Fine Liquors EXCELLENT CIGARS. We call Special Attention to our Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES. We also keep continually on draught Milwaukee Export and lager Beer. Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

A DAY'S DOINGS.

Eventful Happenings in Every Hemisphere, as Transmitted by Telegraph.

Political, Social, Financial, Commercial, Industrial, Criminal and Other News.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

POLITICAL.

Pennsylvania Democratic Convention.

IN the Democratic State convention at Allentown, Pa., J. Ross Thompson was nominated for Judge of the Supreme Court, and Bernard J. McGrann for Treasurer. The platform was reported by Congressman Scott. It demands that the surplus in the National Treasury be used to pay the public debt, favors a "wise and prudent reduction of internal taxation and of duties on imports," indorses the administration of President Cleveland, favors "liberal pensions to deserving Union soldiers and sailors," expresses sympathy for the people of Ireland in their struggle for Home Rule, and concludes as follows:

We still hold to the ancient doctrine of the party that the preservation of the rights of the people demand that we should look with jealousy upon monopolies and restrict corporate power within its proper sphere, and we heartily approve the action of the national administration in reclaiming and throwing open to the people for settlement [illegible] acres of lands which, through artifice and fraud, were wrongfully held by corporations, having been forfeited to the people by failures to comply with the conditions of the grant.

Iowa Greenbackers.

A DES MOINES dispatch of Thursday says:

The Greenback party in Iowa finally passed out of existence here yesterday. After the [illegible]

THE CHATSWORTH HORROR.

[illegible]

was decided to require of the League a modification of the existing form of contract, the principal change desired being in the release clause, the object of the brotherhood being to do away with the buying and selling of players. In the ball-game in New York Captain Anson imposed a fine of $125 on Pfeffer, of the Chicagos, for two misplays, and a row was the result. Pfeffer said he would never pay it, and the other players stood by him, and he further swore gave it out that unless it was remitted he would never play another game with the Chicagos.

C. A. PERCY passed through the Niagara whirlpool in a life-boat of his own invention on Saturday. The experiment, which was entirely successful, was made to test his boat, which he claims will stand any sea, however boisterous.

ROBERT HARE POWEL & Co., and Robert Hare Powel's Sons & Co., two great coal-mining firms of Philadelphia, have failed. The liabilities are estimated at $4,000,000.

WEST.

TIMOTHY COUGHLIN, the section boss arrested for criminal negligence which was claimed to have caused the Chatsworth disaster, was released on $1,000 bail.

THE Morse bridge-works at Youngstown, Ohio, were destroyed by fire, involving a loss of $125,000.

THE Chicago Tribune of Wednesday printed the following:

The fate of the convicted Anarchists is the one topic of conversation in Anarchistic and Socialistic circles. Small groups of German workmen engaged in a subdued and earnest conversation may be seen any night in the saloons frequented by this class of people. There is a total absence of any wild talk in public places at least. The prevailing sentiment among the friends of the convicted men is that there is little to hope for in case the Supreme Court sustains the decision of the lower court. The ruling of that body may be expected at any time after next Tuesday. As the time draws closer a careful observer can trace a suppressed but intense excitement among the men who a little more than a year ago listened to the speeches that led to the riot of May 4. In all their conversation they rarely refer to the possibility of a death sentence, but when pressed for an opinion admit that there is small hope for executive clemency. There are some, however, who are sanguine that Spies and his companions will yet escape from the hangman's noose.

The Chicago Herald of Wednesday says [illegible]

vention will be held at Saratoga, Tuesday, September 27.

RAILWAYS.

IN the application of the Pacific Railroad Commission to compel Senator Stanford and other officers of the Central Pacific Railroad to answer certain questions in regard to the expenditure of funds for the purpose of influencing legislation, Justice Field of the United States Supreme Court delivered an adverse opinion at San Francisco.

The Court decides that the Pacific Railway Commission is not a judicial body. It possesses no judicial power. It can determine no right of the Government or of the companies investigated by it. Its report to the President will not even be admissible in a judicial inquiry as evidence of any matters investigated. It is a mere board of inquiry to obtain information on certain matters and report the result to the President and to Congress. It is authorized to invoke the aid of the United States Courts in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses, the production of books, papers and documents, and such courts may, in case of refusal of a witness to obey the subpœna, issue an order requiring such witness to obey, and to produce books and papers and answer questions. The citizen's right of personal security involves not only the protection of his person from assault, but the exemption of his private affairs, books and papers from the scrutiny of others. The law compels the production in judicial proceedings of such documents as affect the interest of others or which are necessary to the prosecution of criminals, and in only one of these ways can they be obtained and made public against the will of the owners. In Boyd vs. The United States (116 U. S.), the Supreme Court said: "Any compulsory discovery by extorting the party's oath or compelling the production of his private books and papers to convict him of crimes or to forfeit his property is contrary to the principles of free government." This last reference to criminal proceedings, but is applicable to any such production of private books and papers of a party otherwise than in the course of judicial proceedings or a direct suit for that purpose. It is a forcible intrusion into and compulsory exposure of one's private affairs and papers without judicial process in the course of judicial proceedings, which is contrary to the principles of free government and abhorrent to the instincts of Englishmen and Americans. In Kilbourne vs. Thompson (103 U. S., 168), Kilbourne had refused to obey an order of the House of Representatives to produce books and papers, and was by order of the Speaker confined in jail forty-five days, when he was released on habeas corpus by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. He sued the Sergeant-at-Arms, and the Supreme Court of the United States held that Congress did not possess the power to inquire into the private affairs of private citizens.

GENERAL.

[illegible]

THE COLORADO INDIAN TROUBLES

Origin of the Present Outbreak—Portrait of Chief Colorow.

A Western correspondent declares that the war with the White River Utes is a white man's war, that the Indians are not forcing the fighting, nor are they desirous of continuing the war. The facts of the case appear in this wise: In the spring of 1887 a band of lawless, drunken cowboys shot one of Chief Colorow's bucks without any active protest on his part, and subsequently his sister was shot. Even this did not arouse any efforts at retaliation. Seeing that the wily old Ute was not to be entrapped into warfare, a charge of horse stealing was trumped up by Sheriff Kendall, and he forthwith attempted to arrest two of Colorow's bucks, but these were not to be found. In the meantime Colorow gathered up his tribe, sent runners out in all directions, and it is not improbable that a general uprising will result. Colorow is the chief who participated in the Meeker massacre of 1880, and no attempt is made to make him out a saint. The Indians form a very insignificant part of the population of the State of Colorado (which as it will be remembered is as large as the states of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware combined), but [illegible]

From the Seat of War—Colorow Charged with Murder.

DR. PARKER.

The Probable Successor of Henry Ward Beecher as Pastor of Plymouth Church.

MARKET REPORTS.

[illegible]

THE NATIONAL GAME.

The Fight for the League Base-Ball Championship Grows in Interest.

The Present Champions Losing Ground, on Account of Dissensions Among the Players.

[CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.]

Chicago, through encountering unfavorable weather at Pittsburg and Boston, has made but little headway in the League pennant race upon its present trip East. Philadelphia has passed New York and is now ambitiously turning its eyes toward second place, which the champions hold. There has been much of the sensational during the past week in connection with affairs of the national game. Dispatches, which upon their face seem highly colored, announce that trouble occurred between Anson and Pfeffer during the last game of the series with New York last week, and that the great second baseman was heavily fined by his captain for what the latter believed to be intentional carelessness. The trouble, it is stated, began in the sixth inning, when the score was tied, one to one and New York came to bat. Webb went out at first base by Clarkson to Anson. Gore popped up a little fly over Anson's head, and Anson went after it, while Clarkson and Pfeffer started to cover first. Pfeffer got there, but caught the ball awkwardly as it was thrown by Anson, and then stumbled at the bag so that Gore was safe. That made Anson angry. He criticised Pfeffer sharply. Pfeffer made some reply and Anson made it cost him $25. Then Pfeffer was angry. He didn't say anything, but he showed that he didn't like it as he went back to his position. Tiernan, next at bat, drove the ball toward second. Pfeffer got it, touched the bag, retiring Gore, and then in trying to effect a double play threw fifteen feet over Anson's head, letting Tiernan to third. Ward's hit that followed brought Tiernan in, and then Connor flew out, ending the inning.

The first man to bat in the next inning was Connor and he hit an easy grounder to [illegible]

Peaked Pointers.

[illegible]

A FIERCE FIGHT.

A Jackass and a Bull Have a Deadly Combat, in Which the Latter Is Killed.

A special dispatch from Cincinnati to the Chicago Herald gives an account of a novel fight near Kenton P. O., Ky., between Cole Harrison's bull and a jackass owned by one of his neighbors:

The fight was the result of Harrison having [illegible] his bull's [illegible] Part of a red flannel shirt was thoughtfully brought by the [illegible]. This was tied around the jack's neck by consent of the owner and the animals were turned loose. The ass did not like the red, and seemed to [illegible] The bull got out of the way, but not in time to escape a bite on the rump. This maddened him and he turned, and striking the ass square on the right shoulder he nearly knocked him down. [illegible] but the ass recovered himself. He did not have time to turn around and kick, but he [illegible] shoulder bitte, with his fore feet. It struck the bull a glancing lick on the neck and cut about two inches, from which the blood flowed. A bellow told that the bull was now thoroughly maddened. He went straight for the jack, holding his head low and shaking it. The jack wheeled to kick, but the bull, in anticipation of this, dodged around to his side. He got in a slight blow, which cut several inches of hair from his adversary's belly.

Thus the fight went on with varying fortune, both animals receiving severe punishment. Both animals were beginning to feel the heat, but they showed no signs of weakness or cowardice. While the bull was trying to evade the heels of the jack he was caught on the rump by his teeth. He held on, and for a few minutes they were spinning around in a small circle. The hold slipped at last, but with it came a big piece of hide and a stream of blood. Immediately the bull wheeled and gave the jack a lick that knocked him down. He followed up, and gored him across the side, cutting a terrible gash, from which the blood spurted. He was about to follow it up with another, when the jack struck him in the eye with his iron-clad fore foot, and completely mashed that organ of sight. This gave him a chance to get up and he went for the blind side of that bull like lightning. Both heels struck the bull square in the side. He staggered, but did not fall. It could be plainly seen that he was suffering terribly and could not last long, but his grit was still there. The jack led, but the bull struck first and caught his adversary square in the stomach. He pushed on and bored his horn. The jack fell as the bull tried to rip him open, and began yelling, kicking, and biting, but the bull pinioned him fast. At last one of his kicks struck the bull on the fore leg and broke it. He fell and they rolled over together. Someone cried "Part them!" but their owners said to let them "fight it out," and fight it out they did, until at last the jack planted his heels firmly on the bull's frontal bone and literally kicked the life out of him.

THE COLOR LINE.

It Has Been Drawn at Asbury Park.

[illegible]

THE CHATSWORTH DISASTER.

[illegible]

Exhaustive Statistics on Wool.

[illegible]

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for September 11—Golden Precepts.

The subject for the lesson on the above date is found in the first twelve verses of the seventh chapter of Matthew. Time, summer of A. D. 28. Place, Mount of Beatitudes, seven miles southwest of Capernaum.

SPECIAL MENTION.

Judge Not. This must not be understood as forbidding the judgment of the magistrate, for he is by divine appointment a revenger, to execute wrath on him that doeth evil (Rom. 13: 1-4). Nor as forbidding the exercise of judgment on offenders in the church (1 Cor. 5: 12, 13; 1 Tim. 5: 19, 20). Nor yet to forbid us, as individuals, from forming such a judgment of men as will enable us to decide on our conduct toward them (verse 6; 1 Cor. v. 11; Eph. v. 11; 2 Thess. 3: 6; Rom. 16: 17). It refers to the usurpation of the divine prerogative in judging and condemning those whom we have no authority to judge (Rom. 14); in pronouncing on matters which we are incapable of judging (1 Cor. 4: 3-5); and embraces along with this that censorious spirit which leads to uncharitable judgments, and to meddling with the faults of others when our own are as great or much greater (verses 1-5 of the lesson; Rom. 2: 1-3).

O wad some power the giftie gie us,
To see oursels as ithers see us;
It wad frae monie a blunder free us,
And foolish notion.

Dogs and Swine. The Oriental dogs are more savage than the Western, and, gathering together into groups, they make their meals mostly from garbage, being more disgusting in their habits and appearance than ours. Their characteristics were brutality and ferocity. The dog was not, in Judea, a favorite, as with us. They were tolerated as scavengers, but they lived in packs, without particular ownership, and were apt to be hateful and dangerous. They typify a very mean class of men (Phil. 3: 2; Rev. 22: 15)—the snarling, snapping, barking, hateful spirits that feed on the errors and sins of others, and are happy only as growling at whatever is better than themselves. Neither dogs nor swine were favorites with the Jews. They were generally without masters or owners, being barely tolerated as scavengers. The two kinds of animals are thus blended together as a joint type of all that was abhorrent in human character.

SCRIPTURE TEACHING RESPECTING PRAYER.

From the Bible we learn (1) that God is [illegible]

A MEDLEY.

BY MARY F. SCHUYLER.

[illegible]

How brief and fair this world of ours,
With beauty everywhere;
Singing birds in shrub and tree,
And blossoms rich and rare.
Even autumn will not break the charm,
When frosts the leaves are turning
To every shade of gold and brown—
"Ma, ma! my bread is burning."

One hour later—

The air is laden with perfume
From leaf and bud and flower,
On which the bee and butterfly
Pass many a shining hour;
And morning kisses wet with dew
To the round and blushing rose—
A scream, a fall, my heart stands still;
"The baby's skinned his nose!"

One hour later—

Oh, woman! grand thy mission here,
To cheer man's dreary life,
How sweet to him the magic words,
"Mother! sister! wife!
Although in Eden, we are told,
His long ten there thou wert—
Hark! hear that loud sonorous voice;
My husband wants a shirt.

One hour later—

"Man's life is one long blissful dream,
Made up of golden hours;
For woman travels on before
And strews his path with flowers."
These lines are from a quaint old song,
For saint as well as sinner;
There's my husband's voice again:
"Are we going to have no dinner?"

Later—

"Women are villains, one and all,"
Says Tennyson in "Maud,"
While other poets sweetly sing,
"Each woman is a fraud,"
And every cynic in the land
Scoffs and sneers about her;
Philosophers with ready wit
Say, "Life's a blank without her."

'Tis true, we women often smile,
[illegible]

NUMBER 10; OR, ANOTHER MAN'S CRIME.

BY

The Author of "The Ashwood Tragedy," "The Foxton Girls," &c. &c.

CHAPTER VIII.

[illegible]

blind. There is this about it, if the man called James Orton knows of the fraud that was practiced by Jonathan Udderzook, he is by far too valuable a person to be lightly lost sight of."

"I know that. But what do you advise me to do? or, don't you advise me at all?"

"Certainly. My advice is to put a clear-witted man upon his track and hunt him down; in other words, trail him."

"We'll do it," cried Winkle, smiting the table. "We'll do it. There's a young detective I know, the very man for our business. His name is More, and he looks as innocent as a baby. But he's deeper than the sea, and sly as a fox. More's the man for us."

"Very well. Send More to the prison, and let him get all the information that he can from the prison officials—details you know of Orton's career. Let him go back then to the time and the scene of the murder, and then let us hear the results. There was never yet a criminal so cunning as to entirely destroy the threads that connect him with society at large. Have patience and wait. But work."

A path, shaded and lonely, led somewhere.

"Yes," said Winkle rising, his eyes sparkling. "I will. Your advice shall be acted upon."

[illegible]

self-preservation—the battle waged was one of extermination.

They fought like mad men. With eyes blazing, with lips compressed, with muscles standing out like whip-cords; panting, struggling, now standing upright, now rolling upon the frozen earth in a deadly embrace, the struggle went on still apparently with advantage on neither side.

But this could not last.

Britt suddenly slipped. Before he could recover himself his antagonist had taken advantage of the accident, and the next moment Britt was thrown flat upon his back, and his assailant had clasped him tightly by the throat.

The advantage was but momentary.

As the choking fingers fastened themselves about his neck, Britt saw the hilt of a knife protruding from the breast pocket of his adversary's coat. To snatch it was the work of an instant.

The next moment he struck wildly, blindly, for he was dizzy from the terrible grasp of those strangling fingers.

The knife sank heavily into the yielding flesh. Something red and warm spurted on his face. The fingers relaxed their deadly grip; a heavy body settled slowly down upon him.

There was a groan, a gurgle, as of blood rushing, hot and red, from a wound.

The dizziness that threatened Britt now overpowered him. He knew that he was saved, but he could not rise.

The leaden, sunless sky seemed to settle down upon him. The long arms of the cypress trees danced like ghostly spirits before him. The darkness and loneliness of the grave seemed to encircle and fold him in. Sight and feeling fled away, and he lay in the gathering twilight, cold and stiff and silent as the victim whose body held him to the frozen earth.

Night came on. A mist that had hung for hours upon the wind gave place to rain. A cold, dismal sleet fell like icy tears upon the two stark faces turned upward to the skies.

How long he lay there unconscious, a prey to the night and the storm, Britt never knew. When he came to himself, a fine cold rain was falling, and it was already night. From the western wing of The Evergreens he could see the lamp-light shining from his wife's window.

Clear and white, like a star, it twinkled upon him through the blackness of the night and the storm.

With difficulty he pushed from him the [illegible]

The next moment he struck wildly.

[illegible]

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Glance All Around.

[illegible]

A Matter Needed.

[illegible]

WOMAN'S OPPORTUNITY.

Discourse by Rev. Dr. Talmage at the Hamptons.

God Made Man and Woman for a Specific Work and to Move in Particular Spheres—Woman Suffragists Fail to Vote or to Keep House.

THE HAMPTONS, Aug. 28.—"Woman's Opportunity" was the subject of discourse by the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., to-day; and his text: "So God created man in His own image, the image of God created He him; male and female created He them." Genesis i, 27. Following is the sermon in full:

In other words God, who can make no mistake, made man and woman for a specific work and to move in particular spheres—man to be regnant in his realm, woman to be dominant in hers. The boundary line between Italy and Switzerland, between England and Scotland, is not more thoroughly marked than this distinction between the empire masculine and the empire feminine. So entirely dissimilar are the fields to which God called them that you can no more compare them than you can oxygen and nitrogen, water and grass, trees and stars. All this talk about the superiority of one sex to the other sex is an everlasting waste of ink and speech. A jeweler may have a scale so delicate that he can weigh the dust of diamonds; but where are the scales so delicate that you can weigh in them affection against affection, sentiment against sentiment, thought against thought, soul against soul, a man's world against a woman's world? You come out with your stereotyped remark, the man is superior to woman in intellect, and then I open on my desk the swarthy, iron-typed, thunderbolted writings of Harriet Martineau, and Elizabeth Browning, and George Eliot. You come on with your stereotyped remark about woman's superiority to man in the item of affection; but I ask you where was there more capacity to love than in John the disciple, and Robert McCheyne, the Scotchman, and John Summerfield the Methodist, and Henry Martin the missionary? The heart of those men was so large, that after you had rolled into it two hemispheres there was room still left to marshal the hosts of Heaven and set up the throne of the [illegible] sisters played. O, if you would gather up all tender memories, all the lights and shades of the heart, all banquetings and reunions, all filial, fraternal, paternal, and conjugal affections, and you had only just four letters with which to spell out that height and depth, and length, and breadth, and magnitude and eternity of meaning, you would, with streaming eyes, and trembling voice, and agitated hand, write it out in those four living capitals, H-O-M-E.

What right does woman want that is grander than to be queen in such a realm? Why, the eagles of Heaven cannot fly across that dominion. Horses, panting and with lathered flanks, are not swift enough to run to the outpost of that realm. They say that the sun never sets upon the English empire; but I have to tell you that on this realm of woman's influence eternity never marks any bound. Isabella fled from the Spanish throne, pursued by the nation's anathema; but she who is queen in a home will never lose her throne, and death itself will only be the annexation of heavenly principalities.

When you want to get your grandest idea of a queen you do not think of Catharine of Russia, or of Anne of England, or Marie Theresa of Germany, but when you want to get your grandest idea of a queen you think of the plain woman who sat opposite your father at the table, or walked with him arm in arm down life's pathway; sometimes to the thanksgiving banquet, sometimes to the grave, but always together—soothing your petty griefs, correcting your childish waywardness, joining in your infantile sports, listening to your evening prayers, toiling for you with needle or at the spinning-wheel, and on cold nights wrapping you up snug and warm. And then at last, on that day when she lay in the back room dying, and you saw her take those thin hands with which she toiled for you so long and put them together in a dying prayer that commended you to the God whom she had taught you to trust—O, she was the queen! The chariots of God came down to fetch her, and as she went in all Heaven rose up. You cannot think of her now without a rush of tenderness that stirs the deep fountains of your soul, and you feel as much a child again as when you cried on her lap; and if you could bring her back again to speak just once more your name as tenderly as she used to speak it you would be willing to throw yourself on the ground and kiss the sod that covers her, crying: "Mother, mother!" Ah, she was the queen—she was the queen.

[illegible]

IOWA REPUBLICANS.

Gov. Larrabee Named for Re-election—Lieut. Gov. Hull Also Renominated.

Enthusiasm Manifested Over the Name of Senator Allison—Text of the Platform.

[Des Moines Special.]

The Iowa Republican State Convention closed a harmonious session on Wednesday. The delegates, of whom there were [illegible] included in the call, were all present except three. Although there was no very spirited contest as to platform or ticket, the occasion brought here the foremost men in the party in the various delegations, and occupying seats of honor upon the stage were many who have borne the burden of party work and leadership for over thirty years.

Among the notable men present were Senators Allison and Wilson, Governor Larrabee, ex-Governors Gear, Sherman, Stone, and Merrill, Congressmen Henderson, Struble, Lyman, Fuller, Holmes, and Anderson, and a very large majority of the members of the late General Assembly. The speeches were pitched to a high key of party enthusiasm. The opening by Hon. John Brennan, the eloquent Irish attorney of Sioux City, the temporary Chairman, abounded in strong argument and brilliant sallies of wit, well sustaining his reputation as an orator. A significant incident during its delivery was the effect produced by his reference to Blaine and Allison; the name of the former evoked applause, but when reference was made, incidentally, to Senator Allison, that gentleman, who occupied a prominent seat on the stage, was given a perfect ovation. This spontaneous outburst showed unmistakably the popular strength of Iowa's senior Senator within the ranks of his party.

There are no signs here that Senator Allison will have any half-hearted support in Iowa. Mr. Brennan referred to all the principal issues, dividing the parties. He sharply arraigned the Democratic party for inconsistency in resolving in favor of home rule for Ireland while denying it to the people of Dakota.

The nomination of Gov. Larrabee for a second term was carried with a shout, and in response to numerous calls he appeared and made quite an extended address. It was devoted largely to a review of State affairs, and compared the expenses of State government in Iowa with that of neighboring States. He said that in the last two years there had been a reduction of about $800,000 of outstanding warrants, and the whole amount would be wiped out by the first day of July next. He took strong grounds in favor of the prohibitory law, and said he believed the man had not yet been born who would live to see the repeal of the law.

[illegible]

Parnell, seeking to escape from a long time oppression, or the people of Dakota or other territories in this country deprived of home rule by the partisan injustice of the Democratic party.

We approve of the State administration of public affairs in Iowa, and especially [illegible]

SKETCHES OF THE CANDIDATES.

William Larrabee was born in Connecticut in 1832. When 21 years old he removed to Iowa and began a successful business career. Judicious investments in wheat and real estate were the foundation of his prosperity, which places him in a high position among the leading citizens of his adopted State. His earliest experience in politics was as an unsuccessful candidate for Congress. In 1866 he became a member of the State Senate, to which he had been re-elected continuously until two years ago, when he was elected Governor.

J. A. T. Hull, renominated for Lieutenant Governor, served in the war, and afterward conducted a newspaper at Birmingham, Iowa. Later he bought the Davis County Republican. He served for several terms as Secretary of the State Senate, and was then elected Secretary of State, and [illegible] years ago was nominated and elected Lieutenant Governor. At that time he was prominently mentioned for Governor, and although a comparatively young man his circle of acquaintances is extensive and his personal following is large.

G. S. Robinson, the nominee for Supreme Judge, was born in Illinois in 1841. He was a farmer boy, and when 11 years of age, through the accidental death of his father, was called upon to support the family. He afterward went to Iowa and resided at Brighton. When the war broke out he enlisted, and was wounded and taken prisoner at Chickamauga. He subsequently attended college and graduated at Bloomington, Ill., and also graduated in law at St. Louis. In 1871 he went to Buena Vista County, Iowa, where he now resides. In 1875 he was elected to the General Assembly and in 1881 to the State Senate, and re-elected in 1885. He was also for six years a director of the State Normal School.

Henry Sabin, of Clinton County, the nominee for State Superintendent, was born in Pomfret, Conn., in 1829. Entering Amherst College at the age of 20, he graduated with honors in 1852, and went to Iowa in 1871. He has lived in Clinton for the last sixteen years, and has always been an enthusiastic worker in the cause of education.

MARYLAND REPUBLICANS.

The State Convention the Largest and Most Enthusiastic Held for Many Years.

The Ticket and the Platform—Prominent Democrats Pledge Their Support.

[illegible]

How the Soldiers Voted.

[illegible]

Democratic Progression.

[illegible]

CLOAKS, CLOAKS, CLOAKS.

Short Cloaks, Long Cloaks, Medium Cloaks.

CLOAKS FOR BABIES, CLOAKS FOR CHILDRN, CLOAKS FOR BLUSHING MAIDENS,

CLOAKS FOR THE MARRIED, FOR THE SINGLE, CLOAKS FOR THE FALL, FOR WINTER, JACKETS FOR ALL,

Soon, at The Live Dry Goods House of

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.

The G. A. R. Re-union.

To the Editors of the Sentinel.

Allow me through the columns of your excellent paper to give to the many friends of the old soldiers and sailors in this vicinity a very incomplete account of the Reed City re-union.

We left Charlevoix on the evening of the fifth at the close of one of the most successful celebrations of the season. The stars and stripes waved from all the principal buildings and the joyous shout, the merry laugh and sweet music filled the streets of the loveliest village in Michigan, as we glided down the harbor on the steamer Friant. We were scarcely afloat on Lake Michigan when the camp songs and stories were commenced and continued until we reach Petoskey. Here we marched to the Occidental hotel where we had supper. Between supper and train time we visited friends and took in the sights of that electric lighted city.

When the train arrived and the conductor shouted "all aboard!" as is customary on that road, we found that inadequate provision had been made for the accommodation of the traveling public on such occasions. Finally we all got on board and many could stand up or sit on our heel for all the road managers seemed to care. At each station the crowd increased and the suffocation and discomfort increased in proportion. Through it all good nature prevailed and finally as day broke we reached our destination. The day and night before had been rainy and the clouds yet hung heavy, and with the muddy condition of the streets, rendered the prospects gloomy indeed.

Owing to our early arrival, there was no one to receive us or direct where to go. After a short while the order came to fall in and forward march. Now the blare of the bands, the shrill tones of the fife, and the rattle and roll of the drums awoke the echoes as we moved through the streets, where grand arches and patriotic mottoes welcomed us; but owing to the mud in the streets we took to the sidewalks and viewed the arches and read the mottoes from thence. As we moved up the street a very formidable masked battery awaited us, where six inch tiles protruded in a very threatening manner. That battery was really more dangerous than we at first thought it to be, for before the close of the encampment several men was said to have fallen close to the mouths of the tiles.

At the grounds all looked cheerless and cold. No quarters had yet been assigned us, and when our place on the plat was determined no tents were yet erected. Three tents belonging to staff officers were assigned us until such time as our tents were pitched for us. Our baggage was soon stored and we were down town for breakfast. Throughout the day nothing was done but receive posts. Towards noon the day cleared up and made all feel more cheerful. In the evening there was a dress parade, and such a parade many had forgotten, and others had never known how it was done but it served to fill the bill. Now came the question of straw for beds. The officers claimed that plenty had been ordered and could not say why it was not forthcoming. Stockman, Krebes and Miller were soon seen coming in each with a bundle on his back which settled the matter for Baxter Post.

After taps when all had retired within their tents distant flashes of lightning and the rumble of thunder, and the more dreaded roar of a fast approaching wind squall was heard. About eleven o'clock it strikes the camp with all its fury; the songs and laughter of a moment ago are now hushed and everybody is straining every nerve to hold up their tents. Fortunately the squall was of short duration and though many tents and trees went down we did not hear of any one being hurt. The camp had nicely got settled when another storm bursted upon them unexpectedly. The sons of veterans with all the bass drums they could muster perambulated the camp, pounding the drums and making the night hideous with their cry: "Are you awake!"

The features of the second day was the guard mount and grand review. After the taps the noise and racket of the first night was repeated with the addition of an occasional discharge of the ten pound parrot. The march to the grand stand on the afternoon of the second day was really a brilliant affair. The many bands with their bright instruments and gay uniforms, the flash and flutter of so many bright flags and banners and the long lines of the old boys tramping by fours in open order made the procession one worth going many miles to see. At the grand stand the programme of speeches and music was such as to call cheer after cheer, and kindle a fire of enthusiasm and patriotism that will need no extra exertions to keep burning until the next re-union. As to the speeches and speakers, all I need say is that they were all A No. 1 and of the right stripe, and such as to lead the boys to conclude that the time for the G. A. R. to go has not yet arrived.

The business of the last day was to select a place for the next re-union and the election of officers for the next year. It was Traverse City or Petoskey. The former got the plum, and Col. Roberts got the commandership.

Now since the fourth annual reunion of the soldiers and sailors of Northwestern Michigan has closed so auspiciously, let us hope that every old soldier and sailor in the district will be on hand when the time for the fifth re-union comes 'round and will be 'awake.' OLD SOLDIER.

Norwood Notes.

The Ferguson family have all gone to Chicago.

Jessie Meech who has been visiting her friends here for a few days has gone to Kansas.

Cromwell Marshall and family left on the Vernon Saturday. They go to Tacoma, Washington Ty.

There was a surprise party at Willard Spaulding's Friday night to bid good bye to Mr. Marshall and wife. A very pleasant time was reported.

Daniel Stafford was hurt Friday. While unhitching his team they ran away, the wagon passing over him. No bones were broken but he was badly bruised.

The hooker G. S. Williams, from Old Mission, loaded with fruit, ran ashore here on the reef Thursday night. They mistook this town for Charlevoix. I don't know whether that will be considered a compliment for Charlevoix or Norwood. They mistook the light at the store for the pier light at Charlevoix, and landed on the reef. Their cargo and boat will be nearly a total loss to them.

Tuesday the 6th, was the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Ezra Meech to Cynthia Finney. The intention had always been to celebrate this event, should they live to see it by a golden wedding, but owing to the scattered condition of the family at this time it was thought best to omit it. Mr. and Mrs. Meech has the congratulations of a host of relatives and friends for having safely passed, what few couples do, fifty years of married life together. Both bear their age extremely well, and it is very probable they may live to celebrate their Diamond Wedding, which will occur the 6th day of September, A. D. 1912. An invitation is extended to all. Be sure and bring your diamonds with you.

I. O. G. T.

The Grand Traverse District Lodge, I. O. G. T., held in Good Templars' hall at Bockery, Antrim county, Aug. 24th and 25th was well attended and a very interesting as well as profitable time was the result. Dinner and supper was served in the hall by the Jordan Lodge. A public meeting was held Wednesday evening, addressed by N. W. Burdick of Mancelona, and Rev. Thurston of Charlevoix, resulting in the addition of three members to Jordan lodge.

Several resolutions were adopted during the session; the most important of which was one relating to the "Local Option Law," and expressing the sentiment that we will do all in our power to rid this district of liquor saloons and drinking places in the near future.

Michigan Crops.

For September the Secretary of State has received 695 returns from 552 townships. Ninety of these returns are from 358 townships in the southern four tiers of counties. The yield of wheat is placed at 22,062,649 bushels. This total is found by multiplying the acreage in each county as returned in May by supervisors, by the average per acre, as shown by the threshers' records. The number of acres reported threshed in the southern counties is 214,217 and in the state 230,628. Independent of the record kept by the threshers, correspondents have made a canvass and report from the southern counties 1,616,908 bushels threshed from 126,-192 acres. Computing by county, as before, the probable product obtained for the state is 22,100,217 bushels or 37,568 more than found by averages obtained from the threshers' record. The quantity of wheat reported marketed in August is 752,741 bushels. Of the 1886 crop 13,808,700 bushels have been marketed to date.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

Services will be resumed at M. E. church on Sunday morning at the usual hour followed by Sunday school. Preaching in the evening at usual hour.

Tuesday evening Bible reading, Thursday evening prayer meeting.

Let us see if we can not by our regular attendance and continued interest in these services of the church make the conference year now opening the most successful in the history of this church.

Hazings from Hayes.

Mrs. Jennie Briggs, of Ionia, is visiting her parents, Thomas Murray.

Mr. Allen, of Otsego, Allegan Co., has been visiting his nephew, Oscar Tillotson, the past week.

Mr. Gregory and family, of Antrim Co., together with W. S. Baker and family, spent a few days at Cross Village, the past week.

E. J. Dunn, D. G. C., of Port Huron, organized Beulah Lodge, I. O. G. T., at Burgess, last Thursday evening, with 14 charter members. A. Ross was elected W. C. T., Morris K. Chew, Secretary, and Mrs. Mary Baker, Treasurer.

A lodge of Good Templars was organized in the Maple Grove neighborhood last Wednesday evening, with 38 charter members. Philip Howe is W. C. T.

Alex Ross was appointed Highway Commissioner in the place of Frank Kane, resigned.

Jack Sanuby is running the saw and shingle mill day and night.

Henry Ostrum is visiting his old home in St. Joseph county.

George Lewis, who spent the past year with his uncle, G. O. Scott, returned to his home, Geneva, N. Y., last Tuesday.

Go to Rosenthal's for the latest styles in cloaks.

For Sale.

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix. tf

Mortgage Sale.

Whereas, default having been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 15th day of November, A. D. 1883, executed by J. Milo Eaton and Ellen J. Eaton, his wife, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to Samuel A. Gibson, of Kalamazoo, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Charlevoix in Liber 8 of Mortgages, on page 329, on the 10th day of January, A. D. 1884, at 10.20 o'clock a. m. And whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice is the sum of Two Hundred and Seventy-six Dollars and Fifty cents ($276.50) of principal and interest, and which is the whole amount claimed to be due and unpaid upon said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings having been instituted at law to recover the debt now remaining secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage, has become operative; Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, at Boyne City, in said county of Charlevoix, that being the place of holding the Circuit Court in said county, on the 10th day of December, A. D. 1887, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, for the purpose of satisfying the amount due on said mortgage, together with costs of sale. Which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows: All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the village of Charlevoix, in the county of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan and described as follows, to-wit: Lot two (2) of Block Nine (9) in the said Village of Charlevoix, according to the recorded plat thereof.

Dated Sept. 12, A. D. 1887.

SAMUEL A. GIBSON, Mortgagee.

DALLAS BOUDEMAN,
Attorney for Mortgagee.

Probate Notice.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for said county, held at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, on the 6th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the Matter of the Estate of Hugh Miller, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John C. Miller, praying that a certain instrument now on file in this Court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, may be admitted to probate, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Milo Stever and Robert Miller, the executors named in said will, or some other suitable persons. Thereupon it is ordered that Thursday, the 13th day of October next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

(A true copy.)

JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Probate Notice.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix, holden at the Probate Office in the Village of Boyne City, on Monday, the 5th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the Estate of Isabella Wilson, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John H. Wilson praying that an administrator be appointed for said estate. Thereupon it is Ordered, that Monday, the 7th day of November, at one o'clock in the afternoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further Ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County of Charlevoix, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

(A true copy.)

JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

A special meeting of Lincoln Park Lodge, F. & A. M. No 611, of Chicago, was held recently, for the purpose of taking action on the charges of unmasonic conduct preferred against Wm. J. McGarrigle, the boodler, and a member of that lodge. Every precaution was taken to prevent the decision arrived at from being made public, even visiting brethren being informed that only members of the lodge could be admitted. The lodge unanimously voted to expel the accused member. The decision arrived at will be communicated under the seal of the lodge to the chapter of Royal Arch Masons, the commandery of Knights Templar, and the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of which he was a member, and they at their next meeting will proceed to remove McGarrigle's name from the roll of membership. Having been expelled by the blue lodge, he, by that action, ceases to be a member of all the other bodies, but each body will proceed to expel him formally, to prevent the possibility of his visiting any other chapter, commandery or other body connected with the Scottish rite.

Attention parents!!! You will find it to your interest to purchase your school supplies at F. G. Hines & Co.'s drug store.

Scholars! Go to Hines & Co.'s and equip yourselves with everything you will need to begin your studies next Monday.

An immense line of stationery just received at Hines & Co.'s. New, novel, and very cheap.

CLOTHING.

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.

My Prices are so Low that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

New Fall Dry Goods

NOW ARRIVING.

We were never before in such good condition to offer BARGAINS. Our stock is CLEAN, FRESH, and being Constantly Replenished.

We offer the choicest and most complete stock of

GROCERIES!

and our PRICES are LOWEST For BEST GOODS.

Our stock of CROCKERY is being overhauled.

Special drives in WHITE GRANITE EARTHENWARE, This Week.

J. L. HURD & CO.

ALICK ROSENTHAL, LEWIS BLOCK

CLOAKS! CLOAKS CLOAKS! CLOAKS CLOAKS!

ARE HERE!

OF EVERY DESCRIPTION!

For Ladies, Misses, and Children.

COME, COME AND SEE THEM. And see them!

Alick Rosenthal, Lewis' Block.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO.--21 | CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1887. | WHOLE NO. 930

SCHOOL BOOKS

BUY YOUR SCHOOL SUPPLIES AT HEADQUARTERS. WE HAVE EVERYTHING NEEDED IN THE SCHOOL ROOM, AT UNIFORMLY LOW PRICES.

F. G. HINES & CO.

We will furnish the new books adopted by the board at introduction prices.

Remember that we sell everything that can be called for in any of our Schools.

SCHOOL BOOKS

EMREY BROS.

Boots and Shoes for almost nothing, to close out.

We have a number of pairs of Boots and Shoes which we will almost give away as we are closing them out.

We are also going out of

CROCKERY

and have a complete assortment which must be sold

WE WILL NOT TAKE A BACK SEAT ON SUMMER DRY GOODS.

PRICES ALWAYS LOW.

IN GROCERIES and Provisions we can suit you, as we receive Fresh Goods weekly.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

We are NOT CLOSING OUT

We never did
We do not want to
We are not going to close out

WE AIM TO KEEP OUR STOCK Complete in Every Department AT ALL TIMES.

OUR STOCK OF STAPLE DRY GOODS ---AND--- BOOTS and SHOES, FOR THE FALL AND WINTER TRADE WAS NEVER MORE COMPLETE THAN NOW.

UNDERWEAR! We have a good line of Ladies', Gents' and Childrens' Underwear.

CLOAKS AT A BARGAIN CLOAKS

We keep Lime, Cement, Stucco & Plastering Hair,

We carry a full line of EVERYTHING usually kept in a first class stock of General Merchandise. We aim to merit the patronage of the prompt paying trade by keeping good goods and selling everything at a uniformly reasonable price.

Resp'y Yours.

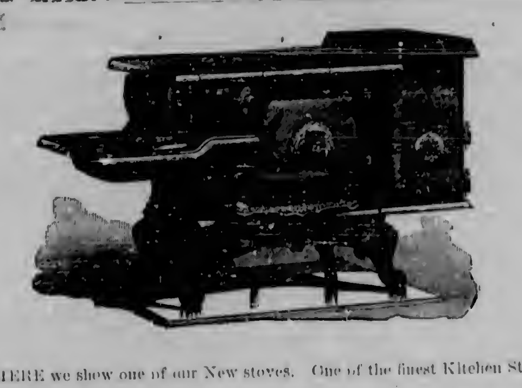
Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

YOU'D BETTER HEAR US!

LISTEN!

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $'S $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES, & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.



HERE we show one of our New stoves. One of the finest Kitchen Stoves ever made. Yes, we can safely say the finest. But we leave you to judge, come and see for yourselves. Make our store your stopping place, you are always welcome, and your welcome does not depend on your buying anything. Price and quality guaranteed on everything.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

The Best Groceries At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

WANTED!

Everyone to know that we are here and doing Business, and will do just as we agree to by one and all. We keep

GROCERIES and PROVISIONS, FLOUR AND FEED, CROCKERY AND GLASSWARE.

Choice Butter and Fresh Eggs a Specialty. Call on us or order by Telephone.

WILL SEE & CO.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year $1 50 | Six months $ 75

Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Fred Smith has his horse on the track at East Jordan.

Morris J. Stockman is at the fair with a hardware exhibit.

J. Milo Eaton went to Grand Rapids on business, Thursday.

—The M. E. church has been recalcimined and will be re-carpeted.

—Ernest Beauvais has gone to Grand Haven to accept a situation.

The Good Templars are meeting weekly in the M. E. church lecture room.

—The D. C. & E. engineer corps are at work between Petoskey and Mackinaw this week.

The county fair opened yesterday at East Jordan, and promises to be the most successful one yet held.

—Another attempt will be made at the October session of the Board of Supervisors to divide the Township of Evangeline.

—The new English game of "topsytury" consists in heading a fellow up in a barrel and rolling him down hill. The spectators get all the fun.

—We have in our office a stalk of corn eleven feet in height, which was raised on the farm of Jos. Stevens. The corn is well ripened and developed.

—Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co., the pioneer dealers, have a new advertisement in this issue. Their talk always means business in its strictest sense.

—Will Cooper and Miss Etta Ross were married at the M. E. parsonage last week Tuesday. They took the Lawrence for Milwaukee the same evening.

—The fair authorities refuse to permit wheels of fortune on their grounds and the East Jordan village corporation also frowns at that class of amusements. Good.

—Wm. Scroggie has sold his half interest in the livery business in this village to Wm. Stevens, Jr., and N. Burns, a son of Bernard Burns. Geo. Burns retains his interest.

—The feast of the Jewish New Year, called Rash-Hashona, began last Sabbath evening and lasted until Monday evening. In the Hebrew almanac it is the year 5,648.

—Perry Weed moves into his new building to-day or to-morrow. It is a neat structure, well finished inside and when filled up with goods, as it will be soon, is one of our very neatest establishments.

—Lon Brooks, the Western Union Telegraph Company's construction and repair man in the Grand Traverse region, has resigned, to accept a position with the Telephone Company at Grand Rapids.

—The Common Council has not met for two weeks, owing to absence of Trustees from town. To-morrow evening a full meeting will be held. A new Marshal will be elected and other important business transacted.

—Mancelona Herald: We received a letter from Nebraska last week asking for a paper containing Bailey's real estate list, and stating that several from that locality were thinking strongly of removing to Northern Michigan providing they could sell out for even half the money than their places cost them.

—Mrs. Henry Blakeley of Eastport, was struck by lightning Tuesday. She was standing by the back door when the bolt came and it struck her left shoulder, the electric fluid passing down her body to the ground, frightfully burning her shoulder and slightly burning all the way down her back and leg. The lightning also struck a beech tree slivering it, and the peak of the house, and leaving that, tore the shingles partly off the wing. Mrs. Blakely was thrown twenty feet, and the blood gushed from her nose and mouth, and though dazed, is in a fair way to recovery, though in an extremely delicate state of health before receiving this injury.—Elk Rapids Progress.

—Kalkaska Leader: At Reed City last week an Association of ex-Prisoners of War was organized, with a membership of 100. Judge Grencen, of this county, was elected President; L. R. Titus, of Ludington, vice president; Fred H. Miller, of Advance, Charlevoix county, secretary. The object of the organization is to bring together at the annual reunions, ex-prisoners of war who reside in northwestern Michigan. Lieut. Titus, mentioned above, was only ranked by one other soldier in length of time in rebel prisons, and was for eight months held as a hostage, under sentence of death, in solitary confinement in the basement of Libby prison, and during that long period was in constant expectation of being led out for execution. The meetings of these old prisoners of war, and their exchange of experiences and reminiscences of captivity cannot fail to be of interest.

To Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Fogg—a daughter.

—S. M. See returned from his Wisconsin visit on Monday.

W. H. Hurlbut, of South Haven, is in town for a few days.

—F. G. Hines & Co., are leaders on school books and supplies.

—Traverse City will have the next soldiers' and sailors' reunion.

—The schooner Lottie Mason is in with a load of grain for the mill.

Our Trenton correspondent is on deck again as interesting as ever.

—Miss Maude Scott of Hayes, returns to attend Charlevoix school this term.

—A large number of Charlevoix people attend the fair to-day and to-morrow.

—L. D. Bartholomew has purchased a the Emerson upright piano for Opera Hall.

—J. P. Church of Elk Rapids, has received the appointment of steward for the Northern Asylum.

—The steam barge Brittain in going out Monday, tore the telephone cable adrift at both ends.

—Levi Blanchard has re-painted his house in very artistic style, Chas. Swallow doing the work.

—Miss May Shores, daughter of Nick Shores, of Norwood, is in town for the winter term of school.

—Geo. Pappin left Tuesday for Sandwich, Ills., where he will enter the employ of O. C. Ainsworth.

—Rosenthal's store will close from 6 p. m. Tuesday, Sep. 27th, until 6 p. m. Wednesday, Sep. 28th, on account of holidays.

—A. T. Washburne & Co. have a fall announcement of interest to the trading public. See their new advertisement elsewhere.

—We inadvertently omitted to mention last week that a sister of the Newman brothers died the week previous. Charles and Harry attended the funeral.

—Campbell Bros. are erecting a new building in their ship yard in which they will build a $2,000 yawl-rigged cutter 48 feet long, for Prest. Stockbridge of the resort.

—New patterns in dress goods, cloaks, etc., also a fine line of lamps, crockery and glass ware will be sold at lower prices than ever at J. L. Hurd & Co's. Read their new "ad."

—Supt. Mulliken, of the C. & W. M. R. R., recently remarked to a citizen of Charlevoix that their line would be extended to Elk Rapids and Charlevoix at no distant day, no matter how many other roads were built.

—Elk Rapids Progress: The surveyors for the Elk Rapids and Kalkaska branch expect to reach here to-day.——President Hughart and General Freight Agent Gill, go to Pittsburg this week to look after the Elk Rapids and Kalkaska branch to the G. R. & I.

—W. P. Brown left Thursday for Pottsdam, N. Y., called there by the serious illness of his father, who is well known here. Advices yesterday from Mr. Brown announce his arrival there and the further fact that his father was slowly sinking, and could not long survive.

—During the fair at East Jordan, the steamer Friant will run excursions every day, leaving here at ten and returning leave East Jordan at two, excepting on the last day of the fair when the boat will wait until three. Round trip tickets are fifty cents, good during the fair.

—Hodge & Co., whom we recently stated would remove their harness shop to Alba, have changed their plans and will remain here. They have leased Stockman's old store building on Bridge street, and will enlarge their business. Capt. George Madison is the "Co." of the concern.

—County clerk Thatcher announces that he will send any one of the county papers one year to the first applicant for a marriage license under the new law. Now young gentlemen, get to the front, go and interview Sammy quick and select the SENTINEL, the best paper in Charlevoix county. Then settle down and be happy.

—Last Monday evening, Sept. 12th, was the occasion of the wedding of Miss Nettie B. Brainard, of Petoskey, and Mr. Alton G. Cook, of Charlevoix. About forty invited friends were present. After the ceremony, which took place at 8 o'clock, the party was served with refreshments and a very enjoyable evening followed, with many congratulations and good wishes for the newly wedded couple both of whom are well and favorably known to the people of Emmet and Charlevoix counties.

—Oxford Globe: Two friends are walking Saginaw avenue. One of them pointing to a house, says: "There's a beautiful place, but it's enough to make a man sad to look at it." "Why so?" "On account of its history; for despite its calm and serene surroundings, it was built upon the groans, tears, wailing and blood of widows, orphans, old men and struggling women." "You don't say so. Was it built by a railroad monopolist?" "Oh no; by Perry the dentist." [A brother of Dr. Perry, of this place.—ED.]

A grand opening of cloaks all the week at H. See's, at the corner of Bridge and Main streets. The ladies are cordially invited.

Charlevoix Summer Resort Items.

Miss Hunt of Chicago, a niece of Helen Hunt Jackson, is visiting Mrs. J. J. West.

Eighteen cottages are still occupied and the occupants are enjoying the finest weather of the season.

Mrs. H. P. Parmelee and son Linus and Misses Mabel Dent and Helen Burtch returned home yesterday.

Miss Rose Cody of Naperville, Ills., and Mrs. G. B. Guyles and daughter, arrived Monday and are guests of Mrs. Essie Parmelee at Breezy Point cottage.

Prof. Jones, of the State University, has let the contract to Will Francis for an $800 cottage to be erected this fall on the new addition, two lots south of Lloyd's.

Northern Michigan has a firm grip upon C. G. Townsend, of the Kalamazoo Telegraph. He thought to escape hay fever this fall, by going to South Haven, but it only took him a day to become convinced of the error of his ways and now we are sure of him every fall and we're happy in the thought.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

Remember Bible reading Tuesday evening, Prayer meeting on Thursday evening and preaching on Sunday morning and evening at usual hours. All come and welcome.

W. H. McCARTNEY, Pastor.

Baptist Church.

Services as usual Sunday morning and evening. Preaching by pastor.

Congregational Church.

Usual morning services and Sunday school next Sabbath.

At the Conference.

Resolved, That it is the duty of the members of the Methodist Episcopal church to forward the cause of prohibition by supporting the present local option law to the utmost of their ability.

General Church Matters.

The M. E. church has been re-calcimined, and will be re-carpeted.

Rev. J. T. Iddings has removed to his new charge at Reading. Mrs. Idding will remain here until Oct. 1st.

A fund is being raised for erecting a porch and vestibule on the front of the M. E. church, with good prospects of success.

Rev. Mr. Gulick, the first pastor on the Charlevoix charge, has been appointed to the M. E. church at Mancelona. Mancelona people will not regret the appointment.

Sabbath Morning there was celebrated at the Charlevoix Congregational Church the fifth anniversary of its organization, Rev. C. F. VanAuken preaching the sermon. Rev. Mr. Downs, the new pastor, is expected in about a month.

Rev. Adam Clarke, who has supplied the pulpit at Harbor Springs the past year, leaves this week to resume his course at Albion College. Mr. Clarke was given a reception by his parishioners before leaving Harbor Springs, after which he spent a few days with his parents in Marion.

In our last we announced that Rev. G. S. Barnes had been appointed to the Charlevoix M. E. Church. Mr. Barnes is a clergyman of ability and sterling Christian qualities, but the Church at Charlevoix, for reasons well known, firmly yet respectfully petitioned the Conference authorities to return Rev. W. H. McCartney. Saturday the Presiding Elder telephoned that the request of the church had been granted, and that Rev. Mr. Barnes would go to Harbor Springs. The first quarterly meeting of the new Conference year was held Sunday, Presiding Elder Sherman preaching in the morning, and the pastor in the evening, both services being well attended.

Marine Jottings.

The tug Higgie has been doing a good business in log towing up the lake this season.

The steamer Grand Rapids has changed her time of running. See new time table in this issue.

Capt. Thorpe, of the steamer Vernon, says the Champlain will probably be out next month, though she will not be fitted for passenger service until next season.

The tug Payne, owned by Capt. Rumbell, of Manistee, can't do outside towing any more, and has gone to Grand Haven for a new inspection.

The tug John Leathem, of Sturgeon Bay, was here over Sunday. She has been at Beaver Island working on the stranded schooner Milwaukee Belle. She was raised high enough to get the ways under her, when a heavy sea came and knocked her down. She was abandoned for the present.

Capt. T. D. Smith, with the tug Martin and schooner Sea Gem, is still at Frankfort, working on the engine and boiler of the propeller City of Boston, which was wrecked about 15 years ago. He has the boiler in the harbor, and at last accounts the engine was propped up ready to move. It is understood that he gets $2,000 for the job. The task has been undertaken twice before and abandoned.

The Democrats in Virginia are getting hard up and are not ashamed to own it. Hitherto they have not allowed negroes to vote at their primaries under any circumstances. But now they publicly announce to "the colored cuss from Africa" that he can cast his ballot at their caucuses this week if he pledges himself to support the nominee at the polls.—Detroit Tribune.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX. MICHIGAN.

A DREAM OF THE FARM.

There are swallows' nests in the old barn eaves,
And the swallows twitter and flit and fly,
It is the sunset in June, and primrose tints
Are crowning the hills and flooding the sky.

Katie's milking cows in the yard, down there,
And watching with dreamy, welling eyes,
The milk as it falls in the glittering pail,
And the snowy bubbles that gather and rise.

Yet, seeing only the primrose hills
And sky, at the close of the fair June day,
And little brown swallows that flit and fly
In her happy past, so far away.

And a fair girl that leans on the huge old gate
Watching with face all aglow,
A figure that comes down the dusty road
And stops there at her side to whisper low—

"Shall I fetch the pail?" It is Donald's voice
Calling to her at her self-same gate.
She wakes from her dream with a guilty start,
"So, lassie!" she says, then answers him "Wait."

He had no part in the dream she dreamt;
Her past she had buried alone to her woe;
She had made him a true and careful wife
And he had forgotten long, long ago.

Rarely there comes an evening like this,
With the subtle blending of gold and red,
And is it sin to the living—who can say—
Sometimes to dream of the long lost dead?
—Minneapolis Tribune.

WITH HIS OWN WEAPONS.

BY ISABELLA VERNON.

"What are you thinking about, Maude? You have not spoken a word for five minutes. I can't say that you are remarkably entertaining this evening."

"Am I not? And do you really wish to know my thoughts?"

"Certainly I do."

"Very well, then. No woman is satisfied with a man's devotion, even if she knows it to be genuine, if he appears to slight her in the presence of others, and I think, my dear George, that I occupied the position of a slighted woman last evening, when you devoted yourself so openly to Clara Vaughan."

"I only danced with her three times," ...

... yes—there he is, sure enough! And how handsome he is looking!"

"Humph! Women have strange ideas of beauty," grumbled George, by no means delighted with this turn of affairs.

"Oh, we don't expect you to see how charming he is," Clara flippantly answered; "it would scarcely be natural under the circumstances. But Maude and I think differently. And oh! he's put his name on my card for three dances!" And she flourished the bit of pasteboard in triumph.

George stretched out his hand for it.

"Is there room for my name there, Miss Clara?" he asked rather stiffly, not relishing her enthusiasm, and inclined to think that, after all, the "sweet girl" had considerable "coquetry about her."

"I believe there are one or two dances left," she answered with an indifference which made Maude smile, remembering how different her reception of George's attentions had been on a former occasion.

"You had better take what dances you wish before my card is filled," she said, quietly, when her lover had returned Clara's card.

"Oh, I'll attend to that after the first dance," he answered; and in another moment they had taken their places upon the floor.

Maude said nothing; but her quiet smile meant volumes.

George spoke little while dancing; he was nettled by the marked change in Clara's manner. He did not care a straw for the girl, but his vanity was wounded. He furtively watched her as she danced with Stephen Black—a singularly handsome man, he acknowledged to himself—and observed all her little airs and graces—the very arts which she had employed to please him not long ago. The moment the dance was over he seated Maude beside some of her friends and rushed off to take Clara, determined to divert her attention from this interloper. Clara, on the other hand, was bent on retaining Mr. Black by her side, and her chagrin could not be concealed when he, glad of the pretext afforded by George's approach, bowed himself away and walked across the room to Maude.

Ten minutes after, when George, ...

[illegible]

THE QUEENS OF HOME.

Rev. Dr. Talmage Preaches at the Hamptons.

Woman Has the Special Right to Comfort the Sick, to Care for the Poor and to Solicit Charities—Husbands Should Confide Their Troubles to Their Wives.

THE HAMPTONS, Sept. 4.—The Rev. Dr. T. De Witt Talmage's text to-day was from Solomon's Song, vi, 8: "There are threescore queens." Following is the sermon in full:

So Solomon, by one stroke, set forth the imperial character of a true Christian woman. She is not a slave, not a hireling, not a subordinate, but a queen; and in my text Solomon sees sixty of those helping to make up the royal pageant of Jesus. In a former sermon I showed you that crown and courtly attendants, and imperial wardrobe were not necessary to make a queen; but that graces of the heart and life will give coronation to any woman. I showed you at some length that woman's position was higher in the world than man's, and that although she has often been denied the right of suffrage, she always did vote and always would vote by her influence; and that her chief desire ought to be that she should have grace rightly to rule in the dominion which she has already won. I began an enumeration of some of her rights, and this morning resume the subject.

In the first place, woman has a special and superlative right not again going back to what I have already said—woman has the special and superlative right of blessing and comforting the sick.

What hand, what street, what house has not felt the smitings of disease? Tens of thousands of sick beds! What shall we do with them? Shall man, with his rough hand and clumsy foot go stumbling around the sick room trying to soothe the distracted nerves, and alleviate the pains of the tossing patient? The young man at college may scoff at the idea of being ...

[illegible]

... laugh; and I said to her as I looked around upon the fearful surroundings of that place: "Do you come here nights to hold a service?" "Oh, yes," she said. "Can it be possible that you never meet with an insult while performing this Christian errand?" "Never," she said, "never." That young woman who has her father by her side walking down the street, an armed police at each corner, is not so well defended as that Christian woman who goes forth on Gospel work into the haunts of iniquity, carrying the Bibles and bread. God, with the red right arm of his wrath omnipotent, would tear to pieces any one who should offer indignity. He would smite him with lightnings and drown him with floods, and swallow him with earthquakes, and damn him with eternal indignations. Some one said: "I dislike very much to see that Christian woman teaching those bad boys in the mission school. I am afraid to have her instruct them." "So," said another man, "I am afraid, too." Said the first: "I am afraid they will use vile language before they leave the place." "Ah," said the other man, "I am not afraid of that. What I am afraid of is, that if any of those boys should use a bad word in that presence the other boys would tear him to pieces, and kill him on the spot." That woman is the best sheltered who is sheltered by the Lord God Almighty, and you need never fear going anywhere where God tells you to go.

It seems as if the Lord had ordained woman for an especial work in the solicitation of charities. Backed up by barrels in which there is no flour, and by stoves in which there is no fire, and by wardrobes in which there are no clothes, a woman is irresistible; passing on her errand God says to her: "You go into that bank, or store, or shop, and get the money." She goes in and gets it. The man is hard-fisted, but she gets it. She could not help but get it. It is decreed from eternity she should get it. No need of your turning your back and pretending you don't hear; you do hear. There is no need of your saying you are begged to death. There is no need of your wasting your time, and you might as well submit first as last. You had better right away ...

[illegible]

... the flowers that grow on the top of the sepulcher brighter than the garlands which at the marriage banquet flooded the air with aroma? Yes; I stand here as a priest of the most high God, to proclaim the bans of immortal union for all those who join hands in the grace of Christ. Oh, woman, is your husband, your father, your son away from God? The Lord demands their redemption at our hands. There are prayers for you to offer, there are exhortations for you to give, there are examples for you to set, and I say now, as Paul said to the Corinthian woman: "What knowest thou, O woman, but thou canst save thy husband?"

Lastly: I wish to say that one of the specific rights of woman is, through the grace of Christ, finally to reach Heaven. O, what a multitude of women in Heaven! Mary, Christ's mother in Heaven; Elizabeth Fry in Heaven; Charlotte Elizabeth in Heaven; the mother of Augustine in Heaven; the Countess of Huntingdon—who sold her splendid jewels to build chapels—in Heaven; while a great many others who have never been heard of on earth, or known but little, have gone into the rest and peace of Heaven. What a rest! What a change it was from the small room, with no fire and one window, the glass broken out, and the aching side, and worn out eyes, to the "house of many mansions!" No more stitching until 12 o'clock at night, no more thrusting of the thumb by the employer through the work to show it was not done quite right. Plenty of bread at last. Heaven for aching heads. Heaven for broken hearts. Heaven for anguish-bitten frames. No more sitting up until midnight for the coming of staggering steps. No more rough blows across the temples. No more sharp, keen, bitter curses. Some of you will have no rest in this world. It will be toil, and struggle, and suffering, all the way up. You will have to stand at your door fighting back the wolf with your own hand, red with carnage. But God has a crown for you. I want to realize this morning that He is now making it, and whenever you weep a tear He sets another gem in that crown; whenever you have a pang of body or soul ...

[illegible]

PITH AND POINT.

A TIN spread—the sky.

TROUBLE in grease—explosion in a lard factory.

PLAYS a leading part in life—the blind man's dog.

THE bald-headed man is just as well satisfied with a back seat as with a front one—at church.

A POSTAGE stamp is like a youngster. It always sticks to business better after it has been thoroughly licked.

WHEN a man loses money faster at poker than he makes it in his business, something is going to drop soon.

VIOLET—Ma, how do people know that it's a man in the moon? Mother (sadly)—Because it's always out nights.

LADY (to friend calling)—You won't mind my going on with my work while you are here, will you? Then I sha'n't feel I am wasting time.

OLD MAID—Is this parrot for sale? Bird-dealer—Yes, mum. "Can't he talk?" "Not yet, but he understands everything you say to him.—Texas Siftings.

AN Indiana man drew a revolver on a doctor, and the doctor drew a box of pills on the Hoosier. Both fired at once, and neither can recover.—Newman Independent.

HEIRESS—I am afraid it is not for me that you come here so often, but for my money. Ardent wooer—You are cruel to say so. How can I get your money without getting you?—Boston Courier.

SOME man who would invent a new swear-word that would be as expressive and effective as the old favorites, and at the same time would not be wicked, would surely fill a long-felt want.—Somerville Journal.

MRS. YERGER—Matilda, who was that ...

[illegible]

REMINISCENCES OF PUBLIC MEN.

BY BEN: PERLEY POORE.

Martin I. Townsend, a jovial old Representative from the State of New York, declared that when the Democrats passed the Electoral Commission Bill, they did so with the expectation that it would place Tilden in the White House; but they woke up the wrong man. This Mr. Townsend used to illustrate by relating an anecdote of an old Dutchman, who lived up in Troy many years ago, and who went down to New York to find his son Yawpy. To give the Dutchman's own words:

"One time my son Yawpy went down upon New York and upset a grocery. So Yawpy could not come home no more. By and by I wanted to see Yawpy, so I goes down upon Troy and takes a sloop for New York. When we gets to New York they tied up the sloop to the dock, and I starts to find Yawpy. I went up a side hill to a street I think they call the Broadway. When I gets there I looks on both sides of the street for Yawpy. When I had gone a mile, maybe, in the hot afternoon, who should I find but Yawpy, sitting upon a stoop fast asleep. So I goes up upon the stoop, and there he sits mit his head hanging back and his mouth wide open. I says: 'Yawpy!' but Yawpy does not wake up. I puts me mouth close to Yawpy's ear and hollers: 'Yawpy!' and still 'Yawpy!' and he don't wake up yet. Den I takes Yawpy by his collar and shakes him just so hard as ever I could, and I hollers so hard as you could hear me maybe half a mile, and den Yawpy he wakes up. And den, so help me shmoke, it was not Yawpy!"

Edward Everett used to tell a story about himself. He was once traveling in Essex County, Mass., before the days of railroads. He was traveling in a crowded stage, which seemed too full ...

[illegible]

... large excess of food is consumed, not only by well-to-do people, but also by those in moderate circumstances, and this excess consists mainly in meats and sweetmeats, which are expensive, as well as physiologically injurious when consumed in too large quantities."—Foote's Health Monthly.

Mugwumps.

"Mugwump" is a term applied to an Independent Republican. On the nomination of James G. Blaine for the Presidency, June 6, 1884, a strong opposition developed among disaffected Republicans naming themselves "Independents." The movement originated June 7 at a meeting in Boston and was promptly taken up in New York and elsewhere. The supporters of the regular nomination affected to believe that the Independents set themselves up as the supervisors of their former associates. They were termed "dudes, Pharisees, and hypocrites," and on June 15, 1884, the New York Sun designated them "Mugwumps." The word was forthwith adopted by the press and the public, though for a time its meaning was problematical. It appeared that the term had been in use colloquially in some parts of New England, notably on the Massachusetts coast. Thence it had been carried inland, and was used in large type as a headline in the Indianapolis Sentinel as early as 1872. This, on the authority of Mr. F. H. Keenan, who was at the time editor of that journal, and had picked up the word in New England. In this instance it was used to emphasize some local issue. After this the word seems to have lain perdu until resuscitated by the Sun on March 23, 1884, when it in turn applied to a local issue at Dobb's Ferry, N. Y., printing "Mugwump D. O. Bradley" in large type at the top of one of its prominent columns. After the Independent movement was started, the word was launched on its career of ...

[illegible]

SLAPPING A KING'S FACE.

Rebuke of a Woman Who Was Insulted by Charles XII.

Charles XII. of Sweden has been represented as naturally indifferent to women. He abjured at a very early age all intercourse with the sex. The Kings of Sweden, at that period, were of easy access on the part of their subjects. They practiced the condescension, but within proper limitations, of sometimes even engaging in their convivial pastimes.

Charles XII., on his accession, enjoyed this jocund prerogative with all the vivacity of his very early youth; and one evening, but a little time before he was to leave Stockholm to open his military renown, he went to sup with a Dalecarian gentleman residing at the capital.

Charles was then only in his fifteenth year, and loved to talk with this brave descendant of the preserver of his great ancestor, Gustavus Vasa, with all the fervor of his own royal patriotism. But the young King's romance did not end there. He had seen a beautiful serving maid from those very mountains, the wildest regions of his kingdom; he had seen her once or twice attend in the rooms, while a guest under the simple roof of his brave subject. He had seen and admired her in silence.

It happened that evening that she opened the door for him. She was alone and he was unaccompanied. He could not resist the temptation, for she blushed at the sight of him and exhibited emotion. The King thought there was more than kingly awe in this, and, gently taking her hand in his, proffered a kiss. He expected she would gladly accept it. But he was mistaken; she drew back. He thought she was only coy and attempted to force the kiss. She struggled; then, bursting from him, with words of ...

[illegible]

NOVEL USES OF PAPER.

The Thin Substance Taking the Place of Wood for Many Purposes.

There are few things that cannot now be made out of paper. Its adaptability is astonishing, and the wildest speculations as to its future are excusable when we reflect upon the present uses of this material. As the delicate substance can be made to serve for steel or iron, it is not difficult to understand how paper is for many purposes now taking the place of wood. Mention was before made of a new mill in Sweden for the manufacture of paper from moss. Paper of different thicknesses and pasteboard made of the white moss have already been shown, the latter even in sheets three-quarters of an inch thick. It is as hard as wood, and can be easily painted and polished. It has all the good qualities, but none of the defects of wood. The pasteboard can consequently be used for door and window frames, architectural ornaments, and all kinds of furniture.

Paper made from strong fibers, such as linen, can, in fact, be compressed into a substance so hard that it cannot be scratched. As houses have been made of this novel building material, so almost everything requisite to complete and furnish a residence has since been manufactured of paper. After the Breslau fireproof chimney, it is quite possible, for instance, that cooking or heating-stoves can be made of similar materials. These paper stoves are annealed—that is, painted over with a composition which becomes part of the paper, and is fire-proof. It is said to be impossible to burn them out, and they are much cheaper than iron stoves. Bath-tubs and pots are made in the same manner by compressing the paper made of linen fibers, and annealing. The tubs, we are assured, will last for ever and never leak. Placed on the fire they will not burn ...

[illegible]

KIDDER'S DIGESTYLIN

DETECTIVES

INVENTORS

WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN

MEMORY

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

PILES

SLICKER

PAYNE ENGINES.

WRITE FOR CIRCULAR AND TELL US WHAT YOU WANT.

B. W. PAYNE & SONS,

Drawer 1130, ELMIRA, N. Y.

Nervous People

Hood's Sarsaparilla

JONES PAYS THE FREIGHT

Celebrated Eye Water

PATENTS

OPIUM

RRR RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

WORDS OF PRAISE.

TREATING THE WRONG DISEASE.

THE OUTGROWTH OF A VAST EXPERIENCE.

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, No. 663 Main Street, BUFFALO, N. Y.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
Established, 1869.
WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.
CHARLEVOIX, SEPT. 21, 1887.

Every time a county treasurer skips from Ohio to Canada the democratic party of that state loses a vote.

"Little Jake," of East Saginaw, controls nearly 400,000,000 feet of pine, and don't weigh an ounce more than he did when selling paper collars at ten cents per box.

Chicago Journal: Ex-Senator Ferry, of Michigan, failed five years ago for $1,500,000, and by hard work has paid off $1,200,000 of his indebtedness. That is the kind of Napoleons of finance that are needed.

Mr. Powderly now states that he will not resign before the expiration of his term, which has still another year to run, unless it should be intimated to him that such a course would be acceptable to the Knights.

So far as the presidential campaign of 1888 has progressed, it appears to be principally between Mr. Cleveland and the Grand Army of the Republic. Exactly why he has labored so energetically to become disliked by that body is not apparent. Some of his advisers ought to explain.

What is believed to be the greatest oil and gas well in the world has just been "struck" at North Baltimore, O. The oil is sent up into the air with tremendous force. "Everything for half a mile from the well is dripping with oil," says the report, and "it is estimated that 20,000,000 feet of gas and 2,000 barrels of oil are escaping daily."

The St. Louis Republican (Dem.) has been severely scoring Rev. Sam. Small for saying, in a sermon, that as a Democrat he had lied for the party, and stole ballots and stuffed ballot boxes for it. The Republican properly suggests that Sam's confession ought to send him to prison. Suppose Sam should turn State's evidence; what would become of the Democratic party?

The Chicago News has the following [illegible]

[illegible]

Northern Michigan News.

Greilick Bros. mill at Sutton's Bay is shut down for the season.

The road between Leland and Good Harbor will be gravelled.

The Walker cranberry marsh at Glen Arbor will yield 1,000 bushels of berries this year.

About $400 was pledged at the Bay View Conference for the aid of the Bellaire M. E. church.

We understand that Mr. Frank J. Lewis is to open the Lake View house Elk Rapids, in a few days.

Mancelona still occasionally uses its rink for roller skating. Probably the l[illegible] place in the United States to do so.—Ex. No. Charlevoix has a few of that kind left.

Sault Ste. Marie, or the "Soo," as it is commonly called, was visited by a very destructive fire Friday night which consumed several buildings. The loss was heavy as very little or no insurance was placed on the property.

The Business Committee of the Grand Traverse County Agricultural Society have decided that it was not advisable to make arrangements with the driving club for races at the fair. Hence, there will be no horse trotting on that occasion.

Record: The tabernacle at Bay View has been completed, by the putting in of side doors which are balanced and which are run up with a pound or two of pressure. The back doors swing from the top and on special occasions can be swung up for a canopy and seats put under.

On the 14th, fire was discovered by the night engineer of the water works in Caldwell & Londen's wagon shop, in Traverse City. Owing to the inflammable material inside, the entire building was soon on fire, but the streams of water soon had the fire under control. The loss will be quite heavy.

Boyne Falls items from the Enterprise: E. P. Myers has returned from the south after an absence of five weeks.—Mr. and Mrs. Marsh start on a visit to friends in Northern Michigan, next Saturday.—A. H. Carpenter has a position as clerk in G. A. Dillenbeck's drug store at Cadillac.—The furnace at Boyne [illegible]

[illegible]

The press of Petoskey is making loud complaint of the filthy condition of that town.

Cheboygan business men have organized a dry dock company with a capital of $50,000.

[illegible]

DRY GOODS!

New Goods arriving by every Boat from the Best Houses of East and West, to our already complete stock of Dry Goods.

Our Winter CLOAKS,

are being manufactured expressly for us and will be here in about a week, when we will show as good a line as you ever saw here

Cor. Bridge & Main sts.

VERY RESP'Y,

B. SEE.

Probate Order.

[illegible]

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

Standard Time

Charlevoix and East Jordan.

STR. NORTH STAR, ... CAPT. MEL THOMPSON

Leaving Charlevoix at 6:30 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. and returning leave East Jordan for Charlevoix at 3:30 a.m. and 4 p. m., touching at intermediate points both ways.

Charlevoix and Boyne City.

[illegible]

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE.

[illegible]

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS.

[illegible]

Bank of Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security

[illegible]

Security in Banking

This Bank Invites

This Bank Will

Parties Seeking

Investment Notes,

[illegible]

WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK MICH. $[illegible] TO INVEST IN BONDS

[illegible]

For Sale.

[illegible]

Land for Sale.

[illegible]

CROSS & SONS,

Day and all kinds of Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.

Charlevoix, Mich.

CHARLEVOIX Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres; John Nicholls, Vice Pres., F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Henry Bennett, John Nicholls, A. R. Upright, O. H. Wood, A. Butters, A. Fox, F. A. Smith.

CAPITAL, ... $25,000
SURPLUS, ... 2,000

The liabilities of Stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art. [illegible] Sec. 40 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. Superior facilities for the transaction of every legitimate branch of Banking business extended to our customers on terms as favorable as are consistent with safety.

Drafts drawn direct on the leading commercial cities of the world in large or small amounts. Money to loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest. We respectfully solicit your patronage.

CORRESPONDENTS.

NATIONAL PARK BANK	NEW YORK.
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK	CHICAGO.
NAT. CITY BANK	GRAND RAPIDS.
DETROIT NAT. BANK	DETROIT.

160 Acres in MARION

Township For Sale at a Bargain. Terms to suit.

MONEY TO LOAN ON Approved Real Estate Security.

THEODORE R. CHAPIN, Boyne City.

JOHN CONNOR, Fashionable

Boot and Shoe MAKER.

Hand Sewed French Calf Gaiters, $5; Men's Kip and Calf Boots, $4.50; Half-soling, 50 cents. Defy competition.

All Work Guaranteed.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,

ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR,

—ON—

Chalevoix Summer Resorts.

I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.

I employ only first-class workmen, both Carpenters and Painters.

Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention

J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller

Offer a

Mammoth Stock

OF

BOOTS, SHOES

and other

FOOT WEAR,

--AT--

LOWER PRICES

Than can be found elsewhere in the County.

We have just secured a FIRST-CLASS

SHOEMAKER,

And will make Repairing a specialty.

We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.

NOTHING SHODDY.

Fox & Miller.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter.

RIFENBURG MILLING CO.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealer

3 EXTRA GRADES OF

FLOUR

Feed, Corn Meal, Graham

We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL

Litney & Steimel

LIVERY,

And Feed Barn

Charlevoix, Mich.

Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the

BEST BOATS!

The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are sufficient testimonials of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references.

I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the

LEAST MONEY!

All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.

LEAVE ORDERS

with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.

Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.

J. BEAUVAIS.

BETTER THAN

MEDICINE!

KEEP YOUR

FEET WARM.

You can't enjoy good health unless you clothe the feet properly.

D. SHERWOOD & CO. have just received the finest line of Fall and Winter

BOOTS & SHOES

ever brought to Charlevoix. Give them a call.

A. J. McLEOD,

Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at

Wholesale or Retail

All kinds of

FRESH MEATS,

SALT PORK,

SMOKED & SALTED

HAMS,

Dried and Smoked BACON, DRIED BEEF, Bologna, Head Cheese, Sausage.

Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.

Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.

A. J. McLEOD.

Washburn & Ackert, FOUNDREYMEN, MACHINISTS, And Manufacturers of The Charlevoix Plow.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN

Boiler Works!

Builder and Manufacturer of

BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.

Sheet Iron Work given special attention.

MARINE WORK a specialty.

HENRY BARTH, Prop.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Butters' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PAILTHORPE & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBE[illegible], Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence Main st. Charlevoix, Office hours 8 to 10 a. m. 6 to 8 p. m.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Dexter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Postoffice.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 293, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 101, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 136, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.

President—Byron Sea.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—R. [illegible]
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Iddings, W. A. Brown and C. Y. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Geo W. Crouter, R. W. Miller, S. M. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Herdan.

All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Every convenience for the traveling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
Lorenzo Cook, Manager
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE.
W. C. Newman, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and Dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. S. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. B. and J. S. [illegible], Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. (Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.)

DENTIST

N. J. PERRY, Dentist. Office in Wood's Drug Store, Charlevoix, Mich.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card for Petoskey.

IN EFFECT, JULY 1887.

Leave Going North	*8.05 a m, 5.02 p m, 8.05 p m
Leave Going South	8.50 a m, 2.15 p m, 10.55 pm

* daily † daily except Saturday.

Michigan Central

The Direct Route Between Mackinaw City & Detroit Jackson, The South and East.

Trains leave Mackinaw City 8 a m daily except Sunday and 10 p m daily arriving at

Detroit	6.00 p m and 11 a m
Jackson	10.30 p m and 11.20 a m
Toledo	10.55 p m and 1.45 p m
Buffalo	6.15 a m and 8.07 p m
Cincinnati	6.35 a m and 6.40 p m

WAGNER PALACE SLEEPING AND PARLOR CARS.

W. H. JOHNSTON, Mich. Pass Agt., Grand Rapids. O. W. RUGGLES, G. P. & T. Agt., Chicago.

DULUTH, SOUTH SHORE AND ATLANTIC R'Y.

"SOO-MACKINAW SHORT LINE."

Only Direct Route to Marquette and the Iron and Copper Regions of Lake Superior.

Traversing the most Picturesque portion of Upper Michigan through a country unequalled for

Hunting, Fishing, Etc.

Two Through Express Trains daily in each direction to which are attached

NEW, ELEGANT and COMMODIOUS OBSERVATION PARLOR CARS & WAGNER SLEEPING COACHES

Tickets over this route are on sale at all principal ticket offices. Full information as to rates etc., maps and folders will be furnished. Address

E. W. ALLEN, Gen Pass. and & Tkt Agt, Marquette, Mich.

HER LOVE REVEALED.

"Of course, I shall never dare to speak another word to her!" said Robert Dale.

"But why not, Bob? Only tell me why not?" cried out little Florrie, climbing up the beams of the barn-loft, so that her head should be just on a level with that of her tall brother, and clasping him around the neck with both arms.

Robert was a tall handsome young athlete, at that moment busy in mending one of the cogs of a steam-plough with deft and ready touch.

His dark-brown hair hung in heavy masses over his broad forehead; his hazel eyes were full of latent fire, and there was a world of character and resolve in his mouth and chin. One might easily excuse Florrie Dale for being proud of such a brother as that.

"Don't you see, Florrie?" said the young giant, gently putting away the hands that interfered with the delicate screws he held. "I never asked her to be my wife while she was a poor and dependent school-teacher here. How can I have the face to do it now that she has inherited a fortune?"

"But you were just going to ask her, Bob—you know you were!"

"Ah, but how is she to know it?"

"Why, by instinct, of course," decided Florrie.

Dale shook his head with rather a sad smile.

"No, my little girl," said he, "I do not choose to be mistaken for one of the great army of fortune-hunters. I've lost my opportunity, and there's an end of it. It's my own fault."

Florrie burst into tears.

"Oh, Bob!" said she.

Robert Dale stroked down her sunshiny head, not without a sparkle of moisture in his own eyes, but he smiled a wan smile nevertheless.

"I've often read that pride was a sin," sobbed Florrie, "but I never comprehended it before. Oh, Bob, I could almost hate you, if I didn't love you so dearly!"

And Florrie scrambled down from her perch on the beam and ran away, with both hands clasped over her face.

Dale looked after her.

"Poor little darling!" he said to himself. "It is but a scratch on the surface of her tender young heart. On mine it is a deep wound seared in with red-hot iron. God help me!"

It was one of those romances which occur in real life oftener than one has any idea of. Mabel Wayne was a pretty young school-teacher in Abbott's village, whose life of poverty had suddenly been turned into riches by the bequest of a distant and nearly-forgotten relative.

To Mabel herself it seemed like a golden dream. How often she had built castles in the air, whereof the foundation was, "If I were rich!" And now the dream had come true, the pinnacle of the air-castles were actually shining athwart the sky of life, heretofore such a cold and gray expanse!

"And now," said Mabel to herself, "I can fulfill all my heart's desires."

She took counsel with no one. [illegible] now and then an hour with a gray-haired old lawyer might [illegible] under that head; she simply did as she pleased.

"They've seen the new house Mabel Wynne is buildin'?" said one neighbor to another. "It's a regular Aladdin's castle! With the trees cut away from the lake, and drives made through the woods, and heathen statters set up here and there, and a row o' glass houses to raise furrin plants, and ripen grapes and peaches before their time."

"I don't approve of no such notions," solemnly answered the other. "To my mind, it's a clear setting of Providence at defiance. Grapes in March! And orange-trees a-blossoming in this 'ere climate, with the snow on the ground! Mark my words, there won't be no good come of it!"

• • • • •

It was a bright September evening when Mabel Wynne stopped at the Dale farm-house.

Florrie rushed to meet her, and greeted her with hugs and kisses innumerable.

"Dear, dear May!" she said; "why haven't you been to see us before?"

"Why haven't you been to see me?" retorted Mabel with the piquant, playful manner which was one of her greatest charms. "That is the question, I should think?"

Florrie's eyelashes dropped; instinctively she turned to her brother.

Robert advanced to her rescue, offering Miss Wynne his hand with an excellent imitation of composure.

"Because, Mabel, your time has been so much occupied," said he. "I told Florrie that things were changed—that you could hardly be expected to have leisure to devote to her prattle."

"How did you know that things were changed?" cried Mabel, with a resentful flash in her violet eyes.

"My own common-sense told me so."

"Was that the reason you haven't been to see me?"

"One of the reasons."

"Oh!" said Mabel, with an indescribable intonation of voice, and fixing her eyes upon his with a sudden questioning glance, which he was only too thankful to evade by looking the other way. "That was all that you cared for your old friend—eh?"

"If I could be of any real practical use to my old friend——"

"You can," briefly interrupted Miss Wynne.

"Tell me how, and I shall be at your service."

Florrie put her arms around her friend's neck, whispering softly:

"This is like old times, May!"

"And I shall want Florrie, too," added Mabel, "to help eke out my own inexperience. A man's judgment and a woman's taste! May I count on both of you?"

"On me, certainly," said Robert Dale.

"You might know that I would be ready to help you," cried Florrie, almost inclined to be aggrieved.

"Then will you both come up to 'The Glen' to-morrow at ten o'clock?"

"That's the name of your new fairy palace?"

"Didn't you know it?"

Robert smiled.

"I didn't ask many questions," said he.

"Yes, it is called 'The Glen,'" she answered.

Mabel Wynne stayed and spent the evening at the Dale farmhouse, where she and Florrie sang sweet duets to the accompaniment of Robert's violin. They talked of old times and old friends, and when at last Robert returned from seeing Mabel home, Florrie clasped her hands gleefully.

"Oh, Bob," she cried, "isn't it nice to have Mabel here once more?"

And Bob's smile did her heart good.

The next day, however, things assumed a new aspect. Robert and Florrie walked up through the wood to the beautiful new house, whose stained-glass casement commanded so rare a view of hillside, woodlands, and distant winding river. Mabel was standing on the portico.

"Now come in," she cried radiantly. "Walk through all the rooms with me. Here is the library—I want Robert's idea about fitting that up—and here are the drawing-rooms. Florrie and I must decide about these; for, to tell you the truth"—and she colored pinker than a rose—"I am going to be married!"

Florrie started back, with a little exclamation; Robert stood calm and quiet as one of the marble statues in the vestibule.

"Married!" Florrie cried; "and not to confide in me! Oh, May!"

"Tell me," said Mabel, "shall we furnish the drawing-rooms in blue and silver, or pink and gold? And shall my rooms be the south ones, or the suite looking out over the river? And Bob must have the vestibule furnished to suit a man's taste. I shouldn't like to have my husband criticise them when he comes. Will you do this for me, Bob, because of our old friendship? Oh, don't look so solemnly at me! I know I am asking a good deal, but I thought I could depend on you."

"You can," he answered quietly.

"Come out and look at the new sun-dial on the south lawn," added Mabel. "Florrie has run upstairs to see the river from the observatory. We won't wait for her, because, Bob, I want to tell you a secret."

"Wouldn't your husband be the proper one to confide in, May?" he asked.

"In this case, no, Bob," she cried. "Listen to me. I love this man with all my soul—this husband that is to be—and he loves me."

"Naturally," observed Robert, setting his teeth.

"But he does not dare to tell me so. He thinks, don't you see, that I am an heiress. Well, so I am; but I am a woman, nevertheless, and I love him! Is my wretched money to part us? If so, I'll fling it all into the ocean, and begin life anew as a beggar-girl. Now, Bob, what shall I do? It is for this that I sent for you to come here. Answer me quickly."

"Tell him all," said Robert huskily. "For God's sake do not break his heart for so trifling a cause as this!"

Mabel's cheeks crimsoned, her eyes fell to the ground.

"I have told him," she murmured, "within this hour. Oh, Robert, Robert! have I said too much?"

"My May, my own darling!" cried Dale. "And to think that this miserable, false pride of mine failed to [illegible] of your virtue!"

[illegible] down from the [illegible] marble sun-dial, [illegible] were measured off [illegible] appropriate it [illegible] division of time!— [illegible] sitting side by [illegible], and there was [illegible] that betrayed [illegible] our secret, [illegible] of joy. [illegible] "is it Bob?" [illegible] else than Bob?" [illegible] sweet eyes full

[illegible]

The Chapel Pastor in Rural England.

[illegible]

Thousands Say So.

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Dr. G. W. Crouter.

A Walking Skeleton.

Mr. E. Springer, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., writes: "I was afflicted with lung fever and abscess on lungs, and reduced to a walking Skeleton. Got a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which did me so much good that I bought a dollar bottle. After using three bottles, found myself once more a man, completely restored to health, with a hearty appetite, and a gain in flesh of 48 lbs." Call at Dr. G. W. Crouter's and Crouter & Harris' Drug Store and get a free trial bottle of this certain cure for all Lung Diseases. Large bottles $1.

FOR LAME BACK, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents.

SHILOH'S COUGH and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

SHILOH'S VITALIZER is what you need for Constipation, Loss of Appetite, Dizziness, and all symptoms of Dyspepsia. Price 10 and 75 cents a bottle.

CROUP, WHOOPING COUGH and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

DAN'L S. WAY,

Photographer.

In Bradbeer's Gallery.

Photographs of all sizes taken.

Old Pictures coped and enlarged.

CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

W. H. FRANCIS

FURNITURE —AND— JOBBING SHOP,

Will also do

Contracting & Building,

in Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.

I keep in my shop a full set of hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc. on short notice.

Shop on South Terrace,

Opposite Sheriff Bershar's residence.

MILLINERY,

FANCY GOODS,

DRESS-MAKING.

We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.

DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.

ALDRICH SISTERS.

Ingleside Building.

C. H. Maddaugh,

MERCHANT TAILOR.

I have just received a fine line of Samples of first class Fall & Winter Tweeds. Call and look them over.

Fine Samples of

OVERCOATINGS!

now awaiting your inspection.

Call and see me, Satisfaction Guaranteed.

CHARLEVOIX

Manufacturing Co.

Charlevoix, Mich., Manufacturers of

Sash and Doors,

Blinds, Mouldings etc.

NEWELL Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails kept in stock.

Window & Door Frames made to order.

All Kinds of

Building Material

Kept constantly on hand.

PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS,

Furnished on application.

Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building

Correspondence solicited.

New JEWELRY AND SILVER WARE.

I have just received a very fine stock of Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc which I will sell at Prices lower than the same goods can be purchased outside.

Did it ever occur to you that by patronizing home Merchants you were benefitting yourselves?

All classes of Repairing done quickly.

C. R. BELLINGER.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S

LIVERY STABLE

CHARLEVOIX.

The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.

Drivers furnished if desired. Rates Low

Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

W. A. REYNARD,

Has just received at his Fruit Store in the Lewis Block, a choice line of

Vegetables and Fruits

OF ALL KINDS,

TO WHICH OTHERS WILL BE ADDED IN SEASON.

I will also keep in stock a full line of

Tobaccos and Cigars.

Butter and Eggs a Specialty.

Farming Lands

500,000 ACRES

Of Splendid

MICHIGAN LANDS

For Sale By The

G. R. & I. R. R.

50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.

These lands are timbered with beach and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets

By Water and Rail

And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.

The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the center of the grant. The part of Mich. [illegible] in which these lands are situated is

Not a Wilderness by any Means.

[illegible]

Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.

Send for English or German Pamphlet. Address W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner, GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.

TITLE PERFECT.

For Finest

JOB WORK,

Patronize The

Sentinel.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY.

A NOVEL INVENTION! REQUIRES NO COOKING

For Collars, Cuffs, Shirt Bosoms and fine Laundry purposes, prepared by a New Process. The Celluloid Starch has no equal, look for our name and trade mark and take no other.

SOLE MANUFACTURERS.

Will not stick to the iron or blister the goods, easy to use, makes your linen look like new at home. Ask your grocer for Celluloid starch. It is pure and economical.

HUMPHREYS'

DR. HUMPHREYS' BOOK Cloth & Gold Binding

144 Pages, with Steel Engraving, MAILED FREE. Address, P. O. Box 1810, N. Y.

[illegible]

HOMEOPATHIC

[illegible]

SPECIFICS.

Sold by Druggists, or sent postpaid on receipt of price.—HUMPHREYS' MEDICINE CO. 109 Fulton St. N. Y.

STOVES!

AHEAD AGAIN!

THE Round Oak Heating Stoves.

NEW STYLES

Cook Stoves!

Saws & Axes

Job and Tin Work.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

F. A. COCHRAN & CO., (Successors to PERRY WEED.)

Druggists and Pharmecists,

A FULL LINE OF

Drugs and Medicines

For Prescription Use.

PATENT MEDICINES, SOAPS, PERFUMES, TOILET ARTICLES, CIGARS, STATIONERY.

Pure unadulterated Liquors for medical purposes.

We buy for LOWEST CASH rates and sell as low as the lowest.

Your Patronage Respectfully Solicited.

M. S. MOULTON,

WATCHMAKER & JEWELER,

Charlevoix, Mich.

Personal Attention given to Watch Repairing.

Key-wind Movements changed to Stem-wind and warranted as good as the best.

JEWELRY Repairing done in the best manner.

Having had 30 years experience I am confident I can give the best of satisfaction

"MARVELOUS PRICES!"

BOOKS FOR THE MILLION

Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. [illegible]

[illegible]

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.

We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $4.00 [illegible] $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

FRANK E. WOODS

Bath & Barber Rooms

Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS.

Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.

If you want a quiet place to get a shave, hair-cut or bath call and see me.

JAY L. PRICE.

NEW SHOP!

All kinds of

Blacksmithing,

At the Shop in the Foundry Building.

Horseshoeing a specialty.

ALL WORK GUARANTEED.

M. SCOTT.

WANTED!

Potatoes, Onions, Apples, Peaches and Blueberries.

We have an old established trade and can place stock to best advantage. Consignments solicited. Correspondence invited from shippers. Stencil and shipping tags furnished.

W. H. THOMPSON & CO.

Commission Merchants,

No. 166 South Water St, CHICAGO, - - Ill.

Reference—Felsenthal, Cross & Miller, Bankers, Chicago, Ill.

JAS. A. GELLICK,

Dealer in

Choice Wines,

Fine Liquors

EXCELLENT CIGARS.

We call Special Attention to our

Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES.

We also keep continually on draught

Milwaukee Export and lager Beer.

Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN

THE NEWS RECORD.

A Summary of the Eventful Happenings of a Week, as Reported by Telegraph.

Political, Commercial, and Industrial News, Fires, Accidents, Crimes, Suicides, Etc., Etc.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

POLITICAL.

Massachusetts Prohibitionists Nominate Candidates.

THE State Convention of the Prohibitory party, held at Worcester, was the biggest delegate gathering ever held by the party in Massachusetts. It was composed of 857 delegates, representing 190 cities and towns. Its proceedings were animated from first to last by an intense bitterness against the Republican party. W. H. Earle, of Worcester, was nominated for Governor; Dr. John Blackmer, of Springfield, for Lieutenant Governor; Amos E. Hall, of Chelsea, for Secretary of State; J. H. Kilborn, of Lee, for State Treasurer; E. M. Stowe, for Auditor; and Allen Coffin, of Nantucket, for Attorney General. The platform accuses the liquor men of bribing Legislatures and murdering its opponents; declares against licensing and local options; insists on the necessity of a third party; declares that the Democratic party makes no pretensions in the direction of prohibition, and that the Republican party does nothing else, and, in conclusion, it demands the immediate repeal of all license laws and the submission of a constitutional prohibition amendment to the people. William H. Earle, the candidate for Governor, is a Granger and a Sovereign of Industry, is a raiser of small fruits, and has been a dealer in agricultural tools and seeds. He is 56 years old, and a fluent talker.

Greenback and Union Labor Convention.

THE State Convention of the Union Labor and Greenback party of Pennsylvania met at Williamsport. The Union Labor platform, adopted at Cincinnati last February, was unanimously adopted, as was also a resolution denouncing the alleged utter disregard by corporations of the State Constitution. Charles S. Keyser of Philadelphia was nominated for Supreme Court Judge and H. D. Bunker of Hollidaysburg for State Treasurer.

COLLIDED ON A CURVE.

A Fast Mail Train Overtakes and Crashes Into a Passenger Train Near Creston, Iowa, with Fatal Results.

A DISPATCH from Creston, Iowa, says "the engine of a fast-mail train going west, which follows immediately after passenger No. 3 running in the same direction, crashed into the Pullman sleeper of the passenger train while running about twenty miles an hour, causing the instant death of an infant child and the serious injury of several people. The infant was with its mother, Mrs. Mosher, wife of Rev. A. E. Mosher, of Creston. Following are the victims: Mrs. Mosher, both legs broken, arms and breast scalded and head badly cut, no hope of recovery. B. Brougham and wife, Charlotte, Mich., both slightly cut and scalded. S. J. Gray, of Greenfield, Iowa, a one-armed man, hand badly cut. K. C. Fullerton, of Chillicothe, Wis., back injured. Sarah Grueninger, of Cleveland, Ohio, dangerously scalded. Anna Morrell, of Red Oak, Iowa, badly scalded. J. M. Bailey and wife, of Michigan, backs hurt. Colonel C. S. Smith, of Harrisonville, Mo., back and hip wrenched. Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Cook, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and two sons were on the train. Both sons are badly hurt. The youngest, aged 4 years, was scalded, it is feared fatally."

CENTRAL AMERICA.

General Uprising Feared in Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras.

LATE Panama advices report that a revolutionary force under Bahona surprised and took possession of Fort La Union, San Salvador. The garrison was betrayed by two of the officers. The fight between the revolutionists and the Government troops is reported to have been very severe. A general commotion is feared in Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras.

The National Game.

THE record of games won and lost by the teams of the National Base-Ball League is as follows:

Clubs.	Won.	Lost.	Percentage.
Detroit	63	37	.630
Chicago	55	41	.573
New York	57	44	.564
Philadelphia	56	45	.554
Boston	53	45	.540
Pittsburg	43	54	.443
Washington	39	58	.402
Indianapolis	29	71	.290

The American Association schedule of games is appended:

Clubs.	Won.	Lost.	Percentage.
St. Louis	84	28	.750
Louisville	64	47	.576
Cincinnati	67	50	.572
Baltimore	61	50	.549
Athletic	52	58	.472
Brooklyn	51	58	.467
Metropolitan	35	75	.318
Cleveland	30	81	.270

Minor Telegrams.

EX-GOV. WILLIAM AIKEN, of South Carolina, died at Flat Rock, S. C., aged 81.

FIRE destroyed the costly machinery of the Barren Fork Coal Company, near Somerset, Ky., causing a loss of $100,000.

WIND and rain storms of extraordinary violence swept portions of New York and Massachusetts, destroying crops and trees, unroofing houses, and blowing down barns, etc. A man at Worcester was dashed against a barrel and killed. Several persons were partially paralyzed by lightning. Hailstones of a great size fell at Saratoga.

EAST.

A NEW YORK dispatch announces the death of William Logan Harris, the New York resident Bishop of the Methodist Church. The Bishop was taken ill with heart trouble a month ago when in Liverpool. He sailed immediately for New York, and had been under medical care ever since. He died surrounded by his family. Deceased was born at Troy, Ohio, in 1817. Studied in Norwalk Seminary and was admitted to the Michigan Conference in 1837. He has been a member of the Michigan, North Ohio, and Central Ohio Conferences. From 1848 to 1851 he was principal of the Baldwin Institute, Berea, Ohio, and from 1851 to 1860 was Professor of Chemistry and Natural History in the Ohio Wesleyan University. He was elected and ordained a Bishop in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1872. Bishop Harris was a prominent abolitionist, and took an active part in the movement preceding the late war.

ACCORDING to the schedules filed at New York, the liabilities of Henry S. Ives & Co. are $17,666,175; nominal assets, $25,664,268. Their equity amounts to $400,000.

WEST.

A MOST infamous attempt to wreck a train for the purpose of robbery is reported from Lebanon, Ohio. As a train of eleven cars with 500 passengers was returning from a visit to the spectacle of "Rome Under Nero," at Cincinnati, the engine encountered an obstruction made up of ties and fence-rails. By good fortune the train had stopped only a short distance before and let off some passengers, and had not obtained sufficient speed to be seriously injured when the obstruction was reached. The passengers were shaken up, but no one was hurt.

TWO MONTHS ago the law-abiding people of Fairmount, Ind., used dynamite in blowing up a building intended to be used as a saloon. The owner erected another house, but the people on Thursday night tore it down, piling the material in the street.

GOVERNOR ADAMS and General Crook reached an agreement at Meeker, says a Denver telegram, by which two companies of United States troops will be kept on the line between the Uintah reservation and Colorado, for the protection of settlers and to keep the Utes out of the latter State.

WHEN the clerks of the Darke County, Ohio, Treasury entered the office Monday morning they found the doors of the money vaults standing open, and investigation showed that the vaults were empty. Over $30,000 are missing. Treasurer Simon was arrested, but gave bonds for his appearance when wanted in court.

THEY have a gas well, just struck, in Alcona County, Michigan, which shoots flames a hundred feet above the derrick, and its roar is heard three miles.

A MT. VERNON (Ill.) special says: "A horrible accident happened at Dr. Bernard's, about twelve miles south of this city. He was having his wheat threshed with a portable engine and thresher, when the boiler suddenly exploded, and killed two men named J. H. Mitchell and William Bumpus, Jr. T. J. Williams had his skull badly fractured, and will probably die. Thomas Bernard had his leg and arm injured, and Theodore Bumpus was badly scalded, but both will probably recover. Pieces of the engine, weighing fifty and one hundred pounds, were blown a distance of a hundred yards. Smaller pieces were blown half a mile." A dispatch from St. Thomas, Dakota, says the threshing engine of Robert McAdams exploded, killing Frank Stephenson, of Winnipeg; fatally injuring Halvor B. Johnson, and tearing an arm from James McAdams. The engineer escaped with slight injuries.

THE trustee of E. L. Harper & Co., of Cincinnati, reports an appraisement of the assets of the firm, according to which they are worth $104,202. The liabilities are $1,462,741, besides liabilities as indorsers to the amount of $1,232,073.

WASHINGTON.

THE total coinage executed at the mints of the United States during the month of August was 9,282,100 pieces of the value of $3,303,300. Of this amount $60,000 was half-eagles, $2,710,000 silver, $195,000 dimes, and $78,300 minor coins. The total gold coinage was $60,000 and total silver $3,165,000.

MRS. CLEVELAND has declined the invitation of Mayor Hewitt and other officials of New York to deliver certain flags to the fire department of that city. She excuses herself by pleading unwillingness to assume that she, as the wife of the President, ought to participate so prominently in a public ceremony in which he takes no part.

SOUTH.

FLEMINGSBURG (Ky.) dispatch: "Charles Coleman committed an assault on pretty Nettie Sweeney, a prosperous farmer's daughter, near Clay Lick, Mason County. Coleman was brought here for safe keeping. Sunday morning 100 friends and relatives of Miss Sweeney, including her father and mother, arrived in this city, went directly to the jail, overpowered the jailer, and taking Coleman to the bridge in the rear of the Baptist Church hanged him to a cross-beam."

JOHN EASTMAN, a colored teamster, attacked W. H. Coffman, a foreman at Brunswick, Tenn., and was subsequently set upon by Coffman's friends, riddled with bullets, and drowned in the river. Several arrests were made.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., is excited over the abduction of a 14-year-old girl named Lily Carter by Joe Hawkins, a well-known citizen.

JACK TURNER, leader of a Kentucky vendetta, has been killed. He had been a leader for twenty years, and numerous murders had been charged to him.

DICK BUCKALEW, a Georgia outlaw, was shot and killed by a Sheriff's posse near Rome.

A SAN ANTONIO dispatch says that Bell Bros., the largest jewelers in Western Texas, have failed. The liabilities are about $30,000 and assets $10,000. The principal creditors are in New York, St. Louis, New Orleans and Chicago.

IN the past year in Charleston, South Carolina, over 6,000 earthquake-wrecked buildings have been repaired or rebuilt, and 271 new buildings erected. The money expended in the work amounted to $4,300,000.

POLITICS.

THE Iowa State Democratic Convention assembled at Des Moines on Thursday, the 1st inst., and made the following nominations: For Governor, Maj. T. J. Anderson; Lieutenant Governor, J. M. Elder; Supreme Court Judge, Charles S. Fogg; Superintendent of Public Instruction, H. W. Sawyer. Following is a synopsis of the platform:

It "commends the fidelity of President Cleveland to the obligations of his high trust, and congratulates the country upon the economy, courage, honesty and patriotism of his administration;" approves the civil-service policy; commends the "efficiency of the Pension Department;" demands of Congress a remission of tariff laws in the interest of equal taxation, and favors retaining its internal revenue taxes; welcomes to our shores the liberty-loving people of all lands; approves the efforts of Gladstone and Parnell in behalf of the cause of Ireland; declares "the vigorous prosecution of faithless officials and those who have corrupted them now being conducted by Democratic prosecuting officers in New York and Chicago a hopeful sign of reform of public morals," and demands that the same measure of justice visited upon bribery of local boards should be visited upon the defense when committed in State and national legislatures; favors the repeal of the present prohibitory liquor law and the substitution in its stead of a local option and carefully guarded license law, with a minimum license fee of $500, for the better control of the liquor traffic.

A WASHINGTON paper thinks it probable that a measure of tariff reform will be presented to Congress this winter, with the full support of the administration. "The President, the Secretary of the Treasury, and Speaker Carlisle," the paper says, "have been considering the matter since Congress adjourned."

THE substance of the two reports of the Civil-Service Commission concerning the resignation of G. A. Webster, a clerk in the Chicago Custom House, is published. Webster was asked by the Collector to resign, and did so; but his case was taken up by the Chicago Civil-Service Reform League, and upon its statement the matter was referred to the commission. The report or opinion of Messrs. Oberly and Lyman strongly censures the action of the Collector in forcing Webster to resign. Mr. Edgerton, the other member of the commission, contends that the charges made against the Collector were "not of that substantial and definite character which could give the commission any legal right to act upon the complaint, or impose upon it any duty of investigation." With the Collector's denial that Webster's resignation was demanded for political reasons, Mr. Edgerton says, "the investigation should have stopped, for there was nothing for the commission to do." The Commissioner insists that the purpose of Webster in appealing to the League, and the League's purpose in taking up the case, was "to discredit a Democratic administration," and he contends that the leagues and associations, "which are too essentially political in their character and purposes, should concede to the President and his party some honesty of purpose."

THE Republican State Convention of Massachusetts is called to meet at Tremont Temple, Boston, September 28.

THE arrival in Washington of Congressmen Randall and Scott, of Pennsylvania, has given a fresh impulse to the talk of expected agreements among the Democratic leaders on some method of tariff and revenue reform.

LABOR.

THE labor holiday was kept in Chicago on Monday, the chief feature of the celebration being the grand procession. In the long line were representatives of the various unions, in the following order: Delegates to the Trades Assembly and the Building Trades Council, the Horseshoers' Union, the Horse-nail Makers, the Iron-molders' Union, the Cigarmakers' International, the Typographical Unions of Chicago and the town of Lake, the Boxmakers' Assembly, and the Shoemakers' Assemblies (Knights of Labor), the Pullman Assemblies, the Plasterers' Union, the Bricklayers' and Stonemasons' Union, the Hod-carriers' Union, the brickmakers, the Granite-Cutters' Union, the carpenters' delegates, unions, and assemblies, the plumbers, gasfitters, tin and sheet-iron workers, lathers, picture-frame workers, glass bevelers, the Phœnix Assembly, and the vessel-unloaders. The number of men in the procession was estimated at 15,000. About 40,000 people attended the picnic at Ogden's Grove. The Socialists were conspicuous by their absence.

GENERAL.

THE Distillers and Cattle-Feeders' Trust, called the Whisky Trust for short, is now thoroughly organized to restrict production and advance prices. About $10,000,000 worth of distillery property is represented in the scheme.

A NEW YORK dispatch says "there are now several good reasons for believing that Jay Gould will acquire, within a very short time, not only the telegraph, but Mr. Mackay's Commercial cable as well, and the thousands of miles of land lines that Mr. Mackay practically owns. Negotiations looking to a union between the Gould and Mackay interests have been in progress for some time. There is, therefore, every prospect that Mr. Mackay's broad scheme of a big cable and telegraph competition in the interest of the general public will go the way of smaller and earlier enterprises."

THE losses by fire in the United States and Canada during August were $8,317,500, against $13,000,000 for the same month last year.

THE visible supply of grain is reported as follows: Wheat, 30,687,129 bushels; corn, 6,830,850 bushels; oats, 4,734,085 bushels.

FOREIGN.

THE Irish National League meeting at Ennis, Ireland, on Sunday, ended without the expected riot. Ten thousand people assembled, but the hall at which the meeting was to be held was guarded, and the procession halted and speeches were made from carriages. A troop of hussars caused the crowd to return to Ennis, where another speech was made. They were followed by the troops and police, and finally dispersed quietly.

A THEATER took fire at Exeter, England, during a performance, and was almost totally destroyed. A London dispatch says:

The fire started in the flies during the fourth act of the play. When the flames were discovered a drop scene was lowered to prevent the current of air from increasing the blaze. After this was done the actors and stage hands threw open a door to make their escape when the draft caused the flames to burst through to the drop scene and ignite the woodwork of the gallery. The flames overtook the bindmost of the unfortunate people, who were wedged in the corridor and stairway, and literally roasted them alive. There was no escape for them, the fire being at their backs, and a compact immovable mass of human beings in front. The firemen reached the upper windows and took out all of the people they could find, but most of them were dead, and many others died soon after they were taken out. The surgeons in the hospitals revived a few persons who were thought to be dead from suffocation, but by 4 o'clock in the morning nearly a hundred corpses laid in rows on the floor, and these did not comprise the total number of the dead, as a great many bodies were burned to ashes in the theater. Some of the dead were simply suffocated and not at all mutilated or burned. The occupants of the dress circle escaped without injury, the injured and dead being confined to the pit and the upper circles. The building was destroyed. One hundred and thirty bodies are known to be inside or out of the theater walls thus far. Of these 100 were men and boys and thirty women. A score or more of the injured were taken to the hospital and a large number were taken to their homes.

THE French Government and press are pleased with the success of the experimental mobilization of an army corps. The opinion prevails, it is said, that if France had been equally ready in 1870 there would have been no Sedan.

GREENWAY, SMITH & GREENWAY'S Bank, at Warwick, England, has failed. The bank was established a century ago, and had the highest reputation for soundness.

MARKET REPORTS.

NEW YORK.
Cattle	$4.00	@ 5.50
Hogs	5.50	@ 6.25
Wheat—No. 1 White	.81	@ .81
No 2 Red	.80½	@ .81
Corn—No 2	.50½	@ .51½
Oats White	.35	@ .40
Pork—New Mess	15.50	@ 16.00
CHICAGO.
Cattle—Choice to Prime Steers	5.00	@ 5.25
Good	3.50	@ 4.25
Common	3.00	@ 3.50
Hogs—Shipping Grades	4.75	@ 5.50
Flour—Winter Wheat	3.75	@ 4.25
Wheat—No. 2 Red Winter	.71	@ .71½
Corn—No. 2	.40½	@ .41½
Oats—No. 2	.24	@ .24½
Butter—Choice Creamery	.20	@ .21
Fine Dairy	.17	@ .19
Cheese—Full Cream, cheddars	.10¾	@ .11¼
Full Cream, new	.11	@ .11½
Eggs—Fresh	.13	@ .14
Potatoes—Choice, per bu	.70	@ .75
Pork—Mess	15.50	@ 16.00
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—Cash	.70	@ .71
Corn—No. 3	.42½	@ .43½
Oats—No. 2 White	.27	@ .28
Rye—No. 1	.44	@ .45
Pork—Mess	14.75	@ 15.25
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	.69½	@ .70
Corn—Mixed	.39½	@ .40
Oats—Mixed	.24	@ .24½
Pork—New Mess	14.75	@ 15.25
TOLEDO.
Wheat—Cash	.74½	@ .75
Corn—No. 2	.40½	@ .41½
Oats	.26	@ .26½
DETROIT.
Beef Cattle	3.50	@ 4.50
Hogs	3.75	@ 4.50
Sheep	4.00	@ 4.75
Wheat—No. 2 White	.78½	@ .79
Corn—No. 2	.41½	@ .45½
Oats—No. 2 White	.29	@ .29½
CINCINNATI.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	.71	@ .72
Corn—No. 2	.44	@ .45
Oats—No. 2	.26½	@ .27½
Pork—Mess	14.75	@ 15.25
Live Hogs	4.75	@ 5.50
BUFFALO.
Wheat—No. 1 Red	.88½	@ .89½
Corn—No. 2 Yellow	.49	@ .50
Cattle	4.00	@ 4.75
INDIANAPOLIS.
Beef Cattle	3.50	@ 4.75
Hogs	5.00	@ 5.51
Sheep	3.00	@ 4.00
Wheat—No. 2 Red	.70½	@ .70½
Corn	.41	@ .41½
Oats—No. 2 Mixed	.25½	@ .26
EAST LIBERTY.
Cattle—Prime	4.00	@ 4.25
Fair	3.50	@ 3.75
Common	3.00	@ 3.25
Hogs	5.20	@ 5.75
Sheep	4.00	@ 5.75

THE EXETER DISASTER

Details of the Burning of the Theater Royal, at Exeter, England.

The Galleries Literally Packed with Mangled and Blackened Bodies.

Scores of Others Piled in Ghastly Heaps on the Criminally Constructed Stairway.

[Cable dispatch from London.]

There are still many things to be cleared up yet before it can be understood here how so many score of people were incinerated in the Royal Theater in Exeter. Although in the reports from the scene of the calamity only one exit from the gallery is mentioned, the architect of the edifice says that there were three—as he says, "broad and palatial." From the very latest and most authentic reports which have reached here it is clear that many of the victims were suffocated, and not burned to death as has been stated. The number of victims still remains uncertain. It may never be known absolutely, but the loss of life is at least 150 and it may possibly be as high as 200. Nine-tenths of those who perished were occupants of the gallery, the others being from the pit and the upper boxes. Not quite five-sixths of the victims perished in the staircase leading from the gallery to the street, the only means of exit open from the gallery. It was of stone with stone walls and had an iron railing running along on one side. It had four distinct turns and was in fact a spiral descent. The result was that as people madly rushed down they became hopelessly jammed and crushed at each turn. In their frantic attempts to free themselves the limbs of some appear to have been torn off, and in other cases fractured. At each bend or angle was found a pile of charred human remains. A high post about half way down the winding passage was another fatal obstruction to the free passage of the terror-stricken crowd. But for the windows in the staircase very few, indeed, could have escaped. One of these opened upon a leaden roof and the other overlooked the street. Several climbed out and leaped to the ground, a distance of fourteen feet, or were rescued by fire escapes. Out of 190 persons known to have been in the gallery, very few escaped by the door. Surprise and indignation are expressed that in a modern building there should have been but one exit from the gallery and that of such an unsatisfactory character.

The victims were mostly working people. Daylight revealed an appalling sight. In a shed at the back of the London Hotel the dead bodies were laid in rows of about twenty each awaiting identification. Crowds flocked to Guildhall as early as six o'clock for tickets to admit them to the yard to look for missing relatives and friends. While the melancholy work of viewing the bodies went on the police were continually bringing in shapeless human remains. By degrees the shed floors of adjoining stables were filled with the mutilated trunks, and the limbs discovered as the work of search proceeded were laid out on straw in the open yard.

In only a very few cases can the bodies be identified by their countenances. In one corner of the yard is a heap of calcined bodies and burnt rags. The scenes in the inclosure were most harrowing. Women fainted as they recognized by some familiar token their lost ones, and their lamentations were heartrending. Among the last of the bodies brought in was that of a father, beneath whom was found his child, only a few weeks old. The position of the arms showed that the poor man was doing his best to save the infant when he fell. The bodies of women are in some cases only to be distinguished by their wedding-rings. As the search proceeded it became only too evident that the loss of life was not confined to the gallery occupants. Lives were lost in the pit, where a terrible crush took place, and in the upper circle. Many charred bodies were recovered from the gallery saloon and second circle saloon. The victims had apparently become blocked in rushing for the balconies.

The charred remains of twenty persons were discovered in one heap. A mother, father, and child were found clasped in one embrace. Several whole families numbering from two to five lost their lives.

The number of persons severely injured is sixty, and it is feared that the death list will reach 140.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE THISTLE.

So much has been written of the yacht Thistle, whose Captain intends trying his best to carry away the America's cup, that not a little curiosity is evinced by the general public to know what the Captain looks like and who he is. Capt. Barr's enthusiasm over the success which the Thistle has scored is decidedly pronounced. Capt. Barr is a typical specimen of the seafaring fraternity, measuring about five feet eight inches in height, is broad shouldered and thick-set. He was born in Glasgow, Scotland, forty years ago. He is a versatile talker, but when it comes to scientific talks of the points of the Thistle he is unusually quiet, keeping what he knows to himself.

AROUND THE WORLD WITH $30.

The Remarkable Story of a Nine-Year-Old Boy's Adventures.

[Wilmington (Ohio) special.]

A 9-year-old son of Hiram Taylor mysteriously disappeared about thirteen months ago. He was an unusually bright child, not worse than the average boy. He hoarded up his money, read books of travel, and was passionately fond of horses. Search was made, but all traces of the child appeared lost. One day last week a letter was received by Mr. Taylor from the lost boy. It bore the date of Cape Town, Africa, and recited that, having $30, the boy had resolved to "go around the world." He had left Wilmington on a freight-train, stolen his way to Columbus, paid his fare to Philadelphia, and beat his passage to New York, where he found no difficulty in getting on board of a ship. He said he was in fine health, had been well treated, and was about to sail for Hong Kong. Thence he would go to San Francisco, then come home. He neglected, purposely perhaps, to give the names of the vessels on which he had sailed.

THE WORLD OF BASE-BALL.

Detroit Now Has a Good Lead in the League Championship Race.

The White Stocking's Bad Luck on Their Eastern Trip—How Will the Fight End?

[CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.]

The Eastern trip of the Western League clubs which has just ended has proved a somewhat disastrous one for the Chicago Club, in that they are now farther behind the Detroit Club in the League pennant race than they have been for six weeks past. Detroit has played good ball; there can be no question as to that, but it has also been lucky, very lucky, for while the White Stockings have encountered wretched weather that has caused the postponement of several games which they were reasonably sure of winning, Detroit has not lost a single game postponed, and its players were never in better condition for a race than they have been upon this trip. At this writing Chicago and Detroit are playing their last series of the year, upon the Detroit grounds; and upon the result of these depend, to a very great extent, Chicago's chances for the pennant.

The sluggers were never in better form. Their two crack pitchers, Getzein and Gruber, are quite as effective as anybody's pitchers, while the big batters are hitting the ball unmercifully. No matter how many runs the opposition may make, the heavy hitters seem always able to pound out a greater number. Just at this time, when all the wiseacres were predicting their downfall, the Detroits are playing by long odds the best ball seen on League diamonds this year. Their Eastern trip has been a round of successes, and Detroiters predict that their team will increase their lead after their return home.

The Chicagos left home three weeks ago a tie with their revals. But the trip has turned out somewhat badly. They lost two games out of three in Pittsburg, two out of three in New York, one of two in Washington, and one of the two championship games played in Philadelphia.

A year ago this date the outlook was much brighter for Chicago. Captain Anson's men had won 70 games and lost 24, while Detroit had won only 68 and lost 27. Even then Detroit came near beating Chicago out. Now the shoe is on the other foot, and the champions have the uphill before them.

During the team's Eastern trip Anson signed a new player, of whom he thinks particularly well. His name is Robert Pettitt, and Chicago paid the Wilkesbarre (Pa.) Club $500 for his release. Pettitt is a blonde, with blue eyes and a small, reddish mustache, and is built after the race-horse style of Pfeffer and Van Haltren. He is about 21 years old. Before he joined the Wilkesbarre nine he used to play with the Waterburys in the Eastern League. Manager Mack, of the Wilkesbarre Club, in speaking of the new man, says: "Pettitt is the best general player I ever saw. He is a cracking good pitcher and backstop, and as a short-range fielder he is ahead of them all. I think him Denny's equal at third, and as a base runner he has not an equal in the International League. He has been with us nearly two months, and in all that time he has never been caught stealing a base, although he is purloining them right along. He is a terrible left-handed batter, but when occasion requires it he is equally effective with his right. I have no hesitation in saying he will make a great hit in the Chicago nine."

Captain Anson has decided to play Pettitt in the right field for the present. When the reorganization of the club comes next season, as it surely will, the youngster will probably be found in the infield.

President Spalding, of the Chicago Club, is evidently not worried as to the final outcome of the pennant race. A correspondent found him in his office, at 108 Madison street, the other day, just after he had returned from his Eastern vacation trip. He said:

"We are in the best position, under the circumstances, that a club could occupy. We are making a sharp, stern race. The responsibility of leading the league is a severe and wearing one. We shall go to the front in good time."

"Do you want the Chicago Club to win the pennant again this year?"

"Yes, sir; and for the next fifty years, if it can. We've had the pennant six out of eleven years, and we're going to keep it as a permanent fixture if we can. I'll take the alleged risk of thereby injuring the game. It pays to be champion, and I'm so well satisfied with the receipts that we shall keep right on capturing pennants. Why, I'm more confident this year than I was last that we shall end the season at the head."

"Why so?"

"One reason is because of the exemplary habits of our boys."

"Have you seen any newspaper allusions to a nigger in a wood-pile, referring to the Chicago Club?"

"Yes; these insinuations come annually. They generally begin with a declaration that Chicago doesn't want the championship this year. Then follow intimations that Anson will play so as to throw the pennant to this or that club. All this is absurd. If we were to sanction any such policy the League wouldn't survive a season. Why, take John R. Day, Mr. Soden, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Beach, Mr. Nimick, Mr. Hewitt, Mr. Brush and the men who are responsible for the existence of the League—do you suppose we would countenance any attempt or suggestion of barter? No, sir; every game must be played on its merits, and both clubs must play to win, or good-by to honest ball-playing."

NOTES AND COMMENT.

The attendance at forty-two League games in Boston was 201,000. In cold figures, Bostonese have paid $115,000 to see the Bostons play ball.

Carruthers' folks are trying hard to induce him to retire from the diamond and go into business in Chicago. They'll provide the capital if he will drop base-ball, and—quit sporting.

If the fight should be close at the wind-up and Chicago ahead, McCormick, of Pittsburgh, says he will do his level best to knock out the champions in the final four games with Pittsburgh.

President Nick Young says he has had less trouble with and complaints about Powers than any other umpire. Even Detroit is beginning to like him.

The Pittsburghs have not yet won a game from Getzein, Baldwin, and Whitney, while Clarkson, Radbourn, and Boyle have been easy marks.

George, O'Day, Shaw, Gilmore, Conway (Boston), Morris, McCormick, Healey, Boyle, Baldwin (Chicago), Baldwin (Detroit), have all pitched in more losing than winning games.

"Buck Ewing did not impress people favorably here as Captain of the New York nine. He repeatedly willfully committed infringements of the rules, and kicked without cause. He lacked the bearing and dignity of ex-Capt. Ward."—Boston Exchange.

Some of the Chicagos can do something else well besides play ball. Tommy Burns is a very fine pool player, and Anson, Williamson, and Clarkson are crack billiardists.

Dan Brouthers failed to make a hit in the three games Aug. 18, 19, 20, a thing that has not happened to him before this season. He got three bases on balls, however.

Miller is the one player Pittsburgh brought into the League there is no division of opinion about. All admit that he is one of the great catchers of the profession.

Heatin, the "Allentown Wonder," who is with the Detroits, is a smooth-faced, ruddy-cheeked young man, who has an out-curve that looks like a rainbow.

The Bostons and Chicagos will be compelled to play the three postponed games of last week somewhere in the West while the former are on their next Western trip.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for September 18—"Solemn Warnings."

The text for the lesson on the above date is found in the seventh chapter of Matthew, the thirteenth to the twenty-ninth verses. Time, A. D. 28, in the summer. Place, Mount of Beatitudes.

SPECIAL MENTION.

The strait gate.—A narrow, difficult gate. The word is not the same as straight. The idea of narrowness is preserved in our use of the word straits to indicate a passage either in the mountain, or from one sea to another, as the Straits of Gibraltar. The strait gate is the spirit of real and hearty allegiance to Jesus Christ, by which we enter into him. It is the patient continuance in well doing described in Rom. 2: 7, as the condition of entrance into eternal life. It was too strait for the rich young man described in Matt. 19: 16-22. It is not because the gate is difficult to find, but because we are unwilling to find and enter in through this gate, that there are few who enter. (Ecclesiastical Commentary.)

The life test.—The infallible test of all religious teaching is its practical result in the lives of those that receive it. The answer to modern eulogists of Buddhism and Confucianism is India and China; the answer to the papal claim of infallibility is Spain and Italy; the answer to the eulogists of "pure reason" and a Bible overthrown is Paris during the Revolution and Paris during the Commune. New England is the best refutation of those that sneer at Puritanism; and Christendom, contrasted with the heathen world, is a short but conclusive reply to all advocates of a universal and eclectic religion. (Abbott.)

Eastern floods.—A traveler writes: "It so happened that we were to witness one of the greatest calamities that have occurred in Egypt in the recollection of any one living. The Nile rose this season three feet and a half above the highest mark left by the former inundation, with uncommon rapidity, and carried off several villages and some hundreds of their inhabitants. Their cottages, being built of earth, could not stand one instant against the current; and no sooner did the water reach them than it leveled them with the ground. The rapid stream carried off all that was before it; men, women, children, cattle, corn—everything was washed away in an instant, and left the place where the village stood without anything to indicate that there had ever been a house on the spot." (Burder.)

The Scribes.—The scribes (sopherim) date as a distinct body from the period of Ezra. The name is derived from sepher, or "book," and means "scripturalists," those who explained and copied the law. Their functions were to copy, read, amend, explain and protect the law. The teaching of the scribes was narrow. (Farrar.)

Christ as a Teacher.—He was not reared at an Athens; no porch, or academy, or lyceum opened its gates to His footsteps. He was the son of a carpenter, in an obscure village of a rural district, in a despised province of the world; and when He read the Scriptures to His neighbors they said, in astonishment, "How knoweth this man letters, never having learned?" He travels not beyond the limits of His native land; He is a radiator, not a reflector of light. (Bishop Thompson.) Such is Christ as a teacher. When has the world seen a phenomenon like this? A lonely, uninstructed youth, coming forth amid the moral darkness of Galilee, even more destinct from His age and from everything around Him than a Plato would be rising up alone in some wild tribe in Oregon, assuming thus a position at the head of the world, and maintaining it for eighteen centuries by the pure self-evidence of His life and doctrine. Does He this by the force of mere human talent or genius? If so, it is time that we begin to look to genius for miracles, for there is really no greater miracle. (Bushnell.) Christ's words have a character essentially simple and practical. His object is to pervade the human soul, to establish Himself in it, to save it. He knows human nature in its universality, and what it will be in future generations; His object is to produce upon it an effect at once positive, general, durable. He chooses the ideas, He employs the images, suitable to His design for the regeneration and salvation of all. (Guizot.)

CONNECTING LINK.

We come now to the close of this famous Sermon on the Mount. The points touched are (1) the citizens of the new kingdom, (2) the principles of the kingdom, (3) the spirit of its subjects, (4) relations of the subjects to one another, (5) encouragement to seek and enter that kingdom, and (6) warning against being a deceiver of others, or being deceived by others. Christ concludes the whole discourse with a contrast between true and false disciples; between those who take care to apply to their life and practice the truths which He had laid down, and those who do not. He thus makes prominent, in the conclusion, the great truth announced in the beginning and carried through the discourse, namely, that a right disposition of heart is essential in all things. (Neander.) In the conclusion, the principle of judgment is brought in to enforce all that has been said; character is brought to the test of deeds, not words; and a final note of warning and promise, equally mingled, assures the hearers that as they sow, so shall they reap; everlasting life from living faith in Christ, destruction from pursuing their self-will. (Stier.)

THE IMPORTANCE OF MERE EXTERNAL RELIGION.

Vs. 21-23. Every one. He widens his application to include false hearers as well as false teachers. Lord, Lord. This outward honor, though with zealous profession, is utterly vain. Kingdom of heaven. This new spiritual life. Doeth the will. A confession which prompts to humble and careful obedience is the best test of Christian faith and life. Many. See Matt. 25: 11, 12, 41; Isa. 48: 1, 2; Luke 6: 46; 13: 25; Rom. 2: 13. To me. These verses are full of the assumed divinity of Christ, flashing forth specially from the expressions, "that saith unto me," "Lord, Lord," "my Father," "by thy name," "then will I profess," "depart from me." In that day. The day of judgment. See Ch. 11: 24; Luke 10: 12; 2 Tim. 1: 12; Jas. 1: 22. Prophesy.... cast out devils.... mighty works. All good in themselves, and the highest kinds of Christian work, but vitiated by bad motives and aims. Never knew you. In the sense of accepted followers and servants. He knew them thoroughly as hypocrites and deceivers. Profess. Proclaim openly and publicly (Matt. 25: 32). Depart. Christ now says, "Come unto me;" but then the day of salvation will be forever past. Work iniquity. Though they claimed, and even seemed to work many good works, their works were all and altogether bad because they rejected Christ and served only themselves.

TOPIC AND OUTLINE.

The lesson furnishes some excellent tests of the new life. 1. It is tested by its beginning, for it includes self-surrender, humiliation, confession of sin, submission to God, personal and hearty choice of Christ. All plans and claims to make it easy for one to be a Christian are, for that very reason, to be regarded with suspicion. True religion begins in and by self-denial. 2. It is tested by its fruits (vs. 15-20). Mere profession, however loud, and constant, and varied, is not enough. The results must correspond to the teaching and to the belief. The religion is true doctrine producing true character and true society. 3. It is tested by its conformity to the divine will (vs. 21-23). There may be profession, and seeming zealous and efficient activity; but these are not enough. These must be with supreme desire to honor and serve God. True religion is humble and obedient. 4. It is tested by its enduring character (vs. 24-27). We can know certainly only after we have seen the trials and temptations of life endured and mastered. As one has said: "(1) Faith makes a Christian; (2) life proves a Christian; (3) trials confirm a Christian; (4) death crowns a Christian." 5. It is tested by its teacher (vs. 28, 29). If the teacher be loyal to the word, and faithful in presenting the whole counsel of God, those who are converted through his ministry will be apt to be true disciples of the Christ of the gospels.

SEED TRUTHS AND GERM THOUGHTS.

1. Though narrow, the gate of salvation is wide enough for all the world—one at a time. And it stands open continually.

2. Better deny self and win heaven than please self and lose heaven (v. 19).

3. There are hypocrites in the church, but the church is not, therefore, to be censured or condemned in a wholesale way.

4. The true nature of the man, as of the tree, will be seen at last (vs. 16, 17).

5. "The unused ideal is the germ of hypocrisy."

6. Many fair workers on earth will be outcast at the judgment (v. 22).

7. Every human soul is a builder, either on the rock or on the sand (vs. 24, 26).

8. The final sentence to the false professor leaves no ground of hope in the future (v. 23).

9. The mere neglect of spiritual things will ruin the soul eternally.

10. There is need of constant watch and challenge, lest we be not in the way of life.

Subject of lesson for Sept. 25: "The Divine Missionary." Matt. 4: 12-16.

DEMOCRACY ROASTED.

Stirring Address of John Brennan at the Iowa Republican State Convention.

It is difficult to deal with politics in our day without evoking from our Democratic brethren the insincere and uncharitable taunt that we are waving something sanguinary; that we are appealing to sectional animosities and reviving the bitterness of twenty years ago. Our answer is, God forbid. We join our Republican brethren of Ohio in the hearty declaration that we have placed the war and its hatreds behind us. There is not in the convention nor on the soil of Iowa, as far as I know, a man who entertains a feeling of malice toward the people of any section of our common country. The dearest wish that animates the heart of every loyal citizen of Iowa in respect to the war of the rebellion is to see the results and settlements of that war respected and observed, and to join our countrymen in every part of the republic in achieving the proud victories of peace, by contributing as best we may to the prosperity and glory of a reunited and inseparable nationality.

We regret to think that, contrary to our patriotic desires, there are two distinguished Democrats "perniciously active" in provoking the unkind feelings which in us they pretend to condemn. One of these gentlemen is the venerable Jefferson Davis, of Mississippi, and the other is Mr. Grover Cleveland, Chief Executive of the Republic. While condemning the conduct of Mr. Davis, in justice to him be it said that by comparison with Mr. Cleveland he is entitled to great credit. Though the venerable ex-President will persist in assailing the flag and the institutions of his country; though he will not be reconciled to the inevitable, nor comforted by the ascendency of his party and the peaceful triumph of his cause, still to his honor be it said that in pursuit of his purpose he speaks in the language of a man who was in his youth a soldier and a gentleman. It is to be regretted that nature and circumstances have denied to the junior Democratic President those gifts and graces which adorn his venerable brother. He is pleased to depart from the language of common decency in the vetoes issued under his hand in the high office which he holds. For reasons unaccountable he finds himself constrained to consult a dictionary and to borrow the language of the bar room, for terms vile enough to be applied to the tottering veterans of the ever glorious army whose valor made it possible for him to have a country of which to be President.

It was hardly consistent with a pretended desire to forget the memories of the civil war for the President to order the return of the rebel battle flags; a liberality calculated to appeal to the fading memories of a lost cause well worthy to be forgotten. All patriotic men will join in hoping that they shall rest in obscurity and peace, and pass into "innocuous desuetude" under the withering hand of time. But we cannot help comparing his lavish kindness with the memorable act of a certain great land speculator who, in the early part of the Christian era, was offering the earth through inordinate ambition. "If you will only fall down and worship me," said he, "all the kingdoms of the earth I will give unto thee." "If you will only fall down and give me another nomination," said Mr. Cleveland, "and all these battle flags I will give unto you." Unfortunate for his sable majesty, he did not own a title deed to an acre of the kingdom, and unfortunately for Mr. Cleveland, he did not own a title, legal or equitable, to a tattered fold of the flags. Well, he did not return them (and he will not return any flags from Iowa while William Larrabee is Governor); but he did arouse unhappy memories of that fateful day in 84 when, in the wantonness of national madness, the people turned aside from Blaine, the greatest political thinker of the age in which he lived; and from Logan, gallant, stainless Logan, the idol of the volunteer army, and turned their eyes to Albany for a President.

Aside from the pernicious activity of these two great Democratic statesmen, there is no desire to excite unfraternal feelings in any section of the country North or South.

There is just one great question arising out of the war that is still unsettled: The right of this nation to be governed by a constitutional majority of the people—the right of every man, black and white, North and South, to freely cast his vote and to have that vote honestly counted and declared. We can overlook the occasional burglary of a ballot-box in Cincinnati, Indianapolis, or Chicago; because it is being demonstrated that even in those cities there is still sufficient political virtue to punish and to circumvent the boodler and the ballot burglar. But when year after year it is sought to govern the nation by a system of political iniquity that nullifies the will of a majority, the Republican party must call a halt. Let me illustrate: In elections for members of Congress, where elections are free and fair, in States like Iowa and Illinois, from 28,000 to 30,000 votes are cast in every district. Yet the State of South Carolina has seven members of Congress, elected by a total vote of less than 90,000; and the State of Georgia has a delegation of ten, elected by a total vote less than the ballot cast for Congressman in the Fifth District of Iowa. The meaning and effect of this is that in our national legislation the vote of one Georgia planter is equal to the vote of ten farmers on the prairies of Iowa or Illinois.

By the perverted ingenuity of Southern genius, the million colored voters of the South count no more at the ballot-box to-day than they did in the days of their slavery. With the same generous hand with which a victorious North gave universal suffrage to the conquered South, it also added to the representation of the South thirty-eight members of Congress and a corresponding power in the Electoral College. Now, under the odious system of which we complain, not only does the black man not receive the benefits of this representation, but, like the figures on a checkerboard, it is actually taken from him and operated against him. It matters not whether they do it by force or by fraud; the result is just the same: That less than one million of the old slave-holding class govern this nation of sixty million people; that in this day of their power they treat with contempt the veterans of the Union army; that they lavish governmental favors upon their favored section; that they defeat such wholesome measures as the bill for the relief of the Des Moines River land settlers; they refuse to admit Republican territories into the Union; they fill the diplomatic service and the higher offices of the civil service with men notorious for the forgiven crime of treason or the unforgiven crime of copperheadism; while the great army of Northern Democrats feed upon the remnant husks of fourth-class postoffices or pass in mournful procession before the mansion of their masters seeking the other clerkships suitable to a limited education.

Surely the Democratic party does not claim title to govern by a demonstrated superior capacity to deal with great national questions. It has been in control of the House of Representatives since 1875 (with the exception of a single term), and during all these years it has originated not a single great measure of national legislation. It has made several abortive attempts to deal with the tariff on imports. Yet with majorities ranging from 30 to 60, it never framed a bill on this subject that did not die an abortive death in committee of the whole. It has not succeeded in reforming the tariff; but it has succeeded, time and again, in disturbing the commerce, unsettling the manufactures, and depressing the labor of the country.

The Democratic party will neither reform the tariff nor lower the surplus. As a matter of fact, during the two and one-half years of its administration, while it has not diminished the expenses of the Government, it has actually increased the surplus by $100,000,000. People ask why the Republican party did not reform the revenue or reduce the surplus while they had the power? The fact is that for twelve years, except for a single term of two years, the Democratic party have had the power of the purse and the control of such legislation in Congress. There is a popular and just demand for relief from excessive taxation and the evils of an overflowing treasury; but, contrary to its pledges, the Democratic party seems incapable of dealing with these questions. Enlightened and courageous statesmanship would easily solve the difficulties. The Republican party, without interfering with the policy of protection, greatly reduced the revenues by repealing the duties on tea and coffee and other necessary articles. The Democratic party have it in their power to-day to reduce the revenue by $50,000,000 annually, almost the exact measure of the surplus, by repealing the duty on sugar; but they dare not do this in defiance of the sugar planters of Louisiana, or they would rupture the solid South. With an American statesman in the Presidency and a Republican majority in Congress, the Republican party would adjust the tariff to a revenue basis, while affording ample protection to American industry.

The foreign policy of Mr. Cleveland's administration is not such as to appeal to American pride. Mr. Bayard slumbers in the Department of State while a Canadian constable hauls down the American flag upon the high seas. He roars like a lion at the friendly power of Mexico, while he crouches like a spaniel in presence of Canada. The venerable copperhead who misrepresents our country at the Court of St. James acts as if this Government paid him a salary for post-prandial speeches to justify a Tory government in its brutal treatment of suffering Ireland. The President writes brotherly letters to Queen Victoria, assuring her of the love, peace and happiness of her subjects, unmindful of the fact that Ireland, during the fifty years of her reign, has been converted into a poor-house and a cemetery.

The Democratic party is now, as always, the pretended friend of labor. When it had the power it held the laborer in bondage and lashed him on the back for pay. It is a notorious fact that the lowest wages paid the laborer is in Democratic States, and the highest in Republican States, and that the more intensely Democratic a State is the poorer is the laborer's wages. Yet some of the working people are wild enough to listen to the siren proposition of "fusion" with the Democratic party—fusion of the tiger and his victim. A certain wealthy citizen of New York City once committed a junior son to the keeping of a friend in India. One day a telegram was received informing the unhappy parents that their son had died and his body been shipped by express. In time a large box arrived, and on opening it they found the body of a Bengal tiger. They telegraphed to India this message: "Tiger received, but George's body has not come," to which in due time they got this answer: "George is in the tiger." So it is when labor or any other honest minority party fuses with the Democratic party. When the ballot box is opened the confiding fusers are found in the body of the tiger and invariably counted as Democrats.

BULLETS AND BAYONETS.

Stormy Scenes, Amusing Anecdotes, and Interesting Incidents of the Late War.

Bloody Battles, Buzzing Bullets, Bright Bayonets, and Buggy Beds.

The Dying Soldier.

BY J. P. PHILBERT.

I am dying, pard, I feel the chill of death upon me stealing;
My life blood's ebbing, ebbing fast away;
The kept curtain from the Mystic River's drawn, revealing
Beyond the light of an eternal day.
But there's a lull, pard, in the roar of battle, and I hear
A shout and cheer as if of victory;
Whose flag is waving yet? Ah, pard, I know—the old flag dear—
The starry emblem of the brave and free—
Because there's joy, pard, over yonder, where the angels dwell;
There's wailing, wailing, wailing in the lowest depths of hell.

Yes, pard, I'm dying now; no more around the bivouac fire with you
I'll sleep and dream of home and friends away,
Beyond the river the "reveille's" sounding—"zero" "father"
Proclaims the closing of a bloody day.
I hear "assembly call," pard, over yonder on that shore
Where war's dread banners are forever furled.
I'll answer "roll-call" there when the dark night of death is o'er,
Among the heavenly hosts of that bright world.
But, pard, would the smoke of battle 'tis glorious to die,
And know that Freedom's banner's waving proudly in the sky.

I'm dying, pard, the sands of time are running low and fleeting,
The "long roll's" sounding on the other shore,
My heart is like a muffled drum, so low and sad its beating
Ah, pard, together we will march no more.
Our fighting and our marching, pard, together are now ended—
The hand of Death is writing my "furlough;"
The bugle's blast and beat of drums are now so sweetly blended
With songs of praise that mortals may not know.
Ah, pard be brave of heart, fight to the end and know no fear;
The clouds are lifting, and, beyond, the dawn of day is near.

Yes, pard, I'm going fast; a dying message I would send
To those at home that I have loved so well;
To mother, and to that loved one who is—ah, more than friend—
You'll tell them where I died, and how I fell.
You'll tell those loved ones that my thoughts were with them to the last,
And that I spoke of them with my last breath;
You'll tell them of my hopes—my sky no doubt or gloom o'ercast—
That love for them robbed of its terrors Death.
See, pard, there at Commander comes! A glow of glory wraps
His brow! A beat of drum is heard!—the light's are out—it's "taps!"
—For the Veteran.

A Sunday of Terror in Nashville.

The scenes and incidents that took place in Nashville, Tenn., on the Saturday night and Sunday of the attack and fall of Fort Donelson are memorable events in the history of that city. The story is a graphic one. The following sketch is compiled from a narration of the exciting scenes by a Union man who was in Nashville at the time:

The Confederates were loath to entertain an idea that the Union army would ever reach Nashville. That city was thought to be secure, and hence it was made a place for the general storage of army supplies. At the date of the Fort Donelson fight Nashville was full of army stores. All of the great cotton warehouses and sheds were filled with bacon and other provisions for the army; indeed, room could not be found to store it, and great piles of meat were to be seen upon the landing.

The attack upon Fort Donelson raised the first alarm for the safety of the Tennessee capital. During the progress of the battle all sorts of devices were resorted to in order to allay the fear among the people. On Saturday night preceding the fall of the fort the city was full of people eager to hear the news, but no dispatches were made public. So eager became the populace that a bogus dispatch was finally read to the crowd in front of one of the hotels. It purported to be from the Confederate authorities at Fort Donelson and read as follows:

"We have whipped the Yankees at every point and captured one gun."

This was the only dispatch made public, and its transparency rather served to increase the fears of the people. They thronged the street and rushed hither and thither, seemingly without aim or object.

Sunday morning came, but still no news from Donelson. The women all went to church, but the men continued to throng the streets. About eleven o'clock, word was sent to all the churches that Fort Donelson had fallen. Then followed such a scene as one rarely witnesses. The women who were told that if the Yankee forces captured the city it would be sacked and burned and they would be ravished and murdered, rushed to their homes screaming at the top of their voices. Soon the vehicles of the wealthy were seen leaving the city, containing only a few valuables and the females of the family. The day bloomed out into one for general equestrian practice, and vehicles of all sorts and grades were moving southward filled with occupants, mostly females.

Utter despair seemed to seize everybody. The city lost its head; wholesale stores were thrown open and the mob rushed in and carried off whatever they desired; the hospitals, where several thousand sick, wounded, and convalescent soldiers were quartered, were deserted by the authorities and the inmates told to care for themselves as best they could. They came upon the streets in all stages of convalescence. Some hobbled out on one leg, others crawled on their hands and knees. Many of them were unable to get farther than half a square, where they lay in the streets and died beneath the rays of the hot sun. The scene was appalling—a regular pandemonium on earth.

About twelve o'clock on Sunday, Sidney Johnston, who had military command of the city, issued an order pressing into service all of the vehicles in the city to aid in the removal of the army stores. The fleeing aristocracy, with their silk and satin Sunday adornments, were overhauled, set out on the side of the pike, and their grand equipages loaded with side-meat. Dog-carts were piled full of pickled pork, and every conceivable conveyance formed one grand army train to remove provisions and stores out of Nashville. What could not be removed fell to any one who desired to carry it away. It was not an uncommon sight to see an old colored woman with a piece of sow-belly on her head and a ham or shoulder under each arm making for her cabin in the outskirts. The store that could not be removed were burned, as were also the railroad bridges and the boats on the river. General carnage and pillage prevailed. Such a Sunday was never witnessed before in Nashville, and very probably never will be again.

Time proved the folly of this haste to destroy what the people had ample time to at least partially consume, as it was several days before the Federal forces entered Nashville.

The Morgan Banquet at Pulaski.

During the early part of the civil strife General John Morgan served the generous people of Pulaski, Tenn., and vicinity a very shabby trick, for which they have probably never forgiven him. It was a case of slighted hospitality that the people of the South would never brook. Though General Morgan was not solely to blame for it, the old residents of that section still hold a grudge against his memory.

On the first occupancy of that section by the Federal authorities, the practice was adopted of leaving a command at every town in order to keep the people in subjection. The result was a very rapid depletion of the advancing forces. Pulaski, with the other places, was made a military post of this kind, and the Seventh Kentucky Infantry went into camp there. One day the great Confederate scout, with his band, swooped down upon the village and captured the little Federal army and all of the stores and accouterments of war. In fact, so rapid was General Morgan's descent that before the boys in blue were aware of the presence of Confederate soldiers they were surrounded by cavalry and ordered to surrender. Being outnumbered and in no condition to show fight, they gracefully capitulated, and were paroled by the Confederate officer.

General Morgan was then the hero of the hour. He rode a fine black horse with a flowing mane and tail, and his fine figure and dauntless courage captivated the hearts of the Pulaski ladies. They idolized him, and begged for mementos of the event, which demand he attempted to supply by clipping bits of the long hair from the mane and tail of his charger until the animal was almost shorn of these members.

Straightway arrangements were set in motion to give a barbecue in honor of General Morgan. A subscription was started among the men, and the women folks set about preparing all sorts of delicacies for the feast. Word was sent to the farmers and planters to come to the Morgan banquet with well-filled baskets. As a matter of course they responded and gathered together the choicest of their bounty for the occasion.

On the morning of the day set for the feast, General Sigel loomed upon the scene, an unwelcome guest, but with a sort of "yust gomes to ged a leedle of der bi nic already." As the town was too small to hold two great men, General Morgan retired, and almost as suddenly as he came a few days before. General Sigel's descent had been by a dextrous movement, and before the people were informed of the presence of Federal troops they were patrolling the outskirts. No word could thus be sent to the planters informing them that the Morgan festivities had been postponed for obvious reasons. So they drove into town with their wagons and carriages filled with good things. The Union boys were apprised of their mission and permitted them to pass within the lines. As long tables had been arranged in the grove ready to groan beneath this bounty, the Federal boys thought the picnic might as well proceed, and if General Morgan was not present it was his own loss. So they collected the eatables brought in by the planters, set the tables, and, unlike the feast of Biblical times, the stock did not increase, but there were several basketfuls left after it was over, which were utilized for lunch. The boys had just come off of a long march, were hungry, and doubtless enjoyed the feast with a keener relish than would Morgan and his men had they remained.

It was during General Sigel's occupancy of Pulaski that he issued his famous verbal order, "I shust shuts mine eyes for one hours."

Gen. Donaldson's Fortunate Mistake.

We quote the following war anecdote by R. H. Eddy: Prior to the battle of Nashville Major General James L. Donaldson (who won honors in the Mexican war, and who died in the spring of 1880) was quartermaster under General Thomas. He once told me the following incident:

Having occasion to purchase mules for the army, he ordered a person in whom he had confidence to visit the contiguous Northern States, inadvertently saying to him, "Buy as many as you can"—not supposing he would be able to secure more than a few thousand at the most. Some weeks afterward, just before the attack upon Hood's army, General Donaldson, on meeting his agent, inquired how many mules he had been able to secure. To the amazement of the General, he was informed that twenty thousand or more had been obtained; upon which the astonished General exclaimed, "I am a ruined man! I shall be court-martialed and driven from the army for not limiting you in the purchase. You have procured many times more than I had any use or intention of purchasing; but the fault is mine, not yours. I ought to have been particular in my orders." In an extremely disheartened state he went to his home, believing that such a thoughtless act on his part could not be overlooked by the commanding General.

He had scarcely reached his house before a messenger came from General Thomas with an order for General Donaldson to come immediately to headquarters. This seemed to be the sealing of his fate, and in a state of trepidation bordering on frenzy he appeared before General Thomas, whom he found in a mood, apparently, of great depression. Soon after Donaldson had entered his presence General Thomas said, "Donaldson, how many mules have you?" With some perturbation he replied, "Upwards of twenty-five thousand." "Twenty-five thousand, did you say?" repeated the General. "Is it possible that you have this number? Donaldson, accept my most heartfelt thanks; you have saved this army! I can now have transportation, and can fight Hood, and will do so at once."

The Brigade's Crowning Glory.

At Antietam came the crowning glory of the Irish Brigade. When French's division, containing many new troops, was so roughly handled, the brigade was sent in on the left of Dunker's Church and slowly forced the enemy back beyond the famous sunken road, which had been filled with corpses by an enfilading fire from one of our batteries and presented the most ghastly spectacle of the war. Using this lane as a breastwork they held it to the close of the fight, losing not a prisoner, having not one straggler, but at a loss of life which was appalling. One regiment lost nearly fifty per cent., another over thirty. The rebels seemed to have a special spite against the green flag and five color-bearers were shot down successively in a short time. As the last man fell even these Irishmen hesitated a moment to assume a task synonymous with death. Big Gleason, Captain of the Sixty-third, six feet seven, sprang forward and snatched it up. In a few minutes a bullet struck the staff, shattering it to pieces; Gleason tore the flag from the broken staff, wrapped it around his body, putting his sword-belt over it, and went through the rest of that fight untouched. I met him a day or two after. "Well, Gleason," said I, "they didn't hit you." "Divil a welt," said he, "barring what Paddy O'Neale gives me when he kicks me out of bed in the morning." Major O'Neale was his commanding officer and tent-mate, and found it necessary to use strong means to set such a mass in motion. At Fredericksburg the brigade had the honor of leading the attack on their portion of the line across the open plain against the concave line, bristling with artillery, of which Marye's Heights was probably the very strongest point. Their behavior on that day can be best summed up by saying that when they came to gather the corpses that blotted that ghastly plain the dead of the Irish Brigade lay in line nearest to the fatal stone wall of all that undertook that hopeless task, from their own charge in the early forenoon to the last attempt of Sykes' regulars after sundown.

EDWARD FIELD,
Captain Fourth Artillery.

Old Jakey's Shot.

One day, during the siege of Corinth, General Nelson came to the front to look after things, and especially to see how a favorite battery of artillery was getting along. A party of rebel sharpshooters had taken refuge in an old house about half a mile to the front of our force, and the artillerymen were directing their guns upon it. He grew very impatient because the house had not yet been struck, and rode hastily up to the guns.

"They will pick you off there, General," said our Sergeant, in a warning voice.

The General snapped out: "Go to h—l, sir; no, d——n it, I mean to thank you, sir."

Just then came a long tom with a "zip." The General, hearing the well-known sound, jumped off his horse in a rage, caught one of the guns, ran it forward by main strength, and aimed it himself, remarking that he would show them how to shoot at him.

As he was aiming our Captain said: "A little too high, General," but was met with the ever-ready reply, "Go to h—l," and ordered to "pull the string."

The ball went crashing through the treetops not a hundred yards ahead of us, more in the direction of the sky than the house; but it happened that at the same instant one of our other guns was fired, and the ball struck the chimney of the house.

The General, seeing the chimney fall, shouted: "By ——, sir, I knew it; it takes me to knock things about them," and rode away, calling back, "Captain, I will call around in the morning and give you practice; I can hit 'em every time."

He did not hear the laugh that followed, but old Jakey's shot was never forgotten.

Another Story of Lincoln.

Abraham Lincoln has to bear the responsibility of many stories which he never heard, much less told. This one, however, related by a prominent citizen of St. Louis, has the unmistakable flavor of Lincolnian personality. "In the early part of the war," said our informant, "I called one day upon the President, whom I knew very well, and we had a long and, to me at least, very pleasant conversation. In the course of it he spoke of the annoyance to which he was subjected by the representatives of the abolition element in the Republican party. 'Sumner, Wade, and the rest,' said he, 'worry the life out of me about abolishing slavery by proclamation. I can't satisfy them that the idea is, at present anyhow, as impracticable as it is foolish, and every week almost they are here, harping away on the same old string. I feel very much like a boy I knew at school. In those days we had to read by turns a chapter in the Bible every morning, and on certain occasions it fell to the lot of this boy to read the remarkable story of the three pious young men who were thrown into a fiery furnace. John was not a very good reader, but he stumbled along pretty well until he struck the names—Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. He stopped and stammered so long that the teacher at last told him to skip them and go ahead. John gladly obeyed orders, but pretty soon stopped again, threw down his Bible, and boo-hooed right out. "Why, what's the matter?" said the teacher, "what are you crying about?" "Eh," bawled John, "here's them three fellows again, and I don't know what in —— to do with them!" And that's about the way I feel when Sumner, Wade and the company make their weekly visit.' And then Lincoln laughed one of those long, quiet laughs that always seemed to do him so much good."

Foraging Watermelons.

While the Eighth Kentucky Cavalry was encamped at Franklin, Kentucky, in 1863, we were not paid for a long time. Consequently our pocket money was scarce. We wanted watermelons; but just how to get them was the question. I proposed a plan. There was a farmer, not far outside our picket line, who had a large field of melons, and, as he was a Union man, we were not allowed to molest him. I proposed to one of my chums to go to the field. When we came in sight we saw notices stuck up that read: "Persons coming in here do so at the risk of their lives."

"Now," said I to Alf Beard, my chum, "when we get where the farmer is hidden you pretend you are going in, and I'll say, 'No, don't. Mr. W. is a Union man and I won't touch his melons.' You must swear that you will take them anyway."

We rode up, Beard and myself, and went through the above programme. He swore he was going to have the melons and I began to expostulate against it. The farmer rose up from his hiding place and told Beard to "git" or he would shoot him. He did "git," at least, got out of sight and waited for me. The farmer took me into his melon patch, filled two sacks, thanked me for my honesty, and told me to come again and I should always have all of the melons I wanted, but not to let "that thief" have any. I soon met Beard and he carried half of my load into camp.—John A. Bennett, in Chicago Ledger.

THE tail of a fox is called a brush, but that does not make a rabbit's tail a hair brush.

NUMBER 10;

—OR,—

ANOTHER MAN'S CRIME.

—BY—

The Author of "The Rokewood Tragedy," "The Fenton Girls," "Allthorpe," Etc.

CHAPTER XII.

SHADOWS.

Old Jerry Britt's factotum, and the only male servant retained in the Britt household, sat by the kitchen fire and watched the flight of time with rising wrath. Now he was winking, and blinking, and rubbing his bleary old eyes in the vain endeavor to keep wide awake, and anon his grizzled head, in spite of his efforts, would drop forward upon his breast and a deep and tortuous gurgle betray his somnolent condition. But at last he made no effort whatever to resist the demands of nature, and gave himself up to sleep.

The clock on the mantel of Britt's own room pointed at the hour of two ere Mr. Britt himself put in his appearance.

Old Jerry was brought suddenly back to a consciousness of sublunary affairs by a hand grasping his shoulder roughly, and the voice of his master calling in his ears. "What, are you still waiting?" cried Britt, in well-feigned indignation. "Be off with you to bed."

Nothing loath to comply with this welcome and long delayed command—though grumbling audibly over the untoward fate that had robbed him of his rest—old Jerry hobbled away to his garret.

Not until the old man had disappeared did Britt see the privacy of his own apartment.

He presented a sorry appearance. He was covered with grime, and his clothes were torn and disordered.

Once in his own room he threw himself down upon the settee with an air of exhaustion.

The fire in the grate was low, but some live coals raked out from the bed of ashes in which they had been covered gave out a cheering glow.

Some hot water was soon steaming in the copper kettle on the hob.

Mr. Britt mixed some brandy and sugar with the water and tossed it off with a gulp. Then he threw more dry wood on the coals, and, lighting a fresh candle, sat down in a crouching position near the door.

"I thought I was followed," he muttered huskily to himself, "and I believe I was. Hark!"

He bent his ear to the key-hole.

There was a light, soft rustle—a sound as of trailing skirts moving softly over the uncarpeted floor—a delicate foot-fall that was only perceptible to a practiced ear. With a jerk he wrenched open the door and peered into the passage. A rat scampered across the floor and hid behind a box standing near the wall.

Britt stepped out, holding the candle high above his head.

Nothing was to be seen.

Satisfied that he was mistaken in supposing any one had been near him, he returned to his own apartment and locked and bolted the door against all intruders save those of his own imagination.

But there was no going to bed for Joshua Britt.

Glancing furtively over his shoulder as the fire-light died away, and peering into the shadows that darkened the corners of the room, he sat there, shivering, shuddering, the long night through.

The first pale streaks of dawn flitted through the dingy windows ere he gave up his vigils.

Then he unlocked the door of his room and flung himself, dressed as he was, upon the bed.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE RESCUE.

When Britt pushed the body of his foe into what he falsely supposed would be a deep and lasting grave, it had in reality fallen but a short distance, and the shock produced by the fall restored to consciousness the man whom Britt now believed to be out of his path.

For many years the forsaken well had served as a receptacle for the varied refuse of the farm, and in the course of time these accretions had so accumulated as to fill the cavity within a few feet of the surface.

"No. 10" therefore lay just below the cover of the well on a dry though hard bed of earth, a fact unknown to Britt, as the sequel shows.

"No. 10" heard the cover of planks readjusted over him, and for a moment gave himself up for lost.

So absorbed was Britt on the completion of his bloody business that he did not hear the rumble of approaching wheels on the public road.

Having succeeded, as he believed, in secreting the body of his victim beyond the possibility of detection, Britt hastened away from the scene of his crime.

Hardly had the door of the house closed upon him than a wagon stopped at the hitching-post in front of the fir trees.

"The folks are not abed yet in this house," muttered the solitary occupant of the vehicle, alighting from his perch on the driver's seat. "I've followed the light in that west window for an hour now, and I'm going to stop here. Willing or unwilling, the people shall keep me the remainder of the night. Besides, I saw the figure of a man just passing through the doorway, so my coming will disturb nobody."

The speaker lighted a lantern and glanced about him.

"Darker than a stack of black cats," said he, with a shiver, "and this nasty rain would freeze a Laplander himself if he were fool enough to go out in it."

Espying the walk, he flashed his lantern lightly before him, and stepped briskly forward.

He had made about half the distance between the road and the house when his attention was attracted by the sound of a groan.

He stopped quickly.

"By Jove!" he ejaculated, peering in the direction from which the noise seemed to come, "what's that?"

"Help!"

"No such things in this day and age as spooks," thought the new-comer, turning out of the walk. "If there were I should think that the cry of one."

A groan was the response.

"It must be a human being at all events."

He at once started in the direction from which the sound came. He could see nothing but a pile of boards, old and rotten.

"Where are you?" he called.

"Here—in a well."

The voice was faint, but certainly that of one in distress.

Holding his lantern so the light shone full upon the cover of the well he approached it.

"Anybody here?"

"Yes, under the planks," came up faintly from beneath the boards at his feet. "Help me out. I am murdered."

The new-comer tore away the cover of the well in a twinkling. To his amazement the body of a man was revealed in the light of the bull's-eye at the bottom of the cavity.

"This is a pretty predicament for a fellow to be in," said he, as he proceeded to the relief of the man he saw—"a pretty predicament."

"It may be pretty—I know it to be an uncomfortable one," was the quick response.

No. 10 was weak from loss of blood, and stiff with cold. But assisted by the strong arm of his rescuer, he once more found himself standing on terra firma.

"How in the world did you get in this fix?" queried the stranger, curiously. "You would have died there in a little while. What is the matter? You are covered with blood."

"That is a long story to tell," was the low reply. "Give me some whisky if you have it. I feel deathly sick."

"Haven't a drop of anything; never carry the stuff. Sorry now. But take my arm. There's a house close at hand and I'll help you reach it. You must have assistance."

The wounded man shuddered.

"Not here—any other place than this. The man who has done me this injury is under that roof. Help me to go away."

"Jerusalem!" ejaculated the other in amazement. "You don't mean to say he tried to murder you."

"Don't it look that way?"

"Well, if this don't beat me."

"And will beat me, too, if he should chance to find out that I'm too lively a corpse for his future comfort. The owner of this place is a desperate villain, and if you would further the ends of justice help me to get away without betraying the secret of my existence to him."

His hearer whistled softly.

"This is a tale that sounds like a romance."

"I can't argue its truth or falsity now," cried the other, sinking to the ground. "The position from which you have just rescued me should speak louder than any words of mine."

For reply the other seized the fainting man, and by main force carried him to the road.

"I'm a peddler of glass ware," said he, briefly, "and hoped to get shelter here for the night. But your needs are greater than mine. I'll stow you away under the cover of my wagon, and drive on to some house where you can stop for a while in safety. No time should be lost, for you are very seriously wounded."

CHAPTER XIV.

THE YANKEE PEDDLER.

Mr. Britt did not awaken from the deep sleep that at last overpowered his senses until nearly midday.

Then old Jerry, who had long waited with impatience for the moment of awakening, entered the room and shook him roughly.

"A man wishes to speak to you," said the servant.

Britt sprang up.

"What man?"

"A stranger—a peddler, I think, from the appearance of his outfit."

Britt shook from head to heel, like a person in a nervous chill.

He went hastily into the hall.

A small and rather effeminate-looking person was waiting.

"You are the owner of this place?" queried the stranger, in a respectful manner.

"I am."

"Well, I have met with a serious accident, and want to stop with you a few days, until I can have my vehicle mended and my horse cured."

"Impossible."

"O, come now," said the stranger, with a laugh, "don't be so hard-hearted. I tell you I must stop—can't go a step farther. Fact is, my horse is dead lame, and one of the wheels to my cart collapsed through the benign influence of the black muck your roads are made of. It is simply a case of necessity with me. I must stay."

"I've no room for you."

The stranger whistled.

"That's bad. But I won't need much room. Just hang me up on a nail anywhere, and give me a morsel of bread and a sup of cold water. I won't be any trouble to you. Besides my cart is loaded with a lot of Yankee notions that, I'll be bound, will please the ladies."

"My women folks don't see strangers, and my house is not a hotel," returned Britt, inhospitably. "You must go farther on."

"Further on," gasped the peddler; "why, bless you, I can't go a step further. With a horse that is dead lame, and a wagon wheel that won't 'go round,' not to mention the rain and the mud, I must stop, whether I like it or not. It is a dead loss financially to be laid up in this way. But 'what can't be cured must be endured.' There are cords of glassware in my wagon aching to be sold, and here I am a prey to untoward fate, and can't sell 'em."

To drive him away would be to create suspicion of some sort. After a moment's reflection Britt gave a reluctant consent.

"Put your horse in the barn. You may remain a day or so. Or, better still, I will lend or hire an animal to you, until such time as yours is ready to go again. It will not take long to fit a wheel to your cart. I've two or three useless old wheels about the place, that you can have if you like."

"Thanks—awfully."

"What's your name?"

"My name—why, to be sure. How careless of me to forget to introduce myself. Here's my card. I'm Elnathan More—More by name and more by nature too."

He laughed heartily and unaffectedly at his own pun. "I'm of Quaker extraction, though not a follower of the Quaker creed, and a bang-up good chap, when once you come to know me well."

"I see you are the possessor of 'cheek' enough for any occasion," said Britt grimly.

"As to that," laughed More, ingeniously, "you must be the judge. Modesty forbids my opinion upon the subject. Of course, I believe in the old saying, that 'there's tricks in all trades but our own,' eh?"

"I don't know about it," returned Britt grimly. "I half repent of consenting to your stopping here. You are too glib with your tongue. Besides, I'm not in the habit of taking strangers into my house. A 'man's house is his castle,' as the saying is."

"O, I'll not annoy you. Let me see the ladies—I'll talk with them. I won't be a bit of trouble to you at all, and I promise not to talk them into buying anything, unless they really wish it."

"My women folks are unaccustomed to doing business with strangers. Besides, my wife is very ill, and must not be disturbed."

More darted a sharp glance at his unwilling host.

"O, well, I'll stop. There's nothing else for it, I suppose, but to wait until my horse recovers. I hope it won't be very long."

"So do I," said Britt uncourteously.

The unwilling host showed his unwelcome guest into the musty parlor.

"You can sit here until I return," said he coldly. "I will investigate your affairs. The horse may not be very badly lamed after all. I'm a pretty fair judge of such things, and can soon decide what the trouble may be."

More sank back comfortably in the stuffed chair.

His face was round and laughing, and his attitude was the picture of careless ease. But his keen blue eyes were observant and did not fail to take in every detail of the musty room—even to the dust—inch deep on the window sill.

The soi-disant peddler snapped his fingers gayly as his host disappeared down the steps.

"You'll find the horse to be lame enough, my worthy friend, lame enough for any purpose," said he merrily. And then he laughed, a deep, convulsive chuckle, that shook him from head to heel with merriment.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

WHAT IS TREASON?

The Southern Democrats Asked to Give a Definition of It Now.

[From the Hartford Courant (Rep.).]

We should like to ask our contemporaries, any of the able, reasonable, patriotic newspapers, such as the Charleston News, the Atlanta Constitution, the Memphis Appeal and Avalanche, the Louisville Courier-Journal, the Mobile Register, the New Orleans Times-Democrat and the Picayune, or any other first-class Southern journal that might be named, one question—not by way of agitation, but out of curiosity, and because in this slack sea on it is a good time to settle some theories. Would our contemporaries call an attempt at secession, accompanied with an attack on Federal property, made now, treason against the United States?

We have no doubt of the entire loyalty (meaning fidelity to the United States as a nation) of the inhabitants of the late Confederate States. We believe that pride in the Union, and the disposition to fight for its honor and integrity, is common to all the States. That is not called in question anywhere. We have one flag and one country and all that. Difference of opinion as to whether whites or blacks should rule in any locality has nothing to do with Union sentiment.

But this is the point. Before the war, a great number of people in the South, not all, and a few in the North, held the theory that the union of the States was only a compact, which might be broken at the pleasure of any State, and that, therefore, secession and levying war to secure it was not treason. A majority at the North and many people at the South held the opposite theory, that we were a nation, both by compact and by historic growth, and that any attack upon the integrity of the nation was treason. In the progress of events after Sumter, pretty much all the North espoused the national theory, and pretty much all the South the compact or partnership theory.

Now that the war is over, and practically everybody is glad that it ended with one flag flying over a nation, we understand our Southern contemporaries to say that they did not commit an act of treason in attempting secession, because they simply tried to carry out the theory of the Constitution which they believed to be the right theory. We can understand this, and are not disposed to bandy any words about the past, the only effect of which would be to revive old enmities and throw an unpleasant element into our present hearty good feeling and mutual respect.

The question is, taking the nation and the theory of the Constitution as the war has settled them, would it, in the opinion of our contemporaries, be treason to the Union now to repeat the performance of 1861?

Republican Gains in Kentucky.

Now that the Kentucky vote is in, the opportunity is offered for a consideration of the figures, both in their general aspect, as affecting the Gubernatorial race between Buckner and Bradley and by Congressional districts, where the great Republican gain is even more conspicuous, as well as by legislative districts, where the gain is one hundred per cent. in members. The Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette's correspondent at Maysville makes the following comparative statement, which shows the steady decline in the Democratic majorities during the last ten years:

The Democratic majority in Kentucky for Tilden in 1876 was 62,510, the highest the party ever received at any election. At that election Tilden received a larger number of votes than was ever cast for any other Democrat in this State.

In 1879 the Democratic majority for Governor Blackburn was 13,917.

In 1880 the majority for Hancock was 42,754.

In 1883 Knott, for Governor, received a majority of 44,431.

In 1884 Cleveland's majority was 34,839.

In 1887 Buckner, for Governor, received a majority over Bradley of only 17,015.

Buckner's vote is	143,[illegible]
Bradley	12[illegible]
Fox	8,3[illegible]
Coralp	4,187
Total vote cast	28[illegible]
Buckner over all	4,138

The aggregate is the largest ever cast in the State. The vote for Bradley is, in round numbers, 8,000 more than ever previously cast for a Republican. The vote for Buckner is 5,000 less than Knott received.

Considered from every point of view, the remarkable Republican gain is apparent. The Republicans will have thirty-four Senators and Representatives in the General Assembly, or about double the number they had in the last, which shows that they have made inroads upon the Democratic strength, locally as well as generally. Considered by Congressional districts, the gain is more striking still. Five of the eleven districts have been carried by the Republicans, as follows:

Third District	2,781
Eighth District	581
Ninth District	328
Tenth District	1,459
Eleventh District	2,573

Commenting upon the returns by Congressional districts the Louisville Courier-Journal makes some very candid deductions. In the First District there is no opportunity for comparison, as the Republicans had no candidate last year. In the Second the Democratic majority was reduced to 2,780, a loss of 329. In the Third the Republican majority was 2,781, a gain of 1,374. In the Fourth the Democratic majority was 1,818, a loss of 272. In the Fifth the Democrats made a large gain, as their full vote was out. In the Sixth (Carlisle's district) no Republican ran last year. In the Eighth the Republicans came out with flying colors, having 581 majority as compared with 1,161 Democratic majority last year. In the Ninth the Republicans have 328 majority, a gain of 119. In the Tenth the Republicans overcame a Democratic majority of 716 by turning out 1,459 majority, and in the Eleventh they increased their majority from 1,546 to 2,573, a gain of 1,027. Of the eleven Congressional districts they have carried five on the heaviest vote ever cast in the State. The Courier-Journal remarks upon this result: "There is no sort of question that Republican sentiment is growing in the mountain counties. It is highly probable that the next Congressional delegation from this State will contain four Republicans." More remarkable still is it that these mountain county majorities are white majorities, as there are comparatively few negroes in those sections. It is altogether probable that these majorities have come to stay, and that instead of four there will be five Republicans in the next Congressional delegation. It might as well be admitted that the first breach in the walls of the solid South has begun. The logic of the last ten years' figures is irresistible proof that there will be a fighting chance in Kentucky, perhaps next year.—Chicago Tribune.

A Test of Sincerity.

In two years and four months this administration had appointed postmasters to 45,373 out of the 55,157 postoffices in the country. Under Republican administrations a considerable number of Democrats were postmasters, especially in Southern States, and wherever the numerical preponderance of Democrats made the selection of a Republican a source of irritation. It is probably safe to say that nine tenths of the postmasters are now Democrats, and, moreover, most of the remaining offices are so small and unprofitable that it is difficult, and in very many cases impossible, to find anybody who will take them. Practically there has been a clean sweep, as the Civil Service Reform Association at its annual meeting sadly confessed. The professional reformers who brought about this change by swearing on their personal knowledge that President Cleveland was a genuine reformer, are busy explaining as best they can: all that concerns the country is that the old-fashioned partisanship of Pierce and Buchanan has taken complete possession of the public service again, through the election of a pretended reformer. As the Pennsylvania Republican Convention says, respecting this administration: "The only energy they have exhibited has been in the displacement of experienced officers without cause, and in direct violation of their civil service pledges."

This charge is true, and the practical people of this country justly regard it as far more important than the lip service and empty pretense of love for reform which so recommend President Cleveland to men like Mr. Curtis. Even while President Cleveland pretends to be zealous for the establishment of a non-partisan civil service he appoints 15,173 postmasters in twenty-eight months, or 1,117 each month, and fifty-seven each working day, over seven each working hour, and one in a little over eight minutes for the entire time he has acted as President. And this is one of the seven departments only; how many appointments have been made in other departments we are not told. This necessarily means that the President has made no real effort to ascertain the qualifications of persons appointed. But in most of the 45,000 cases experienced, faithful and thoroughly competent officials were removed, or requested to resign, in order to make room for the partisans of whose fitness the President knew nothing and took no time to inquire. The one thing he certainly knew was that worthy and faithful men were ousted because they were Republicans, and that inexperienced and in many cases less competent men were appointed because they were Democrats.

A party which calls this reform shows no respect for the intelligence of the people. A public leader or professional reformer who tries to make it appear that such absorbing zeal in turning out tried and appointing untried men is consistent with an honest desire for reform sacrifices his claim to be heard as a sincere and candid advocate of better government. Assuming that the President has made only as many changes in all other departments as in the postal service, he has turned out an experienced and worthy man, and put in an inexperienced partisan, for every four minutes of his official time since he became President.—New York Tribune.

Maryland Democracy.

The platform adopted by the Maryland Democrats is spoils all through, though it indorses the President and declares that he has kept faith with the Democratic party. Its third plank openly pronounces in favor of partisan officeholders. "It" (the Democratic party) "believes that the service should be composed of officers and employes who are not antagonistic to the success of the administration under which they serve, but are in sympathy with it, whose hearts are in their work, and who believe that upon the continued and just success of the Democratic party rest the safety and security of republican institutions and the liberties of the people." This was the declaration of a convention whose delegates were chosen by the fine work of Gorman and Higgins in the primaries, assisted by nearly all the Federal officeholders in Maryland. The declaration, it goes without saying, is directly antagonistic to the civil-service law, of which the President has been the conspicuous advocate. The action of Higgins and other officeholders was in open violation of the July order of the President. But will he be removed? Can he be in the face of this platform, which affirms the doctrine of partisan officeholding and indorses the President? There is no insincerity about the Maryland Democrats. They recognize the President at his true value, and indorse him because he has never once interfered with the operations of Gorman and Higgins, though more than once the evidence of their brazen violations of the civil service law has been laid before him, and they clinch him by getting control of the organization of the delegation to the national convention in 1888. They are so sure of their position that Higgins can openly say: "Civil-service reform is a sham and a humbug from beginning to end," and "all civil-service reformers are frauds and cranks." The Maryland mugwumps will present Higgins' case to the President, and they will make his dismissal the condition of their support of him for re-election. They will appeal in vain. He will not interfere with the Gorman-Higgins machine. He dares not throw over the Maryland delegation. Meanwhile, what will the other gentle mugwumps do when they behold their ideal reformer indorsing the man who has called them all, the President included, "frauds and cranks?"—Chicago Tribune.

What Has He Ever Done?

Show us one statesmanlike document that President Cleveland has written since his inauguration. He has written many veto messages and a large number of letters on matters of small importance—too trifling many of them to deserve notice—but when any great question comes up like the Canadian fisheries dispute, for instance, he has nothing to say. Where are the state documents that mark him as a statesman? There isn't one on file. Who knows what his individual views are on any important issue? On the subject of civil-service reform he has stultified himself repeatedly; on the tariff question he has never uttered an intelligent declaration; of the great question of transportation he knows nothing; on the subject of interstate commerce he is as ignorant as some of the Congressmen who voted for the bill; on the currency question he is just what Dorsheimer tells him to be. We know he is opposed to "sumptuary laws;" at least he said so in his letter of acceptance. We know he was in favor of returning the rebel flags to the South until the law prevented the execution of his plans. We know from his sarcastic and abusive veto message how he feels toward the Union soldier. We know from his eulogies of Calhoun and deceased rebel soldiers that his sympathies are with those who weep over the lost cause. We know he is in favor of putting one of the foremost leaders of the rebellion on the Supreme Bench. We know he is after a renomination. But what has he ever done that entitles him to further consideration? Will some administration organ please tell us?—Detroit Tribune.

THE chronic carpers, who sneeringly refer to the G. A. R. as an organization gotten up for self-glorification and to promote the ends of ambitious men, are referred to the returns made at the headquarters of the order of the amount of money expended last year by each department for charitable purposes. These reports show the aggregate so expended during the last fiscal year to be $254,336.13. The total number of persons relieved was 26,606. The amount of good cheer and comfort afforded by the expenditure of that amount of money in cases of absolute need is almost inconceivable. And the fact that the old veterans freely paid their money to relieve the necessities of their more unfortunate comrades proves that they are not all self-seeking and mercenary men. In matter of fact, they freely gave their money to pay the debt that the nation owes its needy defenders. And a portion, at least, of that money would have been paid from the surplus funds of the nation but for the interposition of President Cleveland's vetoes.—Inter Ocean.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS and his Mugwump confreres should carefully re-read Senator Voorhees' article in the Indianapolis Sentinel, in which he says: "If you think nothing has been done to eliminate Republican partisan poison from our political system, cast your mind's eye around Indiana and see how many Republicans you can find in office in this great commonwealth. There is but one Presidential postoffice in the State which I can think of at this moment where a change has not been made." Then turn to the Atlanta Constitution and listen to Bro. Henry W. Grady, who says to the people of Georgia: "We ought not to complain much on that score, as nearly every Republican officeholder in the State has been removed."—Inter Ocean.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, SEPT. 21, 1887.

General and Political.

The treasury department purchased $9,300,000 in bonds during August, and foreign exchange ruled so low as to bring us $5,700,000 in gold from across the Atlantic. The disbursements of interests and dividends also released about $15,660,000 within the month.

Dakota is not a state of this Union but it has the best crop record of the world this year. Democracy can not keep the wheat from growing, or reduce the size of the pumpkins and potatoes in Dakota; nor will it much longer be allowed to stand like a bull dog at the door of the Union and keep Dakota from registering as a loyal state.

The Army of the Tennessee held their annual reunion at Detroit last week. Gen. Sherman was present. Hundreds of private soldiers enjoyed the reunion and shook their old commanders' hands with a true soldier's grip. "General," said an old vet in the Russell house to "Old Tecump," "I served under you and I want to shake you by the hand and say God bless you." And the old general took the old vet's hand in both of his and said: "God bless you, sir!" There is a bond affection between the old vets that shoulder straps don't sever. "Uncle Billy" is only "one of the boys" now.

Our president says that for him the office of chief executive of the nation has no personal allurements. One term of the trials, tribulations and responsibilities of the office is enough for him. Still, he confesses that he is not so deaf to the call of duty that he could not hear with pleasurable emotions an announcement that the people were clamoring for his retention in the white house for another four years. He does not want a renomination and re-election, but he would not seriously object to be forced. His position is neither original nor especially heroic.—Chicago Mail.

What did the newspapers and stump speakers who were enlisted for Mr. Cleveland in 1884 solemnly promise in behalf of their party? Why as an earnest of Democracy's determination to restore to the United States the Frugality of the Father's they swore by the tomb of Jefferson that in case it carried the election its expectoration policy would be of the simplest. Didn't they? Didn't they assure the public that under Cleveland an inexpensive style of sawdust should be thickly strewn upon the floors of public buildings to the end that the use of cuspidores might be dispensed with? Didn't they? And didn't they insist that in case any cuspidores were temporarily retained they should be known by the blunt straight-forward name "spittoon?" Didn't they? And didn't they call heaven, earth and the ghost of Andrew Jackson to bear witness that in any event the Democratic party would never, no never go to the voluptuous and extravagant length of condoning "enamelled" cuspidores? They did, they did, over and over again. And yet here in the last half of the Cleveland Administration we find a Democratic official casting Jeffersonian simplicity to the winds and shamelessly advertising in public prints for what? For sawdust for the floor of the Post Office and Court House? No. For a few unostentatious wooden spittoons? No. But for six dozen—seventy-two—"enamelled cuspidores."—New York Tribune.

Ironton Notes.

School commenced on Monday.

John Peterson is rejoicing over the advent of another heir at his home.

Mrs. Ed Jackson and Nettie are in Mancelona this week.

Somebody is stealing all the news and sending it to the Enterprise.

The excursion from the south brought John Wallace of Wayne, to visit Lot Allen, Dr. Chase and wife to visit Duaine Parish, and Mr. Jackson, Mrs. Perry and daughter to visit Ed Jackson.

The breezes blow from over the arm and tell us that John Hayden and Miss Esther Allen were wedded on Friday night, and that a bran new pair of twins of each gender arrived at the home of Henry Sheldon on Thursday. Mother and children doing well.

Nellie Noyes and aunt went to Norwood on Sunday. Some one said they drove the last 'beast of burden' John Hammond bought, but we saw the horses ears and it is a mistake.

Mr. Box and Miss Lenzena, start this week for an extended trip through Canada visiting relatives. They go to the "Soo" first then down lake Huron to Collingwood.

Mrs. John Mosher who has been very ill for several weeks is again convalescent. Her daughter Mrs. Bement of Lansing, is visiting her during her illness.

If you do not subscribe for this paper just send over to your neighbor who has his name on our list and ask him to lend you the paper. It will not inconvenience him in the least as he cheerfully pays for what he gets. Yes borrow it of him: it makes no difference if he has just got the paper from the postoffice. He will lend it to you before he has read the second line. Keep this up 52 times a year and you will save 1½ great, big enormous, solid silver, tied edge dollars, beautifully ornamented with a raised likeness of the goddess of liberty on one side and a similar imitation representing the wild American eagle in the last stage of convulsions trying to get away from you on the other. Oh, what is the earth without the generous and noble! Brace up ye who have been close and stingy and sordid and take the above friend of subscribers for your model. How joyfully, merrily onward the world will roll.—Ex.

A Wise Project.

Mr. Secretary Kane, of the Charlevoix Business Men's Association, made his report Friday evening of his work at the State Association at Flint, last week, to which he was a delegate. Mr Kane made it his especial object, while there, to enlist the delegates from other Northern Michigan towns in a thorough campaign of advertising this section. He conferred with all representatives of the North, and discussed with them the several plans proposed for attracting here those in search of homes and investments. The plan which seemed to meet with the most general approval was to effect an exhaustive compilation of the advantages of this region—its climate, soil, timber, products, facilities for manufacturing, and population and present industries—into a pamphlet, which shall be circulated through the several local associations, in such localities as shall seem best. To this end, if other Northern Michigan Associations will co-operate, it is proposed to call a meeting of accredited representatives, to meet in Petoskey November 1st, more fully materialize the scheme, and provide for the work, which will be prosecuted vigorously the coming winter. We are constrained to believe that such a plan cannot fail to be fruitful of the best results. In fact we believe that in this plan lies a measure of good that can be attained in no other way, unless it be to wait for the lapse of decades to slowly drift thitherward the benefits we seek. Time will bring them, but so it will the millenium. We know this is an opportune hour for a movement of this character. The season just closed has placed the Grand Traverse region in marked and favorable contrast with other localities, in the measure of their agricultural products; the railroad projects under way are sinews of strength, in their promise of development. The business men of this fair north country can add to their capital stock in no better way than by a prompt forward movement in the way of "booming" the region in the manner indicated. Let it be done, and done now.

Educational Matters—Meeting of the Teachers' Association.

The first meeting of the Charlevoix Teachers' Association for the school year 1887-8 will be held at the High School room in Charlevoix on Friday evening, Sept. 30th, and Saturday forenoon, Oct. 1st: evening session beginning at 7:30 o'clock and the morning session at 9:30. The exercises will include the annual address by the president, and discussion of subject as follows:

The Teacher's Preparation: The child and the subject taught," by J. M. Harris, of Ironton.

"Some difficulties in Arithmetic," by Mrs. Della Porter, of Charlevoix.

"Devices for increasing interest in certain Subjects," by H. M. Enos

"The teacher's work outside of the text book," general discussion.

The Question Box, for all.

This last features of the Association meetings has proved to be one of the most profitable of all, giving as it does an opportunity to bring up and briefly discuss any subject that is especially desired by any teacher and leading to a free informal exchange of sentiments.

The annual election of officers will will be held on Saturday. An invitation is extended to all teachers and others interested in school work, to be present and help to make this a good meeting. The past year has proved the Association to be worthy the support of every teacher in the county, and it is earnestly hoped that its sphere of usefulness is to be greatly extended during the current year.

The Public schools opened on Monday last with a very full attendance in all departments. The number enrolled in the various departments up to Tuesday night, is given us follows:

First Department, Mrs. Upright	51
Second Department, Miss Lottie M. Mason	59
Third Department, Miss Maggie O Neil	38
Fourth Department, Miss Flora Nelson	41
Fifth Dept., Gram. Sec., Miss Nettie C. Gray	47
High School, Supt. Student	22
Total	2[illegible]

Death of H. H. Vannornum.

Henry H. Vannornum died at his home in Norwood Township, on Monday night, of paralysis, aged 80 years and four months.

Mr. Vannornum was born in the State of New York, where he resided until his removal to Michigan, in May, 1868. At that time he located in Norwood Township, this county, where he has since lived. He died in comfortable circumstances, as the result of a life of hard work and good management.

He leaves an aged widow and seven children—Horace, the eldest, who has always remained with him, two sons and one daughter in the State of New York, one son in Dakota, Mrs. Chester Denton, of Norwood, and Mrs. James Huntington, of this place.

Mr. Vannornum was a charter member of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M., and a member of Emmet (Petoskey) Chapter of Royal Arch Masons. The funeral occurs from the M. E. church in this village to-day, at 1:30 p. m., with Masonic honors, the officiating minister being Bro. Rev. B. H. Whitman, of Norwood, assisted by Bro. Rev. W. H. McCartney, of this place. The remains will be interred in the Charlevoix cemetery.

The Rev. Sam Small in one of his discourses recently said: "I was born a democrat, raised a democrat. I studied its principles fully. I worked for it. I have spent money for it. I have drank whiskey for it. I have lied for it. I have stolen ballots for it. I have stuffed ballot boxes for it. I did all it told me, and it took me within a half mile of hell." This statement of facts aroused the St. Louis Republican to a furious personal onslaught upon Mr. Small. To read the article one would infer that the Republican had been a quarter of a mile at least nearer headquarters than Mr. Small ever had.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

"TRIPPING Through the Daisies," by W. F. Suffds, one of the prettiest polkas out, for sale at F. A. Cochran & Co's.

The Eastport G. A. R. Reunion.

To the Editors of the Sentinel.

Having a desire to see the country between Charlevoix and Eastport, and to attend the Antrim County reunion of soldiers and sailors, to be held at the latter place on the 14th, 15th and 16th, I took the stage on the 13th and was off on my tour of observation.

Though I had on two previous occasions passed over the road in the winter, I had failed to notice the rolling aspect of the country. I found the hills higher, the valleys narrower, and the whole face of the country much more rugged than I had fancied; and yet there are no hills so high and abrupt, nor valleys so cramped, as not to be under splendid cultivation, showing that the men who settled that region were men of energy and pluck, and the elegant churches and school houses, and beautiful farm residences nestling among the hills, where acre upon acres of rich fruit-laden orchards waving in the breezes testify that they are also men of good taste, who know how to make mother earth yield her choicest blessings, and take their very prominent part in our unwritten history, as the poet Gray expresses it,

"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,
Their sober wishes never learn to stray
Along the cool, sequestered vale of life
They keep the noiseless tenor of their way."

The effects of the protracted drouth are visible, and make the fields look brown and bare.

The first day of the meeting of the Association was anything but encouraging. But few strangers came to town, and had it not been for the appearance of the tents that had been pitched the day before, and the occasional discharge of an old six-pound field piece, one would not have imagined that there was anything unusual going on.

In the evening the boat brought a small reinforcement from Spencer Creek and other points on the lake—enough to make a hideous racket all night. For want of bass drums they hammered old circular saws, and whooped-'er-up all night, visiting hen roosts, and making the chickens squall to alarm their owners; however, I believe no chickens were killed or carried off.

In the morning, Mr. Thurston, of Central Lake, found his buggy on the top of the guard house. It cost him a box of cigars to release it. He paid it like a man. Now team after team, both of horses, oxen and mules, began to pour in from the surrounding country, every vehicle crowded with old and young, coming to do honor to the veterans, and have a good time generally.

About ten o'clock in the forenoon, the vets fell in, had dress parade, the procession formed, and the line of march for the grove was taken up. Here they had a splendid program of music. A prayer, an address of welcome, a response, a speech on our duty to the old flag, and on the importance of keeping up their organization. Having forgotten the names of some of the speakers, I omit them all, and will only say they acquitted themselves well.

Fall in for dinner! And such a dinner! Pans of baked beans, pans of meat and chicken pie, stacks of the most toothsome cake, baskets of sandwiches, piles of buttered biscuit, and heaps of the finest specimens of fruit and sweets, and substantials without stint. After all had partaken, there was more speaking and music. The crowd was a very large and a very orderly one. It was one that proved that Antrim county

"The county side surpasses,
For honest lads and bonny lasses."

Now the teams begin their homeward movement, and the various roads were lined as far as the eye could reach for hours. The feature of the evening was the camp-fire at the school house. The programme was that each one present, when called upon, must either tell a story, sing a song, or make a speech.

Capt. Leavitt was called, but not responding, a corporal and file of men were dispatched with orders to arrest him and bring him before the court. In a short time he came in under guard, was charged with being found in the Colonel's quarters, and eating said Colonel's rations. A plea for mercy was put in by Judge McLaughlin, and on that account, after being adjudged guilty, was sentenced to make a speech, which he did.

After him many comrades responded when their names were called, making a very interesting entertainment. One feature of the speaking that became a trifle irksome was that the majority of the speakers were the heroes of their own narratives; for that, perhaps, they were excusable.

Take it all around, the Association has reason to be well pleased with their reunion, and Antrim county to be proud of her veterans. One notable feature of the meeting was the lack of the fife and drum. However, they did not lack for good music, for the Eastport cornet band was on hand on every occasion. Eastport has reason to be proud of their band, for it is a credit to their town.

Take it "by-and-wide," the reunion of the Antrim County Association of Soldiers and Sailors was a grand success, and we hope the days is far distant when their last reunion will be held.

OLD SOLDIER.

Charlevoix, Sept. 19, 1887.

Democratic party conventions are great on "resolutin" in favor of a free and fair ballot in all elections, but always show their hypocrisy when it comes to practicing what they preach. They oppose all methods looking to securing a free and fair ballot and for preventing frauds on the ballot box. The Democratic ring controls Baltimore. A reform league was organized in that city composed of men of both the leading parties, for the purpose of looking after fraud in elections. At the usual registration of voters an agent of the league was sent to each place with instructions to take notes of all that was done. Two registration officers refused to allow these agents to remain in the rooms. The agents persisted and were arrested. Being brought into court, they were discharged and the right of the league to send its agents to all such places was distinctly affirmed.

The Department of State declines to ask for McGarigle's extradition. So Mac can come out from his hiding, but can't return to America.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE. One span of horses, one yearling colt, two spring colts, one yoke of oxen, two two year old heifers, two yearling heifers; must be sold soon. Terms reasonable. Inquire at this office.

THE PROPERTY known as the Sweetland Sanitarium, on the South upper terrace in the village of Charlevoix, is for sale or rent. Enquire of E. H. Green, Charlevoix, Mich. tf

Mrs. Litney & Carr cordially invite the Ladies to call and examine their mammoth new stock of fall and winter millinery. Their stock comprises everything in all the latest novelties in their line. It will pay you to inspect their goods before purchasing elsewhere. adv

Horse for Sale.

A six year old gray mare, weight, 1,200 pounds; good, sound, kind and gentle. A good work horse, and a perfect horse for ladies' driving. Inquire at this office.

CLOTHING.

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.

My Prices are so Low that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

OUR FALL GREETING.

In extending to our friends the Compliments of the season we desire also to acknowledge the liberal patronage they have bestowed upon us and trust we shall deserve its continuance. We are glad to announce the arrival of all our Fall Goods and we truly believe we surpass all former efforts in the exhibition of the largest assortment and we feel confident that in the selection and purchase of this vast stock that two stores require, our buyer has secured every advantage to be had by Extensive Experience and Ready Cash.

Nor did we neglect to get the very best goods the market afforded besides keeping a low price in view.

CLOAKS. OUR CLOAKS AND PLUSH WRAPS ARE CONVINCING ARGUMENTS OF THEMSELVES. WE ARE SELLING A GOOD CHILDS' CLOAK FOR $1.35 AND LADIES' FROM $3 TO $10.

IT IS OUR AIM TO INCREASE OUR TRADE BY ALL HONORABLE MEANS AND WE DO NOT LOWER PRICE ON ONE ARTICLE AND MAKE UP ON OTHERS.

YARNS. SPECIAL ATTENTION CALLED TO YARNS AND LADIES' AND GENTS' UNDERWEAR. OUR PRICES ARE 20 PER CENT BELOW ANY OTHER DEALER'S. Send for October Fashion Sheet. Free.

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.

THIS WEEK

We open a handsome line of entirely New Patterns in

DRESS GOODS,

direct from the Manufacturers.

Victoria Plaids, new designs, popular price, 50c.
Heavy, all-wool Cloth Suitings, 27 in. 65c.
Full lines of 36 and 50 in. Flannels, 50 to 75c.

Advance Sale of Blankets, next week.

CLOAKS

We are opening the best and cheapest line of Cloaks ever offered in Charlevoix. They were not made to order especially for us, but are new goods direct from a factory which has been compelled to sacrifice.

Within a few days we shall display the finest line of LAMPS, LAMP GOODS, GLASSWARE, DINNER and TEA SEATS that we have ever shown and at much lower prices.

COME and SEE THEM,

J. L. HURD & CO.

ALICK ROSENTHAL, LEWIS BLOCK

CLOAKS! CLOAKS CLOAKS! CLOAKS CLOAKS!

ARE HERE! OF EVERY DESCRIPTION!

For Ladies, Misses, and Children.

COME, COME AND SEE THEM, And see them!

Alick Rosenthal, Lewis' Block.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO.—22 | CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1887. | WHOLE NO. 931

SCHOOL BOOKS

BUY YOUR SCHOOL SUPPLIES AT HEADQUARTERS. WE HAVE EVERYTHING NEEDED IN THE SCHOOL ROOM, AT UNIFORMLY LOW PRICES.

F. G. HINES & CO.

We will furnish the new books adopted by the board at introduction prices. Remember that we sell everything that can be called for in any of our Schools.

SCHOOL BOOK SCHOOL BOOK

SCHOOL BOOKS

EMREY BROS.

Boots and Shoes for almost nothing, to close out.

We have a number of pairs of Boots and Shoes which we will almost give away as we are closing them out.

We are also going out of

CROCKERY

and have a complete assortment which must be sold

WE WILL NOT TAKE A BACK SEAT ON SUMMER DRY GOODS. PRICES ALWAYS LOW.

IN GROCERIES and Provisions we can suit you, as we receive Fresh Goods weekly.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

We are NOT CLOSING OUT

We never did
We do not want to
We are not going to close out

WE AIM TO KEEP OUR STOCK Complete in Every Department AT ALL TIMES.

OUR STOCK OF STAPLE DRY GOODS —AND— BOOTS and SHOES, FOR THE FALL AND WINTER TRADE WAS NEVER MORE COMPLETE THAN NOW.

UNDERWEAR! We have a good line of Ladies', Gents' and Childrens' Underwear.

CLOAKS AT A BARGAIN CLOAKS

We keep Lime, Cement, Stucco & Plastering Hair, We carry a full line of

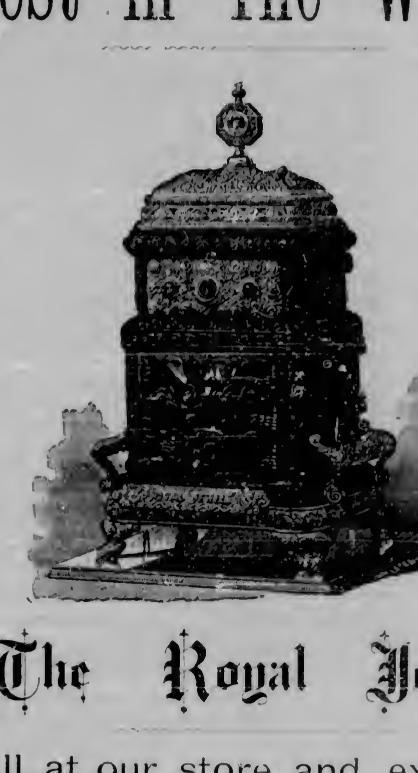
EVERYTHING

usually kept in a first class stock of General Merchandise. We aim to merit the patronage of the prompt paying trade by keeping good goods and selling everything at a uniformly reasonable price.

Resp'y Yours.

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

Best in The World



"The Royal Jewel"

Call at our store and examine the incomparably fine line of Stoves now on exhibition.

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $ $ $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

The Best Groceries At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture

AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice.

WANTED!

Everyone to know that we are here and doing Business, and will do just as we agree to by one and all. We keep GROCERIES and PROVISIONS, FLOUR AND FEED, CROCKERY AND GLASSWARE.

Choice Butter and Fresh Eggs a Specialty. Call on us or order by Telephone.

WILLSEE & CO.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

☞ Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
One year - $1 50 | Six months - $ 75
Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—The Catholic church at Atwood is being completed.

—Wm. L. Stigar, at Antrim, is setting eight pound nets.

—The Atwood postoffice has been removed back to its old quarters.

—L. F. Allen still lingers at Sault Ste. Marie, on the government work.

—Mrs. M. P. Barns has removed to Charlevoix to remain for the winter.

—A Box left for Canada for a visit to relatives near Owen Sound, last week.

—F. A. Cochran & Co., make a specialty of sheet music by the best authors.

—Will Washburn went to Northport yesterday to do some work on his father's place.

—Stockman & Iddings call attention to their line of heating and cooking stoves this week.

—A bouncing girl at the residence of Fred A. Smith 10½ pounds all wool and a yard wide.

—The new residence of Amos Fox is being painted by Swallow, and the blending of colors is very fine.

—Major E. H. Green left Saturday for St. Louis, Mo., to attend the National encampment of the G. A. R.

—W. C. Newman intends making a tour of harbor towns for the purpose of introducing his patent bridge gate.

—Wm. A. Taylor, State agent and organizer of the Prohibition party of Michigan will speak at Opera Hall on Monday evening, October 3d. All are invited. *

—In the language of an old farmer from Eveline yesterday, "potatoes is potatoes this fall." Sixty-five cents now, with no prospect of being less than fifty this fall.

—President Cherrie is in New York with the profiles and maps of the railroad line to Petoskey, and will close negotiations with the syndicate who are to build the road.

—The Petoskey Democrat continues to throw mud at the T. & A. R. R. project. The editor is a better amateur tragedian than journalist, and is very small potatoes at either.

—Mrs. H. V. Rifenburg received a telegram Monday morning from Chicago announcing the death of her mother. Accompanied by her husband, she left for there immediately.

—Monday morning, Hon. John Nicholls wired the following telegram: "Robert Paddock, Industrial School, Lancaster, Ohio: Nine pounds of Paddock boy this morning. All doing well."

—Petoskey Independent. The Charlevoix Business Men's Association sent a delegate to interview various manufacturers throughout the state, and he has returned with the most encouraging prospects. We congratulate our neighbors on their prospects, and would like to see all other Northern Michigan towns follow the example Charlevoix has set.

—An exchange says: "It is all right for the local papers to boom the town for all it is worth and much more; but there are business in every place who send out of town for their printing, because a slick-tongued drummer can make them believe a cheap job, with names spelled wrong, is better than home work, when they know nothing about home prices."

—East Jordan Enterprise: Sol. G. Isaman was informed by banker G. B. Martin, on Saturday, that S. B. Barker & Co., of Chicago, had deposited to his credit $500 forfeit, the sum he was to receive on the failure of the Chicago parties to complete the Intermediate & South Arm railroad by the 10th of Sept. [Now how many such scrapes has old Ward got into around there?—ED.]

—Bellaire Breeze: We are in receipt of a letter from our townsman, A. C. VanTussel, who is now staying at Dewey's camp, near Indian River, Cheboygan county. He informs us that he is getting along nicely; that Mr. Dewey has the finest lot of timber he ever saw—5,000 telegraph poles, 20,000 ties and 20,000 posts. He gives a glowing account of the abundance of deer and grayling in that vicinity, and when the law against shooting deer expires he expects to take solid comfort.

—Tuesday morning the day on which the new marriage law went into effect—Albert R. Wells, of Norwood Township, rode a horse to the county seat to get the first marriage license, and the SENTINEL one year at the expense of County Clerk Thatcher, as hereunto before provided. The license was secured, and Mr. Wells and Miss Louisa McGeagh will be man and wife—if they are not already—with the SENTINEL as the first bridal gift. Two minutes after Mr. Wells reached the Clerk's office, another man came on the same errand, but too late to get the reward. Unhappy man!

—Dr. Wm. A. Atchison is at home again.

—The fishermen are reporting good hauls this fall.

—Two railroads for Charlevoix within two years!

—The old officers of the Agricultural Society were re-elected.

—F. D. Phillips speaks on the labor question at Ironton to-night.

—The sprinkler has stopped work; now get ready for the snow-plow.

—The Council on Friday evening elected A. B. Brink, Village Marshal.

—Smithson's shingle mill is turning out a cargo of shingles every two weeks.

—Mr A. L. Coulter and Miss Jennie Heston, of East Jordan, were married last week.

—J. A. C. Rowan, of Petoskey, attended H. H. Vannornum's funeral here on Wednesday.

—J. A. Vote left Monday for the upper peninsula to be on hand for the deer hunting season.

—Mrs. Henrietta Pope, of this place, has been engaged to teach the fall term at Advance.

—James Beauvais leaves the last of this week for the north shore on his annual trapping tour.

—Mr. S. Parker is erecting an 18x60 poultry house on his premises in this village, and will indulge in the luxury of raising chickens and eggs.

—Sheriff Jerrue, after several months absence in the west, buying horses for the Chicago market, returned to East Jordan last week.

—Mr. Bert Jarvis and Miss Aggie Miller were married at the M. E. parsonage last Wednesday evening, by Rev. W. H. McCartney. Congratulations.

Charlevoix Summer Resort Items.

C. Y. Cook has eighteen boarders. Among the arrivals of the past week are Mrs. D. Whitacre, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Whitacre, of Chicago; Mrs. D. Jones and daughter, of Atlanta, and Mrs. O. W. Thomas, of Louisville.

Mrs. Van Vleck returned home yesterday.

C. F. DeGolyer and family return to Chicago to-morrow.

Ten cottages on the resort yet occupied.

Mrs. Bardeen and daughter expect to return home this week.

Religious.

General Church Matters.

Rev. A. T. Waterman, of Onekama, formerly of Charlevoix, has accepted a call from Bancroft. The church at Bancroft never did a wiser thing than to extend a call to Rev. A. T. Waterman.

Rev. W. E. McLennan—our Billy—has been returned to the Union Mills, Ind., charge.

Congregational Church.

Prof. H. M. Enos filled the pulpit very acceptably last Sabbath morning. Services next Sabbath morning as usual.

M. E. Church.

The new Presiding Elder, Rev. Mr. Sherman, is making friends rapidly among the churches.

Bible reading every Tuesday evening. These readings afford opportunity for bible study that ought to be prized and participated in by all lovers of God and his work. Thursday evening, general prayer meeting. Everybody come and worship with us. Sunday morning and evening, preaching by the pastor. Seats are free. All are welcome. Come! Come! Come!

W. H. M.

The ladies of the M. E. church will hold a social at the church this (Wednesday) evening. A good supper, including peaches and cream will be served from 4 to 9 o'clock. Supper 25 cents. All are most cordially invited to attend.

The Fair.

It cannot be said, truthfully, that the third annual fair of the "Charlevoix County Agricultural Society," was a success. It seems to be the general opinion, supported by that of the officers of the Society, that it was the poorest fair of the three.

Neither can it be said that this is the fault of the Society, or its officers. The grounds heretofore furnished at East Jordan have been inadequate, and last year many of the exhibitors concluded that until better accommodations were furnished, they would not exhibit.

This year better grounds were provided, but too late for a general understanding. East Jordan has under the auspices of their local Driving Park Association, partially enclosed grounds, which includes a very fair half mile track. Suitable buildings and sheds are erected, which are capable of accommodating a respectable exhibit.

The attendance this year was satisfactory—the receipts being somewhat over $600. The display of fruit was the redeeming feature and was a credit to the county.

Charlevoix was represented by goods from the hardware establishment of Stockman & Iddings, and the Rifenburg Milling Co. The exhibit of stock was unworthy of mention. One half of Hon. John S. Dixon's Charlevoix herd would have made a better showing as an exhibit.

The racing Thursday afternoon gave Schofien's gray mare first, and Bowman's bay second prize.

We hope the fourth annual fair will be an improvement on the third, and we have no doubt that it will.

A SURE THING!

Charlevoix to Have a Driving Park and Horticultural Society.

A meeting of several representative citizens was held Monday evening at the office of Mayne & Kane, to consider the question of organizing a Driving Park and Horticultural Association.

Everyone present was deeply in earnest in the matter, and the fact that they represented the solid business and monied element of our town, gives promise that this initial movement will develop into the success that always attends Charlevoix citizens when they unite in an enterprise.

A committee, consisting of Messrs. Boulan, Bartholomew, Mason, McLeod and Gelfick, was appointed to look up suitable grounds. Another, composed of Messrs. F. Smith, B. W. Miller, C. J. Grier, Geo. Burns and W. Scroggie, was appointed to solicit stock and report on a plan of organization.

It was decided that the capital stock should not be less than $5,000.

It requires no argument to prove that Charlevoix is the place for such an institution. Charlevoix is, and always will be, the commercial center of North Grand Traverse, and the most naturally accessible point for adjoining counties, north and south.

Upon either one of the north and south terraces are grounds more suitable for a race track than any in the county—being perfectly level, and possessing a soil naturally adapted to the purpose.

Sites are offered by Carpenter & Bartholomew, the Mason estate, and others, and much encouragement is given on all hands for prompt action in the matter.

There is no obstacle in the way of making the enterprise a grand success. Charlevoix has superior advantages, the means required, and citizens of the necessary enterprise to make them effective.

Let us push the matter to a successful issue.

Marine Jottings.

The schooner Mocking bird brings lath and shingles from Manistee for Nicholls, this trip

Capt. Finnean, of the propeller Lawrence, is very popular with passengers, and is proving himself a skillful navigator.

The report that the popular passenger steamer M. W. Wright, now in dry dock, is to be converted into a barge, is pronounced a canard.

Capt. Eli Toulouse has taken his papers off the tug Bob Stephenson, and goes to Escanaba to try his fortune. He is succeeded by Capt. Dick Williams.

The steam barge Thew is carrying ore from St. Ignace for the Pine Lake Iron Co. She makes three trips per week, and carries 365 tons, at 45 cts. per ton.

This has been a good season for vessel men. There has been large demand for vessels in this trade, freights have been good, and, barring mishaps, everybody has made something.

Capt. T. D. Smith, with the tug Martin and schooner Sea Gem, arrived home from Frankfort Thursday. He succeeded in raising the boiler and engine of the City of Boston, but broke the engine badly in getting it loose from the bottom of the hull. Consequently the undertaking was not as profitable as it might have been.

Capt. Bob Tullock talks of selling the schooner Florence M. Smith and getting into a steam barge. The schooner has gone to Detroit with lumber for Lloyd; from there she goes to Cleveland for oil and coal. The Smith has been one of the most profitable schooners sailing out of this port, and has made a little fortune for her owner since she was launched.

Everybody in this port knows John Freer, master of the schooner Marsh, by means of which McGarrigle, the Chicago boodler, escaped into Canada. One day last week he was arraigned in Chicago, and gave bonds in $4,000 to appear when wanted to answer the indictments against him. He went from Sheboygan and gave himself up at the advice of his employer, Mr. Marsh. Capt. Johnny is on a lee shore this time sure, with both anchors foul. The Chicago News remarks that he would have been a Freer man if he had stayed away from Chicago. Yea verily.

The schooner L. B. Shepard, of Chicago, last Thursday afternoon, undertook to come into the harbor with a royal contempt for tugs. The current out was more than usually strong, and the captain, before he had time to utter a good Norwegian expletive, found himself broadside on the beach about 80 rods south of the piers. The wind freshened from the northwest, and Friday found the vessel in four feet of water, imbedded in the sand, from which two harbor tugs were unable to extricate her. She was scuttled and her owners notified, who dispatched the tug Williams and a steam pump from Manistee, which arrived Saturday morning. The tug Campbell kicked the bar from her weather side, and after working on her all day Sunday, the Williams got her into deep water at dark, and left for Manistee with her early Monday morning, where she will go into dry dock. In pulling on her the mainmast was twisted off at the step, and during the blow Friday several holes were knocked in her bottom. The Shepard is owned by Davison, of Chicago, and carries 150,000 feet of hardwood lumber.

FORAKER

The Governor's Opening Speech of the Campaign.

Eloquent and Forcible Argument in Favor of Republican Principles.

All the Live Issues of the Day Taken Up and Ably Discussed.

CALDWELL, O., Sept. 10.—Governor Foraker opened the campaign here this afternoon. He was greeted by the largest audience that ever assembled in this city, and his remarks elicited the heartiest applause. After being introduced to the vast assembly he spoke as follows:

FELLOW-CITIZENS: We meet here to-day to open another canvass. We are to choose this time only State and county officers. The verdict to be rendered will do more, however, than determine whether we shall have a Republican Governor and Legislature for the next two years. It will have a distinct and positive effect upon the National election that is to follow next year. For this reason it is appropriate to discuss both State and National questions. The importance of a Republican triumph, so far as the State is concerned, can be well shown by recalling the condition of our affairs at the close of Gov. Hoadly's administration and indicating what has been done to remedy the same.

they had ever been before. It was believed that the day was not far distant when the South, recognizing the justice and equity that were involved, would, with a creditable pride in doing what was right, accord to even the most humble colored man the full enjoyment, at the ballot box and otherwise, of all the rights guaranteed by the Constitution. There was nowhere any open defense or laudation of the "lost cause," no complaint that slavery had been abolished, no honoring of secession or the men who had led in upholding the miserable doctrine, no hero worship of Jeff Davis, and no talk by him or any one else about the righteousness of the principles for which the South had contended, or about their being eternal and destined ultimately to succeed. There was nowhere manifested any lack of appreciation for the survivors of the heroes of the Union army. All regarded them as entitled to every praise and to every help a grateful people could extend. No one, North or South, thought of such a thing as questioning their right to liberal pensions, or as claiming that there was any unjust discrimination in pensioning them and not pensioning the soldiers of the South. All over the country, in the South as well as in the North, and among the ex-Confederate soldiers, as well as other classes, this feeling prevailed. All alike understood and appreciated the fact that in that contest one side fought to destroy and the other to save, and that we owed nothing to the one, but everything to the other. Nobody talked then about the war as only a display of American valor; much less did any one ever think of speaking of the Union veterans as "tramps," "paupers," "pension-grabbers," "office-seekers," "socialists," "communists," etc. But, now, how changed! To-day you can hear all these epithets applied, and all these complaints made. Democratic newspapers, such as the Louisville Courier-Journal, Richmond Whig, Bucyrus Forum, and many others daily publish with impunity columns of such offensive stuff. It is not an uncommon thing to hear it proclaimed that secession was right, and that it is an outrage to call the men who fought for it rebels, or even to say that they were wrong. Jeff Davis has been again lionized, and as he traveled about the country we saw him riding in a car that had for its principal decoration the Stars and Stripes and the Stars and Bars intertwined, and Mr. Grady, the chairman, who introduced him to an adoring and revering audience at Atlanta, did so with the announcement that it was "the most glorious day since the resurrection of Christ." In short, we have reached the point where it is demanded, not that the war shall be forgotten, as has been so long the cry, but that the Confederacy and the soldiers and people who upheld it shall be pronounced acquit of all blame and be remembered only with pride and praise because of the bravery they displayed in battling against the Union. Naturally such ideas have been indulged...

[illegible]

HOW TO TREAT COMPANY.

Discourse by the Rev. Dr. Talmage at the Hamptons.

The Trials and Rewards of Christian Hospitality—The Toil and Expense of Exercising It—A Pretty Custom Among the Greeks.

THE HAMPTONS, Sept. 11.—The Rev. Dr. T. De Witt Talmage's text to-day was from Romans xii, 13: "Given to hospitality;" and his discourse was as follows:

There is danger that the multiplication of large and commodious hotels in our towns and cities and villages will utterly exterminate that grace which Abraham exhibited when he entertained the angels, and which Lot showed when he watched for guests at the gate of the city, and which Christ recognized as a positive requisite for entering Heaven when He declared: "I was a stranger and ye took me in."

I propose to speak this morning of the trials and rewards of Christian hospitality. The first trial often comes in the whim and eccentricity of the guest himself. There are a great many excellent people who have protuberances of disposition and sharp edges of temperament, and unpliability of character, which make them a positive nuisance in any house where they stay. On short acquaintance they will begin to command the household affairs, order the employes to unusual services, keep unseasonable hours, use narcotics in places offensive to sensitive nostrils, put their feet at unusual elevations...

[illegible]

...cold, stormy winter night my father entertained Trueman Osborne, the evangelist, and through all eternity I will thank God that Trueman Osborne stopped at our house. How many of our guests have brought for us condolence and sympathy and help! There is a legend told of St. Sebald, that in his Christian rounds he used to stop for entertainment at the house of a poor cartwright. Coming there one day, he found the cartwright and his family freezing for the lack of any fuel. St. Sebald ordered the man to go and break the icicles from the side of the house and bring them in, and the icicles were brought into the house and thrown on the hearth, and they began to blaze immediately, and the freezing family gathered around and were warmed by them. That was a legend; but how often have our guests come in to gather up the cold, freezing sorrows of our life, kindling them into illumination and warmth and good cheer. He who opens his house to Christian hospitality turns those who are strangers into friends. Years will go by and there will be great changes in you, and there will be a great change in them. Some day you will be sitting in loneliness, watching a bereavement, and you will get a letter in a strange handwriting, and you will look at the postoffice mark and say: "Why, I don't know anybody living in that city;" and you will break the envelope, and there you will read the story of thanks for your Christian generosity long years before, and how they have heard afar off of your trouble. And the letter will be so full of kindly reminiscences and Christian condolence it will be a plaster large enough...

[illegible]

Capturing Birds with a Glass.

James Russell Lowell, in one of his essays, tells of the great sport he had at Elmwood in bringing down birds with an opera-glass. Professor Lowell preferred the opera-glass to a gun because it did not hurt the birds and amused him a great deal more. A lady who passes the hours of a long convalescence in observing from her window those traits which nature reveals only to those who watch it because they love it, and who has before favored the listener with her observations, sends the following account of her success in capturing what she calls a leathered enigma. It will be noted that her method of capture closely resembles Professor Lowell's:

I have captured him at last, the little tease, that for three summers or more has haunted the neighboring trees and tantalized me beyond measure by stubbornly refusing to reveal his identity. Day after day have I neglected my work, twisting my neck and straining my eyes gazing tree-topward, and all in vain. I have conjectured to which family he might belong, but I could determine nothing with certainty until now.

He is a beautiful creature, about as long as the hair bird, but more slender, elegant and "natty" in figure, and very graceful and sprightly in all his motions...

[illegible]

A Long and Desperate Charge.

[illegible]

Nearly Had a Pass, Too.

[illegible]

PITH AND POINT.

LOST at sea—the sight of land.

A TRIM creature—the milliner.

A FLAT failure—a poor pancake.

PARTY lines—rows of wallflowers.

A HANGMAN who wished to conceal his vocation said he was traveling for a suspender company.—Texas Siftings.

IT is perfectly safe to go into a dentist's shop and call him a liar to his teeth, if the dentist isn't in.—Texas Siftings.

"Old Tubal Cain was a man of might
In the days when the earth was new,"
But he never tackled a single bite
When the hair hid the butter from view.
—Newman Independent.

"YES, sir," said Dibbs, earnestly, "we should always look upon long-haired men with respect. It is a surety that they have not been in prison for a while."

THE days of the book agent are numbered. A German firm has invented a steel-clad bullet that will penetrate four inches of brass.—Newman Independent.

THE witty man of the Middle Temple students said at a city chop-house: "I won't pay for steaks as tough as these; no law can compel me; they're not legal tender."

RESTAURANT-KEEPER (to guest)—Is your seat quite comfortable, sir? Are you too near the window? Guest—No, the window is all right; but I...

[illegible]

The Union Jack.

[illegible]

Their Weakness.

[illegible]

Shameful Inactivity.

[illegible]

REMINISCENCES OF PUBLIC MEN.

BY BEN: PERLEY POORE.

The funeral of John Quincy Adams was celebrated at Washington, on the 26th of February, 1848. Minute guns were fired, the Executive Departments were put in mourning, and many of the private buildings in Pennsylvania avenue were also hung with black. The stores were closed, and all business suspended. The various societies and public bodies commenced forming at 11 o'clock, and moved toward the Capitol under military escort. The crowd in and around the Capitol was unprecedented. Many people had come in from the country around to witness the ceremonies. A large portion of the Legislature of Maryland and many citizens from Annapolis and Baltimore were present. At ten minutes before 12 o'clock the Speaker called the House to order, at which moment the bell on Capitol Hill commenced its solemn tolling, as the signal for the commencement of the ceremonies. The President of the United States and heads of the departments entered the hall, the former taking his seat on the right of the Speaker. The judges of the Supreme...

[illegible]

Gambling Hells in Paris.

[illegible]

...the same way they gamble on the turf, and it is even complained by their admirers that they sink their passion for dress and appear, contrary to all the canons of Parisian millinery, in slovenly waterproofs and ill-fitting boots on the Pelouse of Longchamps or Chantilly, so absorbed are they in their betting speculations.—London Exchange.

The Science of Sails.

Like a bird's wing, the first need for all effective sail is a rigid leading edge or weather leech; obtained in the square and lug sails by the drag of a bowline, in the lateen-sail by the yard or bone of the sail-wing itself, in stay-sails by the rigidity of the mast or supporting stay, and in jibs by the powerful hoisting purchase and use of chain for halyards. Before the introduction of chain, the jib, like the first string of a violin, was constantly getting out of tune, and in want of setting up.

Another point in a good sail is that the after-edge, when held in place by the sheet, should be as nearly upright or vertical as possible. This edge is always parallel to the seams of the...

[illegible]

ROMANCE OF A CONFEDERATE FLAG.

Its Owner Led Captive Through a Plucky Union Girl.

[American (Ga.) Republican.]

I was a regular rebel soldier, in the Confederate army over four years, enjoyed its triumphs, took my part of its defeats to heart as much as any one, starved, suffered, bled, froze, and melted in winter and summer under the glorious cross of the South, with a heart as full of devotion as a child could have for a mother or a devotee to his true and beneficient God.

When I first started out from the loveliest town in an adjoining State, a lovely daughter of the city gave me a Confederate flag, made of silk, with the bars and starry decorated cross, shining and gleaming with gold and silver threads. It was a pretty thing and I carried it hid in an inside pocket, for it was not larger than a gentleman's handkerchief. I carried it wherever I went, for I had promised to plant it on the Washington Monument if I ever got there.

While Lee's army was encamped near Chambersburg, Pa., one June afternoon I strolled out with Felix C., and about four miles from camp found...

[illegible]

French Economies.

[illegible]

To Marry or Not to Marry.

[illegible]

How to Paper a Room.

The following suggestions are given in the Stockman for the benefit of those who desire to do their own papering. Premising that the old paper, if there is any, should be entirely removed from the walls, for sanitary reasons, it says:

The old paper can easily be removed by taking a common whitewash brush and a bucket of water. Wash the wall all over, and the paper can be torn off and the wall made perfectly clean again; if this is not done there will be ridges wherever the paper is left on, that will show badly with your new paper, especially if it is a light ground.

Care and discretion should be taken in selecting paper for the places they are intended to be put. Light bedrooms with white hangings have a chilly aspect, which should be avoided; also dark ground papers will give rooms that are not fully lighted a somber effect which is depressing. For whatever part of the house it is intended, it should give it that cheerful and home-like appearance bearing evidence of the taste of the occupants.

Having your old paper removed and your new selected, you are ready to...

[illegible]

Her Faith was Solid.

[illegible]

Names of Southern Negroes.

A Yankee friend of mine in speaking of the Limekiln Club says: "It is inimitable, only that the names of the members are so exaggerated." When I wrote her a list of the queer names that have become so familiar to me from much hearing she declared that she would retract her opinion of the Limekiln names being exaggerated. The negroes generally take their names either from their surroundings or obtain them from the white people, often mixing up names in the most incongruous style. Lily is the favorite name for the blackest pickaninny among them. Our old washerwoman named her only child Mary Mandy Selim Pleasant Delightful. A bow-legged young descendant of Ham rejoices in the name of Shadrach Meshach Abednego—though he is generally known as Shad.

A fond young mother could not decide what to call her first son, so in her dilemma applied to a young lady, who told her to call him Willipus Wallapus. The name tickled her fancy, and now Willipus Wallapus is added to the list. This same negro has since become the mother of a daughter, and in speaking of her a few days since says: "I ain't sot on no name for her yit, but I'll either call her Queen Victoria or Mrs. Cleveland." She also has a stepson, an overgrown fellow of 17 or 18, who bears the sweet name of Rosebud Tabb. But perhaps the most ridiculous names are found in those of the children of a half-witted negro near this place. There are three of them, named respectively Heaven, Hell, and Moses Smote the Water. A party of picknickers were very much startled in passing her house one day to hear the following command: "Look hyar, Heaven, you nig-...

[illegible]

Not Honest.

[illegible]

A Great Nation.

[illegible]

A Conductor's Fate.

[illegible]

The Ladies' Favorite.

[illegible]

The Cutest Little Things.

[illegible]

Got the Best of the Doctor.

[illegible]

Don't Laugh at Nervous People.

Their sufferings are very real, although you, with your rigorous physique and strong nerves can scarcely believe it. Rather suggest the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which in removing every trace of dyspepsia, and regulating the liver and bowels, abolishes at and extirpates the most prolific cause of chronic nervous trouble. That nerve-shattering disease, fever and ague, is among the formidable ailments, to the removal of which this genial remedy is specially adapted. Nervous prostration, resulting from prolonged mental or physical effort, is also a state of the system where the intervention of this tonic is very desirable, more particularly as its use is to quiet and relax the tension of overwrought nerves. The Bitters are invaluable in rheumatism, neuralgia, and kidney troubles. Employ no substitute for it.

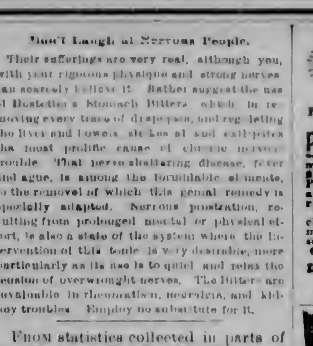
FROM statistics collected in parts of the German Empire, G. Hellmann finds that the danger from lightning, though generally increasing, is diminishing in certain districts, the risk becoming less the more closely houses are clustered. The character of the soil has great influence. Letting one represent the danger from lightning on calcareous ground, two will give it upon marly, nine upon sandy, and twenty-two upon clayey soil. It is a curious fact, not yet explained, that oak is struck much more frequently than other trees, so that, if the danger for beeches be one, that for pines is fifteen and for oaks fifty-four.

THE first regular census under the Constitution of the United States was taken in 1790-91, and it credited the Union with a population of 3,921,326 persons.

MILD, soothing, and healing is Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

THE man who paints the town red frequently gets some of the paint on his nose...

[illegible]



HANDSOME, STYLISH PANTS made to order in first-class style. Perfect Fit guaranteed or money refunded. For samples of cloth and 4 foot tape measure (worth 10c.) send 2 2c. stamps. Circulars Free. Established

OUR FULL SEAMLESS SHOES beat the world. Made in sizes and styles to please. Perfect Fit guaranteed. We refer to any Bank, Express Co., or leading business house in this city. In 1877.

THE HUNTER M'F'G CO. CINCINNATI, O.

WHAT AILS YOU?

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, lifeless, and indescribably miserable, both physically and mentally; experience a sense of fullness or bloating after eating, or of "goneness," or emptiness of stomach in the morning, tongue coated, bitter or bad taste in mouth, irregular appetite, dizziness, frequent headaches, blurred eyesight, "floating specks" before the eyes, nervous prostration or exhaustion, irritability of temper, hot flushes, alternating with chilly sensations, sharp, biting, transient pains here and there, cold feet, drowsiness after meals, wakefulness, or disturbed and unrefreshing sleep, constant, indescribable feeling of dread, or of impending calamity?

If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from that most common of American maladies—Bilious Dyspepsia, or Torpid Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery...

[illegible]

CURES ALL HUMORS

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

CONSUMPTION,

Liver, Blood, and Lungs.

World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., BUFFALO, N. Y.

CATARRH AND HAY-FEVER CURE. ELY'S CREAM BALM.

OPIUM

PENSIONS

KIDDER'S DIGESTYLIN. A SURE CURE FOR INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA. FOR CHOLERA INFANTUM.

$250 A MONTH.

PENSIONS

OPIUM

PATENTS

DR. BAIRD'S GRANULES

KIDDER'S PASTILLES

MARVELOUS MEMORY

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

FOR HORSES.

Sick Headache

Hood's Sarsaparilla. 100 Doses One Dollar.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN

RHEUMATISM, All Aches and Pains.

CATARRH

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER The Best Waterproof Coat Ever Made.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the Advertisement in this Paper.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, SEPT 28, 1887.

All laws passed at the last session of the legislature will be in full force after Sept. 27th.

And now Mr. Westinghouse of Pittsburg, has discovered a process of making gas, better than natural gas, which can be produced at a cost of five cents a thousand feet. What next.

The people of the Province of Nova Scotia were startled one evening last week by the apparent explosion of a meteor of extraordinary size and brilliancy. It is described as "a luminous body, looking as large as an elephant, with a long tail attached." It exploded with a terrible noise.

Oregon and Washington Territory contain vast forests of hemlock, and thither one would suppose there would be a perfect rush of tanners from the denuded Eastern states. Singular to relate, however, the hemlock bark in the Pacific coast region does not contain any tanning. That knocks the tannery business higher than a kite.

The Chicago anarchists, it is reported, have begun to weaken. Four of them at least regret their show of bravado on the receipt of the news of the Illinois supreme court decision and wish that they had assumed an attitude calculated to inspire public sympathy. Capt. Black entered a motion before the Illinois supreme court for withdrawal of the original record in the case for 30 days that it might be submitted to the U. S. supreme court. The motion was overruled. Capt. Black was much discouraged by this action. Justice Miller of the United States supreme court, on whose hostility to capital punishment the friends of the anarchists placed much hope, stated to an Evening Journal reporter at Chicago Tuesday that the United States court rarely touched a case decided by the state court and then it must be shown that constitutional rights or federal laws have been broken in the trial.

We have received from President Collier, Vice President H. W. Grady and Secretary Smyth details of the great Piedmont exposition, and the invitation to the veterans of the union armies that fought from Chattanooga to Atlanta. This grand exhibition opens at Atlanta Oct. 10th and closes Oct. 22d. A hearty welcome will be given to all union soldiers. The invitation has been accepted by thousands of old soldiers of the union living in the northwest, and it is probable that more of them will be assembled on the line from Chattanooga to Atlanta during October that have been gathered together for years. The exposition company has arranged an interesting programme. On Tuesday night, Oct. 11, the second day of the exposition, Kennesaw mountain will be illuminated. Pictures of Sherman and Johnson will be displayed in fire, 5,000 rockets will be flown by electric match from the mountain. Artillery will be on the mountain and the cannon booming will recall the battle that waged there. During the afternoon of this day there will be a reunion of the blue and the gray, with a grand barbecue tendered by the citizens of Marietta, one of the most beautiful cities in the south, at which the national cemetery is located.

The great International military encampment to be held at Chicago from Oct. 1st to Oct. 20th, will be the first of its kind ever witnessed in this country. Troops from every arm of the service, from every state in the Union, and from Norway, Sweden and Denmark, are to compete in drill, evolution and rifle practice. Detachments of cavalry, infantry and artillery from the regular army will compete with crack companies of the state troops and the foreign soldiers. The consolidated military bands will number 1,000 pieces, and will give a number of concerts. Sham battles, naval maneuvers and elaborate fireworks will be among the attractions. The fireworks are to be displayed by the great firm of James Pain & Son, of London, England, and will be the greatest exhibition ever seen on this continent. It is as yet uncertain how many soldiers will be gathered but entries are rapidly being made by mail and telegraph, and the probabilities point to the presence of eight or ten thousand troops. Lieut. General Sheridan will be the reviewing officer. The time from Oct. 1st to 12th will be consumed in battalion, regiment and company drills, for infantry, cavalry competitions, zouave, and cadet parades. From Oct. 12 to Oct 20, there will be a succession of interesting exercises, consisting of individual drills, mounted contests, rifle practice, etc. We presume that special rates will be announced by the railroads in time for attendance at the encampment.

Northern Michigan News.

J. G. Mosser has made 1,000,000 brick at Cadillac this summer.

The Kalkaska and Elk Rapids survey party have reached Kalkaska.

J. F May, of Boyne Falls, raised corn over fourteen feet high, on which the ears started seven feet from the ground.

Hon. D. C. Leach has gathered about six bushels of berries from his cranberry plantation, near Walton, this season.

The Cheboygan News states that Wm. McArthur is thinking seriously of putting in an electric street railway at Cheboygan.

The first railroad arrived at the "Soo" Sept. 16, and the event was celebrated with booming of cannon and a grand celebration.

The Pine Lake Lumber Co., located on South Arm, have 1,000,000 feet of hardwood lumber piled on their docks, to be shipped next season.

Petoskey Democrat: We understand that Mr. Hursburger and family, will soon remove to Port Huron, which place they expect to make their future home.

The Atwood school opened last week Monday with Miss Effie Salisbury teacher; the Antrim school with Miss Kate Wagley teacher, and the See school with Miss Altha Wilkinson teacher.

The St. Ignace Watchman states that Fred R. Emerick, formerly clerk of the steamer West, will build a large hotel on the site of the burned Mackinac House, at the Island, and have it ready for next season.

Mrs. H. W. Beach is visiting at Dr. Hampton's. She is on her way to Florida to join Mr. Beach, and does not expect to visit Northern Michigan again for some time.—Harbor Springs Independent.

Wm. Ettawageshick, the Indian boy whom the Franciscan fathers have been educating at their school at Harbor Springs, has been sent by them to a college of their order in Illinois where he will be educated for the priesthood.

Manton: Messrs. Millard & Richards, of Kalkaska, were in town Tuesday, completing arrangements for locating their stave machinery at this place. The village, for their part, have purchased five acres of land and will donate it to them.

Harbor Springs Republican: M. F. O'Donnell and family arrived here from Beaver Island on the Cummings on Sunday, enroute for Alpena. Mr. O'Donnell has accepted a position as book-keeper for the Alpena Fish Co., hence his removal to that place.

Traverse Bay Eagle: Large quantities of peas are being delivered to Mr. P. P. Avery, at his warehouse every day. He has now between six and seven thousand bushels on hand and is shipping away daily. While the yield has not been large this year, the quality has been excellent.

Certainly the world moves a little. In the Traverse City Herald of last week was the following notice: "All Christian people are requested to attend the services to be held at the Jewish synagogue in this place, next Sunday and Monday, from 6 a. m. to 12 m.

Petoskey Independent: The winter time card of the G. R. & I. will go into effect next Sunday. We are informed that the time of arrival and departure of trains will be about the same as last winter. —Charlevoix county sent a fine exhibit to the state fair. It is a pity that Emmet county did not do likewise.

Kalkaska Leader: Mr. W. R. Parker, of this Township, reports a yield of 33 pounds of oil from five acres of peppermint. He labored under many disadvantages. His crop was all spring planted, and in poor shape to stand the hot dry weather, but under the circumstances he is well satisfied with the general result.

The Cheboygan Tribune has an account of the suicide of one John Walker, at Irwin's camp, six miles west of Wolverine. He left his work and returned to camp in the afternoon, and having locked himself in, shot himself through the heart with a Winchester rifle. He was from Kingston, Ont.

Mancelona Herald: The order given by the Antrim Iron Co. to the mine owners last spring was for 30,000 tons of ore, the greater part of which has been received. The ore trains are making their regular trips, and last week delivered something over 1,900 tons. We learn the company has just received the first shipment of a new ore from the Wheeler mine.

As a funeral procession was crossing the railroad track at Traverse City last week on its way to Oakwood cemetery, the horses attached to the hearse became frightened at a passing car and ran away. The hearse was overturned and broken into pieces. The coffin containing the body of a boy 13 years old was thrown to the ground and split open so that the corpse was visible.

A tramp who visited Ishpeming a few days ago told the editor of a local paper that he was a brother to a Manistique editor, explained to the Deputy Postmaster, as he tried to borrow a quarter, that he was formerly postmaster at Kalamazoo, told a saloon keeper, who offered him a sandwich, that he was thirsty and hungry and engaged the Opera House for "one night only," borrowing fifty cents to clinch the bargain.

A Traverse City special says: At the first day of the Driving Club fall meeting, held at the fair grounds in this city, two races were had. The three minute race was won by Germaine's Prince. The 2.40 race was easily won by M. Vinton's horse, Billy Bow legs. Preparations are being made for our county fair, Oct. 4, 5, 6 and 7, which promises to equal, if not surpass, anything of the kind ever held in Northern Michigan, especially as regards fruit and vegetables.

Sault Ste Marie Democrat: The street car company, we are informed by Thomas Ryan, have made arrangements with the Edison Electric Light company to propel their cars by electric power. This will be a great improvement over horse cars, and although the outlay will be more at first, the saving will easily make it up before a year has passed. Horses are too slow for the people at the Sault, where time is money and it will be a great saving to the community all around.

Northport News: Rev. C. N Coulter goes from here to Leroy for the ensuing year. —Geo. Perkins made the first big lift of the season last week 1,000 pounds of white fish. —If "Prof. Ferguson, of Boston," who gave a musical entertainment here last Friday night, would furnish a little more music and less palaver, his show would be more attractive. This is simply a pointer, Mr. Ferguson. He expects to repeat his performance here at an early date.

Cadillac special: A reception was tendered Friday evening to Rev. A. J. Eldred, of the M. E. church, at the residence of H. N. Green. Mr. Eldred has been appointed to the M. E. church at Elk Rapids, and the reception was for the purpose of showing the esteem in which he was held, and bidding him good bye. —Madam rumor has it that John M. Rice will soon resign his position as editor of the News and Express, and go to seek his fortune on the Pacific slope—probably California.

Reed City Clarion: Lew Palmer, of Big Rapids, ran onto his old fifer, Charlie Miller, of Lake City, Thursday. Lew looked him in the eye a moment, then grabbed his hand and said: "By the gods, Charlie, how are you?" After shaking hands an hour or so, Lew said: "Get your fife, old boy, I'll hunt up a snare drum." These were soon procured, and the way they pounded out the martial music went to show that they were dandies on the march, and that they had not forgotten the business yet.

Hon. A. Buttars, of Charlevoix, the jolly, good-natured ex-Lieutenant Governor, was in the city and made the Telegram-Herald a pleasant call last evening. Mr. Buttars says that in consultation with J. B. Mulliken of the C. & W. M. railroad, yesterday, he was informed that said road would positively be extended to Charlevoix, no difference how many other roads were built there. There is certainly no reason then why Charlevoix, the belle of the north, should not look up and take courage.—Grand Rapids Telegram-Herald.

A Sutton's Bay telegram to the Kalamazoo Telegraph says: William A. Taylor, state organizer of the Prohibition party, came here from Lansing to deliver an address. A large crowd turned out, and while the people were listening to Mr. Taylor's remarks, a mob of roughs—saloon sympathizers gathered outside. They hammered drums and pounded tin pans. Mr. Taylor ignored them and continued his talk. When he had finished, the mob grew bold and savage, but fearing the audience, which was larger in numbers than their band, they waited until most of the people had gone. As the speaker and a few others, mostly ladies, were leaving the hall, an attack was made upon them with clubs, appropriated from a neighboring fence. John Calman, who was the first to leave the building, was brutally knocked down. A dozen roughs pounced upon him, and during the melee Mr. Taylor escaped. "Kill him! kill him!" the ruffians shouted. "Kill the crank speaker!" But he had retired from their grasp. It is believed here that he would have been killed if the mob had caught him. John Calman's friends rescued him after he had been roughly treated. Levi Cosart was the most seriously injured. He received six cuts made by the clubs upon his head and face. He was also brutally kicked in the chest. His recovery is doubtful. Several others were injured, among them a rioter, whose head was badly cut. Arrests will be made, and all that money can do to hunt down the miscreants will be done.

DRY GOODS!

New Goods arriving by every Boat from the Best Houses of East and West, to our already complete stock of Dry Goods.

Our Winter CLOAKS,

are being manufactured expressly for us and will be here in about a week, when we will show as good a line as you ever saw here

Cor. Bridge & Main sts.

VERY RESP'Y,

B. SEE.

Probate Order.

[illegible] JAMES A. KLAT, Judge of Probate.

Probate Order.

[illegible] JAMES A. KLAT, Judge of Probate.

Sheriff Sale.

[illegible]

Probate Notice.

[illegible] JAMES A. KLAT, Judge of Probate.

Mortgage Sale.

[illegible]

Mortgage Sale.

[illegible]

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

Standard Time.

Charlevoix and East Jordan. [illegible]

Charlevoix and Boyne City. [illegible]

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan. [illegible]

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE. [illegible]

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS. [illegible] Charlevoix [illegible]

Bank of

Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security [illegible]

Its Officers [illegible]

Security in Banking [illegible]

This Bank Invites [illegible]

This Bank Will [illegible]

Parties Seeking [illegible]

Investment Notes, [illegible]

We Solicit Your Patronage.

WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK DETROIT, - - MICH.

$500,000 TO INVEST IN BONDS [illegible]

S. D. ELWOOD, Treasurer.

For Sale

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix.

Land for Sale.

[illegible] JAMES METCALF, Charlevoix.

Land for Sale.

[illegible] THOMAS WEST, 157 Lafayette St., Grand Rapids.

CROSS & SONS.,
Buy and Sell all kinds of
Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.
Charlevoix, - Mich.

CHARLEVOIX
Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres., F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Henry Bennett, O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls, A. Buttars,
A. R. Upright, A. Fox,
F. A. Smith,

CAPITAL $25,000
SURPLUS 2,000

[illegible] $50,000 [illegible]

CORRESPONDENTS:
National Park Bank - New York.
Commercial Nat. Bank - Chicago.
Nat. City Bank - Grand Rapids.
Detroit Nat. Bank - Detroit.

160 Acres in MARION
Township For Sale at a Bargain, Terms to suit.

MONEY TO LOAN ON
Approved Real Estate Security.
THEODORE R. CHAPIN,
Boyne City.

JOHN CONNOR,
Fashionable
Boot and Shoe MAKER.

[illegible]

All Work Guaranteed.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,
ARCHITECT
AND CONTRACTOR,
—ON—
Charlevoix Summer Resorts.

I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.

I employ only first-class workmen, both

Carpenters and Painters.

[illegible]

J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller,
Offer a
Mammoth Stock
OF
BOOTS, SHOES
and other
FOOT WEAR,
--AT--
LOWER PRICES
Than can be found elsewhere in the County.

We have just secured a
FIRST-CLASS
SHOEMAKER,
And will make Repairing a specialty.

We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.

NOTHING SHODDY.

Fox & Miller.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter.

RIFENBURG MILLING CO.
Charlevoix, Mich.

[illegible]

3 EXTRA GRADES
OF
FLOUR
Feed, Corn Meal, Graham

[illegible]

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL

Litney & Steimel
LIVERY,
And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.

Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the
BEST BOATS!

[illegible]

LEAST MONEY!

All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.

LEAVE ORDERS

[illegible]

J. BEAUVAIS.

BETTER THAN MEDICINE!
KEEP YOUR FEET WARM.

You can't enjoy good health unless you clothe the feet properly.

D. SHERWOOD & CO.
have just received the finest line of Fall and Winter

BOOTS & SHOES

ever brought to Charlevoix. Give them a call.

A. J. McLEOD,
Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail
All kinds of
FRESH MEATS,
SALT PORK,
SMOKED & SALTED
HAMS,
Dried and Smoked
BACON, DRIED BEEF,
Bologna, Head Cheese,
Sausage.

Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.

Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.

A. J. McLEOD.

Washburn & Ackert,
FOUNDREYMEN,
MACHINISTS,
And Manufacturers of The
Charlevoix Plow.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!

Builders and Manufacturers of

BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.

Sheet Iron Work given special attention.

MARINE WORK a specialty.

HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law Office in Buttars Block, Charlevoix Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

DALTHORP & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st. Charlevoix, Office hours [illegible]

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post-office.

I. O. O. F.—Round lake lodge No. 291, meets second and Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 128, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157 meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 101, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 1[illegible], K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7.30 p. m.

President—Byron See.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—R. Suffield.
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—R. Lee Iddings, W. A. Brown and G. Y. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Geo. W. Crouter, R. W. Miller, S. M. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, D. Bergan.

All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - Mich.
Every convenience for the traveling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
Lorenzo Cook, Manager
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 150 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE.
W. C. Newman, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - Mich.
Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and Dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. E. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. B. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.

DENTIST.

N. J. PERRY, Dentist.
Office in West's Drug Store,
Charlevoix, Mich.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card for Petoskey.

IN EFFECT, JULY 1887.

Leave Going North [illegible]
Leave Going South [illegible]

Michigan Central

The Direct Route
Between
Mackinaw City & Detroit
Jackson,
The South and East.

Trains leave Mackinaw City [illegible] daily except Sunday and 10 p m daily arriving at

Detroit	9.10 p m and 11 a m
Jackson	10.30 p m and 11 20 a m
Toledo	10.55 p m and 4.45 p m
Buffalo	6.15 a m and 8.07 p m
Cincinnati	6.35 a m and 6.10 p m

WAGNER PALACE SLEEPING AND PARLOR CARS.

W H JONSTON, Mich Pass Agt, Grand Rapids
O W RUGGLES, G. P. & T. Agt, Chicago

DULUTH, SOUTH SHORE AND ATLANTIC RY.

"SOO-MACKINAW SHORT LINE."

Only Direct Route to Marquette and and the Iron and Copper Regions of Lake Superior.

Traversing the most Picturesque portion of Upper Michigan through a country unequalled for

Hunting, Fishing, Etc.

Two Through Express Trains daily in each direction to which are attached

NEW, ELEGANT and COMMODIOUS OBSERVATION PARLOR CARS & WAGNER SLEEPING COACHES

Tickets over this route are on sale at all principal ticket offices. Full information as to rates etc., maps and folders will be furnished. Address
E. W. ALLEN,
Gen. Pass and & Tkt Agt, Marquette, Mich.

WIT AND HUMOR.

The gambler's favorite food is steak cooked over fire of chips.—Boston Courier.

The great trouble with some people is that their upper and lower lips are strangers to each other.—Puck.

Some things a woman doesn't know, of course, but one of them isn't what she thinks of some other woman.—Boston Journal of Education.

Wife—O, doctor, Benjamin seems to be wandering in his mind! Doctor (who knows Benjamin)—Don't trouble about that—he can't go far.—Tid-Bits.

Two little girls of 7 and 8 are playing together. "And your papa, what does he do?" asked one of them. "Whatever mamma says."—Paris Figaro.

The Globe's idea of a reckless man is one who appears on the street without his coat off and a lot of 10-cent cigars sticking in his vest pocket.—Atchison (Kas.) Globe.

Live in peace with yourself, with your relatives, with your neighbors. Do all the good you can, and expect no thanks, for this will save you from disappointment.—Our Dumb Animals.

Teacher—The wisest man that ever lived said: "There is nothing new under the sun." Little boy (enthusiastically)—"But I'll bet they never had a baby at his house!"—New York Ledger.

Mrs. De Bare—"Don't you think, dear, that there is more individuality in female dress now than formerly?" Mr. De. Bare—"Yes, dear, There is less dress and more individual."—Texas Siftings.

Swinburne wrote a poem on "Children's Tears." If children's tears gave impetus to poetic grindings the slipper would soon become recognized as the soda of music.—Oshkosh North-Western.

Among the presents at a recent Adrain (Mich.) wedding were eight pickle casters. This is just about enough to hold the pickles the couple will get into during the next two years.—New Haven News.

"Isn't there anything you would rather have than a dish of ice-cream?" he asked, as they emerged from the theatre. "Yes, George; two dishes of ice-cream," she murmured, softly.—Washington Critic.

A news item says that "the body of a Chicago Socialist was recently washed ashore." It was necessary. A bath-tub does not hold water enough to wash the body of a Chicago Socialist.—Norristown Herald.

"That is the last novel I shall ever read," said a gentleman, throwing the book down in disgust. "What's the matter, dear?" inquired his wife, "doesn't it end happily?" "No, they were married."—Harper's Bazar.

A scientific writer tells how water can be boiled in a sheet of paper. We don't doubt. We have known a man to write a few lines on a sheet of writing paper that kept him in hot water for three years.—Christian at Work.

"Yes," said Dumley, "I only see my landlord when he comes for the rent. He comes promptly the 1st of every month." "And then you don't see him again till next month?" "O, yes, I do I see him often during the month."—New York Sun.

Mrs. X——(who has been talking)—but I see your mind is on some business matter, George. I'm afraid I'm interrupting you. Mr. X——(reflecting on the races of yesterday)—O, no—no—go ahead? I'm not listening.—Buffalo Commercial.

"Three arts for the minister to learn—expression, compression, impression." So speaks the Christian Register. We would add suppression. Happy the minister who does not fear to prune his sermons, as wise gardeners do their vines.—New York Observer.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed an old gentleman at the opera last night before the rise of the curtain, "what's the bally doing over there in the dress circle?" and he was hardly pacified when told that he was looking at some ladies in very full dress.—Buffalo Courier.

"What is this?" said Blabbs, at the boarding-house breakfast table yesterday, reading from his morning paper, "Coffee stronger? That is jolly." Then he examined his cup and put on a disgusted look when he found no grounds for the delusive hope.—New Orleans Picayune.

"My dear, why are the eggs always hard at breakfast now?" asked Mr. Snaggs. "They must be eggs of the new hens," replied Mrs Snaggs, thoughtfully. "The new hens. Why should their eggs be hard?" "They are Plymouth Rocks, you know."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

Boston gets away with a good many baked beans, to be sure, but the true Bostonian eats his beans only by the light of the microscope showing the starch grains broken up and mixed in one homogeneous mass that will not polarize light with a selenite plate.—Boston Commonwealth.

Magistrate—A little difficulty between ladies, eh? Has the complainant been sworn? Plaintiff's lawyer—Not yet. Magistrate—What is your age, madam? The complainant—Nineteen. Magistrate—Now, will you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth, etc? Philadelphia Call.

In Cleveland dry-goods houses girls using slang are fined a penny per slang. One girl who was fined $17.50 in seventeen minutes said to another employe: "You bet they won't fine me again, and don't you forget it," and she put on her hat and coat and went home.—Norristown Herald.

South-Sea Islander—So you came out here to save me? Missionary—Yes. South-Sea Islander—And if you had not come I could not have been saved? Missionary—No. South-Sea Islander—What a lucky thing it was for me that the Pacific Mail Steamship Company was organized.—Tid Bits.

"Mr. Brown, your dog has broken his chain and has bitten your neighbor's little boy." "What! that Smith brat?" "No; the Jones boy." "O, you don't know how you frightened me. That Smith boy is as full of scrofula as an egg is full of meat. I would not have anything happen to that dog for money."—Boston Transcript.

"I'm a writer for an undertaker's journal," said Graves, when asked his occupation. "Do you ever have any of your contributions rejected?" asked his friend. "O, yes," was the ready response; "but when they are returned as being too gloomy I remail them to a comic paper, and they are accepted with thanks."—Drake's Traveler's Magazine.

A man at Americus went to bed thinking so intently of a mulberry tree that he was to transplant in the morning that he got up in his sleep and transplanted the tree, and went back to bed without waking up.

The Family Medicine Chest.

Every family should be supplied with a small medicine chest, especially in the country where the drug store cannot be promptly reached or a doctor visited. These chests can be bought at prices ranging from $3 to $25, according to size, kind of material used and beauty of finish. They contain square, velvet-lined compartments into each of which a square bottle with a ground-glass stopper is fitted. Beneath is a drawer for salves, plasters and medicines in a dry state. You can make your own chest, if handy with tools and disposed to be economical.

I have had such a chest in use for twenty years. It has paid me over and over, and has often spared me great anxiety of mind. It contains six four-ounce bottles in which I keep Jamaica ginger, camphor, sweet spirits of nitre, a mixture of sweet oil and lime water, etc.; it also contains six two-ounce vials filled with laudanum, paregoric, hive syrup, arnica, etc. In the drawer I keep chlorate of potash, sugar of lead, court plaster, ready-spread mustard plaster, lint, a wad of cotton, etc. Every article is plainly labeled, and thus I have at hand many of the remedies most needed in ordinary emergencies.

It does not require a great knowledge of medicine to know what to use for the ordinary ailments of the human family, especially for the younger members. In cases of fever a teaspoonful of sweet spirits of nitre in a glass of water taken in small sips at short intervals is most excellent. A relief for scalds, burns, poison ivy, etc., will be found in an external application of sweet oil and lime water. Jamaica ginger is used for cramps in the stomach. Sugar of lead water used externally will reduce swellings in the limbs. Hive syrup is given for croup. Arnica is rubbed on sprains, bruises, insect bites, etc. Chlorate of potash is used for sore throat.

Of course, if the case is a serious one, a physician should be promptly consulted; but during the interval these simple remedies can be intelligently used, and such prompt intelligent use is often of great service previous to the arrival of the physician. More than one physician has said to me, in substance, "you have checked the disease in its early stage; I have little to recommend beyond what you have already done.

My wife and myself have been alarmed scores of times by symptoms of fever or croup in our children on a midwinter midnight, the nearest physician five miles away. In almost every instance by giving the patient sweet spirits of nitre for the fever, or hive syrup for the croup, we found the child much better in the morning, our fears allayed, and the visit of a physician unneeded. These statements, borne out by a long experience, should be sufficient to extend the introduction of the family medicine chest. I have found it of such great use to me, in a practical, beneficial and economical way that I am urged to call the attention of others to its merits.—Frank. H. Stauffer, in Good Housekeeping.

A Dog Teaching Industry.

Flash, the finely bred setter owned by Dr. C. A. Packard of Bath, has a favorite house in the city which he often visits. The other day he was there at the dinner hour, and, civil dog that he is, he waited till the family rose from the table, when he made his presence known and was at once admitted as a welcome guest. One of the family, a lady, is very fond of Flash, and he reciprocates the kindness shown him. The lady is a great knitter, and as Flash entered the hallway he passed to a room, secured the lady's knitting work, and brought it to her. Finding that the ball of yarn was not with it he at once returned and secured that also and then laid himself at the lady's feet while she went on with her work.—Brunswick (Me.) Telegraph.

Three Little Sailors.

With a worn-out tub for a vessel staunch
Three little boys went a sailing.
No water was there but the bright green grass,
That waved and tossed when a breeze would pass,
And 'twas bound by the garden paling.

There was captain and mate and the merry crew—
No more could the vessel hold.
But merry crew toiled with remarkable skill,
And the mate kept his post with a right good will,
And the captain was brave and bold.

To the old gray porch was the vessel bound,
They called it a foreign shore.
"Land ahoy!" But the merry crew cried with a pout!
"Oh, Timmy, not yet! I ain't going to get out;
I want to go sailing some more!"

The captain turned with an awful frown
To the mutinous one at his side
But the stern rebuke was not given that day,
And the awful frown to a smile gave way
As a newcomer he espied.

The Maltese, Lady Fair, crept cautiously near,
As if ready to join in the play.
"Forward here!" cried the captain "and lower the boat!
There's a poor sailor here on the ocean afloat,
Quick, and rescue the lone castaway!"

Alas! for the captain, his mate and the crew
Alas! for benevolent zeal,
Six small, eager hands stretched to old lady Fair,
Six heels appeared suddenly high in the air,
And the vessel lay top under keel.

A shipwreck is truly a terrible thing,
And though weakness of heart we deplore,
You will not be surprised to hear the crew
That, after enduring that most awful fate,
The captain, the crew and the sturdy young mate
Concluded to stay upon shore!

—Ella Randall, in Golden Days.

Col. Bob's Philanthropy.

Everybody knows Col. Ingersoll's reputation as a lawyer and a politician, but everyone can not speak of his personality truly. Take word "friend," for instance. The broadness of the term can not be better shown than by something he said to a man last week. They were talking of the prosaic matter of "new shirts," when the colonel declared he was not going to have another made for him until he could find a shirt-maker who was honest enough to give the woman who did the work the $1.50 each he was willing to allow.

"I'm afraid you'll have to wait some time. Shirtmakers' fortunes are not built that way."

"Then I'll wait," said the colonel. Henceforth I wear no shirt until I have seen the woman who makes it, and she has told me herself that she got paid for her work."

This, then, is what the word "friend," as applied above, means. No man can say that Col. Ingersoll ever paid him less than his work was worth, even in the most liberal sense of the word, or that he was ever asked for a good turn and was refused. It is not to his friends that this bighearted man is a friend, but to all honest men and women.—New York World.

Foreigners remark upon the large proportion of abnormally stout women seen on our streets.

These Are Solid Facts.

The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly is Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the Liver, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Weak Kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or whoever requires an appetizer, tonic or mild stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Dr. G. W. Crouter.

A Captain's Fortunate Discovery.

Capt. Coleman, schr. Weymouth, plying between Atlantic City and N. Y., had been troubled with a cough so that he was unable to sleep, and was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It not only gave him instant relief, but allayed the extreme soreness in his breast. His children were similarly affected and a single dose had the same happy effect. Dr. King's New Discovery is now the standard remedy in the Coleman household and on board the schooner. Free Trial Bottles of this Standard Remedy at Dr. G. W. Crouter's Drug Store.

THE REV. GEO. H. THAYER, of Bourbon, Ind., says: "Both myself and wife owe our lives to SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE."

ARE YOU MADE miserable by Indigestion, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Yellow Skin? Shiloh's Vitalizer is a positive cure. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

WHY WILL YOU Cough when Shiloh's Cure will give you immediate relief. Price 10 cents 50 cts. and $1.

SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY—a positive cure for Catarrh, Diptheria, and Canker Mouth. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

DAN'L S. WAY,
Photographer.
In Bradbeer's Gallery.
Photographs of all sizes taken.
Old Pictures copied and enlarged.
CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

W. H. FRANCIS
FURNITURE
—AND—
JOBBING SHOP,
Will also do
Contracting & Building,
In Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.

[illegible]

Shop on South Terrace,
Opposite Sheriff Herder's residence.

MILLINERY,
FANCY GOODS,
DRESS-MAKING.

We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.

DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.

ALDRICH SISTERS.
Ingleside Building.

C. H. Maddaugh,
MERCHANT TAILOR.

I have just received a fine line of Samples of first class Fall & Winter Tweeds. Call and look them over.

Fine Samples of
OVERCOATINGS!
now awaiting your inspection.

Call and see me, Satisfaction Guaranteed.

CHARLEVOIX
Manufacturing Co.
Charlevoix, Mich.,
Manufacturers of
Sash and Doors,
Blinds, Mouldings etc.
NEWELL
Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails
kept in stock.
Window & Door Frames made to order.
All Kinds of
Building Material
Kept constantly on hand.
PLANS &
SPECIFICATIONS,
Furnished on application.
Cottages made a specialty
also contracting and building
Correspondence solicited.

New JEWELRY
AND
SILVER WARE.

I have just received a very fine stock of
Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc
which I will sell at Prices Lower than the same goods can be purchased outside.

Did it ever occur to you that by patronizing home Merchants you were benefitting yourselves?

All classes of Repairing done quickly.

C. R. BELLINGER.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
[illegible]
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

W. A. REYNARD,
Has just received at his Fruit Store in the Lewis Block, a choice line of Vegetables and Fruits
OF ALL KINDS,
TO WHICH OTHERS WILL BE ADDED IN SEASON.
I will also keep in stock a full line of
Tobaccos and Cigars.
Butter and Eggs a Specialty.

Farming Lands
500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.

[illegible]

By Water and Rail

[illegible]

Not a Wilderness by any Means.

[illegible]

Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.

[illegible]

W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner,
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.

TITLE PERFECT.

For Finest
JOB WORK,
Patronize The
Sentinel.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY.

CELLULOID
STARCH
A NOVEL INVENTION!
REQUIRES NO COOKING
For Collars, Cuffs, Shirt Bosoms and fine Laundry purposes, prepared by a New Process. The Celluloid Starch has no equal, look for our name and trade mark and take no other.
THE CELLULOID STARCH COMPANY
SOLE MANUFACTURERS,
NEW HAVEN, CONN. U.S.A.

Will not stick to the iron or blister the goods, easy to use, makes your linen look like new at home. Ask your grocer for Celluloid starch. It is pure and economical.

HUMPHREYS'
DR. HUMPHREYS' BOOK
Cloth & Gold Binding
144 Pages, with Steel Engraving,
MAILED FREE.
Address, P. O. Box 1810, N. Y.

[illegible]

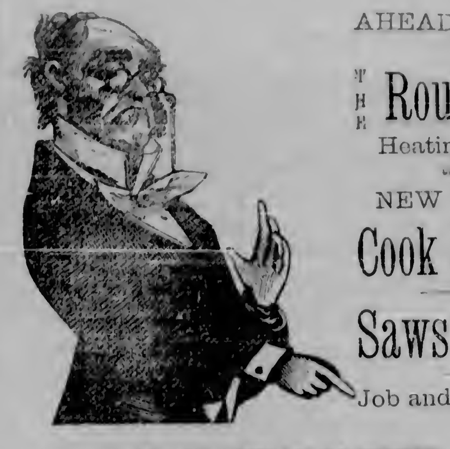
HOMEOPATHIC

[illegible]

SPECIFICS.

Sold by Druggists, or sent postpaid on receipt of price.—HUMPHREYS' MEDICINE CO. 109 Fulton St. N. Y.

STOVES!



AHEAD AGAIN!
THE Round Oak
Heating Stoves.
NEW STYLES
Cook Stoves!
Saws & Axes
Job and Tin Work.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

F. A. COCHRAN & CO.,
(Successors to PERRY WEED.)
Druggists and Pharmacists,
A FULL LINE OF
Drugs and Medicines.
We keep in stock a large assortment of well selected POPULAR MUSIC. Call and see it.

M. S. MOULTON,
WATCHMAKER & JEWELER,
Charlevoix, Mich.

Personal Attention given to Watch Repairing.
Key-wind Movements changed to Stem-wind and warranted as good as the best.
JEWELRY Repairing done in the best manner.
Having had 20 years experience I am confident I can give the best of satisfaction

"MARVELOUS PRICES!"
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION

Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. [illegible]

[illegible]

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.

We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00, or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms
Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS.
Hot and Cold Baths and Salt Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.
[illegible]
JAY L. PRICE.

NEW SHOP!
All kinds of Blacksmithing,
At the
Shop in the Foundry Building.
Horseshoeing a specialty.
ALL WORK GUARANTEED.
M. SCOTT.

WANTED!
Potatoes, Onions, Apples, Peaches and Blueberries.
We have an old established trade and can place stock to best advantage. Consignments solicited. Correspondence invited from shippers. Stencil and shipping tags furnished.
W. H. THOMPSON & CO.
Commission Merchants,
No. 166 South Water St,
CHICAGO, - - ILL.
Reference: Felsenthal, Gross & Miller, Bankers, Chicago, Ill.

JAS. A. GELLICK,
Dealer in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS.

We call Special Attention to our
Old Kentucky Sour Mash
WHISKIES.

We also keep continually on draught
Milwaukee
Export and lager Beer.
Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

THE WORLD IN A WORD.

The Latest Intelligence, Domestic and Foreign, Transmitted Over the Electric Wires.

Political, Railroad, and Commercial News, Accidents, Fires, Crimes, Etc., Etc.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

PUBLIC OPINION.

How the News of the Confirmation of the Anarchists' Sentence Was Received by the Country.

THE Chicago papers all express satisfaction at the ruling of the Illinois Supreme Court in the Anarchist case. Chicago business and professional men who were interviewed expressed relief at the confirmation of the sentence. A Boston dispatch says: "The announcement was received with exclamations of pleasure and approval. The New England editors generally approve the court's action, and express opinions opposed to a reprieve. Anarchists are scarce east of New York, and their theories are not popular. Gen. Butler said to-day: 'The anarchists are deluded and mistaken. They made themselves enemies to society, and must suffer the severest penalty.' A number of the Land and Labor Club [illegible]

... meetings were very exciting. A Chicago lawyer who drew the marriage contract, and who on divers occasions transacted business for them, was on the stand, but point blank refused to answer anything in relation to the two people."

DISPATCHES from Tucson, Arizona, report that a heavy flood has swept away twenty miles of the Southern Pacific Railway track, between Tucson and Benson. The disaster is expected to materially delay traffic on the line.

A PETITION has been filed in Hamilton, Ohio, asking the appointment of a receiver of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad. The petition alleges that Ives and Stayner have appropriated $2,500,000 of bonds and over $1,500,000 of preferred stock of the road, and that on account of the directors' negligence or fraudulent management the corporation is insolvent or on the verge of insolvency.

JAMES WHITE, who "bore an excellent reputation," was shot dead by William Ochs, a banker, at Kenton, Ohio. The man of excellent reputation was committing burglary in the banker's house when killed.

A LEADVILLE (Colo.) dispatch gives particulars of a terrible accident on the unfinished portion of the Colorado Midland Road, near Lake Ivanhoe, to a construction train carrying 282 laborers. They were on two cars loaded with steel rails. The train was passing over a piece of marshy ground, where much difficulty had been experienced in securing a roadbed, and here the engine suddenly slid into the ditch, carrying with it the two cars on which the laborers were seated and burying them in a mass of debris. Harry Banker, chief of the trackmen, was caught under the engine and scalded to death. James McMahon and George Rice were killed by loose rails falling on them and sixty-one others were severely injured. Seventeen of these may [illegible]

American Consul at [illegible] suspended from office.

THE statement of the public debt of the Dominion of Canada issued by the Finance Department shows the total net debt Aug. 31 to have been $228,494,161, an increase since June of $3,467,885.

THE trial trip of the [illegible] Boston, the companion of the Atlanta, appears to have been a success. She actually only comes up to the condition of 3,500 horse-power contained in the contract, but she actually obtained a maximum of 4,200 in the trial—that is, she is 700 better than was called for.

A TELEGRAM from Winnipeg, Manitoba, says: "Open rebellion is everywhere talked of against the arbitrary conduct of the Dominion Government in applying for injunctions to stop the building of the railway, and the people are preparing to organize in order to be ready in case of emergency. It is now learned on excellent authority that Sir John has written to several Conservatives threatening to exercise vengeance on the people if the province does not submit. Everybody now believes that he saw the telegram threatening the ... at Winnipeg, and advised its sending ... is denounced on all hands, and ... will be burned in effigy at the proposed demonstration shortly to be held. All the ... papers in the province, Conservative as well as Reform, unite in denouncing the Dominion Government, and call upon the people to stand firm and to defend their rights with their blood if necessary. It is believed by all that a serious crisis has been reached, but the action of the government seems to unite the people in a determination to fight to the bitter end for their rights."

AT the National Convention of Brewers in Detroit resolutions were unanimously adopted reciting that General Master Workman Powderly has himself opposed [illegible]

OBITUARY.

RAILWAYS.

WASHINGTON.

EAST.

WEST.

SOUTH.

FOREIGN.

GENERAL.

MARKET REPORTS.

ANARCHISTS DOOMED.

The Illinois Supreme Court Decides that They Formed a Great Conspiracy.

Through Their Plans the Meeting of the Haymarket Square Was Called,

And by Their Orders a Bomb Was Exploded Among the Police Officers.

Matthias Degan's Death Resulted, and They Are Adjudged to Be the Murderers.

[Chicago special.]

Justice Magruder, for the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois, sitting at Ottawa, on Wednesday, affirmed the finding of the Criminal Court of Cook County, and thereby sentenced to death August Spies, Michael Schwab, Samuel Fielden, Albert R. Parsons, Adolph Fischer, George Engel, and Louis Lingg, found guilty of the murder of Policeman Matthias J. Degan. By the same finding Oscar W. Neebe goes to the penitentiary for fifteen years. The date of the execution is fixed for Nov. 11.

The crime charged is the throwing of a dynamite bomb on the evening of May 4 1886, at a meeting held in Haymarket Square, corner of Randolph and Desplaines streets, Chicago, when seven policemen were killed and a number more injured. It is undisputed that the bomb was thrown, and that it was the cause of Degan's death, but there is not evidence to show that any one of the defendants had a hand in throwing it. It is conceded that no one of them actually committed the deed. The charge is that they were accessories before the fact. [illegible]

... defendants controlled; that at that meeting when a speaker said "We are peaceable," he used the word "ruhe" which was the signal for the bomb-throwing, and immediately the bomb was thrown.

It is held that the police were right in their presence at the meeting. The times were troublous, strikes were everywhere. There had been trouble at McCormick's the day before, and the circulars which called the meeting were threatening in their character. Hence it was the duty of the police to be on hand to protect the peace and to break up the meeting, which was not an orderly one.

In view of the facts presented by the record, the finding is that the defendants were engaged in a common conspiracy; that that conspiracy was for the purpose of overthrowing the law; that the meeting was called to further the conspiracy, and the bomb-throwing was the result of it; that Officer Degan died from wounds received from the explosion of the bomb. Held, that the defendants are guilty of murder as accessories before the fact.

Justice Mulkey thought there was error in the record, but not enough to vitiate the verdict. He did not file an opinion.

THE FATED SEVEN HEAR THE NEWS.

The scenes at the County Jail yesterday were somewhat exciting. At the morning hour the usual visitations were not disturbed until about six minutes before the signal was given for the anarchists to return to their cells. It was then that August Spies received a telegram from Carl Axwand, editor of the Ottawa German Herald, informing him that there was no hope from that quarter. The telegram was passed from one to the other of the condemned men, but its contents was not fully realized when they were ordered into confinement, so that there was no opportunity for them to exhibit their feelings to those who were visiting the cage. They had not long to meditate upon the sad tidings, however, when they were disturbed by missives from newspaper reporters asking the "special favor" of an interview. The old rule still held good. That is to say, no accredited reporter would be admitted to the doors of their cells upon their request. It must probably be admitted that the reporters, generally speaking, had not won the confidence of the anarchists to a very high degree, and in this hour of their great grief the condemned men probably turned to a remembrance of some of their long-forgotten prayers and found more consolation therein than from reportorial chats. At any rate, they one and all returned the same answer to these applications, to wit: "There is no answer." The hours passed wearily, if not sadly, with the condemned men. The visitor to the cage could easily watch their movements as they passed to and fro in their cells. Lingg appeared less stubborn than usual. He took down from [illegible]

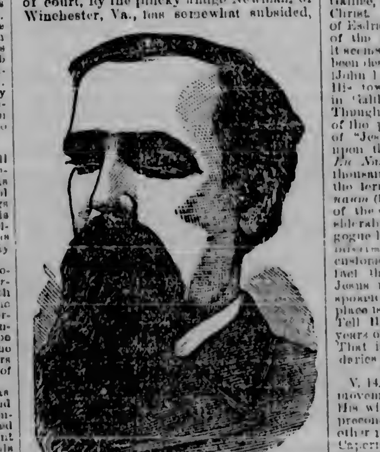
THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

Mr. Powderly Outlines New Laws and Recommends Their Adoption by the Order.

General Master Workman Powderly has issued a very important circular "to the order everywhere," outlining a new policy which he recommends should be enacted into a law of the order at the next General Assembly. The new plan is as follows: Give to each trade the right to organize a National Trade Assembly under the jurisdiction of the General Assembly, said National Trade Assembly to meet at least once a year for the election of officers and for the better regulation of the affairs of the trade and district. Each National Trade Assembly to have exclusive control over the affairs of its trade, without let or hindrance, so long as the constitution of the General Assembly is not violated. In matters concerning strikes no trade or local assembly to enter upon one until all of the assemblies in the National Trade Assembly have voted on the question and have, by a three-fourths vote, agreed to render assistance (the general laws of the order requiring attempts of arbitration to be observed). No assistance from the general order to be given until the case has been presented to the General Executive Board, and by them submitted to the order at large. In case that no assistance from the general order is required the General Executive Board is not to interview the matter. Each National Trade Assembly to have a bureau of statistics and information concerning the state and condition of the trade, the information to be furnished by local statisticians. State, Territorial and provincial assemblies to be formed in every State, Territory and province in the jurisdiction [illegible]

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY.

SENATOR H. H. RIDDLEBERGER.



Lined Eggs.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for September 25—"The Divine Missionary."

[From Chicago Standard. By Rev. J. M. Coon.]

The lesson for the above date may be found in the fourth chapter of Matthew, from the twelfth to the twenty-fifth verses. Time, A. D. 28. Places, Galilee, Nazareth, Capernaum.

SPECIAL MENTION.

Mission Outlook.—Population of the world, 1,500 millions; Romish Church, 190 millions; Mohammedans, 180 millions; Protestants, 130 millions; Greek Church, 85 millions; Oriental churches, 10 millions; Jews, 10 millions; heathen, 800 millions.

Mission Forces.—The professed followers of Christ are about one in every seventy-five of the world's population; there are over one hundred missionary societies; nearly one million native communicants; millions (probably) of pupils in mission schools.

The whole world is now open for the reception of the gospel.

The Bible is printed in 250 languages and dialects.

There are 150,000,000 copies in circulation.

Twenty-five Woman's Boards in England and America are actively engaged in foreign missionary work.

The Young Men's Christian Associations are now formally inaugurating Foreign Missionary branches.

The number of missionary societies is tenfold what it was eighty years ago.

The number of converts is nearly fifty-fold.

The increased facilities for intercommunication.

The diffusion of the English language.

Wonderful revivals, with pentecostal power, are frequent in heathen lands.

The increase in membership in heathen lands is thirty times greater than at home in proportion to the number of ministers employed, although the tests of discipleship are of the most trying nature.

Mission Progress.—"We are now actually living [illegible]

DER DUTCH GAL IN DER LANE.

BY CARL PRETZEL.

Der Springtime sun vas go toolin' round,
Der grass und leafs all ofer.
Und vhile lickin' der [illegible] all out der ground,
She vas standin on der four-legged clutor,
Der schoolhouse bell vas ringin' out
Some shweet und blatant shtrain,
Vhile I vas throwing some sheep-head eyes
At der Dutch Gal in der Lane.

Der Summer night shtars vay up abofe
Vas lookin' mit enfy down,
Und vas drying to shtole dot vords of lofe
Dot we vhispered mitout a sound.
We vas full mit lofe, like eggs mit meat,
Und happy, you bet der same.
Und I shwore to been true forever more
To dot Dutch Gal in der Lane.

Dot Vinter coomed und der moon on high
Vas shust about one-half made;
Der lonesome drees vas groan und sigh,
As der nite vind round em played.
By an old arm chair near der fireplace
Vhile vatching der glowin' flame,
Mine mind vas dream of der dreachery
Of dot Dutch Gal in der Lane.

More beautiful like some shweet Spring morn,
Mit eyes of black und blue;
I'd shwore she vas true like a child unborn,
Und nefer would shook me, too.
But dhere comed a man mit blenty gelt,
Und gif her his hand und name.
She took him for dot, und she shook me out,
Dis Dutch Gal in der Lane.

Efery day time now vhen der vedder vas hot
Dhey vander der shtreets along,
Und vhile he blays der organ she bought,
She vas vartle [illegible] olt lofe song.
I couldn't help dinkin how selfish I vas,
Vhen I dried to git her only a name,
For she now got distinction und six pair of dwins,
Und vas a Duchess vat lifs in der Lane.
—National Weekly.

NUMBER 10;

—OR,—

ANOTHER MAN'S CRIME.

—BY—

The Author of "The Haywood Tragedy," "The Fatal Bar," "At Sharps," Etc.

CHAPTER XV.

"I've known missus these many years," grumbled the servant, "and she's been a dyin' ever since I first came here, and she's alive yet."

"Find Mr. Britt," cried Dora distracted; "tell him his wife is much worse."

"Much good that would do," snarled old Jerry. "Why, I'll lay you ten to one that he feels a deal better when the breath is out of missus' body for good and all. And she's a good enough missus too, as missuses go."

Now an extraordinary event took place.

A bell hanging in the kitchen, just above the table where the cook stood at work, began to ring.

It had hung there for years, and dust and cobwebs had covered it thickly over. So long had it hung there unused, that they had forgotten its very existence. Heard now for the first time, its sharp clang produced a startling effect upon its hearers.

The cook threw up her hands. "The missus' bell."

Dora was momentarily paralyzed.

In all the years she had lived in the Britt household that bell had never been rung before. The bell-rope was in Mrs. Britt's room. What now was the extremity that had forced her mistress to make use of it.

A terrible suspicion darted into her mind. She thought of Mr. Britt.

Dora darted like lightning up the stair-case.

"Go with her, Jerry," shouted the cook. "Find out what the matter is?"

"Not I," cried Jerry, shaking in his shoes. "Tain't missus a doing that bell ringin'; missus never used that bell yet since it was hung there. She couldn't ring like that. It is Satan."

The cook flung her apron over her head and began to weep.

Again the bell rang, furiously this time.

[illegible]

... was appalling.

Dora, who had never seen death in any of its forms, was white with fear.

"Put her on the bed," said More, quickly divining what the end was to be; "she is dying."

They laid her gently on the couch. Her lips were moving, but her voice was faint and low.

More bent his head to listen.

"Dora."

Dora took her place by the dying woman.

"I know I am going soon," said Mrs. Britt, "but it is better so. I would not Covered by the gleaming revolver in the hands of the peddler.

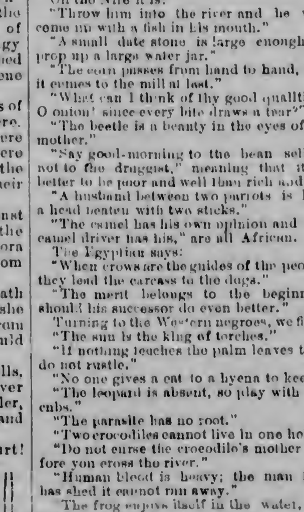
stay if I could. But first, answer truly. Have I been kind to you all these years we have lived together?"

"Most kind," answered Dora, wiping the cold drops from the still colder forehead.

[illegible]



Dora put some pine sticks on the coals.

CHAPTER XVI.

CHAPTER XVII.

Proverbs.

Take Care of Your Eyes.

GREAT GUNS.

Soldiers' Stirring Stories of Solid Shot, Screaming Shells,

Big Battles, Bursting Bombs, Buzzing Bullets, and Bright Bayonets.

Life's Conflict.

BY JOHN S. BROWNING.

With my books I was sitting at even;
Old stories of battles I read
Mythological tales and traditions
Of heroes long centuries dead.

And I thought on the mountains eternal
I stood, overlooking all time,
With gray Michael, war's angel, beside me—
Red-handed, grim-visaged, sublime.

At my feet yawned the gulf first created
When heaven's great war opened hell,
And I shrank from the darkness abysmal
Where Satan, the archangel, fell.

Hark! the noise of tumultuous conflict
Resounds in my listening ears,
Like the dull, distant roar of the ocean,
Or echoes from far-away years.

Cries of victory, hoarsely exultant,
Come mingled with shouts of command,
And the deep, sullen thunder of battle
Surrounds me on every hand.

Once again Israelite meets Philistine;
Achilles slays Hector at Troy;
Alexander seeks empire to conquer,
And Xerxes new realms to destroy.

Roman hosts bear victorious standards
Afar beneath Europe's bright skies;
Crimson waves dash o'er the Nile's delta;
And Egypt at Cæsar's feet lies.

Constantine's starry cross lights the zenith,
King Alfred regains England's fens;
Northern moberg, with war-cries resounding,
The fleets of the vikings disclose.

Saladin crosses swords with King Richard;
Napoleon confronts the great Duke,
Leipsic, Waterloo, Gettysburg, Plevna;
War! war!—war wherever I look!

Flashing arms and wild whirlwinds of horsemen,
[illegible]

Jonah, the Contraband.

... after several patient efforts had been made by some of the soldiers to teach him, he gave up the study for a bad job, philosophically remarking:

"Nebber saw no use in um for niggah, nohow."

The men among whom he was thrown at first attempted to make a butt of him; but his quickness and his native wit soon made them cautious of trying any jokes on him, for he was sure to get more than even, in the end, with the person venturing it. His fund of drollery and his talent for mimicry soon became the entertainment of the whole company. He was quick to seize upon any marked peculiarity of speech or manner that he noticed; and whenever a shout of laughter came from the fires around which the soldiers gathered at night I could be certain that Jonah was edifying the crowd with an imitation of the Adjutant on dress parade, or describing how General This or Colonel That acted on review.

His steady practice, if not his rule of life, was to attend to the things of the present, and not bother himself about the future.

"After de wah," he would say, "an' befoh de end ob him, Jonah mebbe be whah dey aint no wah. Mebbe yo' be dah, too. Den whah de use askin' what we do when de wah done end? Mebbe de wah last forty years. Nuff to bodder Jonah 'bout to keep up wid dis yer army, an' look foh stray chickens, an' cook de Captain's supper."

Once on the voyage from New Orleans his attention was directed to a fine sunset.

"De sun hab done set," was his sole comment. His practical soul saw no sentiment at all in the scene. The sunset was to him merely a fact which he expressed in his own way.

It was near Winchester, a week before the great battle of Sept. 19, 1864, that this black diamond was lost [illegible]

General Grant on the Terms at Vicksburg.

The Shooting of Stonewall Jackson.

But Jackson looked up at once and exclaimed:

"You must hold your ground, General Pender; you must hold your ground, sir!"

This was the last order he ever gave. He was borne some distance to the nearest house, and examined by the surgeon, and after midnight his left arm was amputated at the shoulder.

When Lee was told that his most trusted lieutenant had been wounded, he was greatly distressed, for the relations between them were almost tender.

"Jackson has lost his left arm," said Lee, "but I have lost my right arm."—General Adam Badeau, in St. Nicholas.

A Good Story.

At the close of the Seven Days' Retreat occurred a little incident which fastened the brigade to General Sumner's heart with hooks of steel. Some muskets were of course lost and thrown away on that prolonged retreat, but astonishingly few, all things considered. Every case that came to General Sumner's notice angered him beyond bounds. When one morning an officer of the Eighty-eighth came to him with a requisition for quite a number of muskets, Sumner broke out violently, denounced bitterly men who would lose or abandon their arms, and ended by saying, "You shall not have those muskets, sir. I'll take them all away from you and make your men dig trenches. Such men are not fit to carry arms."

The officer listened calmly to this tirade and then said: "You're mistaken there, General. We've not lost them nor thrown them away."

"Where are they?" said Sumner.

"Outside, sir. I thought maybe you'd be wanting to see them."

The General went out and found a pile of muskets with cracked and splint- [illegible]

Mixing Morgan Trouble.

Our Greatest Martyr.

A Memento of Her Home.

His Editorial Experience.

"Gimme a case to fill for my dinner," said a dilapidated looking man, as he came into the office.

"Hard luck this summer?"

"You bet. Just walked into town. Say, reckon I can get a chance to sub on something a few days?"

"Oh, yes, good chance."

"I ain't had no luck since I had a paper of my own when I first struck the Territory."

"What made you quit the business?"

"Monkey-work. You see there was a prominent citizen of the place and a heavy advertiser named Beasley. He went East to get a complete new stock of bar fixtures for his place of business. One day while he was gone another prominent citizen, who took six copies of the paper and sent them to friends, whose name was McCann, was seen out riding with Beasley's wife. I thought it would be thunderin' smart to write it up an' boom the street sales of the paper, though there'd never been a copy sold on the streets since it was started. So I wrote a column an' a couple o' stickful awful sensational an' smart, an' then went an' set it. Just 'fore I slid it into the forms I kinder got lookin' at it an' wonderin'. I thought I'd get somebody else's opinion. So I showed the proof to Jim Tanglewood. Jim read it and laughed an' snorted till I thought he would bust, and then says he, 'chuck it in.' Then I let Ben Clark look at it an' he couldn't more'n half read it it tickled him so. Then he looked up an' says he: 'Old hoss, that's blame good—sock it in.' I showed it to a lot more leadin' citizens and they all 'lowed it was a good joke on old Beasley and McCann, an' that Mrs. Beasley would be tickled 'most to death over it. The only thing they varied in was some said 'chuck it in,' and some, 'sock it in.' I b'lieve, though, old man Perkins (he was the principal of the school) did say, 'shove her in.' An' [illegible]

Always Tell Mother.

Little Helen.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F PARMELEE Associate Editor

CHARLEVOIX, SEPT. 28, 1887.

Hazings from Hayes.

One of our fool Hayesites asks: Why it is that the Town Board of Hayes whenever it has an appointment to make hardly ever goes outside of its own circle? An echo reverberates over the hills of Horton Creek, through the African Valley, down by Pumpkin Hollow, and away across the Mud Lakes marshes. Why?

Elvin Hale has been suffering with partial paralysis the past week. He was removed to Charlevoix last Sunday for medical treatment.

Harry Wood has returned to Hayes and will remain through the winter.

Mr. Conrad of Elkhart, Ind., was visiting in Hayes the past week.

We have seven school districts in Hayes. No. 7 has just completed a new school building.

Wallace Whitford has moved to Charlevoix.

Jack Saunby is building a boarding house at the mill.

Ironton Notes.

The furnace was shut down for a few days last week. Lack of coal was the why we understand.

B. L. Allen is digging a well. Should think so, for even in this garden of Michigan our farmers have come with their teams and cattle to the lake for water during the dry time.

The Congregational people will have a children's concert in the near future.

John Peterson has added school books and patent medicines recently to his stock.

Grant Hammond is home from Mancelona, where he is at work in the dish factory. He returns on Friday.

Mrs. Bement returned to her home in Lansing, Monday.

Phillips, the labor orator, of Charlevoix, will orate for the K. of L. Wednesday evening, (to-night), at this place.

Some of our oldest townspeople contemplate moving out this fall. Sorry!

Duaine Parish the inveterate tin-peddler and rag buyer, tied his wagon at Boyne City and came home to spend Sunday with his family.

George Compton has been very sick with symptoms of malaria, but we are happy to note his convalescence.

Some one said John Hammond brought home about $8 prize money from the fair on stock and fruit.

Preaching in the M. E. church morning and evening next Sunday.

Ed Tunnoth has been so much indisposed that he has done nothing for three weeks, but go to the fair.

If we could only write or do something, or some other body could write or do something to impress parents and guardians of the necessity and their obligation to send their children regularly to the public schools, we believe we could finish our pilgrimage here below and die comparatively happy. Parents, read this if you get your eyes on it. Do you know that your schools cannot do thorough work unless you co-operate and see that every child you control attending school, is there every day! Four days in a week or nineteen days in a month is not every day. Well, you say, one day is nothing and so grow careless. It is something, it's everything. Not only does your child suffer, but every pupil in the same grade with him materially suffers. Yes, the whole school suffers, for he is missed from his accustomed place, and the unity of interest is marred. But your child is the one who is most surely and permanently injured. He has lost a link, a lesson, a connecting thought: his whole year's work is affected, and made imperfect by it. Then, too, you are allowing them to cultivate habits of irregularity which are in themselves destructive of a successful life. Ask yourself how much your own success or failure in life is due to regular or irregular habits. Again we say with all our might, try it for a term and note the effect, and if you want some other reasons for it call on us or drop a postal and we will furnish them unabridged. Remember this is for you, reader, if you are a parent, and not for your neighbor, but show it to him if he has not a paper. Be as consistent in regard to your school as you are about your own business and you will kick less against school taxes and school teachers.

Polk's Gazetteer and business directory of Michigan stands head and shoulders above all others of its kind in Michigan. A copy will always be found at the SENTINEL office.

The find of natural gas at St. Ignace, which was reported from there recently, shows as yet but a very slight flow. At a depth of 915 feet and while the drill was in gray sandstone, a slight flow of gas came thro-the pipe. The presence of gas can only be observed from a very slight movement of the water.

The New York Tribune says: Logically, the long struggle between the Democratic and the Republican party has been terminated forever by the Democratic victory of 1884, the trial of that party in power and its complete failure to meet the expectation which caused its success. Not many men, even of the most earnest Republicans, realize how true this is or how important. Practical is but always strictly logical. But there is a reason for anticipating that the Democratic party will be defeated in 1888, will pass forever from history and then men will wonder that precisely this result of its trial in power was not by all expected.

Fresh Oysters can be found at the fruit store of O. W. Smith.

HE DID NOT INVEST.

A Detroit Business Man Tells of His Investigation of the "Soo" Boom.

A well known real estate dealer of Detroit, and treasurer of one of the largest business establishments in this city, went to the "Soo" in the early stages of the boom with the intention of laying the foundation for a fortune by investing in real estate. His success in Detroit having resulted from prudent business methods, he was not affected with the "Soo" fever as he found many to be, and his first instinct was to keep his money in his pocket until he had looked the situation over. Just how his investigation resulted and how much "Soo" land he purchased he tells himself.

"In the center of the village," he says, "I found property held at enormous figures, so high, that half a block on the main street, if purchased for cash, would have to be rented at fully as high figures as if the place was on Woodward avenue. How came this property to be so valuable? was the question I asked of everybody and no one could answer me satisfactorily. That problem had to be solved before I would go any farther. I will cite to you a parallel case and you can fully understand what my position was. Suppose, if you please, that I want to invest a large amount of money in the bonds of a corporation. I find them held at a high price and, if after investigation I find that their value has been fixed by legitimate means, I invest. I spent some time in ascertaining the origin of the 'boom' at the 'Soo,' and I finally solved the problem. In the first place there was a small town, there is the neck of the waters, and no means of communication with the rest of the world except by water or stage coach. Finally three or four railroads decided to cross the Ste. Mary's River at this point, and the result was the same that it is in all small towns which experience the thrill of hearing a railroad whistle for the first time. They began to feel immediately that their place was of as much importance as Detroit or Chicago, and consequently the price of real estate went up. But it did not go up to where it is now by this means alone. A few large corporations first bought up the suburban property, others secured the right of way for a water power canal, to cost millions of dollars (when completed), and a syndicate purchased a block of business property. Then the fun commenced. This block of property was purchased at an extravagant figure, in the first place, but it was sold by the syndicate at an advance. Another purchased it and paid still more for it and sold it again and made money. It stopped there, and owners of adjacent property immediately put up the price of their property to correspond. I found out that those transfers were all between the same parties, in the same family, don't you see, and that is the reason why I bought no 'Soo' property."

New Truancy Law.

Among the amendments made to the school laws by the last legislature is the following: "An act to prevent crime and punish truancy." The enacting clause reads:

"That any girl between the ages of 10 and 17, or boy between the ages of 10 and 17 years, who shall run away or willfully absent himself or herself from the school he or she is attending, or from any house, office, shop, farm or other place where such person is legitimately employed to labor, or shall frequent saloons or other places where intoxicating liquors are kept for sale, or shall be found lounging upon the public streets or other public places of any street or village, against the command of his or her parent or guardian, or without the permission of his or her parent or guardian, attend any public dance, skating rink or show, shall be deemed to be a truant and a disorderly person."

The subsequent sections provide that if a complaint is made against any one for violation of the above provision by the parent or guardian of the child, supervisor of township, mayor of the city, president of the village or chief of police, before any justice of the peace, an action can be brought. If the child is convicted, it may be sentenced to Lansing or Adrian, depending on the sex.

Teacher's Association.

The first meeting of the Charlevoix Teacher's Association for the school year 1887 8 will be held at the High School room in Charlevoix, on Friday evening, Sept. 30th, and Saturday forenoon, Oct. 1st; evening session beginning at 7:30 o'clock and the morning session at 9:30. The exercises will include the annual address by the president, and discussion of subject as follows:

"The Teacher's Preparation: The child and the subject taught," by J. M. Harris, of Ironton.

"Some difficulties in Arithmetic," by Mrs. Dealia Porter, of Charlevoix.

"Devices for increasing interest in certain Subjects," by H. M. Enos.

"The teacher's work outside of the text book," general discussion.

The Question Box, for all.

This last feature of the Association meeting has proved to be one of the most profitable of all, giving as it does an opportunity to bring up and briefly discuss any subject that is especially desired by any teacher and leading to a free informal exchange of sentiments.

The annual election of officers will be held on Saturday. An invitation is extended to all teachers and others interested in school work, to be present and help to make this a good meeting. The past year has proved the Association to be worthy the support of every teacher in the county, and it is earnestly hoped that its sphere of usefulness is to be greatly extended during the current year.

Cheboygan Tribune: Wolfe & Davidson's new steam barge, the W. H. Wolfe, commanded by Capt. Ed. Casey, the well known and popular master of the late propeller Champlain, passed up through the straits Tuesday afternoon, on her return from her first trip down the lakes. She is a fine craft.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

Death of P. K. Brown.

Mr. P. K. Brown, father of Mr. W. P. Brown, of this place, died at Potsdam, N. Y., last week. The following is an outline of his long life:

Philemon Kirkham Brown was born in Cornwall, Vermont, on the 11th of October, 1801, died in Potsdam, N. Y., on the 18th day of September, 1887. He commenced business life in Virgennes, Vt., at the age of 25. He married Lydia Reynolds of Panton, Vt. To them was born a son, Walter Philemon, now of the Bank of Charlevoix, and daughter, Welthy, now Mrs. Burrows of Potsdam, N. Y. At the age of 29 the wife died in the year 1831. Two years later he married widow Lyon of Hinesburgh, Vt., who had a daughter, now Mrs. S. D. Bay, of Potsdam, and removed in the year 1835 to Potsdam. From that date to 1863, when the second wife died, his was an active and in all respects a very successful life, made so by his sterling integrity, high moral and christian character; was genial, social, prudent, and industrious; acquiring a competency. Since that time he has spent the most of his time with his foster daughter, Mrs Bay, taking good care of his resources and adding to them. The last two or three years increasing cares and infirmities led him to make his home with his son W. P. Brown, in Charlevoix. He returned with him to Potsdam last spring. During his stay he became more infirm, being better had planned to return here this week. Until less than two weeks since he retained his vigor of mind, attended to business in transfer of real estate with all his usual critical care and ability. He died peacefully from paralysis of all the functions of life, caused by extreme old age. Honored and respected by all who knew him, "in the comfort of a reasonable religious and holy hope, at peace with God his Savior and in perfect charity with the world

General and Political.

It is said that Gov. Hill has consented to wait until 1892 for his own presidential run and that Mr. Cleveland is thus to be given a clean course in his own state.

Col. Fred Grant, the oldest son of the late Gen. Grant, has been placed at the head of the state ticket in New York, for secretary of state. He will give the political enemy a hard run, as his father used to give the enemies of his country, in the years gone by.

There is nothing more pathetic in American civilization than the spectacle of a Free-trade millionaire weeping over the rising discontent with which the best paid laboring classes in the world contemplate his scheme for bettering their condition by reducing their wages.—Philadelphia Press.

The Democratic organs are daily boasting that "President Cleveland has restored to the public domain for the benefit of the people 21,000,000 acres of land." The President has done nothing of the kind. The Interior Department has declared certain railroad idemnity lands open for settlement on the ground that they are unearned. This is in accordance with the terms of the land grants.

The Comte de Paris issued, recently, a manifesto which was posted during the night over all the principal towns of France. In it he sets forth that the restored monarchy with himself as king is the only safety for France. The French people, by a considerable majority, do not seem to agree with the Comte. They may change their minds in a few years, but, at present, the Republic is standing on its own bottom.

The Philadelphia North American, the oldest daily newspaper in America, at the Centennial celebration of the adoption of the constitution presented to it readers, on paper, specially manufactured to imitate that in use 100 years ago, a fac-simile of the first printed copy of the Constitution of the United States, being an exact reproduction, in dimensions, typography, and contents, of the four page issue of that journal of Sept 19, 1787.

The Hawaiin navy is in a bad way, like King David. It consists of one vessel which cost $80,000, and to carry out one of King David Kalakana's former ambitious designs it was sent to the Samoan islands to annex that group to Hawaii. The ship is now laid up at a Samoan port, her officers not having money enough to bring her home. Officers and crew are lying about drunk at Pagapago, and the ship will have to be sold for what she will bring at auction. Kalakaua and his navy collapsed about the same time.

Clearances from this port:

[illegible]

Charlevoix Savings Bank.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the Stockholders of said Bank will be held on Saturday, the 29th day of October next at 4 o'clock p. m., at their banking office, in the village of Charlevoix, county of Charlevoix, state of Michigan, for the purpose of electing seven Directors for said Bank and the transaction of such business as may be required to be transacted at the regular annual meeting of said Stockholders.

Dated Charlevoix, Mich., Sept. 27th, 1887.
JOHN NICHOLLS, Vice Prest.

The Department of State declines to ask for McGarigle's extradition, so Mac can come out from his hiding, but can't return to America.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent. Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE—One span of horses, one yearling colt, two spring colts, one yoke of oxen, two two-year old heifers, two yearling heifers; must be sold soon. Terms reasonable. Inquire at this office.

THE PROPERTY known as the Sweetland Sanitarium, on the South upper terrace in the village of Charlevoix, is for sale or rent. Enquire of E. H. Green, Charlevoix, Mich. tf

Mrs. Litney & Carr cordially invite the Ladies to call and examine their mammoth new stock of fall and winter millinery. Their stock comprises everything in all the latest novelties in their line. It will pay you to inspect their goods before purchasing elsewhere. adv

Horse for Sale.

A six year old gray mare, weight, 1,200 pounds; good, sound, kind and gentle. A good work horse, and a perfect horse for ladies' driving. Inquire at this office.

CLOTHING.

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.

My Prices are so Low

that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

OUR FALL GREETING.

In extending to our friends the Compliments of the season we desire also to acknowledge the liberal patronage they have bestowed upon us and trust we shall deserve its continuance. We are glad to announce the arrival of all our Fall Goods and we truly believe we surpass all former efforts in the exhibition of the largest assortment and we feel confident that in the selection and purchase of this vast stock that two stores require, our buyer has secured every advantage to be had by Extensive Experience and Ready Cash.

Nor did we neglect to get the very best goods the market afforded besides keeping a low price in view.

CLOAKS. OUR CLOAKS AND PLUSH WRAPS ARE CONVINCING ARGUMENTS OF THEMSELVES. WE ARE SELLING A GOOD CHILDS' CLOAK FOR $1.35 AND LADIES' FROM $3 TO $40.

IT IS OUR AIM TO INCREASE OUR TRADE BY ALL HONORABLE MEANS AND WE DO NOT LOWER PRICE ON ONE ARTICLE AND MAKE UP ON OTHERS.

YARNS. SPECIAL ATTENTION CALLED TO YARNS AND LADIES' AND GENTS' UNDERWEAR. OUR PRICES ARE 20 PER CENT BELOW ANY OTHER DEALER'S. Send for October Fashion Sheet. Free.

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.

THIS WEEK

We open a handsome line of entirely New Patterns in

DRESS GOODS,

direct from the Manufacturers.

Victoria Plaids, new designs, popular price, 50c.
Heavy, all-wool Cloth Suitings, 27 in. 65c.
Full lines of 36 and 50 in. Flannels, 50 to 75c.

Advance Sale of Blankets, next week.

CLOAKS

We are opening the best and cheapest line of Cloaks ever offered in Charlevoix. They were not made to order especially for us, but are new goods direct from a factory which has been compelled to sacrifice.

Within a few days we shall display the finest line of

LAMPS, LAMP GOODS,
GLASSWARE,
DINNER and TEA SEATS
that we have ever shown and at much lower prices.

COME and SEE THEM,

J. L. HURD & CO.

ALICK ROSENTHAL,
LEWIS BLOCK

CLOAKS! CLOAKS CLOAKS! CLOAKS CLOAKS!

ARE HERE!
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION!
For Ladies, Misses, and Children.
COME, COME AND SEE THEM, And see them!
Alick Rosenthal, Lewis' Block.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

Jno C Miller may-1-8

VOL. XIX. NO.--23 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1887. WHOLE NO. 932

SCHOOL BOOKS

SCHOOL BOOK

BUY YOUR SCHOOL SUPPLIES AT HEADQUARTERS. WE HAVE EVERYTHING NEEDED IN THE SCHOOL ROOM, AT UNIFORMLY LOW PRICES.

F. G. HINES & CO.

We will furnish the new books adopted by the board at introduction prices.
Remember that we sell everything that can be called for in any of our Schools.

SCHOOL BOOK

SCHOOL BOOKS

EMREY BROS.

Boots and Shoes for almost nothing, to close out.

We have a number of pairs of Boots and Shoes which we will almost give away as we are closing them out.

We are also going out of

CROCKERY

and have a complete assortment which must be sold

WE WILL NOT TAKE A BACK SEAT ON

SUMMER DRY GOODS.

PRICES ALWAYS LOW.

IN GROCERIES and Provisions we can suit you, as we receive Fresh Goods weekly.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

We are NOT CLOSING OUT

We never did
We do not want to
We are not going to close out

WE AIM TO KEEP OUR STOCK

Complete in Every Department AT ALL TIMES.

OUR STOCK OF

STAPLE DRY GOODS
---AND---
BOOTS and SHOES,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER TRADE WAS NEVER MORE COMPLETE THAN NOW.

UNDERWEAR! We have a good line of Ladies', Gents' and Childrens' Underwear.

CLOAKS AT A BARGAIN CLOAKS

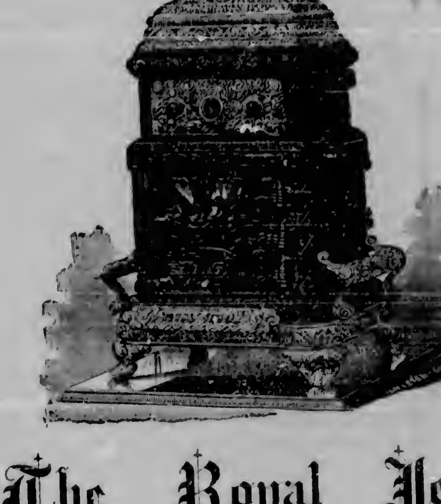
We keep Lime, Cement, Stucco & Plastering Hair, We carry a full line of

EVERYTHING

usually kept in a first class stock of General Merchandise. We aim to merit the patronage of the prompt paying trade by keeping good goods and selling everything at a uniformly reasonable price.

Resp'y Yours,
Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

Best in The World



"The Royal Jewel"

Call at our store and examine the incomparably fine line of Stoves now on exhibition.

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $ $ $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

The Best Groceries
At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture
AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S
REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE,
AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

WANTED!

Everyone to know that we are here and doing Business, and will do just as we agree to by one and all. We keep
GROCERIES and PROVISIONS,
FLOUR AND FEED, CROCKERY
AND GLASSWARE.

Choice Butter and Fresh Eggs a Specialty. Call on us or order by Telephone.

WILL SEE & CO.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY
SMITH & PARMELEE,
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
One year - $1 50 | Six months - $ .75
Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

The Pine Lake Iron Co. wants a book-keeper.

—Mrs. Eliza Mason is still in Ohio visiting relatives and friends.

—The Newman House has been added to the telephone exchange.

—Sandy Cameron is completing the Iron Company's store at Horton's Bay.

—The Schotfens of Ironton, expect to make Chicago their future home soon.

—Prosecuting Attorney Corbett attended the St. Louis Grand Army reunion.

—Mr. J. Gardner, of Hart, Mich., is installed as a clerk in J. L. Hurd & Co.'s store.

—Charlevoix county's display of fruit at the State Fair attracted general attention.

—Watt Taylor, the juvenile hay fever resorter, has returned to his home in Indiana.

—Miss Bessie Burns of Petoskey, is in town visiting her brother Dean Burns and her aunt.

—Mrs. Ben. Campbell was called to Northport Saturday, by the death of her neice, Mrs. Chis. Kehl.

—Mrs. Elizabeth Fisher, of Traverse City, has been visiting friends here for the past two weeks.

—The friends of Mrs. Elsie Webb gave her a surprise at the Bridge Street House Friday evening.

—Miss May Gelliek, who has been sick with a fever for the past three weeks, is able to be out again.

—Major E. H. Green fought the battle over again at the cyclorama of Gettysburg, in Chicago, last week.

—Mrs. Washburn leaves for Chicago on the Vernon this week to spend the winter with her son, Edwin M.

—No one but officers or night-watchmen can now carry concealed weapons under penalty of $100 or three months.

—Mrs. M. F. Fogg and daughter, Miss Lizzie, of New Hampshire, mother and sister of F. E. Fogg, are here for a two week's visit.

—D. S. Way gives notice that he will for the next thirty days sell those fine photographs at $3 per doz., before closing up for the winter.

Mr. John Burns will accompany Messrs. Carpenter and Stockman to Florida this fall to superintend the erection of their winter residences.

—An infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Alcox died Friday. The funeral occurred Sunday afternoon from the M. E. church, the pastor officiating.

—The ground floor of Lewis block is now warmed by a furnace manufactured by Washburn & Ackert, and it works as well as the best of them.

—A. D. Cruickshank has secured as a gift to the Charlevoix public library, 19 volumes of Swedenborg's works, and they are already on the shelves.

—Will See & Co. have sold their entire stock to Albert E. Mason, and will go out of business. Mr. See goes to California this fall to seek his fortune.

—The G. R. & I. gave an excursion to the north, Tuesday, Oct. 4, good returning till Oct. 12, at $4.75 for the round trip from Kalamazoo to either Petoskey or Traverse City.

—Dr. Carlstein was called into Hayes Friday to set a broken arm for N. Cram. Mr. Cram was on a load of hay which lost its equilibrium on Greensky hill, with the above result.

—O. W. Smith has recently erected an addition to his store building and excavated a commodious cellar under it. This fall he will tear out two partitions, which will double the capacity of his room.

—Charlevoix, metaphorically speaking, is setting on a big nest of eggs, which, while the little roosters are crowing, are rapidly approaching incubation. There will be some tall clucking around here one of these fine mornings.

—President Cherrie and Secretary Eaton state that the D. C. & E. railroad is to be built in spite of all sayings to the contrary. They say grading will be commenced this fall, and that trains will be running over the line inside of one year.

—Grand Rapids Eagle: Sixty men were sent to Cadillac yesterday by F. Dorris, of the Grand Union Employment Bureau. They will work on the Toledo, Ann Arbor and Northern Michigan railroad, now being constructed in that vicinity.

—Lewis, the 15 year old son of Capt. Melvin Thompson, died at the family residence in this village on Friday, of bilious fever, after a long illness. The funeral occurred Sunday at the Congregational church, Rev. W. G. Clark preaching the sermon.

The new liquor law is now in effect, and under its provisions hereafter, at all times when by law the doors should be closed, all blinds, curtains, screens or other obstructions before the bar must be removed, so that the bar is plainly visible from the front, rear or side door or window.

—We are glad to welcome a correspondence from Boyne Falls.

—Sam Cokley and family start for Bing, Ont., where they will spend the winter, to-day

—Major Green returned from St. Louis Friday, and reports having a glorious time among the vets.

—Mrs. L. D. Bartholomew and Mrs. Levi Blanchard are in Albion, to attend the Iddings-Gale marriage, this evening.

—Miss Abbie Rose, daughter of H. O. Rose of Petoskey, who has been at the Battle Creek Sanitarium for some months, is rapidly recovering.

—D. S. Way the photographer, will leave Nov. 1st for the Saginaw country, visiting friends, and may go to Florida toward spring to make a collection of views. His wife will accompany him.

—Joe Beauvais has the material on hand for 35 row boats and 6 cat-rigged sail boats which he and his able assistant, Alton Cook, will construct this winter. He also expects to build glass-cabin, coal-burning steam yachts for Frank Sears and W. A. Brown.

—Dr. Crouter left yesterday with his wife for California, where he goes for the benefit of his wife's health. Mrs. Crouter will remain there for the winter and possibly the Doctor. Mrs. Crouter's many friends in Charlevoix will be anxious to see her return to her home in good health.

—The Grand Rapids Telegram-Herald makes the startling announcement that Dr. and Mrs. Schuyler C. Graves, of that city, have separated. The Doctor, upon being interviewed, stated that it was "a case of incompatibility." The Telegram - Herald thinks it is a case of "insufficiency of bridal dowry."

—A level-headed writer has just given publicity to the following: "One-third of the fools in the country think they can beat the lawyers in expounding the law; one-half think they can beat the doctors healing the sick; two-thirds of them think they can beat the ministers in preaching the gospel, and all of them know they can beat the editor in running the paper."

—Joseph Reed, of Marion, brings us a sample of sorgum molasses made from amber cane. It is of very good flavor, and pleasant to the taste. Mr. Reed has made 52 gallons this fall, and is preparing to increase his facilities for its manufacture. He has great confidence in this soil and climate for the raising of sugar cane, and recommends it to the consideration of farmers.

—President Cherrie, of the D. C. & E. R. R. Co., returned from New York yesterday, and reports all arrangements heretofore announced, ratified and confirmed by the syndicate. He permits us to state authoritively that chopping and grubbing on the D. C. & E. section will be begun early in November, and prosecuted energetically during the winter. He also states that surveyors are now on the line between the Muskegon river and Kalkaska.

—A Glenn Arbor special says: Joseph LaBrook and George Sheridan sailed in a small boat with 112 bushels of fruit from here Aug 26. Sept. 7 a letter was received from Wisconsin saying they had sold out and were ready to come home. Nothing has been seen or heard of them since. LaBrook is 48 and Sheridan is a boy of 14. The boat is 26 feet keel, 9 feet beam, sloop rigged, painted white outside, and lined with red. It is feared they were lost off the South Manitou in the gale of Sept. 9.

—The SENTINEL prints every week at least seven and a half columns of local and Northern Michigan news, and is "the largest paper in the county" in this feature, which is the one upon which a local paper should be judged. A paper may print 100 columns of plates or patent insides, but unless it is soundly balanced by home news, the public will not be deceived by the size of the paper. It is like a big lager beer tumbler—shows up large at first glance, but, upon investigation, disclosing a small caliber.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

Tuesday evening a normal drill on the books of the Bible. Come and join us in this study.

Thursday evening prayer meeting, led by W. A. Smith.

Sunday, preaching morning and evening by the pastor. "Hear what the spirit saith to the churches." Sunday school at 12. W. H. M.

Baptist Church.

During October the Baptist and Congregational churches will unite in worship. The Baptist pastor will preach at the Congregational church Sunday morning at 10:30 and at Green's Hall, Sunday eve. at 7 o'clock.

Prayer meetings during the week, Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

A pledge is being circulated for subscriptions to build a house of worship for the First Baptist church of Charlevoix. Thus far the results have been encouraging. The church will doubtless be built during the ensuing year.

General Church Matters.

A correspondent of the Detroit Free Press, in reporting the proceedings of the Methodist Conference, recently in session at Saginaw, under date of the 16th inst., records this pleasant incident: "A pleasant ripple ran over the conference when Dr. McEldowney presented the name of Edward S. Ninde as a candidate for admission on trial. He is the son of Bishop Ninde, is well know in Detroit and is just fresh from his studies at Middletown University. He is a young man of great promise."

Wedding Bells.

The marriage of Mr H. Lee Iddings, of Charlevoix, and Miss Nellie Gale, daughter of the well-known Albion manufacturer, occurs at the home of the bride at six o'clock this evening. After a trip up the lakes, Mr. and Mrs. Iddings will return to Charlevoix next week, when they will enter their charming new home on Main street. The SENTINEL joins in the congratulations of their large circle of friends.

Invitations are out for the wedding of the Rev. Will E. McLennan, of Union Mills, Ind., and Miss Lila Keeley, of Nora, Ill., Oct. 12th. Mr. McLennan has many warm friends in his old Charlevoix home who will heartily congratulate him, and wish him and his bride a long life of happiness.

Mr. Louis Pasquelle, of Detroit, and Miss Etta Rowan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. C. Rowan, of the Clifton House, Petoskey, will be married at nine o'clock to-morrow evening, in the Clifton House parlors. Both parties are well known in Charlevoix, where they have many friends. Their future home will be in Petoskey. The SENTINEL extends congratulations.

The Driving Park.

Another citizens' meeting was held at Mayne's law office Friday evening, to further consider the driving park matter and hear the reports of committees, Mr. Mayne occupying the chair. The committees could not make definite reports owing to the fact that a contested title is attached to the site on the north side, and, the absence of Mrs. S. F. Mason, the owner of a very desirable site on the south side. All things considered, it seemed to be the general opinion that the latter was the most desirable.

In view of these facts, the committee was given further time.

The citizens are in dead earnest about this matter, and there seems to be no doubt whatever that Charlevoix will this fall have as good a half mile track as there is in the state of Michigan.

If the Mason property is secured, or the Carpenter & Bartholomew lot adjoining—either one embracing twenty acres or more—it will be hard to find a more convenient, or better adapted ground in the state for a trotting park and its kindred purposes. It will be accessible by a straight drive down Bridge street, south, will be bounded on the south by the county road, already as fine a public driving boulevard as there is in Northern Michigan, and connected with the state road by well improved east and west roads. The ground is perfectly level, of a soil composed of clay and gravel, and, at farthest, is but a half mile from the Town Hall.

The successful outcome of these negotiations carries with it the organization of a society which shall be a medium for the display of the products of the farm and the shop, and to this end the SENTINEL suggests the incorporation of the "North Grand Traverse Agricultural and Industrial Exposition." Charlevoix is the natural center of the region designated; it is accessible from all points, and has better roads leading to it from the north and south than any other village within its contiguous territory.

While the Business Men's Association and the Charlevoix Improvement Association are discussing measures for the general good, let them consider this question. We believe that nothing can be done in the interest of Charlevoix and its outlying section that will be more productive of good and lasting results, than a united and energetic movement toward the opening of such an exhibit in the fall of 1888.

With the natural advantages we possess, in point of location and consequent accessibility, there is no obstacle that can not be easily overcome. Charlevoix has the means to do it and the investment will pay, even in the direct returns of dollars and cents.

Gentlemen, how does "North Grand Traverse Agricultural and Industrial Exposition" strike you? Our columns are open for a discussion of the matter.

Charlevoix Summer Resort Items.

The following cottagers hold the fort, on the resort: Mrs. Heaton and Miss Heaton, Mrs. Sears, Miss Sears, Miss Curtiss, Frank and Will Sears, Mr. and Mrs. Wier, Mrs. West and Miss West, Mr. Willcox, Mr. and Mrs. Bishop, Mrs. Gayles, Miss Cody and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Parmelee.

At the banquet which the people of Kalamazoo gave last Thursday to their home team the champions of the Ohio league, Dallas Boudeman responded to the Toast "Base ball in ye olden time." The Telegraph says: Mr. Boudeman described in convulsing style a game of old fashioned base ball played at Charlevoix between Kalamazoo and Chicago resorters in which victory, which is dear to every freeman's heart, which strengthens and ennobles and glorifies humanity, was won by those Chicago fellows.

One of the most beautiful panorama sights ever seen on Pine Lake occurred last Monday evening. A bright sun-dog apparently starting from the tops of the trees (at the north end of the lake) appeared and running up some little distance of the canopy, then for about one mile along the edge of the woods was lighted up with unusual brilliancy caused by the reflection of the sun setting in Lake Michigan. Every object on the ground could be seen at a mile distance with the naked eye as if close by, and the tree tops with autumn leaves were grand beyond describing.

A WARNING TO THE SINNER.

BY OPIE P. READ.

Ole Judas took de taben bread an' sopped it in de dish,
(Oh, de fire burns hot fur de po' sinner man,)
An' he sopped up de gravy an' de tail bone o' de fish,
(Oh, de fire burns hot fur de po' sinner man.)
He sorter grinned at Peter and made a bluff at Mark,
(Oh, de fire burns hot fur de po' sinner man,)
An' he winked at Mr. Thomas wid er sign fer keep it dark,
(Oh, de fire burns hot fur de po' sinner man.)
He eat jes like er cur dog while he sot dar at de feast,
(Oh, de fire burns hot fur de po' sinner man,)
An' den he went er sneakin' fur de hifelutin' priest,
(Oh, de fire burns hot fur de po' sinner man.)

Yas de fire burns hot fur de bad sinner man
Dat don't take de cross in his soul;
An' 'less he makes de 'rangements fur ter jine de holy ban',
Ole Satan will hang him on er pole,
W'ar de flames keep leap,
Wid er lanterlizin sweep
An' crackle an' snarl
Like er burnin' tar bar'l
An rage an' hurl
An' twist an' curl
Till er thousand yeahs er mo' through 'ternity's run
Wid er stream o' de melted lead.
An' de clock on de furnace hab jes struck one
But de sinner man's soul ain't dead.

He 'trayed de Son o' David wid er Satan spired kiss,
(Oh, look out fur de place w'ar de fire doan die,)
An' dar he los his promise o' de eberlastin' bliss
(Oh, look out fur de place w'ar de fire doan die.)
Mr. Peter drawed his sword out an' hacked er ludied man,
(Oh, look out fur de place w'ar de fire doan die)
But de Saviour stopped the sturbance wid er wavin' o' His han',
(Oh, look out fur de place w'ar de fire doan die.)
Da took de Son erway ter de rulers in de hall,
(Oh, look out fur de place w'ar de fire doan die,)
An' demned him fer er cross dar fer suffer fur us all,
(Oh, look out fur de place w'ar de fire doan die.)

Yas, de fire burns hot fur de po' sinner man
Dat don't tole de cross in his soul;
An' less he makes de 'rangements fur ter jine de holy ban'
Ole Satan will hang him on er pole,
W'ar de flames keep leap
Wid er tanterlizin sweep
An' crackle an' snarl
Like er burnin' tar bar'l
An' rage an' hurl
An' twist an' curl
Till er thousan' yeahs er mo' through 'ternity's run
Wid er stream o' de melted lead
An' de clock on de furnace hab jes struck one
But de sinner man's soul ain't dead.

—Arkansaw Traveler.

NUMBER 10;

—OR,—

ANOTHER MAN'S CRIME.

—BY—

The Author of "The Rokewood Tragedy," "The Fenton Girls," "Althorpe," Etc.

[CONTINUED.]

"There is no time to be lost," she said with feverish haste. "Let me begin, back to the years of my youth, when prosperity smiled upon me, and happiness was mine. I was married when quite young, to the man of my choice, Jonathan Udderzook. The first years of my married life, let them go. Enough to say nothing of them. It was only when reverses in fortune came, and brought the tempter to work his bale-and, as fate would have it, encountered the supposed dead man face to face.

[illegible]

"But a man capable of planning and perpetrating the fraud that had been planned and perpetrated upon the insurance company was equal to the present emergency. Before Dawes could expose or denounce him, my husband had drawn a pistol and shot him dead. For this crime he was arrested. The trial came off; he was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced for life to the State prison at ——.

"The prison doors closed upon him, he was enrolled upon the prison records as 'Convict No. 10.'"

"No. 10." Dora started and clasped her hands.

"My father! Oh! I thought you said he was innocent."

"Be still." Mrs. Britt's thin hand beat the air. "I am coming to that. When the prison shut him in, I thought my trials were over. He had been tried and convicted under the name he had assumed upon leaving the old life. And though the papers gave a full account of his crime and its result, yet the secret of his real identity was a secret still, known only to himself and to me. Nobody but me dreamed that the name of 'James Orton' was an assumed one. A marble head-stone in a private cemetery bore the name that was rightfully his. But he was dead to me now, almost as much so as if the body I had buried had really been his.

"Seven years went by, years of fancied security and peace. I was beginning to think that the shadows that had so long darkened my pathway would be dispelled at last. I thought the worst that fate had in store for me had happened, and looked forward to an old age that would be peaceful. But—it is ever so. When our feet are upon the brink of the abyss that is opening to receive us, we are fancying ourselves the safest.

"It was the night before Christmas. I sat in my chair dozing, when the girl came in, saying a stranger was in the hall, asking to speak with the mistress. I told her to send him in.

"A large man, closely cropped and closely shaven, came in and sat down near me.

"There was a disgusting familiarity in his manner that aroused my anger.

"'Who are you?' I asked.

"He took a card from his pocket and gave it to me.

"I read the name inscribed on the card. It was one that I had never heard before, 'Joshua Britt.'

"'What is your business at this time of night?'

"I was trembling. I knew not why. He filled me with a fear of something, I could not tell what.

"'My business is to stop with you. Comfortable place this.' And he looked about him with so insolent an air that I put my hand on the bell-rope.

"'Don't do that,' said he in a warning voice. 'Don't do that; you'd be sorry if I should explain my errand here before your servants.'

"He reminded me somehow, in spite of his changed appearance, of— But no! The thought died as soon as it was born.

"A grip like that of death clutched at my heart.

"'Explain your meaning.' He bent forward. He looked into my face with a dreadful leer.

"Then I knew him.

"'Susan, don't you know me? I'm your dear husband, come back from

[illegible]

Col. Pettol's Philosophy.

[illegible]

ARMY ANECDOTES.

Bold Boys of Both Belligerents Tell of Battles, Bullets, Bayonets, and Boiled Beans.

Soldiers and Sailors' Stirring Stories of Solid Shot and Screaming Shells.

"I'll Report to God the Reason Why."

BY J. P. PRICKETT.

[The assault on Port Hudson was pending. In this assault colored troops were to receive their first "baptism of blood." It was a race's test of their fitness for freedom. The white Colonel of a colored regiment, himself in arrest, and hence could not command them in the battle, called the colored color-bearer to him and implored him to not dishonor the flag and bring reproach upon his race by proving recreant to duty. Hero and patriot that he was, this lowly representative of a lowly and despised race replied, "I'll bring these colors back with honor or report to God the reason why!" He reported to God.]

There like ebon statues in the starlight stood the "Black Brigade,"
As adown the ranks the Colonel strode, and, walking, silent prayed:
Prayed that God might fill with patriot zeal each darken'd soul, and light
In each lowly breast a bright pathway to Freedom's new birthright.
That these new-born sons of Freedom, in whose swelling hearts and breasts
Burned the memories of centuries of bondage and of wrong,
In the morrow's dreadful slaughter, might, as heroes, bear the tests—
In their race's vindication might be brave, and true, and strong.

Over yonder in the moonlight floated out the "Stars and Bars,"
Here the "Black Brigade" in silence stood beneath the Stripes and Stars.
Over there were trained drill'd rymen asleep by silent guns;
Here were loyal hearts in swelling breasts of Freedom's new-born sons,
Raised from chattelhood to manhood by the

[illegible]

a few days General Bee invoked the aid of Governor Lopez to arrest a Captain Sanders, who had stolen $2,500 from his regimental funds and crossed over the river. The request is duly acknowledged and due diligence promised in detecting the absconder's whereabouts. The subscriptions to Lopez' letters all read: "Liberty and reform. Done at Heroic Matamoras this —— day."

General Bee, in his letter of 1884, transmitting his correspondence to Washington, states that this treaty enabled him to preserve order among his forces and prevented Union organization to a great degree in Matamoras.

But on March 15, 1863, there occurred a series of events in the way of bitter collisions, kidnapings and lynching. From the headquarters in Brownsville could be heard the threats and taunts of Union men in Matamoras. At four o'clock in the morning a band of sixty rebels crossed the river, surrounded the Custom House, under the leadership of Colonel Chilton, and demanded Colonel Edmund J. Davis. He was arrested and taken down the river some twenty miles. Colonel Montgomery was kidnaped elsewhere and hanged. Lopez at once intervened to save the life of Davis. He resents the incursion of the Confederates and demands the release of Davis. Promptly Bee responds. He disclaims all knowledge of the intended capture and pledges the release when the prisoner can be found. Davis is found and restored to Mexican soil. Colonel Davis had been a District Judge in Texas. He was then a Union soldier and became a brigadier general. His kidnaping was on account of his efforts to recruit Federal soldiers on Mexican soil. Afterward he presided, during reconstruction, over the Constitutional

[illegible]

The Sweetest Girl in School.

"She's the sweetest girl in school!" enthusiastically exclaimed one young miss to another, as they passed down the street together. "Edith is so kind, and gentle, and unselfish, every one likes her. And she has lovely golden hair and pretty eyes. Isn't it a pity her complexion is so bad; it spoils her looks. And then she has such dreadful headaches." The girls skipped along, but it happened Edith's mother had heard what they said. It set her thinking. What could be done for those headaches and the rough, muddy complexion, that was such a trial to her gentle daughter. She recalled what she had read of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and on the spur of the moment she stepped into a drug store and bought a supply. Edith took it faithfully, with the result that it cleared her disordered blood, relieved the headaches, made her skin soft, fair and rosy, and now she is not only the "sweetest girl in school" but the most beautiful.

An exchange says that racing men do not care much for reading. Then why are they bookmakers?—Texas Siftings.

Oft obscure the road that leads to health,
Unmarked by board or sign;
Wisdom avails not, powerless is wealth
To soothe those aches of thine.
But do not despair, with life there's hope,
The cloud conceals the sun;
With Pierce's Favorite Prescription at hand
Your life's full course may run.

More truth than poetry in these lines, as thousands of ladies all over the land now blooming with health, testify to the great curative powers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, adapted by much research and careful study to the happy relief of all those weaknesses and ailments peculiar to females. All druggists.

An Irishman claims that the O'Rientals came from the ould sod originally.—Siftings.

Harvest Excursions.

The Burlington Route, C., B. & Q. R. R., will sell, on Sept. 20 and Oct. 11, Harvest Excursion Tickets at one fare for the round trip to principal points in Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota and Dakota. Limit, thirty days. Tickets and further information may be obtained of any C., B. & Q. Ticket Agent, or by addressing Paul Morton, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

Straighten your old boots and shoes with Lyon's Heel Stiffeners, and wear them again.

We Point with Pride

To the "Good name at home" won by Hood's Sarsaparilla. In Lowell, Mass., where it is prepared, there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold than of all other medicines. Whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time, and it has given the best of satisfaction since its introduction ten years ago. This could not be if the medicine did not possess merit. If you suffer from impure blood or debility, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I had salt rheum on my left arm three years, suffering terribly. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the salt rheum has entirely disappeared." H. M. Mills, 71 French St., Lowell, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

GOLD is worth $500 per pound. Pettit's Eye Salve $1,000, but is sold at 25 cents a box by dealers.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

OPIUM Habit Cured satisfactory before any pay. Prof. J. M. BARTON, 25th Ward, Cincinnati, O.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

$250 A MONTH. Agents wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

KIDDER'S DIGESTYLIN

A SURE CURE FOR INDIGESTION and DYSPEPSIA.

Over 5,000 Physicians have sent us their approval of DIGESTYLIN, saying that it is the best preparation for Indigestion that they have ever used.
We have never heard of a case of Dyspepsia where DIGESTYLIN was taken that was not cured.

FOR CHOLERA INFANTUM.

IT WILL CURE THE MOST AGGRAVATED CASES. IT WILL STOP VOMITING IN PREGNANCY. IT WILL RELIEVE CONSTIPATION.

For Summer Complaints and Chronic Diarrhea, which are the direct results of imperfect digestion, DIGESTYLIN will effect an immediate cure. Take DIGESTYLIN for all pains and disorders of the stomach; they all come from indigestion. Ask your druggist for DIGESTYLIN (price $1 per large bottle). If he does not have it, send one dollar to us and we will send a bottle to you, express prepaid. Do not hesitate to send your money. Our house is reliable. Established twenty-five years.

WM. F. KIDDER & CO., Manufacturing Chemists, 83 John St., N. Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

Ely's Cream Balm — It is a Perfect Cure.
I was severely afflicted with Hay Fever for twenty-five years. I tried Ely's Cream Balm, and the effect was marvelous. It is a perfect cure. Wm. T. Carr, Presbyterian Pastor, Elizabeth, N. J.

RADWAY'S PILLS,

For the cure of all disorders of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Bladder, Nervous Diseases, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Constipation, Costiveness, Indigestion, Biliousness, Fever, Inflammation of the Bowels, Piles, and all derangements of the Internal Viscera. Purely vegetable, containing no mercury, minerals, or deleterious drugs.

A FINE, SURE MEDICINE.

RADWAY & Co.—Gentlemen: Your Pills have often warded off sickness in my family. I never think it safe to be without them; they are a fine, sure medicine. Most respectfully yours,
HENRY KENWORTH, Chebanse, Iroquois County, Ill.

What a Physician Says of Radway's Pills.

I am using your R. R. Relief and your Regulating Pills, and have recommended them above all pills, and sell a great many of them. I have them on hand always, and use them in my practice and in my own family, and expect to, in preference of all Pills. Yours respectfully,
DR. A. C. MIDDLEBROOK, Doraville, Ga.

DYSPEPSIA.

DR. RADWAY'S PILLS are a cure for this complaint. They restore strength to the stomach and enable it to perform its functions. The symptoms of Dyspepsia disappear, and with them the liability of the system to contract diseases.

Dyspepsia of Long Standing Cured.

DR. RADWAY—I have for years been troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and found but little relief until I got your Pills and they made a perfect cure. They are the best medicine I ever had in my life. Your friend forever,
WILLIAM NOONAN, Blanchard, Mich.

Price, 25 cents per box. Sold by all druggists.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $1.50, FREE. Lines not under the horse's feet. Write Brewster Safety Rein Holder Co., Holly, Mich.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Dr. J. Stephens, Lebanon, Ohio.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PILES Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is a sure cure for blind, bleeding or itching piles. Cure guaranteed. Price 50c. and $1. At druggist's or mailed by WILLIAMS MFG. CO., Cleveland, O.

JONES HE PAYS the FREIGHT
5 Ton Wagon Scales, Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass Tare Beam and Beam Box for $60.
Every size Scale. For free price list mention this paper and address JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE.

Best in the World. Get the genuine. Every package has our Trade-mark and is marked Frazer's. SOLD EVERYWHERE.

PENSIONS Send for Pension Laws to U. S. Claim Agents FITZGERALD & POWELL, Indianapolis, Ind.

PATENTS R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D.C. Instructions and opinions as to patentability FREE. 17 years' experience.

DETECTIVES

Wanted in every County. Shrewd men to act under our instructions in our Secret Service. Experience not necessary. Particulars free. GRANNAN DETECTIVE BUREAU, 44 Arcade, Cincinnati, O.

LOOK NEVER SEEN BARGAINS BEFORE $11 COLT REPEATING RIFLE

Newton Factory. We stake our reputation of 47 years on this rifle, and guarantee it the biggest offer ever made. Send 6c. in stamps for illustrated 100-page Descriptive Catalogue, Guns, Rifles, Revolvers, Fishing Tackle, Bicycles, Sporting Goods, &c. JOHN P. LOVELL ARMS CO., Boston, Mass.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

MARVELOUS

MEMORY

DISCOVERY.

Wholly unlike artificial systems. Any book learned in one reading. Recommended by Mark Twain, Richard Proctor, the Scientist, Hons. W. W. Astor, Judah P. Benjamin, Dr. Minor, &c. Class of 100 Columbia law students, two classes 200 each at Yale, 350 at University of Penn., 300 at Wellesley College, etc. Prospectus post free. PROF. LOISETTE, 237 Fifth Ave., New York.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN

Cures Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Catarrh, Croup, Sore Throat,

RHEUMATISM,

Lame Back, Stiff Joints, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Wounds, Old Sores and

All Aches and Pains.

The many testimonials received by us more than prove all we claim for this valuable remedy. It not only relieves the most severe pains, but

It Cures You. That's the Idea!

Sold by Druggists. 50 cts. SONG BOOK mailed free. Address WIZARD OIL COMPANY CHICAGO.

KIDDER'S PASTILLES. Sure relief ASTHMA. Price 35 cts. by mail. Stowell & Co. Charlestown, Mass.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

C. N. U. No. 39—87

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

PAYNE ENGINES.

ENGINES AND BOILERS of all Sizes.

WRITE FOR CIRCULAR AND TELL US WHAT YOU WANT.

B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Drawer 1130, ELMIRA, N. Y.

BRANCH OFFICES: 10 South Canal Street, CHICAGO, Ill. 45 Dey Street, NEW YORK.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER The Best Waterproof Coat.

The FISH BRAND SLICKER is warranted waterproof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. The new POMMEL SLICKER is a perfect riding coat, and covers the entire saddle. Beware of imitations. None genuine without the "Fish Brand" trade-mark. Illustrated Catalogue free. A. J. Tower, Boston, Mass.

LIVER, BLOOD AND LUNG DISEASES.

LIVER DISEASE AND HEART TROUBLE. Mrs. MARY A. MCCLURE, Columbus, Kans., writes: "I addressed you in November, 1884, in regard to my health, being afflicted with liver disease, heart trouble, and female weakness. I was advised to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, Favorite Prescription and Pellets. I used one bottle of the 'Prescription,' five of the 'Discovery,' and four of the 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets.' My health began to improve under the use of your medicine, and my strength came back. My difficulties have all disappeared. I can work hard all day, or walk four or five miles a day, and stand it well; and when I began using the medicine I could scarcely walk across the room, most of the time, and I did not think I could ever feel well again. I have a little baby girl eight months old. Although she is a little

GENERAL DEBILITY. Mrs. PARMELIA BRUNDAGE, of 161 Lock Street, Lockport, N. Y., writes: "I was troubled with chills, nervous and general debility, with frequent sore throat, and my mouth was badly cankered. My liver was inactive, and I suffered much from dyspepsia. I am pleased to say that your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets' have cured me of all these ailments and I cannot say enough in their praise. I must also say a word in reference to your 'Favorite Prescription,' as it has proven itself a most excellent medicine for weak females. It has been used in my family with excellent results."

Dyspepsia.—JAMES L. COLBY, Esq., of Yucatan, Houston Co., Minn., writes: "I was troubled with indigestion, and would eat heartily and grow poor at the same time. I experienced heartburn, sour stomach, and many other disagreeable symptoms common to that disorder. I commenced taking your

[illegible]

"THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

[illegible]

CONSUMPTION, WEAK LUNGS, SPITTING OF BLOOD.

[illegible]

Golden Medical Discovery is Sold by Druggists. Price $1.00 per Bottle, or Six Bottles for $5.00.

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Proprietors, No. 663 Main Street, BUFFALO, N. Y.

STIMULATING FOOD.

[illegible]

PITH AND POINT.

[illegible]

FINE BAIT FOR TROUT.

[illegible]

The Vinegar Plant.

[illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, OCT. 5, 1887.

Poverty won't be abolish this generation, by George.

The Michigan state press is pretty much a unit in favor of hanging the condemned anarchists.

The democrats of New York cannot win this fall by calling Fred Grant the son of his father.

The president's train will be the finest ever put on the road since the party of Jeffersonian simplicity was born.

The retained attorney of the liquor dealers will endeavor to prove that the new liquor law is unconstitutional. The sooner a decision is reached the better.

Wonders will never cease. A postoffice in Massachusetts was discontinued, recently, because no democrat could not be found to serve as postmaster.

There was never a time when a national encampment of the G. A. R. attracted so much attention as it does now. Sit down with this thought and think it over.

In a private letter to Congressman Boutelle, Mr. Blaine says that he is in excellent health and that he and his family are "having a very nice, quiet, enjoyable time."

If the Anarchists are "martyrs," what were the policemen for whose murder they are directly responsible? It might be well to get the views of the widows and orphans on this point.

A great many people are of the opinion that president Cleveland will not be re-nominated. But there is a much larger number who think president Cleveland will not be re-elected.

The telegraph dispatch reports that Mrs. Cleveland snubbed Gov. Foraker of Ohio, by turning her back on him at the Philadelphia constitutional celebration. This makes it very clear that Gov. Foraker is no lady.—Charlotte Republican.

Mrs. Cleveland is reported as saying that she would never sit for a photograph again while she remained mistress of the White House. Some of the prints used as tobacco signs are said to be the cause of her taking this resolution.

One of the most absurd things is that Johann Most, an alien Anarchist, and his little group of vicious aliens, should be damning American institutions after being driven out of Europe for their crimes. Let these howlers go back to Europe if it don't suit them here.

It takes the western yankee to improve each shining hour. His latest scheme is butter making. He starts out with a horse and wagon, with a churn attachment, to buy cream; fills his churn and starts back home. The churning gear is connected as he drives along, and when he gets home his wife takes out the butter and sends him after more cream.

There should be no half-way measures with the prohibitionists about local option, which means prohibition in every county that so votes. The fact that the prohibitionists were not the authors of the measure makes no difference with the principle of the thing. True prohibitionists not only sign the petition, but will work at the polls for the measure, and when it becomes a law, see that it is enforced. —Nashville News.

Col. Fred Grant and Governor Hill were at a county fair in New York last week and occupied seats on the speaker's platform. The end of the platform on which the governor sat went down and the governor barely saved himself from falling by jumping to the other end where Col. Grant was sitting. The sensation was soon over when Col. Grant dryly remarked: "I was pleased to notice that when the governor found himself once more on an unsound platform he hastened to find a more secure footing on the firm plank on which I am standing." As the boys would say, that was "a hoss" on the governor.

Arctic heroes are in luck. General Greely obtained rapid promotion and a responsible post as a reward for his perilous experiences in the far North; and now Chief Engineer Melville is placed at the head of the important bureau of Steam Engineering. There is no reason to believe, however, that the latter appointment was made for sentimental considerations. Chief Engineer Melville was the most useful and pluckiest of DeLong's companions on the ill-fated Jeannette, and his conduct in bringing his party of survivors to land was most meritorious; but his promotion has not been ordered for any reason except his qualification for his new post.

Northern Michigan News.

The Frankfort Express has been sold to Bert Trimble of Reed City.

Police court business has been brisk since Elk Rapids was incorporated.

The citizens of Gaylord are thinking of bonding their town for $10,000 to put in water works.

Geo. E. Spang, from Eaton, Lyon & Co., Grand Rapids, has bought the stationery business of Mr. Connable, of Petoskey.

The Independent says that next year Petoskey will have the best fair grounds and race track in this part of the state.

C. Case of Petoskey, has harvested 2,500 pounds of honey this season. Prices of honey have advanced 50 per cent in the last month.

Harbor Springs Republican: We learn that Mr. Hankey, of Petoskey, and Mr. Riggs, have bought the Gilbault water lot next to A. J. Southard's grist mill, and will erect an elevator and mill thereon at once.

Elk Rapids Progress: The Lake View house will be opened Oct. 1st. The furniture to be placed in it will come from the Lewis house, Torch Lake, and the hotel will another year be run in connection with that popular house.

The managers of the Traverse County Fair propose to admit all editors and their wives, all preachers and their wives and all other persons over 70 years of age to the ground during the fair free of charge, so says the Traverse Bay Eagle.

The G. R. & I. railroad company, always foremost in advancing the interests of Northern Michigan, is now contemplating laying a cable from Mackinaw City to Mackinac Island next summer, and are investigating the merits of different kinds of cables.

Petoskey Democrat: The largest squash ever raised in Emmet county is now on exhibition at D. N. White's. It was raised by E. G. Ludlow on his place one mile east of town. It measures five feet two inches in circumference and weighs 64 pounds.

Petoskey Record: Sunday morning Rev. F. E. Stout announced that he had decided to accept the call extended to him by the Presbyterian church of Petoskey. The decision greatly pleases those who have heard him with so much profit for the past two weeks.

Hubert Deuster, Sr., and John Deuster, of the firm of H. & J. Deuster of Sutton's Bay, and Herbert Duester, Jr., were arrested lately for assault with criminal intent on the persons of John Cadham and Levi Cozart on the night of Saturday, Sept. 17, after the lecture of Wm. A. Taylor, on prohibition.

Breeze: The Bellaire Accident Association is in a flourishing condition. It now has a membership of twenty-eight. Each member pays a weekly fee of ten cents, and, in case of injury incurred by accident while in performance of duty, receives three dollars per week for the time he is compelled to remain idle. Any one may join.

Traverse City Eagle: The business committee have purchased a forty foot tent which will be erected on the fair grounds and used for the exhibition of fruit. This will make a nice provision for the fruit exhibit, and will relieve the main hall so as to give ample room for fancy work.

The first passenger train on the Sault branch of the D., S. S. & A., arrived at the "Soo" on the 28th, with James McMillan, President, aboard, accompanied by Gen. O. M. Poe, U. S. Engineer, Gens. King and Clintz, also the chief engineer and other officials. The line will be open for business about Oct. 10th.

Bellaire Breeze: Sept. 27, 1887, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. H. A. Kerns, Mr. Charles A. Clow and Miss Alice I. Covert, both of Central Lake. The wedding was a quiet affair only a few relatives being present. Mr. and Mrs. Clow will remain with the bride's parents. Their many friends wish them a happy and useful life.

Petoskey Independent: The train men know nothing of the talked of excursion from here to Detroit, and as far as we can learn there have been no arrangements made as yet by the railroad officials for the proposed excursion. It will be a great disappointment to many if there should be no excursion, and we think the road could carry a thousand people out of Emmet, Charlevoix and Antrim counties by giving the same rate as last year, with tickets good for two weeks

The Grand Traverse Herald correspondent saw the finest apple crop in that region on the Mission farm last week. There has been a general complaint in that vicinity that winter fruit was falling off, but S. Williams, who has charge of the Mission farm says but little of his fruit dropped off this year. The apples are all unusually large, and sound, perfect fruit. Mr. Williams has sold for Fonlds & McLeod, to Perkett & Lardie about 700 barrels of apples.

Petoskey Democrat: Liberty Ingalls contemplates giving up the hotel business and moving back on his farm west of town. — It is ascertained that Thompson Trimble, who was married by a blushing young damsel last week by Justice Barnum, has a wife and four children living at Ironton. When last heard from the newly wedded pair were at Newberry. —J. H. Feick, of Springvale Township, made a sale of the Dunham place last week for $1,200, but after the papers were all made out the purchaser paid $25 to be released.

The agent of the G. R. & I. at Grand Rapids having resigned, it is understood that Mr. M. F. Quaintance, of Petoskey, is to receive the appointment. So says the Record. Later, from the Independent: Station agent M. F. Quaintance, has been appointed manager of the G. R. & I. freight office at Grand Rapids, and will leave the first of the week to assume his new duties. His family will remain a short time until he secures a residence in Grand Rapids, which will undoubtedly be his permanent home.

Northport news, from the Eagle: Our town has had quite a building boom this summer, having erected a church, hotel building, and others in the village, and several residences on the outskirts, besides repairing others "to look as good as new." —— Potatoes are coming into town quite freely now, and find a ready market at from 50 to 55 cents per bushel. Although the crop is smaller than usual, as regards the potato, both individually and collectively, the farmers seem likely to realize about as much as usual from the greater prices and less culling.

East Jordan Enterprise: Bricklaying on the Loveday building is progressing rapidly.——John Chamberlin and family went to North Lansing yesterday for the winter.— A ruction in a saloon last week resulted in two "knockers" being hauled up before 'Squire Barbour and fined ten and twenty-eight dollars respectively. — David Justice gave out an appointment four weeks ago to preach in the Butler school-house in Echo. When the time came a good audience had assembled. The elder rose and gave out his text, when a large bear and cub walked in— and the congregation walked out without waiting for the benediction. So says Freeman Levally.

Concerning a new farming industry, the raising of peppermint, the Kalkaska Leader has the following: It has been satisfactorily demonstrated that conditions of soil, climate, etc., are favorable to the culture of peppermint in this county. Those who have tried it this summer are well pleased with the general result, everything considered, and there is no reason why peppermint should not become one of the staples with our farmers. —The largest yield of peppermint we have heard of in this county for this season, is nine pounds to the acre, and Mr. J. H. Hudson, of Rapid River, is the champion mint grower of the section. We believe, however, that Mr. H.'s mint was put in last fall, and was consequently in better condition to stand the drouth.

Boyne Citizen: Z. N. Garbutt left for the upper peninsula yesterday. — Charley Shepard, wife and family left for Roscommon, Mich., yesterday, where he has secured at situation. - The county board of jail inspectors, consisting of the Judge of Probate, chairman, the Superintendents of the Poor, and the county agent of the state board of Corrections and Charities, met here on Tuesday and examined the jail and will recommend to the board of Supervisors that a more adequate provision be made for prisoners, which in effect, means a new jail. This recommendation will hardly be considered favorably by the board of supervisors, for, while the jail does not provide suitable separation of the sexes and older and younger offenders, there are two other good jails in the county to which offenders may be sent at the discretion of the Judge.

Cheboygan Tribune: Monday, a gentleman who has enjoyed unusual opportunities to ascertain the facts, called at the Tribune office and stated that the Toledo, Ann Arbor and Northern Michigan railroad was reaching out for the straits and that Cheboygan was one of the objective points. The road will be completed to Cadillac this fall, 8,000 to 10,000 men now being at work on it and the rails being laid from both ends. He says the design is to continue the road to Petoskey and then cross to Cheboygan and from here to the straits. We have every reason to believe that the gentlemen knows whereof he speaks, knowing, as we do, the opportunities he has had to get correct and reliable information. Of course the management of the road will expect the people of Cheboygan to do something for the railroad and it is natural that they should. Every person must see the advantages our village would derive from the road and the importance of securing the location of the route so as to take in Cheboygan.

DRY GOODS!

New Goods arriving by every Boat from the Best Houses of East and West, to our already complete stock of Dry Goods.

Our Winter CLOAKS,

are being manufactured expressly for us and will be here in about a week, when we will show as good a line as you ever saw here

Cor. Bridge & Main sts.

VERY RESP'Y,

B. SEE.

Probate Order.

[illegible]

Probate Order.

[illegible]

Sheriff Sale.

[illegible]

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys for [illegible]

Probate Notice.

[illegible]

Mortgage Sale.

[illegible] J. AYERS, Assignee. [illegible]

Mortgage Sale.

[illegible] GIBSON, Mortgagee. DALLAS [illegible]

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

STANDARD TIME.

Charlevoix and East Jordan.

STR. NORTH STAR, ...CAPT. MEL THOMPSON

Leaving Charlevoix at 6:30 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. and returning leave East Jordan for Charlevoix at 9:30 a. m. and 4 p. m., touching at intermediate points both ways.

Charlevoix and Boyne City.

STR. JOSEPH GORDON ....CAPT. LEWIS GEARD.

Leave Charlevoix at 6:30 a. m. and 1 p. m., and Boyne City at 9:30 a. m., 4 p. m., touching at way ports

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan.

STR. THOS. FRIANT, ...CAPT. R. VANDERHOEF.

MORNING: Leave Harbor Springs, 7:20, Petoskey, 8:00; Charlevoix, 9:30, arrive, East Jordan 11:30. AFTERNOON: Leave East Jordan 1:30, Charlevoix, 4:00, Petoskey, 5:00; arrive, Harbor Springs, 6:00.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE.

PROP. LAWRENCE................Capt. Geo. Tuour.

Going North, Chicago, Fridays 8 p. m.; Charlevoix, Sundays 8 p. m.; Cheboygan, Mondays 9 a. m. Going South, Cheboygan, Mondays 1 p. m.; Charlevoix, Tuesdays 8 a. m.; Milwaukee, Wednesdays 1 p. m.; Chicago, Thursdays 12 m.

Emery Bros., agents, Charlevoix.

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS.

CITY OF GRAND RAPIDS,.........Capt. O. E. WILBER.

Going North, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays: Leave Traverse City 7 a. m.; Northport 9:30; Charlevoix 11:30; Petoskey 1:30 p. m.; Harbor Springs 2; Cross Village 4:30; Mackinac Island 7:45 arriving at St. Ignace 8:30.

Going South, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Leave St. Ignace 6 a. m., Mackinac Island 7; Cross Village 10:15; Harbor Springs 12:45 p. m.; Petoskey 1:45, Charlevoix 2:45, Northport 5:15 p. m., arriving at Traverse City at 7:15 p. m.

J. L. Hurd & Co., Agents, Charlevoix.

Probate Notice.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for said county, held at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, on the 6th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the Matter of the Estate of Hugh Miller, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John C. Miller, praying that a certain instrument now on file in this Court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, may be admitted to probate, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Aldin Stover and Robert Miller, the executors named in said will, or some other suitable persons. Thereupon it is ordered that Thursday, the 13th day of October next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted. And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

(A true copy.)

JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Bank of Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security

is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its Capital and conservative management.

Its Officers

Never Speculate. Their business creed is: That to Speculate with ones own money, is folly, that to do so with the money of others, is criminal.

Security in Banking

Is the question of first importance to both Bankers and Depositors; and believing that it furnishes ou[illegible] guarantees, therefore,

This Bank Invites

People generally to intrust their money to its keeping. Just liberality will mark its dealings.

This Bank Will

Borrow Investment money when desired, paying as large interest thereon as shall be compatible with safe use of the money.

Parties Seeking

Productive employment for money, and desiring to escape the expense and trouble of the management of private investments, will find attractive security in this Bank's

Investment Notes,

Now earning Five per cent. yearly interest. These notes afford Investors much more perfect security than Savings Bank deposits.

We Solicit Your Patronage.

WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK DETROIT, - - MICH.

$500,000 TO INVEST IN BONDS

Issued by cities, counties, towns and school districts of Michigan. Officers of these municipalities about to issue Bonds will find it to their advantage to apply to this Bank. Blank Bonds and blanks for proceedings supplied without charge. All communications will have prompt attention.

May '87. S. D. ELWOOD, Treasurer.

For Sale.

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix. tf

Land for Sale.

I have 5 acres just east of the cemetery, one mile from town, nearly all cleared, which I will sell cheap for cash, or approved paper. Address

JAMES METCALF, Charlevoix.

Land for Sale.

I offer for sale the south half of the south-east quarter of section seventeen, (17) in Township Thirty-three (33) North, of Range Eight (8) West, known as the "Weitzel place" in Marion. Apply to THOMAS WEST, 457 Lafayette St., Grand Rapids.

CROSS & SONS.,

Buy and Sell all kinds of Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.

Charlevoix, - Mich.

CHARLEVOIX Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Henry Bennett,	O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls,	A. Bullars.
A. R. Upright.	A. Fox,
F. A. Smith.

CAPITAL, ...	$25,000
SURPLUS, ...	2,000

The liabilities of Stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art. 3174, Sec. 40 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. Superior facilities for the transaction of every legitimate branch of Banking business extended to our customers on terms as favorable as are consistent with safety.

Drafts drawn direct on the leading commercial cities of the world in large or small amounts. Money to loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest. We respectfully solicit your patronage.

CORRESPONDENTS:

NATIONAL PARK BANK - - -	NEW YORK.
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK - - -	CHICAGO.
NAT. CITY BANK - - -	GRAND RAPIDS.
DETROIT NAT. BANK - - -	DETROIT.

160 Acres in MARION Township For Sale at a Bargain, Terms to suit.

MONEY TO LOAN ON Approved Real Estate Security.

THEODORE R. CHAPIN, Boyne City.

JOHN CONNOR,

Fashionable

Boot and Shoe MAKER.

Hand Sewed French Calf Gaiters, $5; Men's Kip and Calf Boots, $1.50; Half-soling, 50 cents. Defy competition.

All Work Guaranteed.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,

ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR,

—ON—

Chalevoix Summer Resorts.

I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.

I employ only first-class workmen, both

Carpenters and Painters.

Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention

J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller

Offer a Mammoth Stock OF BOOTS, SHOES and other FOOT WEAR, --AT-- LOWER PRICES Than can be found elsewhere in the County.

We have just secured a FIRST-CLASS SHOEMAKER, And will make Repairing a specialty.

We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.

NOTHING SHODDY.

Fox & Miller.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter

RIFENBURG MILLING CO.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealers

3 EXTRA GRADES OF FLOUR

Feed, Corn Meal, Graham

We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL

Litney & Steimel

LIVERY, And Feed Barn

Charlevoix, Mich.

Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the BEST BOATS!

The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references.

I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the

LEAST MONEY!

All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.

LEAVE ORDERS

with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.

Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.

J. BEAUVAIS.

BETTER THAN MEDICINE!

KEEP YOUR FEET WARM.

You can't enjoy good health unless you clothe the feet properly.

D. SHERWOOD & CO. have just received the finest line of Fall and Winter

BOOTS & SHOES

ever brought to Charlevoix. Give them a call.

A. J. McLEOD,

Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at

Wholesale or Retail

All kinds of

FRESH MEATS, SALT PORK, SMOKED & SALTED HAMS, Dried and Smoked BACON, DRIED BEEF, Bologna, Head Cheese, Sausage.

Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.

Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.

A. J. McLEOD.

Washburn & Ackert,

FOUNDREYMEN, MACHINISTS, And Manufacturers of The Charlevoix Plow.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN

Boiler Works!

Builder and Manufacturer of

BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.

Sheet Iron Work given special attention.

MARINE WORK a specialty.

HENRY BARTH, Prop.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law, Office in Butters' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PAILTHORPE & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st. Charlevoix. Office hours 6 to 10 a. m., 6 to 8 p. m.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Postoffice.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 293, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Desert Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 101, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 1.36, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.

President—Byron See.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith
Second Vice President —Robert Miller
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang.
Financial Secretary — H. Suffield.
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Iddings, W. A. Brown and C. V. Cook
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Geo. W. Crouter, B. W. Miller, S. M. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Beiden.

All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,

RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r,

Charlevoix, - - - Mich.

Every convenience for the traveling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,

Lorenzo Cook, Manager

Charlevoix, - - - Mich.

The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE.

W. C. Newman, Prop'r.

Charlevoix, - - Mich.

Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and Dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. E. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. R. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. [Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.]

DENTIST.

N. J. PERRY, Dentist. Office in Weed's Drug Store, Charlevoix, Mich.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card for Petoskey.

IN EFFECT, JULY 1887.

Leave Going North	*6:05 a. m., 5:02 p. m., 8:05 p. m.
Leave Going South	8:50 a. m., 2:15 p. m., †10:35 p. m.
* daily.	† daily except Saturday.

Michigan Central

The Direct Route Between Mackinaw City & Detroit Jackson, The South and East.

Trains leave Mackinaw City 8 a. m. daily except Sunday and 10 p. m. daily arriving at

Detroit	- - -	9.10 p m and 11 a m
Jackson	- - -	10.30 p m and 11 20 a m
Toledo	- - -	10.55 p m and 4.45 p m
Buffalo	- - -	3.15 a m and 8.07 p m
Cincinnati	- - -	6.35 a m and 6.40 p m

WAGNER PALACE SLEEPING AND PARLOR CARS.

W. H. JONSTON, Mich. Pass Agt, Grand Rapids
O. W. RUGGLES, G. P. & T. Agt, Chicago

DULUTH, SOUTH SHORE AND ATLANTIC R'Y.

"SOO-MACKINAW SHORT LINE."

Only Direct Route to Marquette and and the Iron and Copper Regions of Lake Superior.

Traversing the most Picturesque portion of Upper Michigan through a country Unequalled for

Hunting, Fishing, Etc.

Two Through Express Trains daily in each direction to which are attached

NEW, ELEGANT and COMMODIOUS OBSERVATION PARLOR CARS & WAGNER SLEEPING COACHES

Tickets over this route are on sale at all principal ticket offices. Full information as to rates etc., maps and folders will be furnished. Address

E. W. ALLEN,
Gen Pass. and & Tkt Agt, Marquette, Mich

An Hour of Horror.

Robert Stevens, of Tarentum, Pennsylvania, an active oil-well operator, but now a shriveled cripple, with both hands gone, has brought suit against John Denman and Mills & Mullin, the rich oil well owners of Macksburg, Ohio, to recover $50,000 damages, charging that they knowingly subjected him to the danger which resulted in his crippling and in the horrible death of his two fellow-workmen, a danger of which both he and the other two victims were kept in ignorance. According to the statement of the plaintiff in the suit, the defendants had drilled a well in the Macksburg field, in a pioneer district and to further the ends they had in view they made a "mystery" of the well. They represented that it would be but a very small producer, and permitted no stranger to come near it. Edward Mills, a young man named Joseph Ayers, and the complainant in this suit were employed one day to assist in pulling the tubing in the well for the purpose of adjusting the packer. Stevens, on going to the derrick, noticed that the boiler, instead of being at a safe distance from the engine and well, was in close and dangerous proximity to both. Stevens now charges that this was done to indicate that the well was not yielding much oil, in order that anyone who might be "scouting" about it would be deceived as to its character.

Stevens and Mills were at work at the derrick floor, and Ayers was stationed in the derrick forty feet from the ground. The moment the packer was disturbed the well made a tremendous flow of oil and gas. Mills and Stevens ran from the derrick, but the gas quickly settled down about the boiler and a terrible explosion followed. The clothing of the men being saturated with oil from head to foot, Mills and Stevens were instantly wrapped in flames.

"The flames," says Stevens, "rose up from our feet, and were met by a grand volume of fire that came down from above. All that I remember of that part of the catastrophe was a blinding flash and a report like a near-by clap of thunder. The gas seemed to settle in a wide area around the derrick, and it all went off together. A sea of flame, equal to an acre in extent, surrounded us, and the entire earth and sky seemed to be on fire. Mills and I turned and ran, blazing as we were, with no definite idea of what we were to do. I remember of getting out of the great sweep of flame, and then, with every stitch of clothing burned from us, our falling into the tall and wet marsh grass on the edge of the fire and rolling about in it. We were so terribly burned that great pieces of our flesh came off and stuck to the grass as we rolled in it. We tumbled about, suffering the most terrible agony, until we had rolled more than ten rods away from the flaming gas and oil, and then I struggled to my feet. I had my sight, and seeing Mills writhing on the ground I helped him to his feet. Both of his eyes were burned out. I managed to reach a house about a hundred yards distant, helping Mills along with me. He died a horrible death shortly after we reached there. I lay there seven weeks, more dead than alive, but finally recovered, with both of my hands gone and every inch of my flesh shriveled and scarred by the terrible ordeal through which I had passed. Poor Joe Ayers was burned up on the derrick."

In Buenos Ayres the government printing is done by convicts. Most of the work consists of ministers' reports and official receipts. The manager, not a person in durance vile, but a practical native printer, showed several volumes of these reports, and they were really well got up. All the tabular matter, however, was far from meritorious, little or no attention having been given to the mitreing of rules, etc.

Bead-Inlaying.

There is a very curious and effective style of ornamental, or decorative, art which—though occasionally practiced in Turkey and other Eastern countries—is by no means very common even where it is best known. It may be called bead-inlaying, and it is so easy that any boy or girl ten years old can achieve excellent results in it by following these simple directions:

Take a piece of wood, let us say beech or mahogany or pear-tree or, indeed, any of the fine-grained kinds. Let it be half an inch in thickness and twelve inches in length by six in breadth. Draw on it your design. This done, follow the pattern with a series of holes, bored in the wood with a straight round awl or a drill or gimlet, as close together as possible without splitting the wood between them. Then put the beads into the holes so that their perforations will show. To secure the beads in place, the holes may first be filled with glue or varnish. The work will then be very durable. If you choose, the holes in the beads may be filled with a mixture of fine transparent glue and any coloring matter, such as umber or chrome. The beads should be sunk rather deeply into the wood. When the wood splits easily, or if it is desirable to make the holes very close together, the holes may be bored with a hot iron rod. It will often add to the effect if a line, or line groove, be cut with a penknife or a parting, or V, tool around the edge of the bead pattern. The ground may also be stamped or indented, with a wood-carver's stamp.

When a very small brass-headed pin or tack is passed through each bead, the appearance of the whole is very much improved. Such tacks may be obtained with convex, or half-round heads not larger than those of pins.

Of course, work of this kind need not be strictly limited to beads. The different kinds of the marbles used by the boys may similarly be set in wood; and they are made in an endless variety of color. A cabinet thus studded would be increased in value far beyond the cost of the marbles, though they were the most expensive agates. Marbles and beads may be set together. To make the holes for the former, a center-bit or auger should be used. Long, straight beads may be used with good effect. To set them, make grooves with a gouge, and coat the grooves with mastic or Turkish cement, or with strong varnish, and press the long beads, or bugles, into the cavities.—Charles. G. Leland in St Nicholas.

A Florida court the other day acquitted a man tried for breaking into a car for the ridiculous reason that while there is a law against breaking into a house or vessel, there is none against breaking into a car.

Danbury's Dummy.

For some time the prominent interest of the old Connecticut town, Danbury, has centered in a resident who is, from a physiological and psychological view, a wonder. His strangeness can only be accounted for in the light of a maternal ante natal experience, which seems to influence all his biological phenomena. John Tice, or "Dummy," as he is generally called, aged about 50, resides on Deerhill avenue, in the eastern part of Danbury. He is a farm hand, engaged most of the time in the service of Mrs. Ryder, who resides at Main and South streets, and owns a farm in the outskirts. "Dummy's" sobriquet indicates less than a half truth, for he converses readily enough with two persons, but is absolutely unable to talk to anyone else on earth. This statement necessitates a retrospect. "Dummy's" mother, according to undisputed testimony, was amazonian, inflexible, vindictive, unrelenting. Her animosities were as bitter as her friendships were enduring. Her husband was shiftless, indolent, and a poor provider, and bibulous, often arousing her wrath. About six months before "Dummy's" birth her husband committed an act so heinous in her eyes as fairly to stifle the accustomed torrent of vituperation. In her fury she could only sulk and mumble and grind her teeth. Finally her suppressed rage found vent in a single sentence:

"You brute! I'll never speak to you again to my dying day!"

Until after the birth of her child she nursed her wrath and kept her word. She spoke, indeed, to no one except to her mother, to her friend, Mrs. McCann, a young widow, and the latter's little daughter. The Nemesis that has pursued "Dummy" through life first manifested its presence in infancy. When alone with his mother, Mrs. McCann, or her daughter, Johnny was able without any more difficulty than other children of his age to frame words and unite them into sentences, but to everybody else the child was utterly unable to articulate. He was never able, try as he might, to speak a word to his father. As he could not recite anything he was not sent to school. He can not read or write. A party of roughs, some time ago, believing that he could, but would not converse, inveigled him to a secluded spot and threatened him with death if he did not speak to them and answer their questions. He could only plead in dumb show for his life. Then they beat and fearfully maltreated him, fully convinced at last that he was not shamming. After his mother's death he married one of the two remaining persons he could talk to, the Widow McCann. He lives with her at the present time, conversing readily with her and her daughter, now Mrs. Pudgley. A single incident will illustrate how he communicates with them.

A gentleman recently desired to buy one of his roosters, and he called upon "Dummy" and the latter's wife. He made his offer to them and inquired whether it was accepted.

"I'll take him one side and see what he says about it," she replied to the visitor. Then "Dummy" and his wife went out near an outhouse, beyond hearing, but the visitor could see "Dummy's" lips moving and the pair in evident conversation. Upon their return the woman accepted the offer in her husband's name. He can not converse with his wife in another's presence. His hearing and understanding are normal, and the two persons he can talk to say he manifests no difficulty in expressing himself to them clearly, nor in enunciation. Mrs. Ryder, for whom he works, in common with all others who have had relations with him, pronounces him a good workman, faithful, intelligent, comprehending readily everything required of him, but doomed to general dumbness by an inexorable law antedating his birth. A physician who takes great interest in the case and has examined "Dummy's" throat, explains his physiological difficulties as follows:

"There is always nervous excitement attendant upon his efforts to speak before strangers. In ordinary speech the epiglottis is distended and the vibratory chords are expanded. In his case they do not respond to the will. A sort of paralysis exists. In the absence of nervous excitement they would act normally and speech would follow."

This is the pathological view, but it does not explain why speech is vouchsafed only when addressing those his mother favored just previous to his birth. It does not explain the preternatural phases, which puzzle physiologists and scientists alike, and are the wonder of townsmen and strangers.

Understood the Question.

Archdeacon Kirby, in a recent account of his life-long experiences as a missionary among the Indians in British Columbia, remarked upon the extreme difficulty of making them comprehend the simplest Scriptural teachings, and illustrated it by saying that he gave a series of lessons on each of the Commandments separately to a class of young Alaskan braves. He dwelt especially upon the principle involved in the Sixth Commandment, explaining to them clearly what murder meant, and what a dreadful crime it was in the eyes of God and man. To test their comprehension of what he had said, he then asked all those in the class who had committed murder to stand up. Only three arose. He was very much surprised as he knew that they had all been on the war-path repeatedly, and boasted of their scalps. He went carefully over the explanation once more, and again asked them to arise. The same three came to their feet. "Why, surely," he said, in despair, "this can't be all that have committed murder." After a moment's reflection, "Will all those who have tomahawked their mother-in-law please stand up?" Nineteen arose.—Editor's Drawer, in Harper's Magazine.

Pleasant Thurman, father of the ex-Senator and "noble old Roman" of Ohio, was a carpenter of shiftless habits but of a religious turn of mind. Now and then he preached, and in old-fashioned Methodist "revivals" he was a great shouter. Allen was a slender, tow-headed boy, pale and delicate, and quiet in habits. He was not noted for brilliancy, but was careful and industrious. Before he was admitted to the bar he was a saddler, and while working at that trade he met a Miss McArthur, daughter of a man of wealth and social rank. He asked the privilege of escorting her home from the gathering where they first met, but she rather haughtily refused him, not wishing to associate with "a mere mechanic." But she afterward changed her mind and became Mrs. Thurman.

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used, instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well." Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c per box by Dr. G. W. Crouter

Good Results in Every Case.

D. A. Bradford, wholesale paper dealer of Chattanooga, Tenn., writes that he was seriously afflicted with a severe cold that settled on his lungs: had tried many remedies without benefit. Being induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, did so and was entirely cured by use of a few bottles. Since which time he has used it in his family for all Coughs and Colds with best results. This is the experience of thousands whose lives have been saved by this Wonderful Discovery. Trial Bottles free at Dr. G. W. Crouter's

"HACKMETACK," a lasting and fragrant perfume. Price 25 and 50 cents.

SHILOH'S CURE will immediately relieve Croup, Whooping Cough and Bronchitis. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

FOR DYSPEPSIA and Liver Complaint, you have a printed guarantee on every bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer. It never fails to cure.

A NASAL INJECTOR free with each bottle of Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. Price 50 cents. F. G. Hines & Co.

DAN'L S. WAY, Photographer.

In Bradbeer's Gallery.

Photographs of all sizes taken.

Old Pictures coped and enlarged.

CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

W. H. FRANCIS

FURNITURE —AND— JOBBING SHOP,

Will also do

Contracting & Building,

In Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.

I keep in my shop a full set of hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc. on short notice.

Shop on South Terrace,

Opposite Sheriff Berdan's residence.

MILLINERY, FANCY GOODS, DRESS-MAKING.

We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.

DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates

ALDRICH SISTERS.

Ingleside Building.

C. H. Maddaugh,

MERCHANT TAILOR.

I have just received a fine line of Samples of first class Fall & Winter Tweeds. Call and look them over.

Fine Samples of

OVERCOATINGS!

now awaiting your inspection.

Call and see me, Satisfaction Guaranteed.

CHARLEVOIX

Manufacturing Co.

Charlevoix, Mich.,

Manufacturers of

Sash and Doors, Blinds, Mouldings etc.

NEWELL Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails kept in stock.

Window & Door Frames made to order.

All Kinds of

Building Material

Kept constantly on hand.

PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS, Furnished on application.

Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building

Correspondence solicited.

New JEWELRY AND SILVER WARE.

I have just received a very fine stock of Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc which I will sell at Prices lower than the same goods can be purchased outside.

Did it ever occur to you that by patronizing home Merchants you were benefiting yourselves?

All classes of Repairing done quickly.

C. R. BELLINGER.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S

LIVERY STABLE

CHARLEVOIX.

The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.

Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.

Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

W. A. REYNARD,

Has just received at his Fruit Store in the Lewis Block, a choice line of

Vegetables and Fruits

OF ALL KINDS,

TO WHICH OTHERS WILL BE ADDED IN SEASON.

I will also keep in stock a full line of

Tobaccos and Cigars.

Butter and Eggs a Specialty.

Farming Lands

500,000 ACRES

Of Splendid

MICHIGAN LANDS

For Sale By The

C. R. & I. R. R.

50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.

These lands are timbered with beach and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets

By Water and Rail

And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan

The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the center of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is

Not a Wilderness by any Means.

It contains a population of 250,000 souls and is rapidly filling up with settlers from almost every state in the Union

Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.

Send for English or German Pamphlet, Address

W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner,

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.

TITLE PERFECT.

For Finest JOB WORK, Patronize The Sentinel.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY.

CELLULOID TRADE MARK STARCH

EQUAL TO DOUBLE THE QUANTITY OF ANY OTHER STARCH

A NOVEL INVENTION! REQUIRES NO COOKING

For Collars, Cuffs, Shirt Bosoms and fine Laundry purposes, prepared by a New Process. The Celluloid Starch has no equal, look for our name and trade mark and take no other.

THE CELLULOID STARCH COMPANY SOLE MANUFACTURERS, NEW HAVEN, CONN. U.S.A.

Will not stick to the iron or blister the goods, easy to use, makes your linen look like new at home. Ask your grocer for Celluloid starch. It is pure and economical.

HUMPHREYS'

DR. HUMPHREYS' BOOK Cloth & Gold Binding 144 Pages, with Steel Engraving, MAILED FREE. Address, P. O. Box 1810, N. Y.

NOS.	CURES	PRICE.
1	Fevers, Congestion, Inflammations	.25
2	Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic	.25
3	Crying Colic, or Teething of Infants	.25
4	Diarrhea, of Children or Adults	.25
5	Dysentery, Griping, Bilious Colic	.25
6	Cholera Morbus, Vomiting	.25
7	Coughs, Cold, Bronchitis	.25
8	Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache	.25
9	Headaches, Sick Headache, Vertigo	.25

HOMEOPATHIC

NOS.	CURES	PRICE.
10	Dyspepsia, Bilious Stomach	.25
11	Suppressed or Painful Periods	.25
12	Whites, too Profuse Periods	.25
13	Croup, Cough, Difficult Breathing	.25
14	Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions	.25
15	Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains	.25
16	Fever and Ague, Chills, Malaria	.50
17	Piles, Blind or Bleeding	.50
19	Catarrh, Influenza, Cold in the Head	.50
20	Whooping Cough, Violent Coughs	.50
24	General Debility, Physical Weakness	.50
27	Kidney Disease	.50
28	Nervous Debility	1.00
30	Urinary Weakness, Wetting Bed	.50
32	Diseases of the Heart, Palpitation	1.00

SPECIFICS.

Sold by Druggists, or sent post-paid on receipt of price.—HUMPHREYS' MEDICINE CO. 109 Fulton St. N.Y.

STOVES!

AHEAD AGAIN!

THE Round Oak Heating Stoves.

NEW STYLES Cook Stoves!

Saws & Axes

Job and Tin Work.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

F. A. COCHRAN & CO., (Successors to PERRY WEED.)

Druggists and Pharmecists,

A FULL LINE OF

Drugs and Medicines.

We keep in stock a large assortment of well selected POPULAR MUSIC. Call and see it.

M. S. MOULTON,

WATCHMAKER & JEWELER,

Charlevoix, Mich.

Personal Attention given to Watch Repairing.

Key-wind Movements changed to Stem-wind and warranted as good as the best.

JEWELRY Repairing done in the best manner.

Having had 30 years experience I am confident I can give the best of satisfaction

"MARVELOUS PRICES!"

BOOKS FOR THE MILLION

Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. The following books are published in neat pamphlet form, and all are printed from good type upon good paper. They treat of a great variety of subjects, and we think no one can examine the list without finding therein many that he or she would like to possess. In cloth bound form these books would cost $1.00 each. Each book is complete in itself.

1. The Widow Bedott Papers. This is the book over which your grandmothers laughed till they cried, and it is just as funny to-day as it ever was.
2. Winter Evening Recreations, a large collection of Acting Charades, Tableaux, Games, Puzzles, etc., for social gatherings, private theatricals, and evenings at home.
3. Back to the Old Home. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Hidden Perils."
4. Dialogues, Recitations and Readings, a large and choice collection for school exhibitions and public and private entertainments.
5. The Standard Letter Writer for ladies and gentlemen, a complete guide to correspondence, giving plain directions for the composition of letters of every kind, with innumerable forms and examples.
6. The Frozen Deep. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
7. Red Court Farm. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne," etc.
8. The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott. "The Lady of the Lake" is a romance in verse, and of all the works of Scott none is more beautiful than this.
9. In Cupid's Net. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
10. Amos Barton. A Novel. By George Eliot, author of "Adam Bede," "The Mill on the Floss," etc.
11. Lady Gwendoline's Dream. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
12. The Mystery of the Holly Tree. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
13. The Budget of Wit, Humor and Fun, a large collection of the funny stories, sketches, anecdotes, poems, and jokes.
14. John Bowerbank's Wife. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
15. The Gray Woman. A Novel. By Mrs. Gaskell, author of "Mary Barton," etc.
16. Sixteen Complete Stories by Popular Authors, embracing love, humorous and detective stories, stories of society life, of adventure, of railway life, etc., all very interesting.
17. Jasper Dane's Secret. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Aurora Floyd," etc.
18. Fancy Work for Home Adornment, an entirely new work upon this subject, containing easy and practical instructions for making fancy baskets, wall pockets, brackets, needle work, embroidery, etc., etc., profusely and elegantly illustrated.
19. Grimm's Fairy Stories for the Young. The finest collection of fairy stories published. The children [illegible]
20. Manual of Etiquette for Ladies and Gentlemen, a guide to politeness and good breeding, giving the rules of modern etiquette for all occasions.
21. Useful Knowledge for the Million, a handy book of useful information for all, upon many and various subjects.
22. The Home Cook Book and Family Physician, containing hundreds of excellent cooking recipes and hints to housekeepers, also telling how to cure all common ailments by simple home remedies.
23. Manners and Customs in Far Away Lands, a very interesting and instructive book of travels, describing the peculiar life, habits, manners and customs of the people of foreign countries.
24. 37 Popular Ballads. Same size as sheet music. Words of all the old and new songs.
25. Called Back. A Novel. By Hugh Conway.
26. At the World's Mercy. A Novel. By Florence Warden, author of "The House on the Marsh," etc.
27. Mildred Trevanion. A Novel. By "The Duchess," author of "Molly Bawn," etc.
28. Dark Days. A Novel. By the author of "Called Back."
29. Shadows on the Snow. A Novel. By B. L. Farjeon, author of "Bread-and-Cheese and Kisses," etc.
30. Leoline. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Brenda Yorke."
31. Gabriel's Marriage. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "No Name," etc.
32. Reaping the Whirlwind. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Old Middleton's Money," etc.
33. Dudley Carleon. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc.
34. A Golden Dawn. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne," etc.
35. Valerie's Fate. A Novel. By Mrs. Alexander, author of "The Wooing O't," etc.
36. Sister Rose. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
37. Anne. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne."
38. The Laurel Bush. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
39. Robinson Crusoe. A thrilling narrative by Daniel De Foe, describing the adventures of a castaway in the South Pacific Ocean.
40. How to Make Poultry Pay. A practical and instructive series of articles by Mr. P. H. Jacobs, Poultry Editor of "The Farm and Garden," Phila.; illustrated.
41. Parlor Magic and Chemical Experiments, a book which tells how to perform hundreds of amusing tricks in magic and instructive experiments with simple agents.
42. Gems of the Poets, containing charming selections from Tennyson, Longfellow, Whittier, Byron, Shelley, Moore, Bryant, and many others.
43. Building Plans for Practical, Low-cost Houses. A full description and plans of Eight modern houses, ranging in price from $500 to $4500. Illustrated.
44. Anecdotes of Public Men—Washington, Franklin, Webster, Clay, Tilden, Lincoln, Scott, Grant, Garfield, Gladstone, Butler, Hancock, Lee, and all the leading men of the century.
45. Æsop's Fables. The work of an ancient genius. Children have read them for centuries, and grown people quote them every day.

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.

We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00, or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of

"SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

FRANK E. WOODS

Bath & Barber Rooms

Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS.

Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.

If you want a quiet place to get a shave, hair dress or bath, call and see me.

JAY L. PRICE.

NEW SHOP!

All kinds of

Blacksmithing,

At the

Shop in the Foundry Building.

Horseshoeing a specialty.

ALL WORK GUARANTEED.

M. SCOTT.

WANTED!

Potatoes, Onions, Apples, Peaches and Blueberries.

We have an old established trade and can place stock to best advantage. Consignments solicited. Correspondence invited from shippers. Stencil and shipping tags furnished.

W. H. THOMPSON & CO.

Commission Merchants,

No. 166 South Water St.

CHICAGO, - - ILL.

References: Felsenthal, Gross & Miller, Bankers, Chicago, Ill. 2m

JAS. A. GELLICK,

Dealer in

Choice Wines,

Fine Liquors

EXCELLENT CIGARS.

We call Special Attention to our

Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES.

We also keep constantly on draught

Milwaukee Export and lager Beer.

Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN

FRESH FROM THE WIRES.

Events of Interest and Importance in Every Quarter of the Habitable Globe.

News Relating to Politics, Religion, Commerce, Industry, Labor, and Other Topics.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

CLEVELAND'S TRIP.

Time Table of the Route West and South—Speech Making to Be Curtailed.

THE following is the itinerary of the President's journey in the South and West, as telegraphed from Washington.

Leave Washington Friday, Sept. 30, at 10 a. m., arrive at Indianapolis Saturday, Oct. 1, at 11 a. m., leave Indianapolis Oct. 1 at 4 p. m., arrive at Terre Haute at [illegible] p. m.; leave Terre Haute Oct. 1 at 6:15 p. m., arrive at St. Louis Oct. 1 at 12 o'clock midnight, leave St. Louis Oct. 4 at 11 p. m., arrive at Chicago Oct. 5 at 9 a. m., leave Chicago Thursday, Oct. 6, at 10 a. m., arrive at Milwaukee Oct. 6 at 1 p. m.; leave Milwaukee Oct. 7 at 10 a. m., arrive at Madison Oct. 7 at 1 p. m., leave Madison at 9 a. m.; arrive at St. Paul Oct. [illegible] at [illegible] p. m., leave St. Paul Oct. 11 at 12 noon; arrive at Minneapolis Oct. 11 at 1 p. m., leave Minneapolis Oct. 11 at 6 p. m., arrive at Omaha Oct. 12 at 11 a. m., leave Omaha Oct. 12 at 12 noon; arrive at St. Joseph Oct. 12 at 5:15 p. m., leave St. Joseph Oct. 12 at 5:35 p. m., arrive at Kansas City Oct. 12 at 8:15 p. m., leave Kansas City Oct. 14 at 11 p. m., arrive at Memphis Oct. 14 at 6 p. m., leave Memphis Oct. 15 at 1 p. m., arrive at Nashville Oct. 15 at 11 p. m., leave Nashville Oct. 17 at 11 a. m., arrive at Atlanta Oct. 17 at 11 p. m., leave Atlanta Oct. 19 at midnight, arrive at Montgomery Oct. 20 at 8 a. m., leave Montgomery Oct. 20 at 1 p. m., reach Washington Saturday, Oct. 22, at 6 a. m. At the suggestion of the President much proposed speech-making at the places to be visited has been abandoned.

THE ANARCHISTS.

One of the Convicted Men Issues an Address—Inflammatory Circulars.

A. R. PARSONS, one of the seven con-

[illegible]

... on Sunday, to make an appeal in behalf of the condemned anarchists, but was unable to get a hearing, owing to a stormy contest between the George faction and the Socialists, which continued until adjournment.

THE Constitutional celebration was continued at Philadelphia, on Friday, the 16th, when about half a million strangers are said to have been in the city. The President, attended by Secretary Bayard, ex-President Hayes and other notabilities, reviewed the employes of the Custom House, and was afterward tendered a reception at the Commercial Exchange, where he made a brief address, urging the importance of a more active interest and participation in public affairs by the business classes. From the Exchange the Presidential party proceeded to Broad and Walnut streets, where they reviewed the great military parade, which was led by Lieutenant General Sheridan. About 30,000 men were in line. A Philadelphia dispatch says:

The military parade was under command of Gen. Sheridan. It included nearly 30,000 uniformed soldiers, and, taken as a whole, was perhaps never equaled by any similar demonstration of modern times. The sounds of fife and drum early told that preparations were being made for the grand street demonstration of the nation's protectors. Even during the time of the war of the rebellion there were not as many soldiers in Philadelphia. The arrival of the Presidential party was the signal for repeated cheering, and when the Chief Magistrate made his way to the rostrum at the lower end of the hall cheering broke out again, and the names of Secretary Bayard, Governor Beaver, George W. Childs, Mayor Fitler and A. J. Drexel were also cheered. President Coxe introduced the President. The cheering broke out again, and it was some time before Mr. Cleveland could be heard. He said: "I am glad I have an opportunity to meet so large a representation of the business men of Philadelphia. It is well that we should not entirely forget in the midst of our centennial jubilee that the aim and purpose of good government tend, after all, to the advancement of the material interests of the people and the increase of their trade and commerce. The thought has sometimes occurred to me that in the hurry and crush of business there might well be infused a little more patriotism than we are wont to see, and a little more recognition of the fact that a wholesome political sentiment is closely related not only to the general good but to the general success of business. Of course our citizens engaged in business are quick to see the bearing of any policy which the Government may adopt, as it affects their personal success and their accumulation. But I would like to see that broad and patriotic sentiment among them which can see beyond their peculiar personal interests, and which can recognize that the advancement of the entire country is an object for which they may well strive, even sometimes to the diminution of the constantly increasing profits. Must we always look for the political opinions of our business men precisely where they suppose their immediate pecuniary advantage is found? ...

[illegible]

FOR LAW AND LIBERTY.

Great Constitutional Centennial Celebration at Philadelphia.

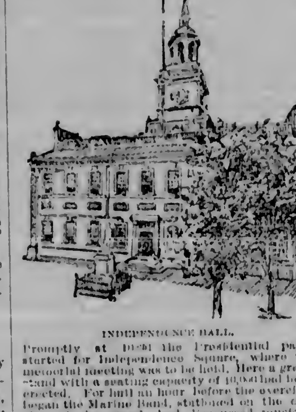
Appropriate Addresses by the President, Hon. Mr. Kasson, and Justice Miller.

President Cleveland and His Wife Heartily Received—James G. Blaine's Letter.

The Three Days' Festivities Come to a Close Amid a Blaze of Glory.

The great centennial celebration of the signing of the National Constitution, lasting three days, came to a successful termination at Philadelphia on Saturday, Sept. 17. A Philadelphia correspondent says of the closing day's exercises:

Shortly before 9 o'clock a. m. the President, accompanied by Secretaries Bayard and Fairchild, left the Lafayette Hotel and proceeded to the Commissioners' room in the east wing of the City Hall, at Market and Broad streets. His appearance was the signal for an enthusiastic burst of applause from the enormous crowd in waiting. For an hour and a half the President stood shaking hands with all who approached, young and old, rich and poor.



INDEPENDENCE HALL.

[illegible]

... without his concurring aid we shall succeed in this political building no better than the builders of Babel. We shall be divided by our little partial local interests, our projects will be confounded, and we ourselves shall become a reproach and by word down to future ages, and, what is worse, mankind may hereafter, from this unfortunate instance, despair of establishing governments by human wisdom, and leave it to chance, war, and conquest.'

"In the face of all discouragements the fathers of the republic labored on for four long, weary months, in alternate hope and fear, but always with rugged resolve, never faltering in a sturdy endeavor, sanctified by a prophetic sense of the value to posterity of their success, and always with unflinching faith in the principles which make the foundation of a government by the people.

THE OLD LIBERTY BELL.

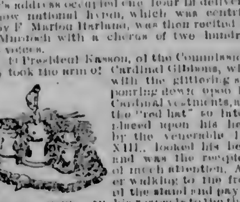
"At last their task was done. It is related that upon the back of the chair occupied by Washington as the President of the convention a sun was painted, and that as the delegates were signing the completed Constitution, one of them said: 'I have often and often in the course of the session, and in the solicitude of my hopes and fears as to its issue, looked at that behind the President without being able to tell whether it was rising or setting. But now, at length, I know that it is a rising and not a setting sun.'

"We stand to-day on the spot where this rising sun emerged from political night and darkness, and in its own bright meridian light we mark its glorious way. Clouds have sometimes obscured its rays, and dreadful storms have made us fear, but God has held it in its course, and through its life-giving warmth has performed his latest miracle in the creation of this ...

[illegible]



[illegible]

THE OLD HISTORICAL CHAIR.

[illegible]

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for October 2—"The Centurion's Faith."

[From the Chicago Standard. By Rev. J. W. Coon.]

The lesson is found in the eighth chapter of Matthew, from the fifth to the thirteenth verses. Time A. D. 28. Place, Capernaum.

SPECIAL MENTION.

Capernaum.—A city on the Sea of Galilee, at the north end, and sixty miles north of Jerusalem. It was closed in by a wall, according to the ancient custom in building cities, the material of which the houses and walls were constructed being black lava. It had a population of some two or three thousand, many of whom were fishermen. The quality of marshy land in the neighborhood, especially at the entrance of the Jordan into the lake, or sea, has made fever of a very malignant type, at times, the characteristic of the locality, so that the physicians would not allow Josephus, when hurt by his horse sinking in the neighboring marsh, to sleep even a single night in Capernaum, but hurried him on to Tarichea. In this very chapter, verse 14, we have mention of Peter's wife's mother being thus afflicted. Capernaum was the seat of several miracles wrought by Christ; and, because thus peculiarly favored, a woe was pronounced against it for its neglect of duty (ch. 11. 23).

Centurion.—A Roman military officer. All Palestine was under Roman military government. This centurion was connected with the garrison at Capernaum. The Roman army was divided into legions, answering to our army corps, varying in size from three to six thousand men; each legion was divided into ten cohorts, usually called in the New Testament, "the band;" the cohort was divided into three maniples, and each maniple was divided into two centuries. These last contained from fifty to one hundred men, answering to our company, and each one was commanded by a centurion, answering to our captain. There ...

[illegible]

POPULAR SCIENCE.

A UNIT of heat is the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree, or from 32 degrees to 33 degrees F.

POLISHED granite is much more durable than hammered granite. Polishing the stone prevents the lodging of moisture and foreign particles on its surface.

WHAT is termed flexible glass is a useful product just introduced. Paper of proper thickness is rendered transparent by soaking in copal varnish, and when dry, is polished, rubbed with pumice stone, and a layer of soluble glass is applied and rubbed with salt. The surface is as perfect as glass.

VOSMAER thinks that the sponges originated from a free swimming form, which may have been like the larva of some silicious sponge. He also suggests that the first sponges were deep-sea forms, ultimately developing a stony silicious skeleton; and that this form degenerated when it entered shallower seas.

AN instance of the value of photography in detecting the relative motion of stars is given by M. de Gothard. Comparison of a recent photograph with measures recorded by Vogel in 1867-69 appears to show that cluster 4,411 G. C. contains an eleventh magnitude star which has changed its position relatively to the other stars to the extent of 23 seconds a year.

SO VARIOUS are the forms of plant life that it seems well-nigh impossible to find a spot where some kind of vegetation will not thrive. Mr. John Ball, a naturalist, returned from South America, therefore congratulates himself on having seen an absolutely ...

[illegible]

NATIONAL POLITICS.

John Sherman in an Earnest Effort Compares the Two Great Parties.

The Ohio Senator Reiterates in Vigorous Language Points in His Springfield Speech.

Shameless Record of the Democratic Party from 1860 to Date Pointed Out.

Speech of Hon. John Sherman, Delivered at Wilmington, O., September 15.

Fellow-citizens and gentlemen of the Sherman Club, I accept with much pleasure your invitation to make my opening speech in this canvass in this good county of Clinton. You have always been kind and partial to me. You have supported me by your votes and the votes of your Representatives in the Legislature of Ohio in five successive elections for the Senate of the United States, and your young men have now complimented me by the use of my name in the organization of your Republican club. For all these marks of your good-will I owe you my heartfelt thanks. I recognize in you a community of independent and intelligent farmers, firmly attached to the Republican party, asking nothing of your public servants but a faithful and honest performance of public duties. You have a right, therefore, to expect from me a fair and truthful statement of the reasons for the faith we share in the principles and policy of the Republican party in preference to all other parties, under whatever name they are organized, and especially of the Democratic party, which for more than thirty years has contested with the Republican party for political power, both in Ohio and in the United States.

We ought not to ignore the claims of political organizations who are protesting against both ...

[illegible]

... election of members of the Legislature from Hamilton County. The crime was so monstrous and was proven so clearly that the general voice of honest men in Ohio of both parties demanded and secured the summary expulsion from the House of Representatives of the men who held the fraudulent certificates of election. And yet the leading managers of the Democratic party upheld these crimes, obstructed their prosecution, retained in the Senate the four Senators who held such certificates until the infamy and odium of their position drove them from the Senate. No wonder that Governor Hoadly, when he removed to New York after his term of office expired, felt impelled to denounce in the most scathing language the atrocity of these crimes.

And, fellow-citizens, in my long political life I know of no act of a great party that was more criminal and dangerous than the long acquiescence of the Democratic party in the proven crimes by which the will of the people was sought to be subverted in these elections. I do not believe the mass of that party believed the facts as we now know them, for they were denied or suppressed by a partisan press; but the leaders of that party and the men who held these false certificates know they were the fruit of forgery, perjury, and ballot-box stuffing, and they ought to be held up to the public scorn. The only bad thing I have heard of Mr. Powell, the Democratic candidate for Governor, is that he was present as an attorney, and when the forgery of the returns at Columbus was made manifest, that he still insisted that a certificate of election should issue based upon that forgery. He may shield himself under his position as an attorney, but certainly it was his duty as a citizen and as a man to advise the Justice that no certificate of election should be issued upon a palpable forgery.

But, fellow-citizens, I do not wish to enter farther into Ohio politics, for I know that our brilliant and able Governor Foraker is amply able to take care of his competitor, and is much more familiar than I with the management of our State affairs. He has shown this in his clear and clean cut speech at Caldwell, supported by official figures. Without disparagement of the sincerity and honesty of our Democratic friends, I will say, and the record will make it good, that in the conduct of State affairs, in the custody of public funds and in legislation for the good of the people, and, generally, in what is called good government and honest administration, they have not been as fortunate in the selection of their agents and officers as the Republican party, and I think this is largely due to the more severe and impartial scrutiny of the Republican party and its prompt exposure and punishment of Republican officials when guilty of wrong.

What I wish now to show, if I can, is the dividing line in national affairs between the two great parties, with a view to test which of them ...

[illegible]

... fairly construed were upheld by the Supreme Court, thanks to the profound wisdom and sagacity of John Marshall, the greatest of Virginians. Our country grew and prospered. The thirteen States became thirty-eight, with boundless Territories besides. Jefferson doubted whether under his resolutions he could purchase Louisiana, and yet by doing it he added to the Declaration of Independence his second greatest laurel. Steam power, railroads, telegraphs, and all the multiplied inventions of modern civilization have added to our wealth and means of communication. The old causes of difference have passed away, the embers only remaining. The powers conferred by the Constitution fairly construed have been found sufficient to govern and hold together the vast Republic in peace and war, to secure us the highest credit among the nations of the world, to make our promises as good as any gold in any mart of commerce, to light our harbors into 10,000 miles of navigable coast, to yield $300,000,000 of revenue without complaint or oppression, to so diversify our industries that our annual productions exceed six thousand millions, and yet there is a party among us who would cripple these powers, construe away all the beneficent duties of so great a nation. Fellow citizens, I don't believe in it. Now more than ever I would hold on to and exercise with wisdom and prudence the national power; not usurp power, but use what our fathers, with more than human wisdom, granted. We should dismiss forever from our councils all local jealousy, all pride of locality, all petty sophisms, expanding still further our national aid for national purposes, and extending to new regions the influence of our trade and commerce.

Both the States and the nation are but the organized agencies of the people, both limited in power and charged with separate and distinct duties, one national the other local. Since the abolition of slavery there is no reason why the national and local agencies of the people should not be in harmony with each other. The talk about State rights being imposed upon by Federal appropriations is but a remnant of secession. It is the rights of the people of the United States, human rights in the broadest sense, equal rights, without regard to race, color, nativity, or locality, that will hereafter be the battle cry in political contests. It is because I believe the Republican party has been and will be true to human rights that I support it. It is because I know the Democratic party has not been and is not likely to be true to human rights that I distrust it, and will not support it.

Nor is it for any sectional advantage or prejudice that we are Republicans. We know very well that the South will, now that slavery is gone, be more benefited by the doctrine of protection than the North will be. We have had the benefit of protection and diversified labor for many years. The South is just beginning to receive the reviving influence of cotton ...

[illegible]

... must pass a bill for that purpose. Talk will not do it.—New York World (Dem.).

COL. GRANT NOMINATED.

He Is Chosen to Lead the New York Republicans to Victory.

The State Convention at Saratoga Names a Strong Ticket for the Fall Campaign.

[Saratoga special to Chicago Tribune.]

The Republican State Convention, the best representative gathering held by this party in the Empire State for years, performed its work faithfully and well. Harmony and good-feeling, bordering almost on jollity, characterized the entire proceedings, and never have the Republicans been more sanguine of success. There was no bossism or attempt at dictation, and no obnoxious factional lines could be discerned. There were no stalwarts and no half-breeds, as the opposing elements of the past were to-day enjoying each other's confidence as a unit for the benefit of the party. Realizing that a Presidential campaign is close at hand, the unanimous sentiment was in favor of closing up any possible gaps in the line and presenting a solid front to the political enemy.

The nomination of Col. Fred D. Grant was made unanimous, and when the worthy son of the great Ulysses S. Grant was introduced to the convention the 700 delegates rose to their feet and made the spacious Casino Rink fairly ring with cheer upon cheer. Col. Grant, as he stood upon the platform returning thanks, bore a striking resemblance to his illustrious father. The Colonel is well qualified for the position. County Judge Jesse S. Lamoreaux, of Saratoga, who was nominated for Controller, is also looked upon as a strong can- ...

[illegible]

THE PRIME MINISTER.

Rev. Dr. Talmage's Sermon at the Brooklyn Tabernacle

Every Man is Finally Valued at His Real Worth—Rising to High Position Through Public Abuse—The World Must Honor Christian Character.

BROOKLYN, September 18.—After being closed for some weeks for improvements and enlargements, the Brooklyn Tabernacle was opened to-day. The same overwhelming throngs were in attendance as before. The congregation sang with great effect the hymn:

> Before Jehovah's awful throne
> Ye nations bow with sacred joy,
> Know that the Lord is God alone
> He can create and He can destroy.

After explaining appropriate passages of Scripture Dr. Talmage took his text from Genesis xli. 41: "And Pharaoh said unto Joseph: See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt." The subject of the sermon was "The Prime Minister." Dr. Talmage said:

You cannot keep a good man down. God has decreed for him a certain elevation to which he must attain. He will bring him through, though it cost him 1,000 worlds. There are men constantly in trouble lest they shall not be appreciated. Every man comes in the end to be valued at just what he is worth. How often you see men turn out all their forces to crush one man or set of men. How do they succeed? No better than did the government that tried to crush Joseph, a Scripture character upon which we speak to-day. It would be an insult to suppose that you were not all familiar with the life of Joseph; how his jealous brothers threw him into the pit, but, seeing a caravan of Arabian merchants moving along on their camels with spices and gums that loaded the air with aroma, sold their brother to these merchants, who carried him down into Egypt; how Joseph was sold to Potiphar, a man of influence and office; how by ...

[illegible]

... fore I will bid you good-night, for soon we shall meet in the heavenly kingdom." By the flash of the furnace best Christian character is demonstrated.

I go into another department, and I find that those great denominations of Christians which have been most abused have spread the most rapidly. No good man was ever more vilely maltreated than John Wesley. His followers were hooted at and maligned, and called by every detestable name that infernal ingenuity could invent, but the hotter the persecution the more rapid the spread of that denomination, until you know what a great host they have become and what a tremendous force for God and the truth they are wielding all the world over. It was persecution that gave Scotland to Presbyterianism. It was persecution which gave our own land first to civil liberty and afterward to religious freedom. Yea, I may go further back and say it was persecution that gave the world the great salvation of the Gospel. The ribald mockery, the hungering and thirsting, the unjust trial and ignominious death where all the force of hell's fury was hurled against the cross, was the introduction of that religion which is yet to be the earth's deliverance from guilt and suffering, and her everlasting enthronement among the principalities of Heaven. The State has sometimes said to the church: "Come let me take your hand and I will help you." What has been the result? The church has gone back and has lost its estate of holiness and has become ineffective. At other times the State has said to the church, "I will crush you." What has been the result? After the storms have spent their fury, the church, so far from having lost any of its force, has increased and is worth infinitely more after the assault than before it. The church is far more indebted to the opposition of civil government than to its approval. The fires of the stake have only been the torches which Christ held in His hand, by the light of which the church has marched to her present position. In the sound of racks and implements of torture I hear the rumbling of the wheels of the Gospel chariot. Scaffolds of martyrdom have been the stairs by which the church ...

[illegible]

... one Sabbath and by a strange freak of memory forgot his subject and forgot his text, and in great embarrassment rose before his audience and announced the circumstance and declared himself entirely unable to preach; then launched forth in a few earnest words of entreaty and warning which resulted in the outbreaking of the mightiest revival of religion ever known in that State, a revival of religion that resulted in churches still standing and in the conversion of a large number of men who entered the Gospel ministry who have brought their thousands into the kingdom of God. God's plans are magnificent beyond all comprehension. He molds us, turns and directs us, and we know it not. Thousands of years are to Him but as the flight of a shuttle. The most terrific occurrence does not make God tremble, and the most triumphant achievement does not lift him into rapture. That one great thought of God goes on through the centuries, and nations rise and fall and eras pass, and the world itself changes, but God still keeps the undivided mastery, linking event to event and century to century. To God they are all one event, one history, one plan, one development, one system. Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty.

Furthermore, we learn from this story the propriety of laying up for the future. During seven years of plenty Joseph prepared for the famine, and when it came he had a crowded storehouse. The life of most men in a worldly respect is divided into years of plenty and famine. It is seldom that any man passes through life without at least seven years of plenty. During these seven prosperous years your business bears a rich harvest. You hardly know where all the money comes from, it comes so fast. Every bargain you make seems to turn into gold. You contract few bad debts. You are astounded with large dividends. You invest more and more capital. You wonder how men can be content with a small business, gathering in only $100 where you reap your thousands. These are the seven years of plenty. Now, Joseph, is the time to prepare for famine, for to almost every man there do come seven years of famine.

[illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.
Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, OCT. 5, 1887.

An Incorrect Statement.

The Journal of last week makes the strange statement that certain unpaid village tax of last year has been added to the roll this year. The statement is not true. It would be well for our neighbor to investigate reports of this kind before rushing into print with them. It would have been very little trouble to interview the assessor, and learn the facts in the case. It is true that the tax against certain property for '84, '85 and '86 remains yet unpaid, but in none of these years, or the present year, has any tax been brought forward to a new year. The foolishness of such a report should have suggested itself to Mr. Grier's well cultured legal mind. Speaking of the nonpayment of village tax constrains us to express surprise that any citizen of this beautiful and progressive town should murmur at the light percentage of the corporation tax. Up to three years ago, no direct tax was levied—the expenses of the village being paid entirely from licenses and fines. As the village grew, and the necessity for improvements increased, a light tax was spread—four mills on the dollar being the highest, and that the present year. What citizen of Charlevoix is not proud of his town? What town of its size in Michigan can rival it in extent and quality of sidewalks, in the improvement of its streets, or the system and effectiveness of fire protection? Who would have the village charter surrendered and return to the slow and ineffective regime of township government? What would be the condition of Charlevoix to-day under a government which is only calculated for farming communities? What would be the means of preserving order and regulating those evils which come to every growing town? Under corporation government in Charlevoix, the cost of it to any citizen has not equalled the benefit he has received as a result of it. When we point to our public building, our well improved streets, our well equipped fire department, and our good order, we count the cost as trifling. No citizen has been burdened. While the village tax has slightly grown, the township tax has necessarily decreased as the corporation assumed the functions borne by the township in the territory comprising the village. There is no cause for any reasonable man to complain of the village tax. Every administration of our village affairs has been in the hands of tax-payers, and citizens who have had the prosperity of the village at heart; every administration has been public spirited, yet prudent, giving their time gratuitously to the government of the village, asking only that the people give them credit for good intentions and honest purposes.

Marine Jottings.

The steamer Queen of the Lakes was here from Elk Rapids Sunday with an excursion.

Capt. Duncan Buchanan, of the Schr. Stampede, is sick at his home in Sheboygan, this trip.

The steamer Queen of the Lakes is now making daily trips between Traverse City and Elk Rapids.

The O'Neill boys have the Minnie Warren engaged for fall fishing and will work in Grand Traverse bay.

The schooner Shepard, on the 29th, was towed into Manitowoc by the tug Williams in a water-logged condition.

The tug Martin has been employed by Connable of Petoskey, for the fall fishing. Capt. Tim is an old hand at the twine, and Mr. C. could not have done better.

Messrs. Dexter & Noble make the following statement relative to the number of passengers carried by their steamer "Queen of the Lakes" on Black Lake during the past summer, as shown by the steamer's books and verified by the cash receipts: "The steamer 'Queen of the Lakes' carried on her route between Holland and the 'Ottawa Beach Resorts' from June 1 until September 19, 111 days, 43,319 passengers, and took up 2,295 C. & W. M. tickets from other boats, making a total of 42,524 passengers: her smallest day being two, and her largest 2,586 passengers.

General and Political.

The gigantic Trafalgar, with displacement of 11,945 tons, which the British Government has just launched at Plymouth, will, with the Nile, yet to be built, be the last of the mammoth metal war ships of the British navy. The best naval constructors now believe that it is a mistake to build such enormous vessels. Since the era of great iron and steel-clad ships and enormous naval guns and projectiles there has been no great naval war by which such vessels can be tested. The potentiality of the guns has steadily kept pace with the armor, and not one of these big ships is impervious to the current projectiles.

The dairy interests of the United States has reached very great proportions, the capital invested being more than $3,000,000,000, or about five times the aggregate of the banking capital. The number of milch cows is 20,000,000, giving 7,350,000,000 gallons of milk yearly. Something over half of this is made into butter, and the balance is made into cheese or consumed by the men, women and babies without going through any other process. The value of the dairy product of the country last year is estimated at $500,000,000, which exceeds the value of the wheat crop and nearly equals the value of the yearly corn crop. As some one has put it, "Corn is king, but cow is queen."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The past three days the cold north winds have "cracked their cheeks," and the rain has fallen almost continuously. No boats since Saturday.

Common Council.

At a special meeting of the Village council held Saturday evening, plans and specifications were submitted by the committee on Public Buildings for a hose tower, to be erected adjoining the engine house. The tower is to be 60 feet high, upon stone foundation and neatly and substantially built. The committee were instructed to advertise for proposals for its construction. (See notice elsewhere.)

The night of meeting was changed from Thursday to Wednesday.

The committee on Ordinances were instructed to report an amendment to the Peddler's license ordinace to include peddlers who sell by sample.

The committee on Finance were instructed to make a list of property delinquent for tax of 1884 and 1885, and advertise the same for sale according to law.

Council meets again this (Wednesday) evening.

Boyne Falls Items.

Wm. Mears and wife returned from their St. Louis trip last Saturday evening.

Mel. Soules started for Detroit last week Thursday to spend a few days among friends.

Geo. Houser lost a finger at Mears' shingle mill last week, but is on deck again ready for work.

Mr. Duvoll is having the timber delivered on the ground ready for the erection of a new shingle mill.

Rev. J. Burdge was in town last Wednesday to meet his family. After they get settled in the parsonage, he will be ready to commence his pastoral labors in earnest.

N. G. Brown of Reed City, is filling the place of O. H. Marsh at the depot satisfactorily to everybody concerned. Mr. Marsh intends to extend his vacation three or four weeks.

Bob Herron has been shooting partridge for a day or two the past week with medium success. We give him the advice the girl gave her fellow, who kissed her on the chin: "Aim high young man."

Hazings from Hayes.

Miss Cora Chew commenced teaching at Barnard last Monday.

Thomas Sunderland and Miss Mary Ross were married last Wednesday evening.

Wm. Moore is repairing his residence on the farm purchased of Mrs. Sarah Scroggie.

Ezra Ferguson will move to the shingle mill and take charge of the boarding house.

John Raymond started for the southern part of the state, Sunday night, to visit his mother.

Fred Smith is putting a stone foundation under his residence. He will also build an addition this fall.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Chew celebrated their silver wedding Sept. 25th. They had an enjoyable time and received several presents.

Commissioner Ross informs us that the elevated corduroy on the Center road has been covered with dirt a foot thick and is now the only race track in the town.

Ten or twelve Good Templars from Charlevoix, headed by Rev. Mr. Thurston, District Deputy, visited the Beulah lodge at Burgess last Saturday night and had a pleasant time.

The Statutes of the State say that an Overseer of Highways must be a tax-payer in the district in which he resides, and if a competent person cannot be found in a district, the overseer of an adjoining district must be put in charge. Also that the Highway commissioner cannot be overseer of highways.

Ironton Notes.

We notice the Enterprise scribe is commencing to kick because we got half a dozen items last week.

"True!"

Now you're off! Who's off? Mr. Parish is off his wagon. What for? To nurse a carbuncle on his knee.

"True!"

George "Mac" is building a kitchen on the east side of his house. John Garland has built one this summer.

"True!"

The lecture by Mr. Phillips on Wednesday evening was generally applauded. Even our "lazy man" for once was aroused in sympathy with labor, when the speaker said all the war, crime, divorces, etc., were produced by capital, and quoted statistics (?) to show it, said as calmly as ever,

"True!"

Rev. W. H. McCartney will lecture in the M. E. church on Friday evening.

Wanted—another town of 300 inhabitants with a flourishing Industrial school.

A 'Little Folk's' concert in the Congregational church on Thursday evening. Proceeds to aid an industrial school.

Mr. Jackson and family move to Mancelona this week. They have lived here for five years and their many friends regret their departure muchly.

Our mind one eve on wandering bent, decoyed us into a walk up the old tram at the rear of Mr. Bird's clearing. Having passed it our attention was attracted by the clean appearance of Chas. Zeitler's farm adjoining; and as we passed along our memory bubbled up something like this: Seven years ago Charlie bought his first 20 acres, on time, then in a primeval state. While other men were talking politics and so on, he was working to support a large family, pay for his farm, also his debts, and clearing his land. A sunny home is the result, with an additional 20 acres along side nearly all improved and under cultivation. Charlie is not noted for raising fast nor fat horses, but he sells plenty of produce and lives at peace with his fellows.

A new ruling of the Postoffice Department provides that postal cards that are uncalled for will be returned to the writer at the end of thirty days; also that advertised letters will be held but two weeks, instead of four weeks, as heretofore, before being sent to the dead letter office at Washington.

The New Law Regarding Mortgages.

One of the new laws taking effect to-day, is designed to subject to taxation all real estate mortgages held by residents of the state, and being of general interest, we give an abstract of its provisions, as follows:

1. The act creates each township and city in a county into a separate "assessment district."

2. It provides for the listing, by the Register of Deeds, of all undischarged mortgages, in books to be provided by the county, as follows:

In a book to be designated as the "County Resident Book of Unpaid Mortgages," all mortgages in his county held by residents of the county, from and including 1880, which list is to be completed by April 10, 1888, and to add to such list every year thereafter all mortgages that may come into his office for record.

On or before April 10, 1888, the register is required to deliver to each assessing officer in his county, a copy of all mortgages on land in said officer's assessment district transcribed in a book called the "District Assessment Book of Unpaid Mortgages," which book shall be returned to the register of deeds immediately after the meeting of the Board of Review of said assessment district. On such return the register of deeds is required to add a list of all mortgages that may come into his hands for record, affecting real property in his assessment district.

3. The act also provides for the listing, by each register of deeds, of all mortgages recorded in his office by residents of the state who are non-residents of his county, and makes it his duty to furnish a complete list of such non-resident mortgages to the register of deeds where the mortgagee resides, who, on receipt of the same is to notify the assessing officer in whose district such mortgagee may reside, who is required to assess such mortgages according to law.

4. The register receives 10 cents for each notice, to be audited and paid like other contingent claims against the county.

5. The state furnishes the books on the requisition of the Board of Supervisors, and the county is to pay the cost and transportation of the same.

6. The register of deeds is required to note the fact of any discharge, and assignment, partial or total, or of any payments thereon, in the marginal space of the right hand where the report of the mortgage appears.

7. Each assessing officer is required in April of each year to inspect the "assessors' book of unpaid mortgages" for his district, and assess such mortgages according to law.

8. Any violation of this act by a register of deeds or assessing officer, is made a misdemeanor, punishable in case of a register by a fine not exceeding $100, and of an assessor, by a fine of not exceeding $500.

No mortgage can be recorded which fails to give the name and residence of the mortgagee.

Cards of Thanks.

We desire to express our deepest gratitude to our neighbors and friends for their considerate kindness during the sickness and death of our dear son.

MR. AND MRS. J. M. THOMPSON.

Our grateful thanks are due to our friends and neighbors for the sympathetic courtesies shown us during our recent bereavement.

MR. AND MRS. SILAS ALCOX.

Notice to Contractors.

Sealed proposals will be received at my store, up to Saturday, Oct. 8th, at one o'clock p. m., for the construction of a hose tower for the village of Charlevoix, according to plans and specifications in my hands. The right to reject any or all bids reserved.
Charlevoix, Mich., Oct. 4, 1887.
SAMUEL M. SEE,
Chairman Committee on Public Buildings.

Charlevoix Savings Bank.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the Stockholders of said Bank will be held on Saturday, the 29th day of October next at 4 o'clock p. m., at their banking office, in the village of Charlevoix, county of Charlevoix, state of Michigan, for the purpose of electing seven Directors for said Bank and the transaction of such business as may be required to be transacted at the regular annual meeting of said Stockholders.
Dated Charlevoix, Mich., Sept. 27th, 1887.
JOHN NICHOLLS, Vice Prest.

Dissolution Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the co-partnership heretofore existing between George Burns and Wm. Scroggie, under the firm name of Burns & Scroggie, at Charlevoix, Mich., is this day dissolved by mutual consent. Wm. Scroggie and Dean Burns are authorized to collect all debts due said firm, and will also pay all the liabilities of said firm. Wm. Stevens and Nassau Burns succeed Mr. Scroggie, and the business will be continued at the old stand under the firm name of Burns, Stevens & Co. All accounts due the old firm can be paid at the office of Mayne & Kane.
Dated at Charlevoix, this 3d of October, 1887.
GEORGE BURNS.
WILLIAM SCROGGIE.

MICHIGAN STATE LAND OFFICE, Lansing, Sept. 24th, 1887.

Notice is hereby given, that the following described Swamp Land, situated in Charlevoix county, heretofore licensed as Homesteads, which land has reverted to the State, will be Restored to market at this office on the 10th day of November, A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock a. m., and will be subject to sale according to the form prescribed by law.
ROSCOE D. DIX, Commissioner.

DESCRIPTION.	SECTION.	TOWN.	RANGE.
N E ¼ of S E ¼	7	34, N	7, W

MICHIGAN STATE LAND OFFICE, Lansing, Sept. 24, 1887.

Notice is hereby given, that the following described Primary School and Agricultural College Land, situate in Charlevoix county, forfeited for non-payment of interest, will be offered for sale at public auction at this office on the 10th day of November, A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock a. m., unless previously redeemed according to law.
R. D. DIX, Commissioner.

PRIMARY SCHOOL LAND.

NO. OF CERT.	DESCRIPTION.	SEC.	TOWN.	RANGE.
20550	SW ¼ of SE ¼	14	34 N	7 W
AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE LAND.
1508	N ½ of NW ¼	32	32 N	4 W
17888	S ½ of S E ¼	6	32 N	7 W
20916	SW ¼ of SW ¼	32	32 N	4 W
20945	SW ¼ of NW ¼	32	32 N	4 W
20915	N ½ of NW ¼ of SW ¼	32	32 N	4 W
20916	S ½ of NW ¼ of SW ¼	32	32 N	4 W

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. Probate Court for said County. At a session of the Probate Court for said County, held at the Probate Office, in the village of Boyne City, on Monday, the 3d day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, Jas. A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of James Otis, deceased, A. Bottrus, Administrator of said estate, comes into Court and represents that he is now prepared to render his account as such Administrator. Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday, the 7th day of November next, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for examining and allowing such account, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office in the Village of Boyne City, in said county, and show cause, if any there be, why the said account should not be allowed. And it is Further Ordered, that said Administrator give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said account, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.
(A true copy.)
JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Best peaches of the season at O. W. Smith's for $2.50 per bushel.

Go to Scott's shop for a first class job of horseshoeing.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent. Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE—One span of horses, one yearling colt, two spring colts, one yoke of oxen, two two-year old heifers, two yearling heifers; must be sold soon. Terms reasonable. Inquire at this office.

THE PROPERTY known as the Sweetland Sanitarium, on the South upper terrace in the village of Charlevoix, is for sale or rent. Enquire of E. H. Green, Charlevoix, Mich. tf

Mrs. Litney & Carr cordially invite the Ladies to call and examine their mammoth new stock of fall and winter millinery. Their stock comprises everything in all the latest novelties in their line. It will pay you to inspect their goods before purchasing elsewhere. adv

Horse for Sale.

A six year old gray mare, weight, 1,200 pounds; good, sound, kind and gentle. A good work horse, and a perfect horse for ladies' driving. Inquire at this office.

CLOTHING.

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.

My Prices are so Low
that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

OUR FALL GREETING.

In extending to our friends the Compliments of the season we desire also to acknowledge the liberal patronage they have bestowed upon us and trust we shall deserve its continuance. We are glad to announce the arrival of all our Fall Goods and we truly believe we surpass all former efforts in the exhibition of the largest assortment and we feel confident that in the selection and purchase of this vast stock that two stores require, our buyer has secured every advantage to be had by Extensive Experience and Ready Cash.

Nor did we neglect to get the very best goods the market afforded besides keeping a low price in view.

CLOAKS. OUR CLOAKS AND PLUSH WRAPS ARE CONVINCING ARGUMENTS OF THEMSELVES. WE ARE SELLING A GOOD CHILDS' CLOAK FOR $1.35 AND LADIES' FROM $3 TO $40.

IT IS OUR AIM TO INCREASE OUR TRADE BY ALL HONORABLE MEANS AND WE DO NOT LOWER PRICE ON ONE ARTICLE AND MAKE UP ON OTHERS.

YARNS. SPECIAL ATTENTION CALLED TO YARNS AND LADIES' AND GENTS' UNDERWEAR. OUR PRICES ARE 20 PER CENT BELOW ANY OTHER DEALER'S. Send for October Fashion Sheet. Free.

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.

THIS WEEK

We open a handsome line of entirely New Patterns in

DRESS GOODS,

direct from the Manufacturers.

Victoria Plaids, new designs, popular price, 50c.
Heavy, all-wool Cloth Suitings, 27 in. 65c.
Full lines of 36 and 50 in. Flannels, 50 to 75c.

Advance Sale of Blankets, next week.

CLOAKS

We are opening the best and cheapest line of Cloaks ever offered in Charlevoix. They were not made to order especially for us, but are new goods direct from a factory which has been compelled to sacrifice.

Within a few days we shall display the finest line of LAMPS, LAMP GOODS,
GLASSWARE,
DINNER and TEA SEATS
that we have ever shown and at much lower prices.

COME and SEE THEM,

J. L. HURD & CO.

ALICK ROSENTHAL, LEWIS BLOCK

CLOAKS! CLOAKS CLOAKS! CLOAKS CLOAKS!

ARE HERE!

OF EVERY DESCRIPTION!

For Ladies, Misses, and Children.

COME, COME AND SEE THEM, And see them!

Alick Rosenthal, Lewis' Block.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL. Jno C Miller may21 8

VOL. XIX. NO.--24 | CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1887. | WHOLE NO. 933

SCHOOL BOOKS

BUY YOUR SCHOOL SUPPLIES AT HEADQUARTERS. WE HAVE EVERYTHING NEEDED IN THE SCHOOL ROOM, AT UNIFORMLY LOW PRICES.

F. G. HINES & Co.

We will furnish the new books adopted by the board at introduction prices. Remember that we sell everything that can be called for in any of our Schools.

SCHOOL BOOK SCHOOL BOOK

SCHOOL BOOKS

EMREY BROS.

Boots and Shoes for almost nothing, to close out.

We have a number of pairs of Boots and Shoes which we will almost give away as we are closing them out.

We are also going out of

CROCKERY

and have a complete assortment which must be sold

WE WILL NOT TAKE A BACK SEAT ON

SUMMER DRY GOODS.

PRICES ALWAYS LOW.

IN GROCERIES and Provisions we can suit you, as we receive Fresh Goods weekly.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

We are NOT CLOSING OUT

We never did
We do not want to
We are not going to close out

WE AIM TO KEEP OUR STOCK
Complete in Every Department
AT ALL TIMES.

OUR STOCK OF STAPLE DRY GOODS
---AND---
BOOTS and SHOES,
FOR THE FALL AND WINTER TRADE WAS NEVER MORE COMPLETE THAN NOW.

UNDERWEAR! We have a good line of Ladies', Gents' and Childrens' Underwear.

CLOAKS AT A BARGAIN CLOAKS

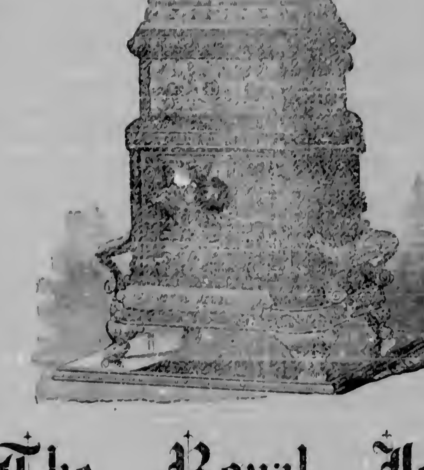
We keep Lime, Cement, Stucco & Plastering Hair,
We carry a full line of
EVERYTHING
usually kept in a first class stock of General Merchandise. We aim to merit the patronage of the prompt paying trade by keeping good goods and selling everything at a uniformly reasonable price.

Resp'y Yours.
Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

Best in The World



"The Royal Jewel"

Call at our store and examine the incomparably fine line of Stoves now on exhibition.

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $ $ $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

The Best Groceries
At The Lowest Prices
ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF
A. E. MASON.
I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture
AT S. M. SEE & SONS!
We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.
Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.
UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S
REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE,
AND LOAN OFFICE.
The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.
Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.
ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

WANTED!
Everyone to know that we are here and doing Business, and will do just as we agree to by one and all. We keep
GROCERIES and PROVISIONS,
FLOUR AND FEED, CROCKERY AND GLASSWARE.
Choice Butter and Fresh Eggs a Specialty. Call on us or order by Telephone.
WILL SEE & CO.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY
SMITH & PARMELEE,
Charlevoix, - Michigan.
Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
One year - $1.50 | Six months - $.75
Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—The Board of Supervisors are in session at Boyne City.

—Mr. and Mrs. H. Lee Iddings arrived home yesterday.

—Rev. J. J. Kanagy, of Vanderbilt, is here for two weeks.

—J. L. Hurd and wife left on the Vernon Saturday night for Chicago.

—Mr. Porter, of Marion, has his fine new farm residence nearly completed.

—The wife of James Skinner, a former resident of this place, died recently.

—Mr. Geo. L. Thurston, the popular merchant of Central Lake, was in town Thursday.

—This week Byron See advertises dress goods and trimmings. Call and see his fine assortment.

—Hiram B. Hipp, of South Arm, took in the Chicago International Military Encampment last week.

—A. T. Washburne & Co., come to the front this week with an announcement of bargains in underwear, gloves and cloaks.

—The court house was burned on the first anniversary of its completion, and on the 16th anniversary of the Chicago fire.

—Harbor Springs Republican: We understand that Mr. Sharpsteen contemplates opening a branch store at Charlevoix soon.

—H. L. Brink, of Oil City, Pa., a brother of Marshal A. B. Brink, arrived Thursday, and will make Charlevoix his future home.

—Miss L. M. Bartholomew, who has been spending the summer here with her brother, L. D., leaves to-day for her home in Geneva, Ohio.

—The Bay Springs cash store has just added a line of clothing to their stock of general merchandise and advertise in another column to pay cash for wood and farm produce.

—Mr. F. W. Cooper and Miss Marie N. Peterson were married by Rev. W. G. Clark, in Marion, on the 7th. Also, in Charlevoix, on the 11th, by the same clergyman, Mr. Geo. H. Wells to Miss Lucinda Geer.

—The earnings of the G. R. & I. for September show an increase of $32,000 over the same month last year, and for the nine months ending September 30, an increase of $268,000 over the corresponding time last year.

—Dr. Schuyler C. Graves and his friends deny the rumor that financial matters had anything whatever to do with his recent separation from his wife, nee Cora Wenham. It was merely a case of mutual agreement to separate.

—Leander Burnett, the Indian pitcher who played with Harbor Springs and Charlevoix this summer, has entered the Agricultural College and taken first prize in penmanship and drawing. He is also a member of the College first ball nine.

—Notaries public and other persons making out mortgages will do well to remember that the new law requires the full address, township, county and state, of mortgages to be mentioned in the instrument, and unless this is done the register cannot receive such instrument for record.

—Mr. R. A. Campbell has leased the Ossawinamakee House, the leading hotel of Manistique, and will assume charge of same sometime before Dec. 1st. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will spend a month in visiting relatives in Traverse City and elsewhere on this side before crossing over.—Record.

—What a newspaper doesn't publish, and could if it would, would make excellent reading. A paper that would publish legitimate news items, just as they come along, would get into trouble of course, but it would be brought up and borrowed and read till the whole edition was worn out. We could make Rome howl at any time by saying what we hear about things that half the town talks of. Small thanks a paper gets usually for suppressing things they wouldn't see in print for the world, but it keeps right on, just the same, discreetly picking out its way to avoid as much hurting of feelings as it possibly can.—Ex.

—From the Jackson Patriot we take the following to show what Northern Michigan can do: "The county of Charlevoix, through the secretary of its agricultural society, Mr L. D. Bartholomew, makes an exhibit of sixty varieties of fruit highly colored with clean waxen surfaces. Among the varieties that give character to the collection are Maiden's Blush, Twenty Ounce, St. Lawrence, Rhode Island Greening, Wagner, Alexander, Bailey's Sweet, six varieties of highly tinted crabs, several plates of well ripened grapes and plums, plates of tomatoes and several strings of corn, to show how well ripened these products are in this northern clime."

—Link Kanagy is ill with typhoid fever in Chicago.

—L. E. Allen returned from Sault Ste. Marie on Friday.

—E. Jackson, of Ironton, has removed to Mancelona.

—Harry Nicholls is in Chicago in the interest of the lumber yard.

—F. S. Blanchard returned yesterday from a week's trip to Chicago, visiting friends.

—H. V. Rifenburg and wife, accompanied by Miss Lovie Kisner, returned from Chicago Saturday.

—J. T. Kirkpatrick leaves this week for St. Ignace, where he has contracts for several buildings to be completed this fall.

—On Monday evening the Council let the contract of building the hose tower to Mr. Price and Elmore Mudge, for $309.

—The G. R. & I. advertises an excursion to Detroit, via the D. L. & N. R. R., October 25th. Fare, round trip, $5; tickets good until Nov. 3.

—Thos. Armstrong, wife and two children and Wm. Hoy of Avonton, Ont., came last week for a visit upon Mrs. Armstrong's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Shapton, of Marion.

—Capt. Clement W. Stone of Kalamazoo, a popular and efficient officer of the old Sixth Michigan heavy artillery, is dead. He was formerly one of the editors and publishers of the Kalamazoo Telegraph and a brother of Jas. W. Stone of the Detroit Tribune.

—The wedding of Mr. Louis Fasquelle and Miss Etta Rowan, in Petoskey, on Thursday evening last, was a pleasant affair. The ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. Mr. Stout, in the presence of about fifty invited guests. The gifts were many and valuable, and the wedding banquet was elegant.

—The storm of Monday caused many wrecks and much loss of life, but reports are meagre as yet. The California went down near Waugoschance and thirteen out of twenty-five persons were lost. Capt. Aldrich of the Faxton, is reported as having saved a number of lives by steaming out to the scene of the wreck.—Record.

—The time of the G. R. & I. changed on Sunday. Under the new arrangement trains on the main line leave Petoskey, going south, at 8:20 a. m., and 11 p. m.; arrive from the south at 2:05 a. m., and 8:18 p. m. On Harbor Springs branch, leave Petoskey at 8:40 and 11:30 a. m., and 5:09 and 8:30 p. m.; returning, leave Harbor Springs at 8:00 and 10:20 a. m., and 3:20 and 7:20 p. m. No connection is made with the 11 p. m. and 2:05 a. m. trains on main line.

—Geo. Eubody, an employe of Saunby's shingle mill, in Hayes, met with a severe and painful accident on Thursday. While at work with the cut-off saw, his left wrist came in contact with it, severing the cords and arteries, and cutting into the bone. Some one was thoughtful enough to twist a knotted handkerchief around his arm, and thus saved his life. He was brought here for surgical attendance, and Dr. Carlstein reports that his hand will be saved, but its usefulness will be much impaired. Moral: Don't monkey with the buzz saw.

Charlevoix Summer Resort Items.

Five cottages on the resort still occupied.

Mrs. Heaton and daughter and Mr and Mrs. Henry Bishop leave for their homes to-day.

Mrs. Sears is in attendance at the wedding of Miss Bessie Estabrook of East Saginaw. She returns to Charlevoix to-morrow.

Mrs. West and daughter are boarding at C. Y. Cook's. Charlevoix air has done much to restore Mrs. West's health this summer and her many friends will be glad to know she is constantly improving.

Charles N. Holden of Chicago, a well-known and respected member of the resort died at his home, Oct. 1st. The Chicago Times speaking of the obsequies, says: The services over the remains of the late Charles N. Holden took place yesterday morning in the Second Baptist church, corner of Morgan and West Monroe streets, of which he was one of the founders and a member of its executive committee at the time of his death. The kindly feelings of regard and esteem in which he was held were never better shown than in the vast congregation which filled the large house of worship. It included not only the worshipers of the church, but friends of the deceased from all parts of the city. The church was not large enough to accommodate all who came to attend, though nearly two thousand persons obtained admission within its walls. Every one present had an opportunity to take a last look at the remains, yet there was no confusion, notwithstanding the fact many took advantage of the opportunity and gazed on the features of the dead.

Historical Society.

The first regular meeting of the Charlevoix Historical Society for the year 1887-8 will be held at the residence of the President, Hon. E. H. Green, on Friday evening, Oct. 14th, at 8 p. m. sharp. At this meeting the annual election of officers will take place and a short literary program will be carried out. A resolution, offered at a previous meeting, regarding annual dues for the year 1887-8 will also come up for discussion and final action at this meeting.

BURNED TO ASHES.

Destruction of the County Court House at Boyne City Saturday Night.

The Big County Safe Open, and the Records Destroyed.

The people of Charlevoix county have suffered a disaster such as has never before been visited upon them—a disaster from which they cannot soon recover, and the consequences of which are calamitous and far-reaching.

On Saturday night last, at ten o'clock, the court house at Boyne City was totally destroyed by fire, and nearly all the records of the Register of Deeds office, together with all the appurtenances of the county offices, Circuit Court files, and other county papers, transformed into a heap of ashes.

At five o'clock on Saturday afternoon, Mr. Weaver, Deputy Register, County Clerk Thatcher, Deputy Sheriff Hurd, and another gentleman, left the building for the day. Before, leaving, as all these gentlemen testify, Mr. Weaver closed and locked his safe for the night, after putting in all records from the desks.

About ten o'clock the alarm of fire was heard, and Mr. Weaver, who was at his home reading, was one of the first to respond to it. When it was discovered that the court house was in flames and a doomed building, he at once spoke of the satisfaction he felt for having safely secured the records. But, to his consternation, upon reaching the premises, it could be seen through the window that the doors of the big safe were open, and four of the record books on the table.

Mr. Weaver would have jumped through the window amid the crackling flames, to close the safe doors, had he not been prevented. One of the doors was then pushed shut with a board, and the other reached, but the wrong door had been closed first, and they were forced to abandon it.

The books on the table were secured, and were found to be Libers 4 and 8 of Mortgages, and 13 and 16 of Deeds. Mr. Weaver testifies that the first named liber had not been used by him in two weeks.

The flames soon did their work, and in less time than is occupied in the writing of this, the official records of twenty years, covering the history of all the real estate of Charlevoix county during that period, were reduced to smoking embers.

Speculation is rife as to the cause of the disaster. In one theory all agree—that it was the work of an incendiary. There had been no fire in the building that day. At nine o'clock—an hour when none of the county officers were in the building—Miss Thatcher, coming from Bay Springs in a row-boat, saw a light about the building, but, beyond this there seems to be no clue to serve as a basis for investigation.

The extent and effect of the calamity cannot be overestimated. A set of abstracts exists at Boyne City, which had been completed the night before the fire. J. Milo Eaton has a set complete up to June, 1885. From these must the records of the county be restored.

The question now facing the Board of Supervisors is that of providing for accommodations for county offices, and the Circuit Court. Undoubtedly Boyne City will be called upon to rebuild equally as good as the old one—$3,500—to which the $2,500 insurance will apply.

The Board of Supervisors are in session at Boyne City.

LATER.

Upon opening the County Clerk's safe the covers of the records were found to be destroyed, but the books not so badly injured but what they can be transcribed.

The file case was saved.

Ironton Notes.

The children's concert netted an interested audience and fourteen dollars and seventy-five cents.

Mr. Jackson and family said their adieux and left for Mancelona on Tuesday.

The sick and afflicted are as follows: Miss Della Compton is confined to her room by a lingering illness; Mrs. Henry Sheldon is improving very slowly; Gracie Allen who has been very ill is improving.

Another base ballist in town. James F. Mitchell will have the training of him, but he will not take his base until about 14 years from last Thursday, the day of his arrival.

Some one was inquiring for the H. H. society, wondering if it was still extinct. Yes, it's on deck for next Wednesday evening, with a program including a paper on the history of Charlevoix county.

Mr. Mosher, father of Mrs. Purvis, framed and raised a stable for Mr. Purvis last week; he is 75 years old and had no mistakes in his work.

Mrs. Noyes visited friends in Boyne City last Friday.

R. A. Miller is at Boyne City this week.

A new force pump in the well at the school house.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN

A SAXON PROVERB.

There is a jolly Saxon proverb
That is very much like this,
That a man is half in heaven
When he has a woman's kiss;
But there's danger in delaying,
And the sweetness may forsake it,
So, I tell you, bashful lover,
If you want a kiss, why, take it.

Never let another fellow
Steal a march on you in this;
Never let a laughing maiden
See you spoiling for a kiss;
There's a royal way of kissing,
And the jolly ones who do it
Have a motto that is winning,
If you want a kiss, why, take it.

Any fool may face a cannon,
Anybody wear a crown;
But a man must win a woman
If he'd have her for his own;
Would you have the golden apple
You must climb the tree and shake it;
If the thing is worth the having
And you want a kiss, why, take it.

Who would burn upon a desert
With a forest smiling by?
Who would give his sunny summer
For a bleak and wintry sky?
Oh! I tell you there is magic,
And you cannot, cannot break it;
For the sweetest part of loving
Is to want a kiss and take it.

—St Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE CURSE OF THE CASTLE.

BY EMMONS BAIRD.

I.

It has happened again!" So all the idlers said at the "Golden Dragon."

"It has happened again!" So the old kelner at the Schwartzberg said, and the servants repeated it; and that was how they had the news at the "Golden Dragon" and all over the village before night.

How it happened was a mystery, but there was no denying it. If any of the noble folks at the Schwartzberg were going to die, something in the castle was sure to fall with no human hand near—no loophole for explaining why the crash should come before the death, and not at any other time. The omen had begun again in these days, after a lapse of a century. The old kelner's father, who had kept the keys long ago, had told strange tales about it. He had only heard them in his youth, but they were very strange tales, and the "Golden Dragon" and the village in general decided that they were not to be explained away. But it was much more satisfactory when at the present time the old omen began to show itself again. It was no grandmother's story now, but a reality. The gossip and excitement went on with shudders and whispers; it was so pleasant to have something to shudder about. Why, if nobody had died after the great stag's head fell in the hall, the "Golden Dragon" would have been downright sorry.

But as it happened, the little boy—the old baron's grandson and heir—fell on the Black Mountain the very day after, and broke his neck. That was only three months ago. And now the great mirror in the tapestried drawing-room had fallen. It was certainly the old baron that was to go off this time. The village waited, breathless, to know.

Home went Fritz Hartmann with the news on the Saturday night. He was in a worse humor than usual; that is saying a great deal for Fritz Hartmann, for he was the blackest man in the village; and who he was or what he was thinking of was all a mystery.

"Flowers, father!" said the little bright-haired child, wanting to be noticed.

"Go to bed!" said Hartmann, and dropped the flowers and kicked them away.

"Any news?" his buxom, good-humored wife asked. The blackest mood Fritz could be in was never too black to stop her smile; many a gathering thunder-storm was laughed off by Martha.

"Why should there be news?" he said, savagely, flinging his coat aside, and throwing himself on a seat, with his hat still on. Love in a cottage has many drawbacks, and his absence of manners is one of them.

The brisk and buxom Martha popped the child into bed, and began to make Fritz's supper hot. There was no fear in her nature, and a great deal of curiosity.

"I wanted to hear about the poor, dear old baron," said Martha.

"He is dying, they say," growled Fritz.

"Oh! Poor old man!"

"Why?" said the husband. "He paid us for my bit of carving. What need we care?"

"Yes, we should care, my wicked old Fritz"—shaking him by the shoulder.

"If a poor man died," said Fritz, "they would shovel him into the ground and forget him. Why should not the rich die too? He has the gout; it would be a comfort to the old fellow to die."

Martha had prayed that he might not die for many a year, gout or no gout—he had been so good to her long ago, when her parents died, and she was taken to the castle to feed the chickens and the ducks in the yard.

Fritz did a bit of wood-carving as well as his daily work. Tourists bought his carving in summer; it was bought at the castle too. He had carried his brackets and frames to the Schwartzberg Castle so often, that he was free of the servants' hall any day, and when he took the carved chair on Thursday, the baron had made him bring it into the library with his own hands. It was ungrateful of Fritz to be glad that the poor old baron was dying; but then Fritz was always growling at the castle folks, and grumbling at his own poverty.

After supper he went out to the "Golden Dragon," and lolled with the idlers on the benches outside the inn. He was not a man for speaking to the others; he had the name of being as proud as Satan, but he listened with his arms folded, and the corners of his dark eyes watching everything. There was no reason that the baron should die because the mirror fell, he said. It was all nonsense. He was the only man in the village that disbelieved in the omen of the Schwartzberg Castle.

When the notary passed the old

German eyes, and curls too rich to be flaxen. She was letting Ludwig cut one little curl, with her pretty head bent for the robbery. The shadow of death loomed over her home again, while she was still wearing a mourning gown for her boy brother, so, though they were lovers, even to the sweet folly of giving a love-lock, they could not be very light-hearted to-night.

"And why not have the broken mirror taken away?" the young lawyer of Leipsic asked. There is no room for superstition in the legal and logical mind.

"It is ill-luck for whoever touches it," said Bertha, with a blush; but she could not get him to believe such foolishness. He put the love-lock in the innermost recess of his pocket-book, and then with his own hands gathered the ruins of the mirror on to a table, rang for a servant to take them away out of everybody's sight.

"You picked them up, sir?" said the servant, nervously.

"I did," said Ludwig, with a laugh. "There's no fear of ill-luck for you, my good fellow, you are so cautious."

"It would have been wise, sir, to have left it as it fell until after the change of the moon."

Ludwig gave a growl of contempt. "My good man, I would not be such a moonstruck lunatic. Take the pieces away."

Bertha admired him more than ever, as every girl admires a brave man. It seemed such a daring deed to be the one to pick up that mirror; she mistook his common sense for bravery.

"Your grandfather is dying of sheer fright," the young man went on, stepping out on the terrace, and leading the girl with him. "The omen will come true if the fear of it kills him."

"But, dear Ludwig," said the girl, leaning on the balustrade, and feeling helplessly ignorant as she looked up at her wise lover, and loved him the more for the man's superior wisdom, "we should all like not to believe in the omen; but what could have knocked the mirror down."

It was indeed puzzling. The nails that had held that mirror were as long as a man's hand. They had been buried in the wall like shafts of iron, and out of the wall they had dragged themselves, after being for fifty years safe and firm. Bertha herself had been in the drawing-room, singing Gounod's "Serenade," with her fiancé leaning against the piano, watching the light from the candles making a halo about her fair hair, and the old baron was dozing in his chair with the dog at his feet, when all at once, with no hand near it, the great mirror had dragged its nails out of the opposite wall, and crashed down upon the floor. The dog had howled and barked, the servants had rushed in, and in the midst of the confusion the old man's voice had said, with a tremble—

"My hour has come!"

His strength had failed; he had been confined to his room; he was dying.

When Ludwig and Bertha walked along the terrace, they hushed their steps near those open windows farther on than the old drawing-room.

"He is awake again," said Ludwig, looking into the curtained gloom. "Go to him, Bertha, if you like, and I can have a smoke in the garden. You might ask him about the will."

"But I don't want him to die, Ludwig."

"My poor little Bertha, what strange things they have taught you! He won't die a moment sooner because he makes a will. It is the right thing to do."

Whatever Ludwig said was right, was supremely right always to the lonely, half-taught girl; so as she sat beside the death-bed that evening, she tenderly and gently coaxed the old man to leave his last wishes written down. Ludwig was called in from the garden, where his cigar had been glimmering under the lindens, and they sent for the village notary, and the butler was the witness.

It was well the will was made that night. The old baron was dead before morning.

Then how the idlers at the "Golden Dragon" talked, and how all the village whispered and shuddered! Well, a few months after, Ludwig Schmidt owned the castle, and Bertha was his wife, and it was to be hoped nothing more would jump down from the walls to give mortals a warning.

III.

The gloomy Fritz Hartmann was more gloomy than ever. Martha swept the cottage and played with the child; but he grumbled at his poverty, and the child shrank from his black looks. He was at the old notary's house every night now.

"Are you selling him carving, Fritz?" said Martha. "Why, we shall be rich!"

Fritz Hartmann was going out of the notary's before he had even tasted a bit after his work.

"I am doing some carving there—at the house, of a night. We may be rich—if we are, it is only my just right, and thanks to nobody."

This was a strange way of talking of wood-carving. Martha wondered and puzzled while she was taking off bright-haired Gretchen's strong little shoes, and putting her to bed. Well, after all, it was the just right of a workman to get the value of his work; perhaps that was what Fritz meant. But Fritz must be making a great deal of money now. Why, he had gone up to the castle in the middle of the day to mend a broken part of the Swiss clock-case.

When Fritz Hartmann reached the notary's house, he forgot that there was any such thing as carving in the world, unless it be carving out a fortune. Yet there was some carving to be done, and he might be rich. The old notary and Hartmann walked in the garden by the colored spires of hollyhock flowers. They smoked and talked of the time of Hartmann's father, and how the old notary knew him well, and how there had been a quarrel.

"No one in the village knows?" asked the old lawyer keenly.

"No one—I am a good gaoler to keep secrets fast."

"But it is time," said the notary. "Your case is safe. The old baron was almost dead. I was called in to make the will by the man to whom the property was willed. His defence would not have a leg to stand on."

It was a very strange thing that while those two men were talking by the hollyhocks, considering the

Even Ludwig Schmidt, man as he was, turned pale, and stood unable to stir in the dead silence after the crash. Then seeing his young wife's head sink forward, he turned to her in panic. Was she already dead? No, it was only a faint. The faint passed off, and the servants were gathered round her where she lay in the cool air on the terrace. Her eyes sought her husband's face, and the only words she spoke were, "I am to die!"

Now, to a dead certainty—and a very dead certainty indeed—Bertha would die if she sank as she was sinking during the month or two that followed the falling of the great picture. All the neighborhood had the tale; the "Golden Dragon" had sent it round—the bride at the castle was wasting away and dying. The doctors found no disease, but she was fading as a flower fades whose life is done.

IV.

The Schwartzberg case began to fill the papers of Geneva. Two brothers had quarreled long ago, and the younger of the two had incurred his father's anger, and gone away an exile from his home and country. He ran through his portion in a wild life, and never came back like the prodigal. But his son came back, as a stranger and a peasant, to live gloomy and discontented under the shadow of the castle, where his father had lived as a boy. His father's brother was there, grown old now, and the heir was the grandson—a boy with an elder sister just in the flower of girlhood. The young heir had been killed by a fall on the rocks. The old baron had died, and a man with no name but Schmidt was in the place of the barons of Schwartzberg. The great case dragged on as a nine-days' wonder. There were two wills, one produced from the safe of the old notary of Schwartzberg; it was written after the boy's untimely death, and gave the property to the next heir of the Schwartzberg barons, the male descendant of the absent brother; the other will was written on the night of the baron's death. It was disputed because it had been drawn up when the testator was weak in mind, on the brink of death, and it had been done at the instigation of Schmidt himself. Well, all the village had been amazed to discover who Fritz Hartmann was; there was no doubt how the case would go.

"But the poor lady—it is sad for her," said one of the idlers outside the inn.

"She is dying, anyhow, so it does not matter," answered another. "It does not make any difference to the dead whether they owned a castle or a novel."

"But is she dying?" with a shudder.

"Yes," in a whisper; "the portrait fell—it was the omen. She sickened at once. It will be a great funeral. My lord will go back to his law-books; his time at the castle was a short life and a merry one."

But Ludwig Schmidt sped home from Geneva to his young wife. "Victory! —the decision is for us."

She raised herself from her couch to lean the fair head against his shoulder. "I am glad to think you will be here—you will not be poor—when I am gone."

"But you are not dying, darling—or if you were dying it was of fear, and you shall fear no more."

"Do not blame me—I can't help being afraid," Bertha's weak voice said. "I have heard of the Schwartzberg omen all my life."

"Poor child! You have heard too much."

"And oh, Ludwig!" she went on, "I am almost afraid to tell you—the night you went away the stone eagle over the gate fell down; and the night was so still there was not a leaf stirring."

Now, the fall of the eagle over the gate was a new form of the omen, and it set Ludwig thinking for dear life—yes, and for a dearer life than his own.

That very night again the eagle fell. For the second time it was put up, and mortared and cemented into its place. "Bertha is sheerly dying of superstition—dying of an old woman's tale," thought Ludwig, exasperated; "and yet I cannot explain this evil thing away. If the poor child dies, it will not have been foretold, it will have been caused by the fall of that picture in the tapestried room and this eagle over the gate."

The so-called Fritz Hartmann was leaving the village; he was taking Martha and their child across the ocean to make an emigrant's home in the far West. He had refused a goodly sum of money from the castle. He would have all or none. He was to go to-morrow; but it was a to-morrow that never came.

"The eagle is down again," whispered the kelner to his master, "and the ivy is all broken and torn from the wall, and there is a man lying dead."

Ludwig hurried across the courtyard, and found Hartmann dead on his face, with an ivy tangle beside him, and the broken eagle.

Only then the kelner remembered that each time the omen had come it had shown itself after the visit of Hartmann with his carving. As for the fall of the antlers and the accidental death of the boy—that, no doubt, suggested to Hartmann an easy method of clearing the old baron out of the way; for certainly, when the mirror fell, and the portrait, Hartmann the carver had found an opportunity to help the nails out of the wall and leave them loose. If the young bride had died of superstition and fear, there would have been no heir but the man who had tried by legal means, and lost his chance.

The lady of the castle bloomed into health; she comforted the peasant-widow, and sent little Gretchen a marriage portion in time to come. But the evil omen of the Schwartzberg never happened again; and the folks at the "Golden Dragon" refused the explanation, as credulous folks always do.

"The outcast died by the omen itself at the castle gate," they said. "The stone eagle killed him."

"The wound was made by a fall," said the surgeon positively.

And yet at the "Golden Dragon" the tale was told for many a year as the finest and most "creepy" instance of the Schwartzberg omen. For if men will enjoy a shudder, they won't have an explanation.

Dog Bays.

"Papa," said a Newman girl, "when are you going to buy me a poodle?"

"In dog days, my dear," replied the fond parent.

"It will be a dog day when I catch that dog," said the girl, as the old man got up and went off—he seemed to be in the dog-house.

GOVERNMENT mitigates the inequality of power, and puts an innocent man, however mean, on the level of the magistrate of his fellow subjects.—Addison.

'TWAS A FAMOUS VICTORY.

The Great International Yachting Contest for the America's Cup.

Detailed Description of the First Race Between the Volunteer and the Thistle.

"He Knows He Hadn't Orter."

That Cap'n Bell
(The British swell)
Who comes across the water
To try to scoop
Our Yankee sloop—
He's feelin' lonesome, sorter.

The cup's been here
Nigh forty year
With all the world agin it,
An' there don't boat
No hostile boat
That's good enough to win it.

Our folks don't go
Much on the blow,
But, gosh an' little fishes!
We know our biz,
An' that are is
The art of skimmin' dishes!

We don't care what
May be the yacht—
Just set her on the ocean
An' we will show
She's pinguey slow
Aside our Yankee notion.

So when that swell
Named Cap'n Bell
Comes sailin' in this Thistle
To get that cup
We spunked right up—
You'd oughter seen us bristle!

And then we—well,
That Cap'n Bell
Is actin' huffy, sorter;
And sad is he
That he crossed the sea,
For he knows he hadn't orter!

—Eugene Field, in Chicago News.

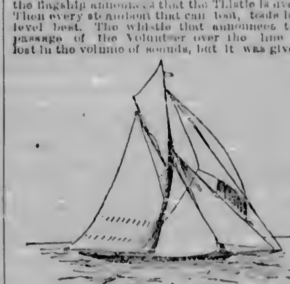
Detailed Account of the Race.

The seventh contest for the possession of the America's cup—the previous ones having been sailed in 1851, 1871, 1872, 1876, 1885, and 1886—came off at New York on Tuesday, Sept. 27, and resulted in another victory for the Yankee colors. The following detailed report of the race, sent by telegraph from New York, will be read with interest:

At 12:26 the preparatory gun is fired, and a minute later a pigeon circles twice around the Electra before conveying the joyful news. The

THE VOLUNTEER ROUNDING THE LIGHTSHIP.

Volunteer breaks out her jib topsail! three minutes before the starting gun is fired. It is larger than the Thistle's. At 12:30 the starting gun booms forth, and the excitement reaches the climax. Both yachts are on the port tack north of the line. The Thistle goes about like a top and heads for the line on the port tack. The Volunteer follows a hundred yards astern. At 12:30:30 a short, sharp blast from the whistle of the flagship announces that the Thistle is over. Then every steamboat that can toot, toots her level best. The whistle that announces the passage of the Volunteer over the line is lost in the volume of sounds, but it was given



THE THISTLE AT THE START.

At 12:34:58¼. Then all the steamers got in motion, and scores of paddle-wheels and propellers churn up the water, as the steamers start after the yachts and close in upon them.

At 12:39 the Thistle goes about on the starboard tack, crossing the bows of the Volunteer and compelling her to keep off a little. The Volunteer follows suit at 12:41. They are smart jockeys, though, on the Volunteer, and they get even for the little trick—all fair, though—that the Thistle played on them. At 12:44 the Volunteer, which had been crawling to windward of the Thistle, comes about, forcing the Thistle to follow suit at 12:46, the Volunteer getting both the wind and the windward position. The Thistle runs into a calm right in the neck of the Narrows, which the Volunteer escapes by standing in close to the Staten Island shore. The Thistle hangs there for a few minutes. It is most exasperating luck for the Thistle, and, to make it worse, there goes up a joyous chorus from nearly every steam whistle in the fleet. The Volunteer, carrying a good breeze, while her rival is becalmed, goes slidding through the Narrows, and it begins to be observed that the Volunteer is no slouch of a boat after all in light weather. The steamers crowded around the two Thistle, notwithstanding the frantic efforts of those on the bridge of the Electra to get them to hold back. They cannot help it; the Narrows is like the neck of a bottle, and a large fleet going through must converge there. At 1:35 the Thistle catches a fitful breeze and is wafted out of her uncertain predicament. But, in the meantime, the Volunteer has obtained a lead which looks much like half a mile. Thus, early in the race, the tables are turned and the Thistle has a stern chase, and no boat ever got in existence behind that saucy cocked-up stern of the Volunteer that did not find the chase a long one.

THE YACHTS' COURSE.

Once out of the Narrows, the Thistle gets a fair share of the breeze and bends over to it a little, small jets of spray flashing away from the bows and falling to leeward while furrows on either side of her. The conduct of the steam-

The Volunteer passes to starboard of buoy No. 10 at 2:21:30, the Thistle passes at 2:36:15. She gets only a few consolatory toots, for most of the steamers are following in the wake of the victorious Volunteer, and the Thistle gets some of their wash. The Volunteer slips along with such an easy, graceful motion that it deceives the observer as to the speed she is making. The Thistle, too, moves easily and gracefully, keeling over a little more than does the Volunteer, and making fully as beautiful a picture; but somehow, as some one on board the Electra puts it, "she does not get there like the other boat." From buoy No. 8½ the yachts are able to reach, with sheets eased off a bit, to buoy No. 5, off the point of the Hook. Thereafter they lie their course close hauled to the Sandy Hook light-ship.

PROFILE AND MIDSHIP SECTION OF THE VOLUNTEER.

The wind is found to be a little fresher after the yachts get outside the Hook, and the sea is a little lumpy.

The Volunteer heels over more, but yet her lee rail is always several inches above the water; the white foam that starts from her shoulder gets broader, and the waves make nervous little jumps at her sides in a vain attempt to get over her lee rail. The Volunteer rounds the Sandy Hook light-ship at 3:47:12. There is a scampering of men on her decks. Sheets are eased off, and with the wind abeam, she is off on the home stretch at a pace that bids defiance to any pursuer, and the Thistle, hull down, shows a white streak of sail approaching the light-ship. It was 4:01:13 when the Thistle made the light-ship and eased off her sheets for the run back, taking down her baby jib-topsail and replacing it with a larger one. The Volunteer gained on the Thistle from buoy No. 10 to Sandy Hook lightship 3 minutes 21 seconds; from the start to Sandy Hook lightship the Volunteer gained 20 minutes 3½ seconds.

PROFILE AND MIDSHIP SECTION OF THE THISTLE.

The race home is easily told, as it is devoid of every aspect of a race, so far behind is the Thistle. They are so sure of victory on the Volunteer that they take things somewhat easy, and it is not until she gets some distance from the Sandy Hook light-ship on the home stretch that she sets a larger jib top-sail. The wind is nearly abeam. She rounds Buoy No. 10 again at 4:38:11. For the rest of the way home it is a run before the wind. The main boom is swung out to port and the spinnaker boom dropped to starboard, but there is no hurry displayed in breaking out the enormous spinnaker. When it is set, the Volunteer sweeps along with accelerated speed. Onward she sweeps with such an escort as never yacht had before. She crosses the finish line at 5:26:43.

It is no section of pandemonium, but pandemonium itself that greets her. Everything that can make a noise does its level best, and guns flash and bang right and left, as though some naval fight were under way. Peerless Volunteer. Well has she won the title. With scarce so much as a little tug to escort her, the Thistle sweeps down on the finish line. Beautiful she looks as she glides swiftly before the breeze, with every stitch of canvas drawing and her spinnaker setting perfectly. It is hard to understand how she got so far behind. There is only one explanation of it—the fault is not with the Thistle, but the Volunteer happens to be the better boat. It is hard work to keep the finish line clear for the Thistle, but it is done after much exertion, and the Thistle crosses at 5:45:52¾, beaten as she was never beaten before. But she is greeted with abundance of noise if there is any consolation for her in that. The Scotchmen acknowledge the salute by cheering, but they are forced not to blow cheers.

Thus, the Volunteer won by 19 min. 23¾ sec., corrected time. The Volunteer's time in the run from the Sandy Hook lightship to the finish line was 1:39:31, and the Thistle's 1:41:37½, the Thistle gaining 1 min. 36¼ sec. over this part of the course.

SUPPRESSING A MUTINY.

A Desperate Outbreak Among the Convicts in the East Tennessee Mines—They Are Confined in Their Narrow Prison and All Ventilation Shut Off.

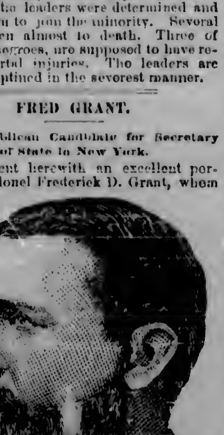
[Knoxville (Tenn.) special.]

The mutiny of convicts at the mines of the Knoxville Iron Company, which began last week, has terminated, and everything is reported quiet. The revolt was caused by poor food and hard tasks. Trouble had been brewing for some time, and the convicts—over one hundred in number—refused to leave the mines when dinner was announced. The guards tried, so they claim, to settle the matter without excessive punishment, but to no avail. They coaxed and pleaded with the stubborn fellows for five or six hours, and then attempted to eject them by force. The resolute convicts turned on the guards and drove them into the mines. A guard finally closed the ventilating shafts, which drove the mutineers to the narrow opening. There they crowded and fought each other for breathing space. The mine gradually filled with foul air, and the convicts suffered untold agonies. They held out for two days, however, the fellows in front holding the fort against their more unfortunate fellows. When a man was prostrated he was lifted over the heads of others and allowed the blessings of fresh air. The stockade had been closely guarded and the facts so quietly kept that it was impossible for the newspapers to get the particulars. An investigation was held at the instance of the State Inspector of Mines, which shows that the most serious trouble was among the convicts themselves, and a great many refused to join in the revolt, but the leaders were determined and forced them to join the minority. Several were beaten almost to death. Three of them, all negroes, are supposed to have received mortal injuries. The leaders are being disciplined in the severest manner.

FRED GRANT.

The Republican Candidate for Secretary of State in New York.

We present herewith an excellent portrait of Colonel Frederick D. Grant, whom



FRED GRANT.

the Republicans of New York have placed in nomination for Secretary of State.

THE most persistent loafer is oftenest in want of a loaf.

TELLING TRUTHS.

Extract from the Address of Chairman Henderson to the Iowa Republican Convention.

It has been said that the Republican party did so little that the Democratic party was put in power, and that the Democratic party, many now say, has done nothing. That the Democratic administration has failed to accomplish anything. I take exception to the latter position. It has done many things, and many things, I frankly admit, that would not have been done if Blaine and Logan had received the seats to which they were elected. [Applause.] In the first place the Democratic administration stepped into power by two kinds of fraud. First, fraud upon the black men in respect to their exercise of the right of suffrage. Second, swindling the innocent mugwumps of the East. [Applause and laughter.] Neither of these things would have been done by a Republican administration. [Applause.] It was my misfortune to see Gen. Fitz Hugh Lee at the inauguration of President Cleveland marching in the inaugural procession in a gray suit with which many of us are familiar, and I heard him cheered as the President was not. That would not have been done at the inauguration of a Republican President. [Applause.] On the night of the inauguration I was awakened by the sounds of music by the bands that appeared at the National Capital to make cheerful the day. The tunes that were played that night (I heard them myself), were, "My Maryland," "Bonny Blue Flag," and "Dixie." That would not have been done at the inauguration of Blaine and Logan. [Applause.] A Union flag lowered on the Interior Department by the command of an executive officer to the memory of that rebel fiend (I know the meaning of the word), old Thompson. That would not have been thought of by the Republican administration. [Applause.] The Democratic President calls forth all his powers of speech to pay tribute to the memory of John C. Calhoun, the father of secession; to the memory of Gen. Sidney Johnston, a brave fighter in the rebellion, on the occasion of the dedication of monuments to the memory of those two men. That would never have been done by a Republican President. [Applause.] Men who have been tried in the flames of war in their country's behalf recalled from posts of duty on foreign shores and from places of trust throughout the land, and men conspicuous in the great struggle to destroy the Union put in their places. This would not have been done by Blaine and Logan. [Applause.] The private pension bills passed under the Constitution which clothed Congress with omnipotent power to do it, to help poor, trembling, crippled men and old fathers and mothers, helpless because they tried to help their country, have been vetoed from the White House. God knows it would never have been done by a Republican President. [Applause.] These same poor, helpless, crippled men are insulted from the great White House of the republic. Ah! we know again, and God knows, such a thing would never have been done by a Republican President. A Mexican pension bill which gave millions to the South and thousands to the North found swift approval from Mr. Cleveland. A bill almost identical in its provisions that gave millions to the Union soldiers of the North and thousands to the South is quickly killed by Mr. Cleveland. These things would not have been done by a Republican President. [Applause.] The flags that courage, devotion to country, and patriotism tore from the standard of treason and laid away are without authority of law taken from the Government to send away. Such a thing, fellow-citizens, never would have been dreamed of by a Republican Executive. Even Decoration Day, when the nation North and South is in tears, is put to a new use by a Democratic President. Fellow-citizens, a Republican President would be welcome at St. Louis where the old Union soldiers meet in annual friendly greeting; yes, welcome there or anywhere else. It does not seem to be true in the case of the present Democratic President, and the false, cowardly, cringing letter by which that visit was recalled (or its promise) never would have been penned by the hand of a Republican President. A Republican President would never have used all the powers of his high office as President Cleveland did, to destroy American industry and take away food from the American laborer. A Republican President would not have vetoed the bill for the relief of the sufferers along the Des Moines River. A Republican House of Representatives would never have given a pension to the widow of General Hancock and denied it to the noble and stricken widow of John A. Logan. [Applause.] I mention these few things that have been done that Republicanism could never have accomplished. So I say, and thus point the thought, that the Republican party still stands with its face to the east and with its hand on the flag-staff of the nation to hold it up. It still stands in the van of every great battle, whether it be to guard the happiness of our children, or whether it be to keep back the anarchist when, unclothed with citizenship, he dares to take this Government in his bloody hand.

The Massachusetts Spoils Democracy.

The spoils Democracy of Massachusetts may at least claim to be philosophical. If they cannot have the whole loaf they are willing in this case to take what would be equivalent to a little more than a quarter. The postoffice and custom house of Boston, as well those of some of the other large cities of that State, are models of excellent business management; indeed, their reputation in this regard is so well known that there has long been a suspicion that the working force could not have been recruited from Democratic ranks. The rumor also grew that a great number of the clerkships were held by ex-Union soldiers, reinstated by Gen. Corse and Mr. Saltonstall. This of itself was another indication that Democrats had been disregarded. At last the State Central Committee appointed a sub-committee to investigate the matter. The sub-committee did not have a very pleasant time of it. They were rather peremptorily told by Corse and Saltonstall to mind their own business. When complaints were made they were referred to the President. When they requested the Postmaster and Collector to dismiss Republicans they were met with an emphatic refusal. Notwithstanding the obstacles thrown in their way they managed to find that out of the 4,614 employes of the Government department 2,828 are Republicans, or 63 per cent., drawing $5,000,000 in salaries which otherwise would have gone into Democratic pockets. Such a disproportion in the number of employes and in the amount of wages, not to speak of patronage, was like a red rag to the Democratic bull. The spoilsmen have taken this up in earnest. They are furious in their denunciation of the Government officials as enemies of the Democratic party and demand their removal.

The Postmaster and Collector naturally enough fell back upon the President as the responsible party. Mr. Cleveland has always cherished the conviction that Massachusetts is a debatable State, and he has made his appointments there with the view of switching it off into the Democratic know it is hopeless, and that, however far the State may have drifted from its old Republican moorings under false promises, she has come back to stay. In this dilemma they want the spoils for the balance of the term. They have sacrificed two years and a half of pickings and patronage in favor of the mugwump alliance, and now that they find their allies are worse than incumbrances they want the spoils for the balance of the time. That is all there is to the situation in Massachusetts, and if the President is convinced by this time that his case is hopeless in Massachusetts the cry of the hungry spoilsmen will be regarded, and the Republican clerks and ex-Union soldiers will be given their walking tickets. It is only in States where Cleveland has deemed it probable he might be successful that he has retained Republicans in office. In hopeless States, like Pennsylvania and Illinois, they were bounced out long ago. The proceedings of the State convention held recently show that an apparently successful effort was made to keep the work of the smelling committee out of sight, but the skeleton is there all the same in the Democratic closet.—Chicago Tribune.

BOB BURDETTE ON THE FLAG.

Why the Veterans Dislike the Combination of Cleveland and the Stars and Stripes.

It seems to me that the hostility which the old soldiers exhibit toward the combination of President Cleveland and the United States flag is easily explained. It is simply an emanation of the soldier spirit; it is the soul of a soldier's life and habit—obedience to orders.

Along some time "endurin' the war" the mob of camp-followers and speculators who followed the Union army for gain and plunder got to using the United States flag as an advertisement. It floated over and in front of every shoddy store in Cairo and Memphis, and painted across the Stars and Stripes was the name of the firm that was making $2 on every bill of 50 cents it sold. The flag was dishonored by greedy robbers, who loved the soldier only for what they could take out of him, and waved the flag over his head while they went through his pockets. I think it was Grant—a soldier naturally thinks that every good thing that was done during the war was done by Grant—possibly while he was commanding the military division of the Mississippi; at any rate, it was some Union General who issued an order forbidding this desecration of the flag. It was a symbol of honor; the emblem of our noble and glorious cause; every star was sacred to the soldier; that banner was his hourly inspiration, daily he braved death under its folds, and he prayed that it might be his winding-sheet when he died. To daub upon its azure field the fat face of some civilian who never spoke a warm-hearted word for the Union until he found there was some profit to be made out of its defenders; to scrawl across its silken folds the name of some trader whose greedy hand was plunged into the soldier's pocket; to use the flag as an advertising sheet for a pack of camp-followers—was a disgrace, an outrage, a shameful dishonor. And so the General commanding ordered that all such signs should be taken down by the provost guard, and that no man should ever again dare use the flag of our country to advertise himself and his shoddy wares, while daily it was made more sacred than ever, baptized in the fire of battle and the life-blood of brave men. The thought, the feeling that inspired the order was born in the heart of a soldier, and the army applauded it.

Well, now, the old soldiers have not forgotten that order, and to this day the Grand Army hates to see the flag used as an advertisement for dry goods, for salt fish, for tar, for gimlets, for treacle, taffy, popularity, votes, or anything else. No man's portrait has any right on the United States flag—the President's, or the post sutler's, or even P. T. Barnum's. The flag was never made for the purpose; it wasn't intended, when it was designed, to be a national picture gallery. And no man who loves it, as do the men who marched, and fought, and suffered under it, likes to see it disfigured. They remember the flag very distinctly as it was when they carried it into battle, and President Cleveland's picture wasn't painted on it then; why then should it be there now? It is soldierly in the men of the Grand Army to obey orders. "Forever float that standard sheet," but down with the advertisements.

ROBERT J. BURDETTE.

Mrs. Cleveland and Governor Foraker.

In an interview with a representative of the Associated Press, General A. S. Bushnell, a member of Governor Foraker's staff, authorized the following statement concerning Mrs. Cleveland's reception of Governor and Mrs. Foraker at the Academy, in Philadelphia.

"Preceded by Governor Beaver, of Pennsylvania and his staff, Governor and Mrs. Foraker and our party advanced to be received. Governor Beaver and party were warmly greeted by both the President and Mrs. Cleveland, who shook hands with them cordially. President Cleveland then shook hands with Governor Foraker, but his face was as expressionless as that of a sphinx. The Governor presented Mrs. Foraker and the President shook hands with her. Governor Foraker was then introduced to Mrs. Cleveland and extended his hand to her. She paid no attention to his proffered hand, but, taking half a step backward and folding her hands, stared straight at him without a sign of recognition. Apparently giving no heed to this direct cut, the Governor presented Mrs. Foraker. Mrs. Cleveland still stood with folded hands, declining Mrs. Foraker's extended hand, and acknowledging her presence only by a freezing inclination of her head. Gen. Axline and his wife were presented to the President and Mrs. Cleveland, and both shook hands with them, and immediately afterward Mrs. Bushnell and myself were introduced, and were received in the same cordial manner. The cut of Governor and Mrs. Foraker was made more direct by our reception than it would have been had Mrs. Cleveland not shaken hands with the remainder of the Ohio party. It has been stated that Mrs. Cleveland was not shaking hands with any of her guests, but that is a great mistake, for she received both those who preceded and those who followed Governor and Mrs. Foraker very cordially.

"Regret was expressed on all sides that the incident should have occurred, for everybody felt that Mrs. Cleveland, as the first lady of the land, could not afford to snub the chief magistrate of the third State in the Union, to say nothing of the affront to a lady of Mrs. Foraker's beautiful character."—Springfield (O.) dispatch.

As Seen Through Oregonian Spectacles.

The steadily growing impression made by Cleveland is that he was, before a happy accident made him the compromise candidate of a discordant Democracy for the Governorship of New York, nothing more than a healthy, athletic, mediocre man; a respectable lawyer, somewhat notorious as a cold-blooded, selfish creature, a bachelor who preferred the animal pleasures of this world unmixed by any association with the moral responsibilities and anxieties of pure domestic life. Beyond a considerable capacity for ox-like drudgery that is common to all industrious office lawyers, and the limited political astuteness acquired as a ward politician in Buffalo, Mr. Cleveland

DRIFTING.

BY CYNTHIA MILLARD AMBROSE.

[illegible]
From its parent tree,
Fell—was buried in the earth,
Hid from you and me.

Years rolled by, that acorn grew
Tall and strong and free;
Grew, until its branches wide
Sheltered you and me.

Other trees had crowded round,
Every kind of tree,
But no other in match was
So loved by you and me.

Years passed on, and other years
Came to take their place—
Years that brought grave lines of care
To my playmate's face.

Till at last the woodman's ax
Felled that tree one day,
And upon the river's breast
It drifted far away.

Drifted in the sunset light—
Drifted neath the moon;
Drifted toward the rising sun—
Drifted all too soon.

But it held a given course,
Guided secretly;
As our lives have spent themselves,
Drifting quietly.

Drifting—yes, we say it so;
But a mystic hand
Guides our to dest[iny] tenderly
To a happier land.

Like the tree we, too, must fail,
Sacred growth and life,
Our existence is, till death
[illegible]

A MODERN MAGDALEN.

BY M. C. FARLEY.

CHAPTER I.

BYWATER PARK.

"YES, Hazard," Madam Dundas is saying; "it is all very good of you to speak in defense of the absent. But you only waste your breath when you champion the cause of that rascally nephew of mine, Fred Bolton. You don't know him as I know him. He is a scamp of the first water."

"I know he's old and poor," says Hazard.

"What if he is old? That's nothing. Given time enough you'd be old yourself, Hazard. And as to his poverty—whose fault is it that he is poor? He's already squandered two fortunes, and for all I will do to prevent it, he may end his days in the alms-house. I hope he will."

Captain Hazard smiles at the old lady's vehemence. Her black-mittened hands gesticulate with energy, and in her excitement her lace cap has bobbed half off her head, where it now hangs in an awry twist that is ludicrous.

"Oh, pray, don't excite yourself, aunt," says Hazard; "your capstrings are all in a flutter. By rights I should be a woman, that I might adjust such little matters of dress for you. But you see the disadvantages under which I labor. I am useless—even as an accessory to the toilet-room." Madam Dundas smiles indulgently. The Captain is a prime favorite with her, and has been for years. Then she rings the bell that stands on the table close by her side, and a maid enters.

"Put my cap straight, and make me presentable," commands the autocrat. The maid quickly and deftly makes the necessary changes, pulls the mittens well up on the skinny arms, adjusts the awry cap, and disappears as silently as she has come.

Madam Dundas is very old, very rich, and very whimsical, and, alas! very much accustomed to having her own way.

She turns again to the Captain, a tall, thin gentleman in an undress uniform.

"Did I understand you to say that Bolton has a daughter?"

Hazard nodded.

"How do you know?"

"Campion knows them both; lived in the same house with them at one time, and got to be well acquainted. The girl is bright, but uneducated, and with little or no taste in dress. He says she is dark as a savage, and yet wears tints that should only be worn by blondes."

"That is unpardonable," remarks the old lady, with quiet sarcasm. "We might overlook her lack of education, and forgive the poverty. But bad taste—never."

The Captain shrugged his shoulders.

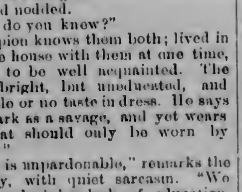
"I do not understand your reasons for espousing my nephew's cause," says Madam Dundas peevishly.

"No more do I."

"Unless it is from sheer perversity. You were always on the opposite side, let the matter be what it would."

This is true enough. The Captain, who admits that he is hit, winces and makes a grimace.

"And were I to become reconciled to



"He is a scamp of the first water."

my nephew, what is to hinder me from cutting you off without a penny, and leaving all the money to his daughter?"

"Nothing."

"Knowing my changeable nature as you do, don't you see that you are periling your future prospects by your advice, and that if I become reconciled to those two vagabonds—which, thank goodness, I never will—I am likely to give them my property?"

"Yes! but I don't think you would really be so unkind to me as that. I am old woman and soothe her, instead of raking out and half forgotten memories of the past. I know that I have done my duty by Frederic Bolton. He was always a lazy, imaginative, careless fellow. I never saw his daughter—a little guy, you say—and never wish to."

"It is for the reason that the daughter is a 'little guy' that I lay her case before you," says Hazard, with determination. "The girl is so young that she may yet be taught; and I know that in your secret heart you feel the want of young society. She would make an excellent companion for you, while your means—your patronage—will give her such a start in life as she otherwise will never receive. I don't ask you to leave the girl your money—in fact, do not wish you to do that. The money is promised me, you know. But give her a chance, give her a chance. That's all I ask; and if she proves worthy, then open your heart and obey its promptings. In case you should cut me off without a cent, I would bear it. Believe me, I am not up to a helpless hanger on to the apron-strings of charity."

Madam puts her withered hand affectionately on the Captain's shoulder.

"Years and years ago, Captain, I told you that I had made you my heir. With the exception of my graceless nephew and his daughter, you are the only relative I have in the world, and would naturally inherit my money in case I die without a will—but for them. But my will is made. They can not inherit under its provisions. That is settled."

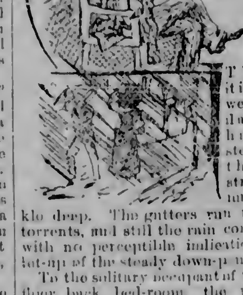
The Captain limps up and down the luxurious room—he had served in the late war with credit to himself and his country, and now carries a wounded limb as a memento of one of the hottest battles fought during the rebellion—then he says thoughtfully: "There is no use denying that I have expected to come into the property at some time or other, nor that I am not unselfish enough to wish it otherwise. Still, the girl has claims upon you, and for her sake the claims should be recognized in some manner."

Madam shuts her eyes tightly, reaches out for the bell, gives it a sharp pull, and says in the old, peevish tone:

"I protest against it; but to please you, Captain, a letter shall be dispatched to-day, inviting her to make her home at Bywater Park. But remember, it is your doing, not mine."

CHAPTER II.

FATHER AND DAUGHTER.



IT has been, it is, a nasty week. For days rain has fallen steadily. In the city streets the mud is ankle deep. The gutters run miniature torrents, and still the rain comes down with no perceptible indication of any let-up of the steady down-pour.

To the solitary occupant of the third-floor back bed-room, the unceasing tinkle of the water as it plashes against the window panes, and trickles in a noisy flood down into the tin water-pipes, is fast growing unbearable. Mr. Frederic Bolton glances impatiently up from his book.

He is five-and-forty, if a day; he has a pale, refined face, a pair of large blue eyes, and a straggling blonde beard, worn in the English fashion, on either side of a round and receding chin. In person, he is apparently of medium height, inclined to slenderness. His manners are those of a gentleman. But the low, drawling voice and his air of condescension seem totally at variance with the grim poverty of his surroundings. The carpet upon which he sits is ragged, and darned in many places. In one corner stands a make-believe piano, that deceives nobody as to what its actual use is. Indeed, as if to make "assurance doubly sure," the corner of a sheet protruding from a crevice in the side of the instrument indicates the fact plainly enough, that what seems to be a piano by day is in reality a bed at night. The holland shades are pushed well up to admit the scanty light which creeps in over the black roofs, visible in every direction from the windows themselves. A small round table, littered with writing materials, is drawn up on one side of the open fire-place, and a low rocker, with a woman's shawl trailing across the back of it, stands close by the table.

Mr. Bolton again glances impatiently from his book—he is reading Ouida's "Wanda"—and look out on the smoking chimneys, the black house tops, and the lowering sky.

"Pouf," he ejaculates angrily, flirting his fingers at the dismal prospect without, and mentally cursing that within.

"What beastly weather. If it needs must rain, then why doesn't it rain and be done with it. This infernal drip and drizzle all day long, all night long, for nobody knows how many days and nights together, is enough to drive a man distracted." With this philippic against the unruly elements without, he pushes his chair a trifle nearer the fire, puts his slippered feet upon the fender, and, drawing his tattered dressing-gown more closely about his attenuated figure, gives attention to the novel in his hand.

The book itself is a well-worn copy, and shows the marks of hard usage as well as those of the circulating library from which it evidently comes.

Now, to be a patron of the circulating library might argue, to the superficial observer, a not too fastidious taste on the part of Mr. Bolton. Whereas, facts establish the contrary to be the case. As a rich man's son, Mr. Bolton had inherited money. And as a rich man's son he began life with no other idea of the value of money than that of its purchasing power. Neither by training or natural inclination had he a capacity for either acquiring riches or for husbanding the riches he inherited.

Therefore, pandering solely to a taste for that which is most pleasant in life—and shrinking all responsibilities, whatever they might be—brings Mr. Bolton at last to the third-floor back it is not his disposition to brace his shoulders for a struggle with the current. His philosophy has taught him a different method, and he drifts—slowly it may be, but surely—down the river.

He murmurs little at the ups and downs of life, and deplorable as his condition is, gives himself no particular uneasiness over the necessities of to-morrow. "Take the world easy," is his motto, and always will be.

Absorbed in his novel, the time flies rapidly, and Mr. Bolton quite forgets the fact that the temperature of the room is growing too low for comfort, until suddenly reminded of it by the chill that creeps up his spinal column. He pauses in his reading, shivors, and reaching for the poker, gives the fire a punch that sends the sparks flying upward in a shower. As he flings the poker down again, a light tap is heard at the door, and a moment later a tall girl enters the room. A rubber coat, from which the water trickles in little rivulets, envelopes her figure from head to heel.

"Back again, Loo," exclaims Mr. Bolton in astonishment. "Why, I did not look for your return for two good hours yet."

"It rains so," says Loo, half apologetically, "and the folks were stupid and still."

She has removed the swaddling cloak while speaking, and now hangs it on the wall. Divesting her feet of the overshoes, she sits down in the rocker by the table. In a momentary spasm of weakness, nineteen years before, Frederic Bolton had yielded to temptation and married a pretty little country girl, as innocent as she was pretty. He had hardly had time to decide in his own mind whether he most approved or disapproved the hasty action on his part, when his wife died, leaving a daughter as the sole token of her affection. Loo was this child.

"Then you did not enjoy yourself?" says Bolton presently.

"I was overlooked; made to feel that I was with the people, but not of them. I will not voluntarily expose myself to a repetition of that kind again."

"Never mind. It is past; let it go. To recall anything that has happened is folly," says Bolton, returning to his novel again. "I thought—I really did—that Loo Bolton could hold her own with the best of them; the upstarts."

"And so I can," Loo cries indignantly.

"Well, then don't complain."

Loo, big-eyed and pale-faced, looks almost contemptuously at her worthy parent. She puts her hand in her pocket, takes a parcel therefrom, and tosses it without further ado toward Bolton. "The postman gave me a letter, and as I came up, I found the maid standing outside the door with the weekly bill."

Mr. Bolton hates bills, or he would hate them could his careless, ease-loving disposition feel as strong and positive an emotion as that of hatred. As it is, and to put the case mildly, he is constitutionally opposed to anything that savors of separation with any of his cash in hand.

So, Mr. Bolton apparently most interested in the weekly bill, examines that first, giving it the closest attention.

Mr. Bolton had discovered in the course of his various peregrinations that it takes a certain amount of ready cash to procure even the discomforts of a third-rate lodging house, and experience had taught him that it behooved him to keep an eye on the weekly account.

So he now scanned with a critical air the items set forth opposite the column of figures. Evidently the items tally with the figures, for even the captious Mr. Bolton puts the bill down at last on the table without making any erasures.

He groans, and beats the "Devil's Tattoo" with his fingers. "I suppose it is all correct," says he at last. "Loo, get out the money. You'll find it in the pocket of my dress-coat."

Loo fetches the dress-coat from the peg in the closet, produces the pocket-book and passes it over to her father.

The purse is flat enough, the dear knows.

Mr. Bolton groans again as he fishes out the amount required by his landlady.

Where more money is to come from when his depleted exchequer shall give out entirely, is a conundrum that he does not try to solve at present.

To think about it is to anticipate trouble. This he declines to do.

Mr. Bolton never anticipates anything save his creditors. "We're getting down to the bottom dollar, Loo," says her father after a bit, as he contemplates the few notes remaining in the purse. "And when we spend the bottom dollar, I'll have to blow my brains out with a pistol. I can't live without money."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Carl Pretzel's Philosophy.

Please of you don't trust in der goot nadure of peoples. Poody gwick you don't get trusted, also.

Atwice dot don't hafe a market value vas a goot ting to gif avay.

Nadure dond vas like der kangaroo, on ackound she dond moof mit jumps. Yoost so shteady tike der deuce she goes along mit herself.

Der Shnigge on der bench vas a pooty shmard fellers, but ofen dot man dond can gif some trains to der fool.

WHAT absurd little things people quarrel about! What trivial matters cause ill-feeling in families! An opinion about the temperature of the house, or the style of curtain that ought to be bought for windows; the definition of a word, or its proper pronunciation, insignificant topics that are not worth a quarrel when peace and good-will are of so much importance in the home. A little ill-feeling is like a seed that may grow into a large tree that will shadow the whole house. Many a man and woman must look back with regret on the hasty word or the cold reproach which was the entering wedge that split the household in two; and yet how few make a point of uttering the soft word that turneth away wrath! Quarreling is one of the original sins. The babies on the floor will fall out with their toys, and one will push down the block tower that the other has built with great pains, and mamma will be called to settle a quarrel, and no truth can be got at, for each is right in his own estimation, and each has been wronged by the other. So it is through life. A reasonable quarrel about great matters may be settled, and the parties made friends again; but little tiffs about nothing

Grit Won.

"He, he, he!" cackled old Mrs. Paxton, as she took her snuff stick out of her mouth and leaned back in her chair. "He, he, he! yeou didn't know our Liz was goin' to marry Jack Gillyfish, did yeou?"

"Lordy, no!" says Mrs. Jones. "I heern as how your man 'lowed that Jack was too meachin' an' hadn't grit 'nuff to suit him nor Liz."

"He, he, he!" roared Mrs. Paxton. "That's whar the laff comes in. The ole man did think so, but he's sorter changed his mind. Yeou see, Jack's been so blamed spoony and mushey 'round Liz, an' actin' so like a sick calf, par didn't like it. He said as how no feller with a bit o' grit or sand in 'im would make sich a derned fool o' hisself. An' he said as how he was goin' to put Jack to test an' lick 'im an' shame 'im right fore Liz an' make her sick of a feller that hadn't no grit in 'im.

"So las' night, when Jack and Liz was spoonin' 'round on the kitchen door steps, par he steps up an' rolls up his sleeves an' he sez, sez he:

"'Lookee here, Jack; unless I'm mighty mistaken, yeou ain't the sort of cimp I wants fer a son-in-law, nor one Liz wants fer a man. But I kinder like yeou, Jack, an' I'll give you a fairer show 'n I would most airy one else; so if you kin lick me with me holdin' one hand ahind my back yeou kin go on with your sparkin', but if yeou cayn't, blamed if I don't trounce yeou good with one hand an' boot yeou off'n the place into the bargain. Shan't I, Liz?'

"Well, Liz she kinder snickered into her apron an' sez:

"'Yes, yeou kin, pa.' Jack he got as red as fire, an' I thought he'd light out for the woods, but stid o' that he sez to Liz, sez he, 'Shell I try him one, Liz?' an' Liz she sez, sez she, 'Pitch in, Jack; I'll hold yer hat.'

"Well, par stood a-grinnin' when Jack give a jump an' yell an' I'm blamed if he didn't knock par a rod at the first lick, an' he hadn't hardly crawled to his feet when Jack gave 'im another crack that sent 'im flat inter a big tub o' rainwater kerswash. Then Jack grabbed him by the heels an' jerked him to his feet an' slapped his jaws 'till Liz an' me nearly died a-laffin, an' we jest come nigh splittin' our sides, when Jack tripped up par the neatest yeou ever seen in your life, an' grabbed 'im by the heels an' drug 'im three times 'round the house, and then flung him over a ten-rail fence into a hog waller. Lordy! how Liz an' me did laff!

"Then Jack he comes an' sets down to sparkin' Liz as kam an' as cool as a cowcumber, an' bimeby par he crawls out an' sneaks 'round back 'o the house an' sticks his head 'round a corner an' sez kind o' feeble like sez he:

"'Yeou kin hev her, Jack.'

"Blamed if it wa'n't nuff to make a dog laff."—Tid-Bits.

Lincoln Stories.

A public man, with the reputation of telling good humorous stories, is made to father all sorts of yarns, good, bad and indifferent. That was President Lincoln's lot. He was father to so many poor stories, that many people doubted if he was really the author of the good ones attributed to him. Among these doubters was General Logan, and his skepticism continued, until he came into personal contact with the genial humorist.

General Grant sent Logan from the Western Department to Washington, with dispatches to be delivered to the President in person. Logan reached the capital late on Saturday night, and early on Sunday morning called at the White House.

The servant said it was against the rules for any one to see the President on Sunday.

"Go upstairs and tell Mr. Lincoln that Logan is here with dispatches from General Grant;" was the answer which sent the servant off. He soon came back to lead General Logan up to the President's private office.

Mr. Lincoln was sitting in a chair, with one foot on a table and his head thrown back, while a barber was shaving him.

"Sit down, and I'll talk to you in a few minutes," said the President.

The barber, having finished shaving, began rubbing the President's head, and General Logan was looking at the President's feet, which were badly swollen. Mr. Lincoln, seeing the look, said:

"Yes, they are pretty bad. They remind me of a man in Sangamon County, who made a bad horse trade. The animal was in an awful condition, but the farmer managed to get him home.

"One of his neighbors met him, two weeks after, and asked how the new horse was getting on.

"'Oh, first-rate,' said the farmer; 'he's putting on flesh fast. He's fat now up to his knees.' That's my fix."

"Since then," said General Logan, in telling the anecdote, "I have accepted as authentic all Lincoln stories."

A Relation of Ammonia.

The discovery of a new gas is a rare and important event to chemists. Such a discovery has been announced in Germany by Dr. Theodor Curtius, who has succeeded in preparing the long-sought hydride of nitrogen, amidogen, diamide or hydrazine, as it is variously called. This remarkable body, which has hitherto baffled all attempts at isolation, is now shown to be a gas, perfectly stable up to a very high temperature, of a peculiar odor, differing from that of ammonia, exceedingly soluble in water, and of basic properties. In composition it is nearly identical with ammonia, both being compounds of nitrogen and hydrogen.

Blew Through His Whiskers.

In reading "Allan Quatermain" I noticed something that appears to have been overlooked by critics in general. In the story it states that as the party drifted down the subterranean passage, and came nearer the "Rose of fire," the air became hotter and hotter, till it finally overcame them, charred the boat, and singed the feathers of the swan they had killed. If it was hot enough to singe swan feathers, under what miraculous power was Good's whiskers spared—not to mention the temper being taken out of Umslopogaas's axe?—New York World.

A Woman's Sweet Will.

She is prematurely deprived of her charms of face and form, and made unattractive by the wasting effects of ailments and irregularities peculiar to her sex. To check this drain upon not only her strength and health, but upon her amiable qualities as well, is her first duty. This is safely and speedily accomplished by a course of self-treatment with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, a

Misery After Eating

Is avoided by dyspeptics who are guided by the recorded experience of thousands, begin and systematically pursue a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Persist, use in the case of this pure and agreeable stomachic, is the sole and agreeable condition of the entire removal of the obstinate forms of dyspepsia, no less than a temporary fit of indigestion. In connection with the use of this specific, it is desirable to avoid articles of food which individual experience has shown to be difficult of digestion, by the stomach sought to be benefited. Each dyspeptic's past observation of his digestive capacity should enable him to be his own guide and monitor in this particular, not trusting to any set of dietetic rules too general to be suited to particular cases. Biliousness and constipation, heartburn, wind upon the stomach, sour eructations, headache and mental despondency, are among the concomitants of dyspepsia, and we put it to flight by the bitters.

Good as Wheat.

"Did you see Time & Tide about that account?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you tell them we couldn't and wouldn't wait a day longer about it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who did you see and what did they say?"

"Oh, it's all right, it's all right. I saw Mr. Time."

"Did he say he would pay it?"

"Yes, sir; he didn't question the bill at all; he was perfectly satisfied, and said right away that they would pay it."

"H'm; I was afraid they'd kick like steers. When will he pay, did he say?"

Collector looks through his memorandum book carefully:

"I've got it down here somewhere; oh, yes, here it is; when he 'gets a mighty good ready.'"—Burdette.

A Very Old Bachelor.

The Buda-Pesth Tagblatt furnishes an account of a Hungarian of the name of Francis Nagy, who is said to be over 130 years of age, and still enjoys comparatively good health and the full use of his mental faculties. He lived a shepherd's life until he joined the army in his 20th year, and in 1813 fought at the battle of Leipsic. He was taken prisoner by the French, but succeeded in regaining Hungary in 1815. He now lives on the charity of the inhabitants of his native place, Csotnya, in the county of Somogy. Nagy does not remember ever to have suffered a day's illness. In his 68th year he gave up smoking for economical reasons. His hair and beard are yellowish white and singularly thick, and he still retains a few of his lower teeth. He eats but once a day and lives very temperately. He was never married.

HARVEST EXCURSIONS.

The Corn Palace at Sioux City.

ARE YOU GOING WEST?

This question applies to everybody. Some will say yes, while others will answer, "Not if we know ourselves; no West in ours." Well, perhaps not. But time works wonders, and no one knows what a day may bring forth; therefore those who have no idea of going West just at present should keep posted a little, for there is no telling how soon the "Western fever" may strike them, and if it does their departure will be as sudden as that of a bank cashier who has got on the wrong side of the wheat market. So we say keep posted just a little, and particularly as to the best and safest road over which to make a Western trip.

From Chicago there are numerous well-equipped railways that branch out to nearly every section of the great West, none of which are more prominent than the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul. For years this road has been noted for its enterprise in improving its train service and its efforts to provide comfort, convenience, and safety for the traveling public. This is a fact which is appreciated by those who are obliged to spend much of their time in a passenger coach or a sleeping-car. It is a pleasure to travel on any division of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, for a more courteous and obliging corps of conductors and subordinates cannot be found than is in charge of the numerous trains of this popular railway system.

Trains are leaving Chicago over this line for different points in the West almost hourly. One of the new and popular trains recently added to its service is that which leaves Chicago every day at 7:30 p. m. and arrives at St. Paul the next morning at 9:30 o'clock, and at Minneapolis only thirty-five minutes later. This train is known as the "business man's favorite," because he can leave Chicago after business hours and arrive in St. Paul the next morning before business begins.

Another very popular train upon this road is the Sioux City short line. Leaving Chicago at noon daily, passengers arrive in Sioux City shortly after 9 o'clock the next morning, making close connections with trains for Northern and Southern Dakota. Elegant dining cars are run upon this train, upon which dinner, supper, and breakfast are served in a style that traveling men say is ahead of any other road.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway offers superior advantages to all who contemplate a Western trip. Its various lines traverse Northern Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, and Dakota to a greater extent than any other road. Its equipment is first-class in every respect, and travelers who patronize it speak in the highest terms of it.

Parties who propose to attend the great "Corn Palace" festivities, which are to be held at Sioux City, Iowa, from October 3 to October 8, inclusive, should not fail to buy their tickets over the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul.

The next Harvest Excursion over this favorite road will leave Chicago October 11. Tickets for this excursion will be sold at half rates to points in Minnesota, Dakota, and Northern Iowa. For further particulars address A. V. H. Carpenter, General Passenger Agent, Milwaukee, Wis., or F. A. Miller, Assistant General Passenger Agent, 63 Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

The John P. Lovell Arms Co.

It is of the utmost importance that parties who are in want of a good Gun, Rifle or Revolver, or, in fact, anything in the sporting goods line, should patronize a reliable dealer in these goods, whose reputation for honestly dealing with their patrons is established.

Such is the reputation that has been enjoyed by the John P. Lovell Arms Co., of Boston, Mass., for the last forty-seven years. The business of this well-known house was established in 1840, by Mr. John P. Lovell, who is now the honored President of the company. Their reputation for honest dealing with their patrons is not limited to this country alone, but is world-wide, as they have customers in every portion of the habitable globe. It is a pleasure to purchase goods from this well-known firm, for the purchaser is assured that when he receives his goods that they will be found to be exactly as represented in their extensive catalogues, which they issue for the convenience of customers who reside at a distance, and who cannot pay them a visit to make a personal selection. The John P. Lovell Arms Co. are extensive manufacturers of Guns, Revolvers, Roller Skates, Police Goods, Air Rifles, etc., etc., which explains why their prices are so much lower than those of their competitors, who have to depend on other manufacturers for their goods. It is an interesting sight to visit the extensive warerooms of this firm, where are stored thousands of the most celebrated makes of Shot Guns, Rifles, etc., etc. The building itself is an imposing structure, situated in the most historic part of old Boston, and facing Faneuil Hall and the statue of Samuel Adams.

Special attention is called to an advertisement now in our columns of a Colt Repeating Rifle, which the Lovell Arms Company are offering for $11.00. This, as they state, is the greatest bargain we have ever seen in this line. Being manufactured by the celebrated Colt Revolver concern of Hartford, Conn., is a sufficient guarantee that the Rifle is exactly what is claimed for it.

No one who is interested in sporting goods of any description should fail to secure a copy of the catalogue issued by this firm. It consists of 100 pages, and is mailed free of charge to any address on receipt of 6 cents in stamps. It is full of important information of interest to the sportsman.

Harvest Excursion.

The Great Rock Island Route (C., R. I. & P. Ry.) will sell, Oct. 11th, Harvest Excursion tickets at one fare for the round trip, to prin-

A Bloody Affray

Is often the result of "bad blood" in a family or community, but is where a bad blood more destructive of happiness and health than in the human system. When the blood current is foul and sluggish with impurities, and is slowly carrying its poisons to every part of the body, the road to health, and life even, is imminent. Early symptoms are dull and drowsy feelings, severe headaches, coated tongue, poor appetite, indigestion and general lassitude. Delay in treatment may entail the most serious consequences. Don't let disease get a strong hold on your constitution, but treat yourself by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and be restored to the blessings of health. All druggists.

THE tobogganists are naturally interested in the question of coast defenses.

Jenks' Dream.

Jenks had a queer dream the other night. He thought he saw a prize fighters' ring, and in the middle of it stood a doughty little champion who met and deliberately knocked over, one by one, a score or more of burly looking fellows, as they advanced to the attack. Giants as they were in size, the valiant pigmy proved more than a match for them. It was all so funny that Jenks woke up laughing. He accounts for the dream by the fact that he had just come to the conclusion, after trying nearly every big, drastic pill on the market, that Pierce's tiny Purgative Pellets easily "knock out" and beat all the rest hollow!

"SHE is a woman, therefore may be wooed," as Solomon remarked when he first saw that noted queen.—Texas Siftings.

If Sufferers from Consumption,

Scrofula, Bronchitis, and General Debility will try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and permanent benefit. The Medical Profession universally declare it a remedy of the greatest value and very palatable. Read: "I have used Scott's Emulsion in several cases of Scrofula and Debility in Children. Results most gratifying. My little patients take it with pleasure."—W. A. HULBERT, M.D., Salisbury, Ill.

WHEN a woman wishes to make soft soap she never gets mad because her neighbor gives her the lye.—Texas Siftings.

25c. buys a pair of Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners, which makes a boot or shoe last twice as long.

IF a cough disturbs your sleep, take Piso's Cure for Consumption and rest well.

Tired All Over

Is the expression a lady used in describing her condition before using Hood's Sarsaparilla. This preparation is wonderfully adapted for weakened or low state of the system. It quickly tones the whole body, gives purity and vitality to the blood, and clears and freshens the mind. Take it now if you feel "tired all over."

"Feeling languid and dizzy, having no appetite and no ambition to work, I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, with the best results. As a health invigorator and tonic for general debility I think it superior to anything else." A. A. RIKER, Albany Street, Utica, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

GOLD is worth $500 per pound. Pettit's Eye Salve is worth $1,000, but is sold at 25 cents a box by dealers.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PENSIONS Send for Pension Laws to U. S. Claim Agents FITZGERALD & POWELL, Indianapolis, Ind.

$250 A MONTH. Agents wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $1.50, FREE. Lines not under the horse's feet. Write Brewster Safety Rein Holder Co., Holly, Mich.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PATENTS R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D.C. Instructions and opinions as to patentability FREE. 17 years' experience.

FREE By return mail. Full Description Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. MOODY & CO., Cincinnati, O.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Dr. J. Stephens, Lebanon, Ohio.

ELY'S CREAM BALM CATARRH HAY-FEVER
I found it a specific for Hay Fever. For ten years I have been a great sufferer from August 9th till frost. Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventive I have ever found. Hay Fever sufferers should know of its efficacy.—Frank B. Ainsworth, Publisher, Indianapolis, Ind.
Apply Balm into each nostril.

$3.00 PANTS. $3.00 SHOES.
HANDSOME, STYLISH PANTS made to order in first-class style. Perfect Fit guaranteed or money refunded. For samples of cloth and 4 foot tape measure (worth 10c.) send 3 2c. stamps. Circulars Free. Established in 1877.
OUR FULL SEAMLESS SHOES beat the world. Made in sizes and styles to please. Perfect Fit guaranteed. We refer to any Bank, Express Co., or leading business house in this city.
THE HUNTER M'F'G CO. CINCINNATI, O.

KIDDER'S DIGESTYLIN
A SURE CURE FOR INDIGESTION and DYSPEPSIA.
Over 5,000 Physicians have sent us their approval of DIGESTYLIN, saying that it is the best preparation for Indigestion that they have ever used.
We have never heard of a case of Dyspepsia where DIGESTYLIN was taken that was not cured.
FOR CHOLERA INFANTUM.
IT WILL CURE THE MOST AGGRAVATED CASES.
IT WILL STOP VOMITING IN PREGNANCY.
IT WILL RELIEVE CONSTIPATION.
For Summer Complaints and Chronic Diarrhea, which are the direct results of imperfect digestion, DIGESTYLIN will effect an immediate cure.
Take DIGESTYLIN for all pains and disorders of the stomach; they all come from indigestion. Ask your druggist for DIGESTYLIN (price $1 per large bottle). If he does not have it, send one dollar to us and we will send a bottle to you, express prepaid. Don't hesitate to send your money. Our house is reliable. Established twenty-five years.
WM. F. KIDDER & CO., Manufacturing Chemists, 83 John St., N. Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

SURE CURE DISCOVERED FOR CATARRH
Laudenbach's German Catarrh Remedy.
Price $1. Samples free at Druggists. Mailed for 10c. THOUSANDS CURED since the discovery of this method of treatment. Every mail brings letters from grateful persons cured. E. S. LAUDENBACH & CO., Newark, N. J., U.S.A.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

DR. BAIRD'S GRANULES
Cure Dyspepsia, Malaria, Piles, Heart Disease, Impure Blood, Kidney Disease, Torpid Liver, Habitual Constipation, etc. A new principle, a new remedy. Purely Vegetable. A full size box sent FREE, postage prepaid, to any invalid, or their friends sending their address at once. Give account of case, symptoms, etc. Address DR. BAIRD, 157 W. 23d St., N. Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. The Original LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS. ALWAYS ASK FOR DR. PIERCE'S PELLETS, OR LITTLE SUGAR-COATED PILLS.

Being entirely vegetable, they operate without disturbance to the system, diet, or occupation. Put up in glass vials, hermetically sealed. Always fresh and reliable. As a laxative, alterative, or purgative, these little Pellets give the most perfect satisfaction.

SICK HEADACHE,

Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the stomach and bowels, are promptly relieved and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. In explanation of the remedial power of these Pellets over so great a variety of diseases, it may truthfully be said that their action upon the system is universal, not a gland or tissue escaping their sanative influence. Sold by druggists, 25 cents a vial. Manufactured at the Chemical Laboratory of WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

$500 REWARD

is offered by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for a case of Chronic Nasal Catarrh which they cannot cure.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH. Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery, and inflamed; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a nasal twang; the breath is offensive; smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. Only a few of the above-named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, or less understood by physicians.

By its mild, soothing, and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases of Catarrh, "cold in the head," Coryza, and Catarrhal Headache. Sold by druggists everywhere; 50 cents.

"Untold Agony from Catarrh."

Prof. W. HAUSNER, the famous mesmerist, of Ithaca, N. Y., writes: "Some ten years ago I suffered untold agony from chronic nasal catarrh. My family physician gave me up as incurable, and said I must die. My case was such a bad one, that every day, towards sunset, my voice would become so hoarse I could barely speak above a whisper. In the morning my coughing and clearing of my throat would almost strangle me. By the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, in three months, I was a well man, and the cure has been permanent."

"Constantly Hawking and Spitting."

THOMAS J. RUSHING, Esq., 2902 Pine Street, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I was a great sufferer from catarrh for three years. At times I could hardly breathe, and was constantly hawking and spitting, and for the last eight months could not breathe through the nostrils. I thought nothing could be done for me. Luckily, I was advised to try Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and I am now a well man. I believe it to be the only sure remedy for catarrh now manufactured, and one has only to give it a fair trial to experience astounding results and a permanent cure."

Three Bottles Cure Catarrh.

ELI ROBBINS, Runyan P. O., Columbia Co., Pa., says: "My daughter had catarrh when she was five years old, very badly. I saw Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy advertised, and procured a bottle for her, and soon saw that it helped her; a third bottle effected a permanent cure. She is now eighteen years old and sound and hearty."

OPIUM Habit Cured satisfactory before any pay. Prof. J. M. HARTON, 25th Ward, Cincinnati, O.

PENSIONS An increase may be due. Address MILO B. STEVENS & CO., Metropolitan Blk, Chicago, Ill.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

HOME STUDY. Bookkeeping, Business Forms, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Shorthand, etc., thoroughly taught by mail. Circulars free. BRYANT'S BUSINESS COLLEGE, Buffalo, N.Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

One Agent (Merchant only) wanted in every town for TANSILL'S PUNCH 5¢

It is the unanimous opinion of my customers that your "Tansill's Punch" is the best 5c cigar they have ever smoked. Many claim that it is as good as the majority of those at 10c.
JOHN A. DAHM, Druggist, Milwaukee, Wis.
Address R. W. TANSILL & CO., Chicago.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

Sioux City, Iowa

Parties having good clean stock of MERCHANDISE, and who desire to go out of business, can sell or exchange their stock for cash and good Western Land, improved or unimproved, in Iowa, Nebraska, and Dakota. We also have for sale desirable Real Estate in this growing city. Address CLARK BROS., Real Estate and Business Brokers, [illegible] Sioux City, Ia.

MARVELOUS MEMORY DISCOVERY.
Wholly unlike artificial systems.
Any book learned in one reading.
Recommended by Mark Twain, Richard Proctor the Scientist, Hons. W. W. Astor, Judah P. Benjamin, Dr. Minor, etc. Class of 100 Columbia law students, two classes of 200 each at Yale, 400 University of Penn., 400 at Wellesley College, etc. Prospectus post free.
PROF. LOISETTE, 237 Fifth Ave., New York.

WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN
Cures Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Catarrh, Croup, Sore Throat, RHEUMATISM, Lame Back, Stiff Joints, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Wounds, Old Sores and All Aches and Pains.
The many testimonials received by us more than prove all we claim for this valuable remedy. It not only relieves the most severe pains, but It Cures You. That's the Idea!
Sold by Druggists. 50 cts. Song Book mailed free. Address WIZARD OIL COMPANY CHICAGO.

KIDDER'S PASTILLES. Sure relief ASTHMA. Price 35 cts. by mail. Stowell & Co., Charlestown, Mass.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

C. N. U. No. 40—87

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

This represents a healthy life. Throughout its various scenes.

Just such a life as they enjoy Who use the Smith's Bile Beans.

Smith's BILE BEANS purify the blood, by acting directly and promptly on the Liver, Skin and Kidneys. They consist of a vegetable combination that has no equal in medical science. They cure Constipation, Malaria, and Dyspepsia, and are a safeguard against all forms of fevers, chills and fever, gall stones, and Bright's disease. Send 4 cents postage for a sample package and test the TRUTH of what we say. Price, 25 cents per bottle, mailed to any address, postpaid. DOSE ONE BEAN. Sold by druggists. J. F. SMITH & CO., PROPRIETORS, ST. LOUIS, MO.

The original Photograph, panel size, of this picture sent on receipt of 10c. in stamps. Address, BILE BEANS, St. Louis, Mo.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER Is The Best Waterproof Coat

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
LD F PARMELEE Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, OCT. 12, 1887.

Mrs. Grover Cleveland and her husband are having a high old time.

A full vote and a fair count in every State will insure the election of a Republican President in 1888.

James Fisher a veteran of the war, aged 59, who recently applied for admission to the Dayton Soldiers' Home, was discovered to be a woman. In appearance she is short and heavy set, with a round, smooth face and rather effeminate voice. She was a brave soldier, and the long and successful concealment of her sex is one of the most remarkable cases of the kind on record.

The President careering through the land in a $200,000 train of cars is strongly suggestive of Jefferson tying his nag to a post outside of Washington and footing it into the capital to the ceremony of his inauguration. Gov. Hill often visits fairs in an ordinary car, and refuses to be carried from the station to the hotel in a carriage. Grover and David apply their Jeffersonian principles differently.—New York Tribune.

The Tennessee prohibitionists claim to be gratified at their show of strength in the recent election and say they will now begin the fight in earnest. They will not put up a candidate for Governor in the next campaign, but make special efforts to capture the Legislature or at least secure enough votes to give them the balance of power and enable them to dictate legislation on the liquor question.

The "Greenback Labor Party" of New York held its State Convention at Albany on the 4th inst., and managed to muster a total of twelve delegates. Reports of the meeting gravely state that the proceedings were unanimous. The ticket nominated is headed by Rev. Thomas K. Beecher. This is the seventh State ticket in the field, and there are several back counties yet to be heard from. It is quite likely that politics in New York State will be a little mixed, this fall.

Oregon papers are enthusiastic in endorsing Senator Stanford's suggestion that the forests in the several States be given to the States. Their main argument is that the Government does not need the revenue derived from the sale of timber lands and that the surplus in the Treasury can be reduced without altering the fiscal policy of the Government, and that, moreover, the States of the East have no equitable right to the timber of Oregon and other Western States.

For fifteen years California fruit growers have devoted a great deal of attention to the cultivation of lemons in the belief that in time they could drive the product of Italy out of the American market. Experience, however, has demonstrated that there is little likelihood of their succeeding, as the California fruit is of such poor quality that it only sells for about fifty per cent. of the price obtained for the Italian lemon. Lemon groves are at a discount and the growers discouraged. The Eden of America, about which so much has been said, is evidently not quite equal to the original garden.

The report of the Commissioner of Education for the fiscal year has just been completed. The report shows that the condition and progress hitherto characteristic of American education have been in general maintained during the year. Occasional instances of retrogression and reaction have been more than balanced by healthy growths and judicious improvements. A brief account is given of the measures taken in the interest of education in Alaska. There are fifteen Government schools in operation in that Territory. To meet the urgent needs of the people the Commissioner recommends the establishment of schools at twenty-three other points in the Territory. An appropriation of $50,000 is also asked for the purpose.

The result of the Tennessee vote on the Prohibition amendment to the Constitution is not yet announced in detail, but the closest calculation seems to indicate the casting of a heavier vote against the amendment than had been anticipated. It was known that the Negro vote was strongly opposed to the measure, but it looks now as though the progress which the Prohibitionists thought they had made in convincing the white voters was much below their estimates. The large towns outside of East Tennessee went heavily against the amendment. In East Tennessee it obtained a considerable majority. The campaign was exceedingly energetic, and the Prohibitionists were materially helped by the ladies, who turned out in force on election day and supplied coffee and sandwiches to the voters.

Northern Michigan News.

The Manton schools are closed on account of diphtheria.

The Lake View house, Elk Rapids, will be opened to the public, this week.

O. A. Lampman of Kalkaska, was severely burned by an explosion of Babbit metal.

The baggage master at Petoskey has checked 16,000 pieces of baggage since June 1st.

The tie business on the inland lakes, has been a losing business to those who were engaged in it.

It takes fair weather to make successful fairs, and that is what Cheboygan county lacked this year.

The wife of Rev. J. J. Maaksted of Suttons Bay, died last week, leaving many friends to mourn her loss.

Petoskey and Harbor Springs contemplate making a boulevard around the bay between the two villages.

Al. Sudman of Boyne Falls, killed an otter in the pond measuring five feet, another still larger has been seen several times.

Two girls were rowing on Bear Lake when a big bear swam toward them. The girls rowed faster than bruin could swim, and so got away.

Miss May L. King, a well known Leelanaw county teacher, and a frequent contributor to northern Michigan papers, is going to California to live.

The Kalkaska business men's association have bought the old McDowell mill and given it to Mr. Haven, who was recently burned out at that place.

E. L. Marshall's toothpick factory at Harbor Springs, turns out several billion picks during the year, and they are scattered over a great extent of territory.

The Cummer Lumber Co., of Cadillac, have 1,000 patent ladders, 600 common ladders and 400 step ladders on hand, and are waiting for some one to buy them.

Horace White, who was arrested for brutally assaulting Mrs. Miller last July on the outskirts of Cheboygan, was found guilty and sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary.

There are 200 Chautauqua circles in Michigan, with over 3,500 members and 500 graduates. Michigan is the only state in the union which has a state Chautauqua society.

The Duluth South Shore and Atlantic R. R. are first to reach the "Soo," their line from there to the Soo Junction being completed and trains will soon be running.

The Cheboygan village council are having all the ordinances of that village printed and bound into a 100 page book, so that the citizens of that village can know what they are.

Mancelona Herald: Wm. C. Freeman, who has large wooden ware factories in Missouri and Louisiana, intends putting one up at this place, and is here looking for a location for the same.

The Fourth Annual Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of the eleventh District, will be held in Kalkaska, commencing Tuesday evening, October 18, closing Thursday evening.

Since the Cheboygan county farmers began digging their potatoes, they find the potato crop is much better than they anticipated. We have seen some magnificent specimens of murphies that have been harvested.—Tribune.

Since the removal of M. F. Quaintance, the agency of the G. R. & I. station at Petoskey has not been announced. Del. Phelps, an old employe of the company at that place, deserves the appointment and ought to get it.

J. M. Rice has resigned his position as editor of the News & Express, and intends removing with his family to Los Angeles, Cal. We understand Mr. Chapin will buy out the syndicate, now owners of the institution.—Cadillac Democrat.

Petoskey Democrat: We understand that Mr. Ralph Connable, will next season erect a three-story brick block on the site of the present post-office building. We hope this report may prove true, as it would be a beautiful ornament to that corner of the block.

Tuesday evening of last week the excursion train that went to Petoskey ran into a horse and wagon with two men in, about a mile north of Mancelona. The horse and one of the men, Warner by name, were killed, and the wagon smashed to splinters. The men were drunk and had turned their horse up the railroad track, ran into a cattle guard and met their fate.

St. Ignace Republican: It has been decided at last by the management of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railroad, that next week work will commence on the extensive addition to the merchandise pier and the mammoth ship dock for the new transfer steamer now being built by the Detroit dry dock company, and the contract calls for the completion of the same by not later than December.

The first marriage license issued in Emmet county was to Louis Fasquelle and Etta Rowan. Clerk Hathaway refused the fee.

Eagle: Grand Traverse county did pretty well at the Western Michigan Fair. Among those who took premiums we notice that Mr. John McDonald, of East Bay, was awarded $8 for the best acre of potatoes, $5 for best half bushel of winter wheat, $1 for spring wheat, $3 for white oats, and $4 for best acre of white oats. He also took four first and two second premiums on fruit. Mrs. Golden of Peninsula, took altogether 28 premiums, some on fruit, some on canned goods and some on fancy work.

Emma, the young wife of Chris. B. Kehl of Northport, died on Thursday last and was buried on Sunday. Mrs. Kehl was married a little less than two years ago. She was the sister of Mrs. Ben Campbell of this place, and daughter of the late Henry Beers, and had a large circle of friends in Traverse City, where she had lived several years prior to her marriage. Her obsequies were largely attended, the Rev. C. D. Bannister, assisted by the Rev. S. Steele, officiating. Mr. Kehl has the sympathy of the entire community in his sad bereavement.

Conductor Frank Tomlinson, formerly of the Traverse City branch, has been given Mr. Heath's place as conductor of the Harbor Springs branch, and Harry Chamberlin who has temporarily served as conductor with excellent satisfaction to the public and the company resumes his position as brakeman. Harry is one of those sensible fellows whose head is not swelled by a little authority and consequently he does not need to stuff paper under the lining of the hat he wore as conductor in order to make it fit his head now.

Petoskey Independent: Our fellow citizen, A. P. Bowman, is to be married next Wednesday to Miss Minnie Brezee, of Morenci. The ceremony will take place at the residence of the bride's parents, and after the wedding trip the happy couple will return to the pleasant home which Mr. Bowman has provided in Petoskey. The lady, who is a sister of the talented J. Lloyd Brezee, is a charming and popular lady, and we congratulate Mr. Bowman on his good fortune.——Tuesday morning some Indians found a boat washed up on the beach at Cross Village just below D. H. Shurtleff's residence and notified Mr. Shurtleff. He found a square stern, two masted boat, painted a lead color. The sails were blown away. In the boat were provisions of different kinds and cooking utensils, and a revolver was found in the bow. A young spaniel dog was in the boat "whence all but he had fled," and he barked vigorously at all who approached. There was no name on the boat, and nothing to show where she was from. It is thought that the occupants of the boat were lost in Monday's gale, unless they were picked up by some passing vessel.——County Clerk Hathaway met an enormous black bear in the road near Page a few days ago, and mounting a stump proceeded to give bruin an eloquent talk on the impropriety of obstructing the highway, and swung his hat with such vigor to attract the attention of a son-with-a-gun that he thrust his fist through his new derby. The bear couldn't stand the oratory and left.

East Jordan Enterprise: The Pine Lake mills will shut down this week.——John Chamberlin and family arrived safely in Lansing, where they will stay the winter——The shingle mill near the bridge has shut down for awhile on account of the lack of timber.——French and Sutton have paid out for bark during the past season between thirteen and fourteen thousand dollars.——E. A. Burdick will harvest about 2,000 bushels of good potatoes, which at present prices will probably net him over $1,000. Potatoes is potatoes this year.——D. C. Loveday having resigned the telephone office, a petition is being circulated to appoint Harry Branch to the vacancy, and also another petition for the appointment of Dr. F. C. Warne. Both are hustlers and both good men.——Now is the time to take a romantic boat ride. The Jordan is free from logs for six miles.——G. B. Martin brought with him from the south a full-blooded English mastiff which is only six months old, and for which he paid $75.——Stockman & Iddings, of Charlevoix, were the only hardware exhibitors at the Fair, and the spirit of enterprise displayed by them is worthy of much commendation. Their show of stoves was especially noticeable.——At the village election last Saturday, to determine whether the town should be bonded for the purchase of a fire engine, little interest was manifested. Only 52 ballots were cast, of which 6 were in favor and 46 against.——The report that the North Star had unshipped her wheel and run ashore on Saturday, coming from Charlevoix, had as much foundation as the one in Charlevoix the other day which said she had been burned while at the dock in East Jordan.

Dress Goods!

A good assortment of Plain and and novelty Dress Goods.

DRESS TRIMMINGS IN PLUSHES, VELVETS, CORDS, SETS, AND BRAIDS. Also Buttons.

Our stock of Ladies Jackets and Cloaks is of the best make, with prices to suit the times. It will be to your advantage to call and see our Ladies and Gents underwear before purchasing.
REMEMBER: A full line of staple Dry Goods in stock.

Cor. Bridge & Main sts.

B. SEE.

Charlevoix Savings Bank.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the Stockholders of said Bank will be held on Saturday, the [illegible] day of October next at [illegible] o'clock p. m., at their banking office, in the village of Charlevoix, county of Charlevoix, state of Michigan, for the purpose of electing seven Directors for said Bank and the transaction of such business as may be [illegible] to be transacted at the regular annual meeting of said Stockholders.

Dated Charlevoix, Mich., Sept. 27th, 1887.
JOHN NICHOLLS, Vice Prest.

Dissolution Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the copartnership heretofore existing between George Burns and Wm. Scroggie, under the firm name of Burns & Scroggie, of Charlevoix, Mich., is this day dissolved by mutual consent. Wm. Scroggie and Dean Burns are authorized to collect all debts due said firm, and will also pay all the liabilities of said firm. Wm. Stevens and Nassau Burns succeed Mr. Scroggie, and the business will be continued at the old stand under the firm name of Burns, Stevens & Co. All accounts due the old firm can be paid at the office of [illegible].
Dated at Charlevoix, this [illegible] October, 1887.
GEORGE BURNS.
WILLIAM SCROGGIE.

MICHIGAN STATE LAND OFFICE,
Lansing, Sept. 24th, 1887.

Notice is hereby given, that the following described Swamp Land, situated in Charlevoix county, heretofore licensed as Homesteads, which land has reverted to the State, will be Restored to market at this office on the 10th day of November, A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock a. m., and will be subject to sale according to the form prescribed by law.
ROSCOE D. DIX, Commissioner.

Description.	Section.	Town	Range.
N E ¼ of S E ¼	7	31 N	7 W

MICHIGAN STATE LAND OFFICE,
Lansing, Sept. 24, 1887.

Notice is hereby given, that the following described Primary School and Agricultural College land, situate in Charlevoix county, forfeited for non-payment of interest, will be offered for sale at public auction at this office on the 10th day of November, A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock a. m., unless previously redeemed according to law.
R. D. DIX, Commissioner.

PRIMARY SCHOOL LAND.

No. of Cert.	Description.	Sec.	Town	Range
20540	SW¼ of SE¼	16	31 N	7 W

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE LAND.

No. of Cert.	Description.	Sec.	Town	Range
1508	N½ of NW¼	31	32 N	4 W
1788	N½ of S E ¼	6	32 N	7 W
2616	SW¼ of SW¼	32	32 N	4 W
2045	SW¼ of NW¼	32	32 N	4 W
2145	s½ of sw¼ of sw¼	32	32 N	4 W
2016	s½ of sw¼ of sw¼	32	32 N	4 W

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. Probate Court for said County. At a session of the Probate Court for said County, held at the Probate Office, in the village of Boyne City, on Monday, the 3d day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, Jas. A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of James Otis, deceased. A. Bolles, Administrator of said estate, comes into Court and represents that he is now prepared to render his account as such Administrator. Thereupon it is ordered that Monday, the 7th day of November next, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for examining and allowing such account, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office in the Village of Boyne City, in said county, and show cause, if any there be, why the said account should not be allowed. And it is Further Ordered, that said Administrator give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said account, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.
(A true copy.)
JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Probate Notice.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix, holden at the Probate Office in the Village of Boyne City, on Monday, the 7th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty seven. Present, James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the Estate of Isabella Wilson, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John H. Wilson, praying that an administrator [illegible] for said estate. Thereupon it is Ordered, that Monday, the 7th day of November, at one o'clock in the afternoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further Ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County of Charlevoix, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.
(A true copy.)
JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the money secured by a certain mortgage, dated the 2d day of August, 1883, executed by Levi House, and Emily House, his wife, of the Township of Hayes, county of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, to Edwin M. Clark, of Charlevoix, Michigan. Said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for said county of Charlevoix, in Liber Eight (8) of Mortgages, on page one hundred and ninety-one, (191) on the 25th day of August, 1883, and said mortgage was, on the 25th day of October, 1883, duly assigned by said Edwin M. Clark to Martha A. Ayers, of Plattsburg, Clinton county, New York: said assignment was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said county, on the 25th day of October, 1883, in Liber ten (10) of Mortgages, on page four hundred and eighty-five. (485) and said mortgage is now due and owned by the said Martha A. Ayers. And, whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said Mortgage at the time of this notice, is the sum of Two Hundred and Nineteen Dollars and sixty two cents, ($219.62) of principal and interest, and no proceedings having been instituted at law or in equity, to recover the debt now remaining due, or any part thereof: Now therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises in said mortgage described, as all of those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the Township of Hayes, in the county of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Lot three, (3) and the south-west quarter of the north-east quarter, of Section Nineteen, (19) in Township Thirty-four, (34) North, of Range Seven (7) West, containing seventy (70) acres, more or less, according to the United States survey, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with the costs of this foreclosure, and the stipulated costs therein mentioned, will be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the Village of Boyne City, (in said county of Charlevoix, that being the place where the Circuit Court is held for said county) on [illegible] o'clock in the afternoon, on the 15th day of November, 1887.
Dated, August 17th, 1887.
MARTHA A. AYERS, Assignee.
J. M. CLARK, Attorney for Assignee.

The Kalamazoo "DAILY TELEGRAPH."
Contains the Associated Press Dispatches
Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS
STANDARD TIME.

Charlevoix and East Jordan.
STR. NORTH STAR, ... CAPT. MEL THOMPSON
Leaving Charlevoix at 6:30 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. and returning leave East Jordan for Charlevoix at 9:30 a. m. and 4 p. m., touching at intermediate points both ways.

Charlevoix and Boyne City.
STR. JOSEPH GORDON, ... CAPT. LEWIS GLASS
Leave Charlevoix at 9:30 a. m. and 1 p. m., and Boyne City at 10:30 a. m., 4 p. m., touching at way ports.

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan.
STR. THOS. FRIANT, ... CAPT. R. VANDENBURG.
MORNING—Leave Harbor Springs, 7:00; Petoskey, 8:00; Charlevoix, 9:30, arrive, East Jordan 11:30.
AFTERNOON—Leave East Jordan 1:30; Charlevoix, 3:00; Petoskey, 5:30; arrive, Harbor Springs, 6:00.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE.
PROP. LAWRENCE .... Capt. Geo. Tabor.
Going North, Chicago, Fridays 8 p. m.; Charlevoix, Sundays 4 p. m.; Cheboygan, Mondays 6 a. m.
Going South, Cheboygan, Mondays 4 p. m.; Charlevoix, Tuesdays 8 a. m.; Milwaukee, Wednesdays 4 p. m.; Chicago, Thursdays 12 m.
Emrey Bros., agents, Charlevoix.

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS.
CITY OF GRAND RAPIDS, ... Capt. O. E. Wilber.
Going North, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays: Leave Traverse City 7 a. m., Northport 9:40, Charlevoix 11:20; Petoskey 1:30 p. m.; Harbor Springs 2; Cross Village 4:30, Mackinac Island 7:45, arriving at St. Ignace 8:30.
Going South, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Leave St. Ignace 6 a. m.; Mackinac Island 7; Cross Village 10:15; Harbor Springs 12:45 p. m.; Petoskey 1:15; Charlevoix 2:45, Northport 5:15 p. m., arriving at Traverse City at 7:45 p. m.
J. L. Hurd & Co., Agents, Charlevoix.

Probate Notice.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for said county, held at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, on the 6th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the Matter of the Estate of Hugh Miller, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John C. Miller, praying that a certain instrument now on file in this Court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, may be admitted to probate, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Alida Stover and Robert Miller, the executors named in said will, or some other suitable persons. Thereupon it is ordered that Thursday, the 13th day of October next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.
(A true copy.)
JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Bank of
Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security
Is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its capital and conservative management.

Its Officers
Never Speculate. Their business creed is: That to speculate with other men's money, is folly, that to do so with the money of others, is criminal.

Security in Banking
Is the question of first importance to both Bankers and Depositors; and, believing that it furnishes no unusual guarantees, therefore,

This Bank Invites
People generally to intrust their money to its keeping. Just liberally will mark its dealings.

This Bank Will
Borrow Investment money when desired, paying as large interest thereon as shall be compatible with safe use of the money.

Parties Seeking
Productive employment for money, and desiring to escape the expense and trouble of the management of private investments, will find attractive security in this Bank's

Investment Notes,
Now earning Five per cent. yearly interest. These notes afford investors much more perfect security than Savings Bank deposits.

We Solicit Your Patronage.

WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK
DETROIT, - - MICH.
$500,000 TO INVEST IN BONDS
Issued by cities, counties, towns and school districts of Michigan. Officers of these municipalities about to issue Bonds will find it to their advantage to apply to this Bank. Blank Bonds and Blanks for proceedings supplied without charge. All communications and inquiries will have prompt attention.
May 87. S. D. ELWOOD, Treasurer.

For Sale.

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix.

Land for Sale.

I have 5 acres just east of the cemetery, one mile from town, nearly all cleared, which I will sell cheap for cash, or approved paper. Address
JAMES METCALF, Charlevoix.

Land for Sale.

I offer for sale the south half of the southeast quarter of section seventeen, (17) in Township Thirty three (33) North, of Range Eight (8) West, known as the "Welsh place" in Station. Apply to
THOMAS WEST,
1266 157 Lafayette St., Grand Rapids.

CROSS & SONS.,
Buy and Sell all kinds of
Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.
Charlevoix, - Mich.

CHARLEVOIX
Savings Bank.
Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.
Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres., F. A. Smith, Cashier.
DIRECTORS:
Henry Bennett, O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls, A. Buttars,
A. R. Upright, A. Fox,
F. A. Smith.
CAPITAL, ... $25,000
SURPLUS, ... 2,000
The liabilities of Stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art. 3174, Sec. 6 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. Superior facilities for the transaction of every legitimate branch of banking business extended to our customers on terms as favorable as are consistent with safety.
Drafts drawn direct on the leading commercial cities of the world in large or small amounts. Money to loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest.
We respectfully solicit your patronage.
CORRESPONDENTS:
NATIONAL PARK BANK - - - NEW YORK.
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK - - - CHICAGO.
NAT. CITY BANK - - - GRAND RAPIDS.
DETROIT NAT. BANK - - - DETROIT.

160 Acres in MARION
Township For Sale at a Bargain,
Terms to suit.
MONEY TO LOAN ON
Approved Real Estate Security.
THEODORE R. CHAPIN.
Boyne City.

JOHN CONNOR.
Fashionable
Boot and Shoe MAKER.
Hand Sewed French Calf Gaiters, $5; Men's Kip and Calf boots, $4.50; Half soling, 50 cents. Defy competition.
All Work Guaranteed.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,
ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR,
—ON—
Chalevoix Summer Resorts.
I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.
I employ only first-class workmen, both
Carpenters and Painters.
Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention.
J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller
Offer a
Mammoth Stock
OF
BOOTS, SHOES
and other
FOOT WEAR,
--AT--
LOWER PRICES
Than can be found elsewhere in the County.
We have just secured a
FIRST-CLASS
SHOEMAKER,
And will make Repairing a specialty.
We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.
NOTHING SHODDY.
Fox & Miller.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.
The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter.

RIFENBURG MILLING CO.
Charlevoix, Mich.
Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealer
3 EXTRA GRADES OF
FLOUR
Feed, Corn Meal, Graham
We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL
Litney & Steimel
LIVERY,
And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.
Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the
BEST BOATS!
The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references.
I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the
LEAST MONEY!
All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.
LEAVE ORDERS
with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.
Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.
J. BEAUVAIS.

BETTER THAN MEDICINE!
KEEP YOUR FEET WARM.
You can't enjoy good health unless you clothe the feet properly.
D. SHERWOOD & CO.
have just received the finest line of Fall and Winter
BOOTS & SHOES
ever brought to Charlevoix. Give them a call.

A. J. McLEOD,
Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail
All kinds of
FRESH MEATS,
SALT PORK,
SMOKED & SALTED
HAMS,
Dried and Smoked
BACON, DRIED BEEF,
Bologna, Head Cheese,
Sausage.
Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.
Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.
A. J. McLEOD.

Washburn & Ackert,
FOUNDREYMEN,
MACHINISTS,
And Manufacturers of The
Charlevoix Plow.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!
Builder and Manufacturer of
BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.
Sheet Iron Work given special attention.
MARINE WORK
a specialty.
HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED. W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIEG, Attorneys at Law. Office in Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PAILTHORP & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st. Charlevoix. Office hours 8 to 10 a. m.; 6 to 8 p. m.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post-office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 261, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 156, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

I. O. G. T.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 101, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 136, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.
President—Byron See.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—D. Suffield.
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and C. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Iddings, W. A. Brown and C. Y. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Geo. W. Crouter, R. W. Miller, S. M. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, D. Berden.
All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Every convenience for the travelling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
Lorenzo Cook, Manager
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE.
W. C. Newman, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - Mich.
Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and work with solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. E. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. R. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. [Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.]

DENTIST

N. J. PERRY, Dentist.
Office in Wood's Drug Store,
Charlevoix, Mich.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R.R.

Time Card for Petoskey.

IN EFFECT, JULY 1887.

Leave Going North	*6 05 a m, 5 02 p m, 8 05 p m
Leave Going South	8 50 a m, 2 15 p m, †10 55 pm
*daily.	† daily except Saturday.

Michigan Central

The Direct Route Between Mackinaw City & Detroit Jackson, The South and East.

Trains leave Mackinaw City 8 a m daily except Sunday and 10 p m daily arriving at

Detroit	9.10 p m and 11 a m
Jackson	10.30 p m and 11 20 a m
Toledo	10.55 p m and 4.45 a m
Buffalo	6.15 a m and 8.07 p m
Cincinnati	6.35 a m and 6.40 p m

WAGNER PALACE SLEEPING AND PARLOR CARS.

W. H. JONSTON, Mich. Pass Agt., Grand Rapids
O. W. RUGGLES, G. P. & T. Agt., Chicago

DULUTH, SOUTH SHORE AND ATLANTIC R'Y.

"SOO-MACKINAW SHORT LINE."

Only Direct Route to Marquette and the Iron and Copper Regions of Lake Superior.

Traversing the most Picturesque portion of Upper Michigan through a country unequalled for

Hunting, Fishing, Etc.

Two Through Express Trains daily in each direction to which are attached NEW, ELEGANT and COMMODIOUS OBSERVATION PARLOR CARS & WAGNER SLEEPING COACHES

Tickets over this route are on sale at all principal ticket offices. Full information as to rates etc., route and folders will be furnished. Address
E. W. ALLEN,
Gen Pass. and & Tkt Agt, Marquette, Mich.

The Savior's Sentence.

A correspondent sends what he believes to be a correct translation of the sentence pronounced by Pontius Pilate on Christ. He says that this curious document was discovered in A. D. 1280, in the city of Aquill, in the Kingdom of Naples, in the course of a search made for the discovery of Roman antiquities, and it remained there until it was found by the Commissaries of Arts in the French army of Italy. Up to the time of the campaign in Southern Italy it was preserved in the sacristy of the Carthusians, near Naples, where it was kept in a box of ebony. Since then the relic has been kept in the Chapela Caserta. The Carthusians obtained, by petition, leave that the plate might be kept by them as an acknowledgment of the sacrifice which they had made for the French army.

The French translation was made literally by members of the Commission of Art. Denon had a fac-simile of the plate engraved, which, on the sale of his cabinet, was bought by Lord Howard for 2,890 francs:

"Sentence pronounced by Pontius Pilate, Intendant of Lower Galilee, that Jesus of Nazareth shall suffer death by the cross. In the seventeenth year of the reign of the Emperor Tiberius, and on the 25th of March, in the most holy city of Jerusalem, during the pontificate of Annas and Caiaphas, Pontius Pilate, Intendant of the Province of Lower Galilee, sitting in judgment in the presidential chair of the Praetor, sentences Jesus of Nazareth to death on a cross between two robbers, as the numerous testimonials of the people prove that: 1. Jesus is a misleader. 2. He has excited the people to sedition. 3. He is an enemy of the law. 4. He calls himself the Son of God. 5. He calls himself falsely the King of Israel. He went to the temple, followed by a multitude carrying palms in their hands. It likewise orders the First Centurion, Cutrillus Cornelius, to bring him to the place of execution, and forbids all persons, rich or poor, to prevent the execution of Jesus.

"The witnesses who have signed the execution against Jesus are: 1. Daniel Robani, a Pharisee. 2. John Zorababel. 3. Raphael Robani. 4. Capet. Finally he orders that the said Jesus be taken out of Jerusalem through the gate of Tournea."—Notes and Queries.

How and When to Take Water.

According to Dr. Leuf, when water is taken into the full or partly full stomach, it does not mingle with the food, as we are generally taught, but passes along quickly between the food and lesser curvature toward the pylorus, through which it passes into the intestines. The secretion of mucus by the lining membrane is constant, and during the night a considerable amount accumulates in the stomach; some of its liquid portion is absorbed, and that which remains is thick and tenacious. If food is taken into the stomach when in this condition it becomes coated with this mucus, and the secretions of the gastric juice and its action are delayed. These facts show the value of a goblet of water before breakfast. This washes out the tenacious mucus, and stimulates the gastric glands to secretion. In old or feeble persons water should not be taken cold, but it may be with great advantage then taken warm or hot. This removal of the accumulated mucus from the stomach is probably one of the reasons why taking soup at the beginning of a meal has been found so beneficial.

Read the Looking-Glass.

I read a sensible article in a London newspaper the other day recommending people to study their countenances by aid of their mirrors. As a general thing, it is not necessary to tell your acquaintances to look in the glass. They do so without being told, and everyone is aware when she does her face wears an expression quite unlike that seen by other eyes. Disappointment at the reflection, for the vision rarely comes up to the expectations and hopes of the vainest mortal, perhaps, but as far as animation goes there is not a trace in the best French plate ever made. This writer suggests her readers should make a practice of smiling and talking, if not eating, before their mirrors, just to observe and correct the grimaces with which they favor the world around them. One of the first lessons a singer receives should be this, to watch her countenance while singing.

Precisely as an actor or actress studies a part before a glass, so should the non-professional society man or woman learn how to smile, to be charming, not to screw their faces into knots, or to fall into tricks with such features as nature has blessed them with. An agreeable smile, without affectation, a graceful carriage, are only results of training, and they become habits quite as easily as less pleasing tricks and mannerisms. There are people who appear tolerably well in repose, yet the instant they speak or laugh change to the grotesque and worry the beholder almost to death. A quite pretty actress, who has been seen more or less in society, spoils the contour of her face the instant she opens her mouth to speak. A little control of the muscles of the lips would obviate the fault and make her far more interesting. But wouldn't this study of the countenance make one very self-conscious? asks the reader. Possibly it might; yet, as self-consciousness is a prevailing sin, I see no reason why one can not add to it the grace of expression, and thus neutralize its evil effect. A sweet and gracious manner is always worth cultivating even if it takes a mirror to bring it to perfection.—Boston Herald.

Rose Marble in Tennessee.

The commissioner of agriculture, statistics and mines yesterday received over a dozen specimens of East Tennessee marble. The collection embraces different varieties of black, gray, and mahogany colored marble, the latter being susceptible of the finest polish and resembling in appearance a block of fine-grained mahogany. This species of marble is very rare; the only other quarry of it in the United States is in California. The most remarkable part of the story is that all the different kinds come from quarries on one farm containing not over twenty acres, situated in Hamblen county, East Tennessee, just three and one-half miles from Morristown. The quarry has just been opened.—Nashville Union.

Mrs. Annie Maupin, of Gasconade County, Missouri, is a well-preserved woman. She is ninety-eight years old, can walk two miles at a stretch, and has seventy-two grandchildren.

A Houseful of Snakes.

Years ago a young lawyer of Savannah took his wife and their eldest son to the "springs" in the Barnwell district, South Carolina. In those times, says the Savannah News, even Saratoga had but two hotels, in the shape of large wooden buildings, very unlike the "palatial residences" now erected even at the south; so you may suppose the one in Barnwell was nothing to admire. A dwelling-house with wings and a few small buildings around constituted the "hotel."

When the Savannahian got there no room could be found for him unless he would occupy an outhouse of logs, used for fodder, one-half being supplied with a plank floor, the other being the natural soil. As a party was to leave in two days, these accommodations were accepted—father, mother, and son sleeping in one bed, and the servant-girl where she could. The first night they slept soundly until after midnight, when they became aware of things scampering and gliding over the floor, overhead, and in one instance over the bed. As the light increased they found that their visitors were rats and chicken snakes, but they disappeared very soon. They determined to risk another night, especially as the strictest search could detect the presence of neither rat nor serpent. About the same hour of the night there was a repetition of the occurrences of the night before, and, having discovered that the serpents were only chicken-snakes, the travelers slept on, although the boy declared that something had crawled over his face toward morning. The father dressed and retired, and the mother got up at the proper time. Her habit was to put her keys, stockings, and bags under her pillow before getting into bed. Slipping her feet into her shoes, which had heels, she put her hand under the pillow from which she had just risen, when she felt the cold skin of the snake. She told the child to jump out of bed, and as he did so she slipped off one of her shoes, held it as a hammer, jerked away the pillow, and as the serpent raised its head struck it a deadly blow. It squirmed to the floor, writhed a little, and lay still. To her horror she then discovered it to be a moccasin. The house was within fifty yards of a swamp, which abounded with these interesting reptiles. Upon being complimented on her coolness and bravery, she admitted that had she not thought it a chicken-snake she would have acted differently. She was not one of that kind that scream and jump on chairs at the sight of a little mouse, moreover was a Beaufort girl, like her sex generally in Port Royal, able to break a marsh tacky, steer a boat through the surf, play a drum-fish, and then shine in a drawing-room among the brilliant men and women who then abounded on our seacoast from the Santee to St. Mary's.

The Tichborne Curse.

It seems that in the time of Henry II. a Sir Roger Tichborne married an heiress named Mabel de Lynerstone. She proved to be a Lady Bountiful, always soliciting her knight to give to the poor. These entreaties he constantly refused until, when she became bedridden, he tauntingly offered her for the poor as much ground as she could crawl around. She actually succeeded in covering fifteen acres—hence the name of the field.

Before Lady Mabel died she desired that the rental of these fifteen acres be given annually to the poor every Lady Day, March 25, in the shape of small loaves. She said:

"If any Tichborne deprives the poor of this dole the family shall be punished by the fulfillment of my curse. May the house then fall, the name change and misfortune come. The fulfillment shall be foreshadowed by a generation of seven sons and then one of seven daughters."

Toward the end of the last century the baronet of that day was petitioned by the neighboring gentry to stop the dole as a bad precedent. He complied.

In 1802 this same baronet, the father of seven sons, pulled down the mansion, which he said was inconvenient and decayed. The tower was so solid that gunpowder had to be used to make it fall. He was succeeded by a son who had seven daughters. The title next successively passed to his two brothers. The last of these—father of the drowned Sir Roger and Sir Alfred, sire of the present baronet—did change the family name by making it the double one of Doughty-Tichborne, for which the royal license was obtained.

Then came the misfortunes—the mysterious death of Sir Roger, the almost ruinous lawsuit, the birth of the present baronet after his father's death and the humiliation of the boy's grandmother, Lady Tichborne, stooping to fraud and perjury in supporting the Orton claimant.

Curiously enough this dole proved a turning point in convicting the claimant. He swore that it was distributed in silver, whereas the jurors decided if he had been the heir he must have known that it was in loaves. The dole has, however, been resumed, substituting sacks of flour for baked bread.—New York Herald.

The Value of Accuracy.

The recent publication of the life of Charles Reade, the celebrated English novelist, has brought to light some interesting reminiscences of the man and his methods of work. His habit of collecting a vast number of newspaper scraps concerning odd people, places and happenings, is well known, but it will probably be new to most readers to learn that this custom was adhered to in obedience to a resolution formed as early as 1853. In writing of his intention to become a novelist, he says: "I propose never to guess where I can know."

He adds that this plan "will, I see, cost me undeniable trouble," but the immense mass of reference material he left at his death proves how steadfast he was in adhering to his determination.

A like resolve to know, rather than to guess, would be of immense help to us all, whether novelists, business men or schoolboys. Contingencies are arising every day in which he who can positively testify to a fact possesses an immense superiority over another who only "thinks it may be so."

For instance, make free use of the dictionary for words concerning whose meaning you have merely an ill-defined idea. The correct manner of their pronunciation should also be inquired into, for it happens that young people make use of terms gathered from their reading, with the significance of which they are perfectly familiar, but which they have never heard correctly pronounced.—Ex.

Miraculous Escape.

W. W. Reed, druggist, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "One of my customers, Mrs. Louisa Pike, Bartonia, Randolph Co., Ind., was a long sufferer with Consumption, and was given up to die by her physicians. She heard of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and began buying it of me. In six months' time she walked to this city, a distance of six miles, and is now so much improved she has quit using it. She feels she owes her life to it." Free Trial Bottles at Dr. G. W. Crouter's.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Dr. G. W. Crouter.

FOR LAME BACK, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents.

SHILOH'S COUGH and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

SHILOH'S VITALIZER is what you need for Constipation, Loss of Appetite, Dizziness, and all symptoms of Dyspepsia. Price 10 and 75 cents a bottle.

CROUP, WHOOPING COUGH and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

DAN'L S. WAY,
Photographer.
In Bradbeer's Gallery.
Photographs of all sizes taken.
Old Pictures copied and enlarged.
CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

W. H. FRANCIS
FURNITURE
—AND—
JOBBING SHOP,
Will also do
Contracting & Building,
In Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.
I keep in my shop a full set of hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc., on short notice.
Shop on South Terrace,
Opposite Sheriff Berden's residence.

MILLINERY,
FANCY GOODS,
DRESS-MAKING.
We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.
DRESS MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.
ALDRICH SISTERS.
Ingleside Building.

C. H. Maddaugh,
MERCHANT TAILOR.
I have just received a fine line of Samples of first class Fall & Winter Tweeds. Call and look them over.
Fine Samples of
OVERCOATINGS!
now awaiting your inspection.
Call and see me, Satisfaction Guaranteed.

CHARLEVOIX
Manufacturing Co.
Charlevoix, Mich.,
Manufacturers of
Sash and Doors,
Blinds, Mouldings etc.
NEWELL
Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails
kept in stock.
Window & Door Frames made to order.
All Kinds of
Building Material
Kept constantly on hand.
PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS,
Furnished on application.
Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building
Correspondence solicited.

New JEWELRY AND SILVER WARE.
I have just received a very fine stock of
Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc
which I will sell at Prices lower than the same goods can be purchased outside.
Did it ever occur to you that by patronizing home Merchants you were benefitting yourselves?
All classes of Repairing done quickly.
C. R. BELLINGER.

Burns, Stevens & Co.
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

W. A. REYNARD,
Has just received at his Fruit Store in the Lewis Block, a choice line of Vegetables and Fruits
OF ALL KINDS,
TO WHICH OTHERS WILL BE ADDED IN SEASON.
I will also keep in stock a full line of
Tobaccos and Cigars.
Butter and Eggs a Specialty.

Farming Lands
500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.
These lands are timbered with beech and maple [illegible] and are accessible to best markets.
By Water and Rail
And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.
The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the centre of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is
Not a Wilderness by any Means.
It contains a population of 250,000 souls and is rapidly filling up with settlers from almost every state in the Union.
Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.
Send for English or German Pamphlet. Address
W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner,
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.
TITLE PERFECT.

For Finest
JOB WORK,
Patronize The
Sentinel.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY.
CELLULOID STARCH
A NOVEL INVENTION!
REQUIRES NO COOKING
For Collars, Cuffs, Shirt Bosoms and fine Laundry purposes, prepared by a New Process. The Celluloid Starch has no equal, look for our name and trade mark and take no other.
THE CELLULOID STARCH COMPANY
SOLE MANUFACTURERS,
NEW HAVEN, CONN. U.S.A.
Will not stick to the iron or blister the goods, easy to use, makes your linen look like new at home. Ask your grocer for Celluloid starch. It is pure and economical.

HUMPHREYS'
DR. HUMPHREYS' BOOK
Cloth & Gold Binding
144 Pages, with Steel Engraving,
MAILED FREE.
[illegible]
HOMEOPATHIC
SPECIFICS.
[illegible]

STOVES!

AHEAD AGAIN!
THE Round Oak
Heating Stoves.
NEW STYLES
Cook Stoves!
Saws & Axes
Job and Tin Work.
L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

F. A. COCHRAN & CO.,
(Successors to PERRY WEED,)
Druggists and Pharmacists,
A FULL LINE OF
Drugs and Medicines.
We keep in stock a large assortment of well selected POPULAR MUSIC. Call and see it.

M. S. MOULTON,
WATCHMAKER & JEWELER,
Charlevoix, Mich.
Personal Attention given to Watch Repairing.
Key-wind Movements changed to Stem-wind and warranted as good as the best.
JEWELRY Repairing done in the best manner.
Having had 30 years experience I am confident I can give the best of satisfaction

"MARVELOUS PRICES!"
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION
Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away.
[illegible]
OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.
We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00. [illegible] Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms
Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS.
Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.
If you want a quiet place to get a shave, hair dress or bath call and see me.
JAY L. PRICE.

NEW SHOP!
All kinds of Blacksmithing,
At the
Shop in the Foundry Building.
Horseshoeing a specialty.
ALL WORK GUARANTEED.
M. SCOTT.

WANTED!
Potatoes, Onions, Apples, Peaches and Blueberries.
We have an old established trade and can place stock to best advantage. Consignments solicited. Correspondence invited from shippers. Stencil and shipping tags furnished.
W. H. THOMPSON & CO.
Commission Merchants,
No. 166 South Water St,
CHICAGO, - - ILL.
Reference: Felsenthal, Gross & Miller, Bankers, Chicago, Ill.

JAS. A. GELLICK,
Dealer in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS.
We call Special Attention to our
Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES.
We also keep continually on draught
Milwaukee Export and lager Beer.
Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX. MICHIGAN.

NEWS BUDGET.

Fresh Intelligence from Every Part of the Civilized World.

Foreign and Domestic News, Political Events, Personal Points, Labor Notes, Etc.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

POLITICAL.

Meeting of the New York Democratic and Republican Massachusetts Conventions.

THE New York State Democratic Convention nominated Frederick Cook for Secretary of State, Lawrence J. Fitzgerald for State Treasurer, Charles E. Tabor for Attorney General, and Edward Wemple for Comptroller. The resolutions demand that Federal taxation be reduced $100,000,000 a year, and that hundreds of articles be placed on the free list. They oppose sumptuary laws, as interfering with personal liberties, and indorse the administrations of Governor Hill and President Cleveland. Irving Hall was refused representation in the convention, the New York City seats being divided evenly between Tammany Hall and the County Democracy.

GOV. OLIVER AMES was renominated by the Republicans of Massachusetts.

...

outsailed the Thistle. The total distance was thirty-eight statute miles. Everywhere, except on the run with spinnakers, where the excursion-boats did so much to keep the wind from her, the Volunteer outsailed her antagonist. The following are the figures

The Volunteer beat the Thistle 19 minutes and 29 seconds. After the race Mr. James Bell, principal owner of the Thistle, said he was not at all satisfied with the result. The Thistle, he declared, had never moved so slowly through the water. He was of the opinion that there was "something wrong with the cutter's bottom." Appended is a description of the two yachts:

...

ARTICLES have been filed at Harrisburg, Pa., consolidating the New York, Chicago and St. Louis and the Fort Wayne and Illinois Railways, the new corporation to be known as the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad Company. Daniel W. Caldwell is President, and the capital stock is $30,000,000.

WEST.

THE National Association of ex-Prisoners of War has just concluded its Chicago meeting. ...

THE WORLD OF BASE-BALL.

The End of the League Pennant Race Almost at Hand.

Detroit Still Leads—Chicago's New Players—A Chat with President Spalding.

[CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.]

The end of the professional base-ball season of 1887 is now so near at hand that there is little if any prospect of any material change in the positions of the leading clubs in either the National League or American Association as they stand at this time. Up to the closing days of last week Chicago had some chance for beating the heavy-hitting Detroit team out in the race—a slim chance, it is true, but still a chance, for all that. The result of the Boston series, however, has made it well nigh impossible, or at least improbable, that the White Stockings will finish better than second; and if they do this with Philadelphia and New York playing ball for all they are worth with but one object in view, viz., that of gaining a lead ...

BARRYMORE'S NARROW ESCAPE.

Sequel to the Murder of Actor Porter in Texas Years Ago.

[Chicago Tribune.]

"The severest test I was ever subjected to," said Maurice Barrymore recently in talking of emergencies that prove a man's metal, "was in connection with the Porter murder case in Marshall, Texas. I do not refer to the killing itself, but to one of the complications that grew out of it."

The Porter murder will be recalled by every newspaper, as it created a great sensation at the time in theatrical circles all over the country. A New York company was playing "Diplomacy" down in Texas, and among the members were Robert Porter, Minnie Cummings, and Maurice Barrymore. Those three were together when they happened to enter the railroad station in Marshall. They were accosted by a half-drunken rough named Jim Currie, who fancied that some slight had been put upon him, and who followed them, using the vilest language. Barrymore warned him to stop, but this only infuriated the fellow, who drew two pistols and blazed away. Both bullets took effect, one in the fleshy part of Barrymore's arm, the other breaking the shoulder blade. The wounded man ran into a neighboring saloon and begged the bartender ...

...

proved labor-saving implements are used. A Dakota wheat farm of good size seems to be rather a factory where cereals are to be produced than a tract of land dependent on ordinary agricultural methods. Such a wheat farm when the long line of reaping machines is on its march is a picturesque sight. All along the front the machines are advancing. It is hot and heavy work, for the sun is powerful in these regions, and there is no shade. The boss scans the men at their tasks, and in a few minutes, spurring his horse, may be far down the line, directing the labor of other hands. The sight is unique, for in no other part of the world can such a wheat field be seen as in Dakota.

A Dakota Bride.

Old Bud Jackson, one of the terrors of Montana, lost his fourth wife, and came over into Dakota for a fifth victim. He met and married the widow Braggs, a frail, gentle looking little woman, who had just been left a widow for the third time and seemed crushed to earth by her loss.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson wended their way to Bud's Montana home, and as the gushing bridegroom led his bride into his lovely cot of one room and introduced her to his favorite dogs, he said tenderly:

"You want to remember, Mrs. Jackson, that I'm the boss here. ...

DEEDS OF A TERRIBLE PIRATE.

How Capt. Morgan Plundered Panama and Other Cities of Spanish America.

When Capt. Morgan came up from Gibraltar he found three great men-of-war lying in the entrance to the lake awaiting his coming, says Howard Pyle, describing in Harper's Magazine the deeds of a seventeenth-century pirate. Seeing that he was hemmed in in the narrow sheet of water, Capt. Morgan was inclined to compromise matters, even offering to relinquish all the plunder he had gained if he were allowed to depart in peace. But no; the Spanish admiral would hear nothing of this. Having the pirates, as he thought, securely in his grasp he would sweep them from the face of the sea once and forever.

This was an unlucky determination for the Spaniards to reach, for instead of paralyzing the pirates, with fear, as he expected it would do, it simply turned their rand courage into as mad desperation.

A great vessel that they had taken with the town of Maricaibo was converted into a fireship, manned with logs of wood in montera caps and sailor jackets, and filled with brimstone, pitch, and palm leaves soaked in oil. Then out of the lake the pirates sailed to meet the Spaniards, the fire ship leading the ...

SHOT AND SHELL.

Old Veterans' Reminiscences of the War of the Rebellion.

Embracing Anecdotes of Actual Experience and Colloquial Acquisition.

Sumter.

BY JAMES FRANKLIN FITTS.

'T was there the thing begun,
There the war-cloud, black and dun,
Settled down.
There the good old flag was trailed,
And the Stars and Bars were nailed
Over Sumter, and were hailed
In the town.

Ah! that day was sad and grim,
Eyes that never wept were dim
At the sight.
There was treason in the air,
And they swore we did not dare,
To preserve the Union fair,
Stand and fight.

Hark! what comes upon the gale
From the mountains, from each vale
Of the North?
East and West are all aglow,
Hands are forging for the blow,
South the stalwart legions go
Pouring forth.

...

leryman down in the hold of the barge. The latter was now mopping his forehead with his bandana and saying to the arriving squad of "roustabouts:"

"Only a couple of dozen more, boys, and then we can get out of this oven. It's almost hot enough to fire a barrel of gunpowder without any fuse or match either."

Each in turn picked up and shouldered the shell assigned to him and wheeled toward the companionway.

Randall, on the stern of the barge, with his pencil and tally-book in his hand, took due note of every man and shell, but now and then seemed disposed to turn and stare for a second or so at the yellow flood which went swirling and eddying by.

"I could do it," he said, "if an accident should happen, only there wouldn't be any warning. First I'd know I shouldn't know anything."

At that moment a long, lank, loosely built "roustabout" came up the narrow stairway with a gleaming tube of copper and iron on his left shoulder.

"That's the left-handed man from Cairo," said Randall. "His bones are put together with strings. Hullo!" A small, sharp nail had worked its way out of some ragged pocket, and had fallen upon the deck, with its heel in a crack and its point so aimed that the next forward step of the loose man drove one of his bare, splay feet heavily against it. There was a sharp yell, a sudden forgetfulness of all the warnings of the old artilleryman, and Randall saw the shell pitched recklessly, ...

...

The General eyed him for a moment with a look that made the officer feel that charging a battery single-handed would have been a relief, and said as he turned away:

"My God! I thought so. Oh, yes, of course! Go 'long, sir; go 'long; go 'long."

A Successful Appeal.

In the year 1864, by sentence of court martial for desertion, some three or four soldiers were to be shot at Fort McHenry, Baltimore, and the day of execution was fixed and almost at hand.

Among those soldiers sentenced to death was one with a wife and three small children, in whose behalf strong pressure had been brought to bear for mitigation of sentence, but without avail.

The night before the morning on which the execution was to take place at noon so, the wife of the soldier, with her children, came to Washington, to intercede in person with the President, if she could in any way gain his presence, for the life of her husband and the father of their little ones.

Not familiar with even ordinary means of reaching the presence of the Executive, a stranger to every one, and guided only by a hope born of despair, and the faithfulness of a true wife and mother, this woman had come to make a last effort and appeal.

By good fortune she was guided in some manner to the very person, and perhaps the only unofficial person, who could have secured her at that hour of the night an audience with the President ...

THE DIVINE PLUMB LINE.

Rev. Dr. Talmage's Sermon at the Brooklyn Tabernacle.

A Straight Up and Down Religion Wanted—Business Panics Caused by a Lack of Confidence—Brain Workers Need as Much Sympathy as Laborers.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 25.—After the great congregation had sung the long meter doxology in the Brooklyn Tabernacle this morning, Dr. Talmage expounded the sixth chapter of the Second Epistle to the Corinthians, setting forth the importance of separation from bad fellowship, and saying that a man is no better than the company he keeps. Professor Henry Eyre Brown played an organ solo, Sonata No. 1 in D minor by Guilmant. The subject of the sermon was "A Straight Up and Down Religion," and the text was Amos vii, 8, "And the Lord said unto me, Amos, what seest thou? and I said, a plumb line." Dr. Talmage said:

The solid masonry of the world has to me a fascination. Walk about some of the triumphal arches and the cathedrals, 400 or 500 years old, and see them stand as erect as when they were builded, walls of great height for centuries, not bending a quarter of an inch this way or that. So greatly honored were the masons who builded these walls that they were free from taxation and called "free" masons. The trowel gets most of the credit for these buildings, and its clear ringing on stone and brick has sounded across the ages. But there is another implement of just as much importance as the trowel, and my text recognizes it. Bricklayers, and stone-masons, ...

...

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for October 9—"The Tempest Stilled."

[From the Chicago Standard. By Rev. J. M. Coon.]

The lesson for above date may be found in the eighth chapter of Matthew, from the eighteenth to the twenty-seventh verses. Time, A. D. 28. Autumn, several months after the Sermon on the Mount. Place, Sea of Galilee.

SPECIAL MENTION.

Scribes.—Anciently the Scribes were merely officers whose duties included writing of various kinds; but on the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity the sopherim, as the Scribes were called, were organized by Ezra into a distinct body, and they became interpreters of God's law as well as copyists. So great was their care in copying that they counted and compared all the letters, to be sure that none were left out that belonged to the text, or none admitted improperly. On stated occasions they read the law in the synagogues. They also lectured to their disciples and commented on the law. The lawyers (see Matt. 22:35; Luke 7; 30; 11:45; 14:3) and the doctors of the law (see Luke 2:46; 5:17; Acts 5:34) were substantially the same as the Scribes. Efforts have been made to show that different classes of duties were assigned to lawyers, doctors, and Scribes, but without any very definite results.

Storms on Galilee.—The lake lies in its deep bed among the hills, ordinarily smooth as a mirror, but sudden storms at times rush down every wady on the northeast and east, and lash the waters into furious roughness. The winds sweeping over the vast bare table-land of Gaulonitis and the Hauran, and the boundless desert beyond, pour down the deep ravines ...

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, OCT. 12, 1887.

Marine Jottings.

The schooner Florence Smith returned from Cleveland with a cargo of oil Monday.

The steamer Gracie Barker is being hauled out at Campbell's ship yard for the winter, and engineer Hy. Wood is around among us again.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says Ira H. Owen went to Detroit last week to let the contract for building that new $65,000 propeller for the Cheboygan and Sault Ste Marie route.

The steamer City of Grand Rapids broke her shaft last Saturday, which will necessitate her laying up the balance of the season. It is reported that the Ossifrage is to take her place this fall.

The schooner Pulaski, coal laden from Sandusky City to Manitowoc, went ashore Monday afternoon one mile south of Good Harbor. The crew is safe. The Arctic went ashore at Glen Arbor.

C. D. Whitcomb, of the Detroit & Cleveland Steam Navigation Co., was in town a few days ago, looking up the prospect of success for a passenger line from Chicago to Mackinac Island, another season, the boats to be of the same character now run between Detroit and the Island. It would mean a heavy outlay in vessel property.—Traverse Herald.

The schooner City of Green Bay, loaded with iron ore, went down near South Haven, and only one man of the crew was saved, he floating ashore on a piece of wreckage. The vessel was beached within 100 yards of the shore, and the men remained in the rigging for hours appealing to those on shore for help to rescue them from drowning. The life saving crew were on hand, but their equipage consisted of rotten ropes, and the crew is severely censured, as it is said had the crew taken out strong equipage the first trip, the entire crew could have been saved.

Cleanliness Next to Godliness.

Dr. Carlstein, health officer, requests in the interests of health, that a greater effort be made in removing refuse matter from back yards and that all vaults be constructed above ground.

The doctor apprehends that much sickness here is caused by lack of sewerage and fears that as the town grows, unless some better system be provided, that an epidemic of cholera or typhoid fever would find many victims in Charlevoix. In this connection we clip the following from the Chicago News: Simultaneously with the intelligence that Asiatic cholera is raging more virulently than ever on the Italian peninsula come reports of the epidemic prevalence of typhoid fever in many parts of this country. Tuscola, Ashmore, and other places in Illinois are severely smitten; it is evedently more widely spread in Michigan, and at Wilkesbarre and other towns in Pennsylvania where it has repeatedly appeared as an epidemic it is again rife. During the recent session of the International medical congress in Washington an army surgeon reported a serious mortality from this disease at a large number of military posts.

By common consent this epidemic tendency is attributed to polluted water supplies. When it is remembered that such pollution is the most potent cause of the spread of cholera there is ground for grave apprehension of the result of an introduction of the cholera contagion into this country. Where typhoid fever can exist cholera will flourish if once introduced. The former is a mild and benign disease compared with the latter.

Health authorities should not neglect this serious warning. Whatever is done to "stamp out" typhoid fever and make it impossible to reappear is so much done toward warding off a cholera epidemic.

Boyne Falls Items.

Our livery men have been busy the past week.

Dr. E. F. Allen of Boyne City, made us a flying call on Thursday.

C. J. Pailthorp of Petoskey, was in town Thursday on legal business.

Will N. Moore, Circuit Court Commissioner, was over from East Jordan, the same day.

Dr. L. Lewis of Charlevoix, was here one day the past week. He came to set a broken leg for David Moon.

Sheriff Jerrne stopped over Monday night on his way home from Traverse City.

Mrs. Fred Tuttle returned home Monday evening from an eight weeks visit with her daughter at Ionia.

Wm. Mears started for the Upper Peninsula last Wednesday to look over some of the recently forfeited railroad lands.

John Krosler of Deer Lake, and Miss Lou Rothenburger of Boyne Valley, were married on the 29th ult., by Rev. John Redpath.

Geo. Bradshaw and daughter, Robert Bigger and sister of Mt. Pleasant, Canada, have been the guests of their cousin Mr. I. Dawdy, the past week. They returned home Thursday.

The mother and a brother of Judd Barnes came up on the excursion Tuesday evening to pay him a visit.

Miss Edna Gager is teaching the Deer Lake school and Miss Melvina Thompson the Robinson school.

Pat Doyle has been keeping bachelor's hall for a few days. He stopped at the hotel Friday to get a square meal.

David Moon had his leg broken in a peculiar manner one day last week. He was skidding logs and stood near the whiffle-tree, by some means one end flew back and hit him on the leg breaking it.

Another invoice of cloaks just received at Rosenthal's.

Teachers' Association.

The Charlevoix Teachers' Association met pursuant to appointment at the high school room, on Friday evening, Sept. 30th.

The president, H. M. Enos, occupied a few moments at the opening, with a review of the objects sought by the organization, and the benefits to be expected from it both by the teachers and by the public who employed them.

Mr. J. M. Harris of Ironton, read a paper on "The Teacher's Preparation; the Child and the Subject Taught," setting forth the necessity of a clear insight, on the part of the teacher, into the nature of the material with which he has to deal and the importance of the results to be attained.

The Query Box was opened and the questions distributed for discussion next morning.

On Saturday morning the Association re-assembled and took up the program provided. Mr. H. M. Enos gave a talk on "Devices for Increasing Interest in Certain Subjects in School" dwelling particularly on History, Geography and Arithmetic.

This was followed by a general discussion of questions found in the box. Miss Gray of Charlevoix, outlined a method of teaching Physiology in primary schools, with reference to the effects of alcohol and narcotics, which was freely discussed. The old question, whether the teacher should attempt to entirely prevent whispering, was found in the box and was answered by Miss Nelson to whom it had been referred. Her remarks brought out a variety of opinions on certain phases of the subject.

A paper on "Some Difficulties in Arithmetic," to have been read by Mrs. Porter, was omitted on account of the ill health of the author who was, in consequence, not able to be present.

The attendance was not large, but showed an improvement in the number of teachers and the exercises were interesting and profitable. The election of officers for ensuing year resulted as follows: President, J. M. Harris; Vice President, Miss Nettie C. Gray; Secretary, Miss Ada Cooper; Executive committe, H. M. Enos and Miss I. M. Garner, with the President, Vice President, and Secretary, members ex-officio.

The Association adjourned to meet at Boyne City early in November, the exact date to be fixed by the committee; this will probably be Friday evening and Saturday, November 12 and 13.

The New Liquor Law.

The provisions of the new liquor law which took effect last Wednesday, are as follows:

They must not keep screens or curtains near the front door to obstruct the view of the bar from the street. Penalty $200 fine or less, or 90 days in jail.

They must not sell liquor to students of any public or private institution of learning in the state, nor allow students to play cards, dice or any game of chance in saloons, under the same penalty.

They must not adulterate liquor nor offer for sale liquor known to be adulterated, under penalty of not less than $50 nor exceeding $500, or imprisonment of not less than 10 days.

They must not sell in quantities of more than three gallons or one dozen quart bottles under a retail license, or less than that amount at one time under a wholesale license.

They must not sell wine or liquors of any kind from any cask or vessel unless the same shall have been labeled "Pure and without drugs or poison." Finding empty vessels or casks in a saloon not so labeled will be considered a prima facie evidence of a violation of the law.

A license of $400 must be paid for selling malt liquors only; for malt and spirituous liquors at retail, $500; for spirituous liquors at wholesale the same, and for spirituous liquors at wholesale and retail, $800.

Druggists can sell liquor on physician's prescriptions only. They must record the name of every purchaser in a blank book kept for the purpose, and the aforesaid book must be open to all persons for examination during all business hours. The penalty for the first violation is not less than $100 fine; for a second offense, in addition to the penalty the offender shall be debarred from selling liquor anywhere in the state for five years.

Saloonkeepers violating the law will find trouble without looking for it, as police offers are empowered to close all places where liquor is sold upon which the tax has not been paid.

Brewers or brewers' agents will not be accepted as surities on saloonkeepers' bonds. The law on that is explicit.

All places where liquor is sold, except drug stores, must be closed at 9 o'clock p. m., and not opened before 7 a. m. The word closed applies to back doors, side doors and all other doors opening into bar-rooms. Police officers are charged with the duty of closing all places found open after legal hours. Common councils have the option of allowing saloons to remain open until 11 p. m. and to open at 6 a. m. Arrests for violation of this section can be made without a warrant.

Saloonkeepers can look for frequent visits from the police, as the law requires the officers to visit all saloons and bar-rooms at least once a week, to learn if any provisions of the act are violated.

Masonic.

Special communication of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M., next Tuesday evening, Oct. 18, for work on 3d°. The attendance of every member desired. Members of other lodges in this jurisdiction cordially invited.

W. A. SMITH, W. M.
H. LEE IDDINGS, Sec'y.

Last week an interesting piece of wreckage was found on the beach at Racine, Wis., consisting of a cot containing the words, "Steamer Alpena, No. 10." The Goodrich steamer Alpena was wrecked off Muskegon in a severe storm, Oct. 18, 1880, 80 or more lives being lost. This is one of the first pieces of the wreck that has ever been discovered.

Religious.

Baptist Church.

During October, the Baptist and Congregational churches will unite in worship. The Baptist pastor will preach at the Congregational church Sunday morning at 10:30, and at Green's Hall in the evening. Prayer meetings Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

M. E. Church.

Next Tuesday evening we have arranged for an illustrated sermon on the text: "Ye are the Light of the World." All come. Thursday evening prayer meeting led by M. J. Stockman. Sunday services at the usual hours, led by the pastor. The ushers will be glad to show you seats. Sunday school at 12. W. H. M.

Rev. B. H. Whitman, of Norwood, is holding a series of meetings at Barnard, with good prospects of success. Meetings every night this week.

The Board of District Stewards, and the District Preachers' Association, hold their annual sessions at Mancelona on the 25th and 26th of this month.

General Church Matters.

The stone foundation for the new Congregational church at Eastport is completed.

Stone is now being hauled to be used in the completion of the foundation of the new Congregational church at Boyne City. The grounds around the edifice are also to be graded and otherwise improved.

The Rev. C. C. Otis, of Seattle, W. T., has been invited to become business and financial agent of the American Home Missionary Society at its headquarters in New York, and has accepted. He is a Michigan boy, being the son of Rev. N. L. Otis, of Montcalm county, well known here.

Labor Day.

Labor Day, as a holiday, should be kept up, and even take precedence of the National Holiday. The former commemorates an event of a hundred years ago, while the other celebrates what has been accomplished since.

The one keeps alive a day that may be called the foundation stone upon which has been built one of the greatest and most prosperous nations the world has ever produced, but oft times, in the manner of celebrating it at great sacrifice of life and property.

The other to commemorate what has been produced within that time, the most wonderful inventions and improvements in the history of the world. If held annually, solely in the interest of labor, will be of great benefit to its future interests.

Let them meet to review the past and see where it can be improved upon in the future. Above all other mistakes avoid running labor into politics. When a party undertakes to make out that the laboring man is robbed of a part of his earnings by the duty he owes to the government on what he consumes, he is advising of what is the reverse of truth.

The man that earns one dollar in this country would not earn more than from fifty to sixty cents for the same amount of labor in any of the old countries. Now on what necessary article does he pay half or even a quarter of his surplus on dutiable goods to the government. On the other hand the poor laborer in the old countries must consume largely the provisions sent from this country at a much greater cost to him than to our own laborer, and I cannot see how free trade can possibly work otherwise than to benefit foreign labor, at the expense of home labor.

Any one can live very comfortably in this country, and pay very little duty on foreign goods. I venture to say that labor in the United States pays more tax on the three articles of whiskey, beer and tobacco, than on all else they use; and who can commiserate with the poor laborer and say that these are necessary articles in enabling him to perform the labor?

Neither should labor contribute of its earnings to the blatant orator who is constantly trying to interfere between capital and labor, and which, in its accomplishment, ends detrimentally to the labor interest.

Capital is just as necessary to labor as water is to navigation; and the more it is fought against in the pretended interest of labor, the more timid its possessors become in using it for the benefit of an antagonistic element. Any great undertaking can only be accomplished by a union of capital and labor, working for mutual interest. H. B.

Charlevoix, Oct. 3, 1887.

Teacher's Examination.

Teachers examinations for Charlevoix county will be held as follows: At Charlevoix, on Friday, the 28th day of October, East Jordan, on Friday the 25th day of November, 1887. Examinations to commence at 8:30 and end at 5 p. m. WILLIAM HARRIS, Sec'y Board Examiners.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Detroit, Charlevoix and Escanaba Railroad Company, will be held at the general offices of the Company, at Charlevoix, Michigan, on Tuesday, the 15th day of November, 1887 at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of said company and to vote on extending the line of said road from Charlevoix, its present terminus, to the Straits of Mackinaw.

Dated this [illegible] day of October, A. D. 1887.

J. MILO EATON, Sec'y.

BAY SPRINGS

BAY SPRINGS!

We wish to call the attention of parties residing near the center of the County, that in the Basement of the Waldron Building, can be found a large stock of GENERAL MERCHANDISE, consisting of Groceries, Provisions, Dry Goods, Clothing, Boots & Shoes, etc.

CASH paid for Wood, Ties Posts, and Farm Produce. Give me a call.

Bay Springs Cash Store.

Best peaches of the season at O. W. Smith's for $2.50 per bushel.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

To Rent. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

For Sale. One span of horses, one yearling colt, two spring colts, one yoke of oxen, two two-year old heifers, two yearling heifers; must be sold soon. Terms reasonable. Inquire at this office.

The Property known as the Sweetland Sanitarium, on the South upper terrace in the village of Charlevoix, is for sale or rent. Enquire of E. H. Green, Charlevoix, Mich. tf

Mrs. Litney & Carr cordially invite the Ladies to call and examine their mammoth new stock of fall and winter millinery. Their stock comprises everything in all the latest novelties in their line. It will pay you to inspect their goods before purchasing elsewhere. adv

Horse for Sale.

A six year old gray mare, weight, 1,200 pounds; good, sound, kind and gentle. A good work horse, and a perfect horse for ladies' driving. Inquire at this office.

CLOTHING.

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.

My Prices are so Low

that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

GREAT EXCITEMENT!

OVER THE WONDERFUL BARGAINS IN LADIES,' CHILDRENS, AND GENTS' UNDERWEAR, AT

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO'S.

And there is no end to the comments on the Great Piles of CLOAK and Winter Goods, that they are offering at such remarkably low figures. And, too, their Gent's Gloves and Mittens, almost make one speechless, for never were such values given before, at least 25 per cent below all other competitors.

OCTOBER FASHION SHEETS FREE. AND ALL OF BUTTERICKS PAPER PAPER PATTERNS IN STOCK.

THIS WEEK

We open a handsome line of entirely New Patterns in

DRESS GOODS,

direct from the Manufacturers.

Victoria Plaids, new designs, popular price, 50c.
Heavy, all-wool Cloth Suitings, 27 in. 65c.
Full lines of 36 and 50 in. Flannels, 50 to 75c.

Advance Sale of Blankets, next week.

CLOAKS

We are opening the best and cheapest line of Cloaks ever offered in Charlevoix. They were not made to order especially for us, but are new goods direct from a factory which has been compelled to sacrifice.

Within a few days we shall display the finest line of

LAMPS, LAMP GOODS, GLASSWARE, DINNER and TEA SEATS that we have ever shown and at much lower prices.

COME and SEE THEM,

J. L. HURD & CO.

ALICK ROSENTHAL, LEWIS BLOCK

CLOAKS! CLOAKS CLOAKS! CLOAKS CLOAKS!

ARE HERE!

OF EVERY DESCRIPTION!

For Ladies, Misses, and Children.

COME, COME AND SEE THEM. And see them!

Alick Rosenthal, Lewis' Block.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO.--25 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1887. WHOLE NO. 934

Jos C Miller mar21 3

SCHOOL BOOKS

SCHOOL BOOK SCHOOL BOOK

BUY YOUR SCHOOL SUPPLIES AT HEADQUARTERS. WE HAVE EVERYTHING NEEDED IN THE SCHOOL ROOM, AT UNIFORMLY LOW PRICES.

F. G. HINES & CO.

We will furnish the new books adopted by the board at introduction price. Remember that we sell everything that can be called for in any of our Schools.

SCHOOL BOOKS

EMREY BROS.

Boots and Shoes for almost nothing, to close out.

We have a number of pairs of Boots and Shoes which we will almost give away as we are closing them out.

We are also going out of

CROCKERY

and have a complete assortment which must be sold

WE WILL NOT TAKE A BACK SEAT ON SUMMER DRY GOODS.

PRICES ALWAYS LOW.

IN GROCERIES and Provisions we can suit you, as we receive Fresh Goods weekly.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

We are NOT CLOSING OUT

We never did
We do not want to
We are not going to
Close out

WE AIM TO KEEP OUR STOCK Complete in Every Department AT ALL TIMES.

OUR STOCK OF STAPLE DRY GOODS ---AND--- BOOTS and SHOES, FOR THE FALL AND WINTER TRADE WAS NEVER MORE COMPLETE THAN NOW.

UNDERWEAR! We have a good line of Ladies', Gents' and Childrens' Underwear.

CLOAKS AT A BARGAIN CLOAKS

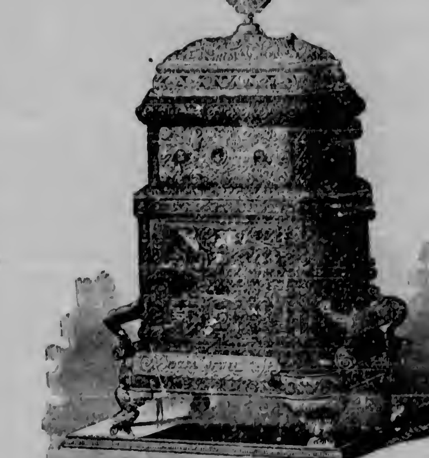
We keep Lime, Cement, Stucco & Plastering Hair, We carry a full line of

EVERYTHING

usually kept in a first class stock of General Merchandise. We aim to merit the patronage of the prompt paying trade by keeping good goods and selling everything at a uniformly reasonable price.

Resp'y Yours,
Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

Best in The World



"The Royal Jewel"

Call at our store and examine the incomparably fine line of Stoves now on exhibition.

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $ $ $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

The Best Groceries

At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture

AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

Finest Job Work!

AT THE

Sentinel Office.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year - $1 50 | Six months - $ .75

Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Remember Rosenthal's "special sale."

—Will See left for California, Thursday.

—Lew Campbell of Petoskey, was in town over Sunday.

—W. P. Brown returned from Potsdam, N. Y., last week.

—A. D. Cruickshank will make a trip to California in January.

—Miss Mattie O'Neill of Ironton schools, was home over Sunday.

—F. A. Watson is expected home from Frankfort to-morrow or next day.

—John Bell has constructed a fine six-foot side walk in front of his premises.

—The Grand Traverse county folks were unfortunate with their fair this fall. Rain every day.

—V. F. Thurston left for Frankfort to-day, overland, and will be gone three or four weeks.

—Dr. J. A. Carlstein will soon leave for a three or four weeks visit to Minnesota. Mrs. C. will go as far as Chicago and remain until he returns.

—Miss Winnie Estabrook of East Saginaw, a young lady highly esteemed on the resort, was married last Wednesday to Wm. P. Powell of Milwaukee.

—The Grand Rapids Eagle says that Dr. Wm. J. Hill, for some time at the Soldiers' Home, has been engaged as a teacher in the Hayes district, Charlevoix county.

Charley Hampton, ex-legislator, orator, greenbacker and lively editor, gets the position of secretary of the Emmet county school board, and the adjacent salary of $750 a year.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Wier of the south side resort leave to-day for their home in La Porte, Ind. They will remove to California this winter and offer their cottage here for sale.

Remember the annual cheap excursion to Detroit, Tuesday Oct. 25th, 1887. Round trip only $5.00. Tickets good 10 days; plenty of coaches; no changes of cars; everybody go. Train leaves Petoskey 8:20 a. m.; Boyne Falls, 9:01 a. m.

—Jack Saunby has purchased the S. M. See & Co. factory boiler and engine, and will put it into his Hayes mill, in the place of the present one, which is too small, and will push the institution for all it is worth. Wm. Scroggie, of this place, will put in 500,000 maple and birch logs for it this winter.

—The broad insinuation of the State editor of the Detroit Tribune, embodied in an addenda to a Charlevoix special to that paper, that East Jordan parties fired the Charlevoix county court house, is uncalled for. The SENTINEL repudiates any such nonsense. No special sent from Charlevoix on the subject to any paper, either directly or indirectly intimated such a thing, and we are in a position to know whereof we speak.

—The Secretary of State has notified all county clerks that, in order to simplify the working of the new marriage law and secure uniformity, it will be necessary for them to report as soon as possible after Oct. 1, all records of marriages solemnized under the old law, and thereafter to make their report to his office quarterly, as required by the new law. Ministers should make a note of this and send their returns to the county clerk.

—There has been a flaw discovered in the new marriage law that seriously effects it. The man has to do all the swearing for both parties in order to get a license; he can in all probability tell all about himself if so disposed, but it is barely possible that he can tell but very little about the woman he is about to marry. The woman is not required to make any affidavit at all and the minister or other persons performing the marriage ceremony need not ask any questions, nor need the bride answer any.

—Mrs. Dr. J. A. Carlstein, of this village, is the possessor of two valuable and very interesting relics, forming a part of a beautiful silk patchwork quilt, the work of her hands. It contains a piece of silk from a dress worn by the Princess of Denmark, now Empress of Russia, who was visiting her kinspeople, the royal family of Sweden, at which time Mrs. Carlstein was an apprentice in the establishment of the royal dress-maker. The quilt also contains a fragment from a dress upon which Mrs. Carlstein worked, and which graced the royal form of Queen Louisa, wife of Chas. XV., of Sweden. As stated, Mrs. Carlstein was in the royal dressmaking establishment, has assisted in fitting dresses to many royal forms has seen the present Empress of Russia many times, and has enjoyed the distinction of walking under the same umbrella with his majesty, Oscar King of Sweden, who, besides being a king is a gentleman, and mingles freely with his subjects.

—Beautiful autumn weather.

—Masonic regular next Tuesday evening.

—Potatoes are quoted at from 55 to 65 cents.

—Elmer Coulter, of Atwood, was in town yesterday.

—We want all the potatoes we can get on subscription.

—Mrs. Pope of this place, is teaching the Advance school.

—C. J. Grier and wife returned from Charlotte Saturday.

—The improvements on the M. E. church began Monday morning.

—If Sheriff Jerrne don't look out he can't vote in this county next fall.

—D. C. Nettleton and family left Monday for California to spend the winter.

—The Rifenburg Milling Co. have orders for nearly 400 barrels of flour ahead.

—A young son has put in an appearance at the residence of editor Strang.

—Romie Emrey's folks are rejoicing in the possession of a bouncing boy baby.

—Aldrich sisters report a large and growing business in millinery and dress making.

—Sims Baker has moved into town and is occupying the McLeod house, on Antrim street.

—The Hake building, adjoining the Fountain City House, is being raised and repaired.

—Nick Shores moves to Smithson's camp this week for the winter, to run the boarding house.

—James Inwood left yesterday for a sojourn in South Bend, Ind., with relatives and friends.

—Mrs. O. D. Hilton goes to southern Michigan to visit friends the latter part of this month.

Everything sold cheap at Rosenthal's on Friday, Saturday and Monday, Oct. 21, 22 and 24.

—Bryant Weed leaves Monday to attend the State Normal school at Ypsilanti for the winter.

Lew See, assisted by Montie Lewis, has charge of Bert Mason's grocery stock in the T. D. Smith building.

—By order of the Council, Street Commissioner Bonk is utilizing some of the condemned sidewalk in the park.

—Senator Stockbridge purchased 100 acres on Mackinac Island for $20,000, and will build a summer residence there and make a beautiful park.

—The ladies of the W. C. T. U. will serve a ten cent tea at the Bridge Street House this (Wednesday) evening, from 5 until 8 o'clock. Everybody invited.

—Miss Flora Nelson, intermediate teacher in the Charlevoix schools, has been tendered a grammar grade in the Charlotte high school, but declined with thanks.

—We understand W. B. Flower, photographer, formerly of Petoskey, has purchased an interest in Dan Way's outfit, and will run the gallery this winter during Dan's absence.

—The Norwood and Marion friends of Sims Baker and wife gave them a surprise, on Thursday night, on the event of their moving to Charlevoix, and a very enjoyable time is reported.

Mrs. M. S. Fogg and daughter, Miss Lizzie, mother and sister of Frank E. Fogg, who have been spending the summer in Michigan, will soon return to their home in New Hampshire.

—Dr. Allen, of Boyne City, owner of the county abstracts, says he is in the same boat with the undertaker: He is mighty sorry the man is dead, but is very glad that he is able to furnish the funeral outfit.

—The county offices at Boyne City are temporarily located in the building occupied by them before the erection of the court house. It is reported that Boyne City will rebuild the court house this fall.

—Remember the annual cheap excursion to Detroit, Tuesday Oct. 25th, 1887. Round trip only $5.00. Tickets good 10 days; plenty of coaches; no changes of cars; everybody go. Train leaves Petoskey 8:20 a. m.; Boyne Falls, 9:01 a. m.

—Ivanhoe Commandery of Knights Templar will have conclaves Thursday and Friday evenings of this week to confer the Orders of Knighthood on three prominent citizens of Sault Ste. Marie, one of them being Mr. Chapman, editor of the Democrat.

—The season's business of W. H. Downer, for C. A. Barker, will approximate the loading of 70 vessels, and the disbursement, in hard cash, of about $50,000. Mr. Downer will continue to do business at the old stand another year, with his feet on our editorial table.

—The proprietor of the Detroit Evening Journal has one of the most inventive minds we ever knew. His latest is a novel plan to advertise his enterprising paper, and is set forth in the following announcement: "One hundred dollars ($100) will be given by the Detroit Evening Journal Company to the person whom it shall decide is next of kin to any one who is killed in a railway accident, on any regular passenger train in the United States or Canada; provided the deceased shall have on his person at the time of the accident, a copy of the Detroit Evening Journal of that day or of the previous day. Never travel without a copy of the Detroit Evening Journal in your possession. Although it costs only two cents it may be worth one hundred dollars."

Religious.

M. E. Church.

On Tuesday next, normal drill and bible reading at 7 p. m. Thursday evening, prayer meeting. Sunday, morning service as usual, followed by Sunday school. Service in the evening as usual. All are cordially invited. The ushers will show you seats. W. H. M.

Marine Jottings.

The St. Ignace News says that Quin, the diver, from Detroit, is at work on the foundered propeller California.

Carkin, Stickney & Cram's big dredge, the largest in the world, is now at work on the Hay Lake channel, in the Sault river.

Capt. O. E. Wilbur appeared in the harbor Monday morning, on the pilot house of the steamer Ossifrage, that steamer having been chartered to take the place of the Grand Rapids, recently disabled. She is a fine craft, of about the same size as the Grand Rapids.

A petition is being largely signed by marine men to be presented to Surgeon General Hamilton asking for the establishment of a marine hospital at Cheboygan, and for the appointment of Dr. T. A. Perrin as surgeon in charge, and, also, that the Northwestern Hospital, of that place, be designated as the hospital.

Cheboygan Tribune: The rebuilt Champlain is much larger than before she was burned. She is 180 feet in length, and 29 feet beam. It is not determined yet whether or not to make a passenger boat of her. The fact that it is about settled that the Detroit & Cleveland Steam Navigation Co. will build two elegant steamers in the near future for the Cheboygan and Chicago route has about determined the owners to make a freight barge of her.

Oct 1—Schr Stampede 250000 ft hardwood lumber, P L L Co to Sheboygan.
4—Schr Seil, 1000 posts, 3000 ties Johnson & Co, to Milwaukee.
6—Schr Mocking Bird, 135000 ft hardwood lumber Nichells to Chicago.
8—Barge Westover, 520 tons pig iron, P L I Co. to Chicago.
8—Schr Evening Star, 180000 ft hardwood lumber P L L Co to Sheboygan.
8—Barge Mary Mills, 100 M hardwood lumber Spratt to Sheboygan.
8—Barge Fayette, 300000 ft hemlock lumber, P L L Co, 200 bu potatoes Stripp to Chicago.
8—Schr Cela Grover 100 c wood Newton to Milwaukee.
8—Schr Lottie Mason, 50 cs wood to Milwaukee
10—Schr Prince, 140 c bark French, 40 bu potatoes Master to Kenosha.
11—Schr Morning Star, 240 c bark French & Sutton to Kenosha.
12—Schr Pootla 7000 posts Downer to Chicago
12—Schr Duncan City, 8000 posts Downer to Chicago.
14—Schr Gilbert Knapp, 150 c wood, French & Sutton to Kenosha.

The Board of Supervisors.

The Board of Supervisors closed their session at Boyne City Saturday morning. The following is a synopsis of the more important proceedings:

Committee appointed to examine the damaged records of the Register's office, reported that they found from 2,590 to 3,000 instruments in condition to be transcribed, and they were instructed to cause the same to be done.

The previous offer of Mr. Waldron of property at Bay Springs for the county seat, was again submitted. It was laid on the table.

A reward of $3,000 was offered for the conviction of the person or persons who caused the destruction of the court house.

The clerk reported that the insurance on furniture had been fully adjusted. The Board voted that the insurance of $1,800 on the court house be paid over to Boyne City when adjusted.

The Township of Evangeline was divided, and the new Township of Bay set up from the west portion.

The salary of the Deputy Game and Fish Warden was fixed at $100 for the current year.

The county tax was apportioned at ¾ of 1 per cent.; State tax, two and eleven one-hundredths mills.

Bernard Burns was elected a Superintendent of the Poor in place of Wm. Black, whose term expired.

The Poor Superintendents's report showed an expenditure of $1,556 against $1,697 last year. The cost of medical attendance this year was $764.

Although the Board adjourned sine die, it is understood that there will be a January session.

—W. E. Bellows, of Reed City, has sold the Petrie Lumber Co. a tract of hemlock timber in Osceola county estimated to cut 2,500,000 feet. A fact that shows hemlock timber, which was once considered worthless, is now becoming valuable.

—The iron on the Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad was laid into Farwell on the 15th. The laying is progressing at the rate of a mile per day. Grading between Farwell and Muskegon river is nearly finished, and is expected to be done in time for the iron gang.

—A man in business without an advertisement in the papers is like a grave without a tombstone; like an engine without fire or water, or like a book agent without a tongue. Neither one is known; neither one does much, all are passed by. Advertising is the preaching of the gospel of business to those who buy or ought to buy. Doubtless one or two men would get religious if there was not a preacher in the world, but the great masses would know nothing of Christianity. So every business man will get a little trade anyhow, but unless he advertises the great mass and body of traders will pass on the other side, and the fate of business failure may come upon him.—Ex.

SQUAW CREEK.

A MODERN MAGDALEN.

BY M. C. FARLEY.

CHAPTER III.

The sweetcome sparkle.

CHAPTER IV.

WAITING.

Had to Kill Her.

No Wonder Business was Dull.

Cheaper to Move than Pay Rent.

FAIRCHILD'S ADDRESS.

The Pension Question — Reviewed from a G. A. R. Standpoint.

Commander-in-Chief Fairchild opened his address by congratulating the order upon the evidence of its permanent and healthy growth, as is evidenced in the quartermaster-general's report. He said that during the year death had claimed 3,406 comrades, conspicuous among whom was the lamented John A. Logan. The order is on a firm financial footing, $20,000 of surplus funds having been invested in United States bonds. The bond of the quartermaster-general has been raised to $15,000 and the adjutant-general has been required to give a bond of $2,000. The patent for the Grand Army badge has been duly transferred and is now the property of the order. He recommended that the incoming administration be authorized to accept the Drexel cottage, on Mt. McGregor, if the details of trusteeship and management can be arranged to their entire satisfaction, and also that the Grant memorial committee be continued for another year. He also recommended that the encampment select and designate as historian some comrade who is competent to write a complete history of the Grand Army and suggests that the general government include in the next decennial census an enumeration of the soldiers of the war of the rebellion who may be living in 1890.

In consequence of the practice of moving the national headquarters every year, the commander said that the books and other property of the order are in an unsatisfactory condition and he recommends, as a matter of economy, that the headquarters be located at some central point for a term of years and the appointment of a salaried assistant adjutant-general of experience. As it now is, he says, it takes the newly-appointed adjutant-general about the first half of the year to get his records in shape and when his office is fairly systematized he must prepare to move it.

Under the head of pensions, Commander Fairchild said: "By the creed of the Grand Army of the Republic every one of its members has promised 'To assist such former comrades in arms as need help and protection, and to extend needful aid to the widows and orphans of those who have fallen.' And [illegible] those who were not, under their existing national laws, entitled to pensions. * * * We have been for years of one mind in considering it but simple justice that the United States should at least grant a pension of not less than $12 per month to all persons who served three months or more in the military or naval service of the United States, during the war of the rebellion and who have been honorably discharged therefrom, and who are now, or who may hereafter be, suffering from mental or physical disability, not the result of their own vicious habits, which incapacitates them for the performance of manual labor. This has been publicly advocated by us, and all men, who cared to know, have been fully aware of our action, and yet, until recently, we have heard almost no objection to such measures. Because others have changed their minds, we need not therefore change ours. Our path in this direction has been straight. We have diverged neither to the right nor to the left. * * * I have recited and reiterated this well-known record of the Grand Army of the Republic for the information of those who may have been led to believe that we have recently made new and unheard-of demands for pensions. That is not so. What we ask now, in the way of general pensions, we have advocated for years. We ask it because we believe it to be right. We do not think it is demanding too much. * * * When in February last it was thought proper that the public should know the opinions of the members of the Grand Army of the Republic regarding the dependent pension bill then pending, circular No. 4 was issued from National headquarters. That circular asked for an expression of the judgment of the order, for or against the bill. The measure was almost unanimously endorsed. Greatly to our disappointment and regret the bill was finally defeated. It was said by some that there had not been a fair expression of opinion given by the members of the Grand Army of the Republic. While that assertion was not well-founded, the national pension committee, when it was determined to frame another bill for presentation to Congress, decided to place the proposed measure before each post and ask for a vote thereon, to the end that no man could truly say he does not know, with reasonable certainty, what the ex-soldiers think of it.

That vote, has been taken in a majority of the posts, and the measure has been almost unanimously approved. I venture to say that nine-tenths of the veterans favor this bill on its general merits if no other can be obtained. I believe this relief will be granted at the next session of Congress; because it has the approval of a large majority of the people. I know that many of you favor another and a broader measure of relief which will embrace all who served a certain length of time, and can shown an honorable discharge commonly called the service pension bill. I am not here to argue against that as an ultimate measure. I now only join in urging you to request Congress to give immediate relief to those who cannot care for themselves. Let us not ask the disabled comrades to wait for the relief they so urgently need now, while we debate and decide as to what other pension measures are proper. For while we debate, they are suffering. Let us do nothing which will postpone the long-coming day of relief for them. I am sure that such discussion as may be had here, on this and all other subjects, will be carried on in that broad spirit of fraternity and knightly courtesy which should ever characterize the intercourse of the members of the Grand Army of the Republic. If acrimony be allowed to enter into the discussion of this subject it will do more to disrupt and injure our order than all attacks that may be made upon it by outsiders. I hope to see, wherever it is possible to do so, posts or associations of several posts, select committees to take charge of and conduct to termination claims of pensions."

The Commander thanked the Woman's Rights Union and Woman's Relief Corps for their efforts in behalf of the ex-soldiers and paid a brief tribute to each individual member of his staff for their devotion to their exacting duties. He said he himself had devoted the whole time of his term of office to the discharge of his duties. It has been a labor of love, and, although at times most arduous, the cordial reception given to him throughout the Union, has lightened that labor and rendered it most pleasant.

He closed his address by congratulating the survivors of the grand armies of the union on the growing spirit of fraternity between the North and South.

A Barbarous Conqueror.

Timour, better known in history as Tamerlane, which is simply a corruption of Timour the Lame, was born in 1336, a son of the chief of a Turkish tribe in Kesh, Central Asia. He claimed to be, on his mother's side, a direct descendant of Genghis Khan, the great conqueror of the thirteenth century. Timour, reaching the age of maturity and becoming first the chief of his tribe and then Khan of a large province, aspired to empire dominion over all the countries once ruled by Genghis Khan. The country between the Jaxartes and Irtish Rivers was first subdued, then Khiva and all Khorassan were brought into subjection, with fearful slaughter of all who resisted. Timour now aspired to the conquest of the world. "There is but one God in heaven," he said; "there should be but one ruler on earth." All Persia was soon in his power, the country between the Tigris and the Euphrates submitted, and the princes of Georgia became his tributaries. The Mongol empire to the north was soon overthrown, and the conqueror then penetrated into Russia, threatened Moscow and laid waste the southern provinces with fire and sword. In 1398 he set out for the conquest of India, marched to the city of Delhi, marking his way with 100,000 human corpses. The city capitulated readily, and Timour, after sending an immense store of its wealth to his palace at Samarcand, was about to push his conquests to the southward when he was recalled by the news of a revolt in Georgia. This he subdued, then overran the territory of Syria, and took the revolted city of Bagdad by storm, leaving in the public square of the city a [illegible] of human heads. On [illegible], July 20, 1402, [illegible] ane, numbering [illegible] of the Turkish [illegible] 300,000 men, [illegible] totally defeated [illegible]. Timour's do[illegible] Asia, from the [illegible] Persian Gulf, [illegible] Damascus and [illegible] Solyman, a [illegible] of European [illegible] Musa ruler [illegible] and laid under [illegible] Egypt. Timour [illegible] in festivities in [illegible] he prepared for [illegible]. He set out early [illegible] had gone only [illegible] capital when he [illegible] ever. His army [illegible] the invasion [illegible]. Nearly all of [illegible] ruler were lost [illegible] his successors. [illegible] our were inde[illegible] waste a city [illegible] was said that he [illegible] the slaughtered [illegible] inhabitants heaped in a pyramid to mark the spot where the city stood. When the people of Herat rebelled, the dead bodies of 2,000 of their number were built up with alternate layers of brick and mortar into a pyramid, as a horrible reminder of the consequences of rebellion.—Inter Ocean.

Post-Pleiocene.

It has long been a disputed point, and indeed a vexed question, as to whether the so-called great Australian lion ever existed. Some interesting discoveries, however, have been recently made in the Wellington Caves, New South Wales, of undoubted remains of this animal. The bones are at present deposited at the Mines Department Museum, Sydney, and consist of several very complete jawbones, containing the teeth in an excellent state of preservation. Prior to being publicly exhibited they were submitted to the inspection of Prof. Sir Richard Owen, of the British Museum; and his opinion is that the animal was a marsupial or pouch-bearing line, fully equal in size to the existing African species. Discoveries of leonine remains have at various times been made in New South Wales, and also in Victoria, and the specimens in question are well preserved. They have been excavated from post-pleiocene deposits, and in connection with them were the remains of what are known as the Tasmanian tiger and the Tasmanian devil. An equally interesting fact is that Prof. Owen, when referring, many years ago, to the herbivorous characteristics of the "Australian Diprotodon," expressed his conviction that some large carnivorous animal must have been coexistent with him, to keep the race in check, and that probably lions then inhabited Australia, an hypothesis which has been fully verified. These facts are interesting, as helping to establish the fact of the existence in former ages of the lion in Australia.—Chambers' Journal.

PAPER doors are coming into use, and, as compared with those of wood, possess the advantage of neither shrinking, swelling, cracking nor warping. It is formed of two thick paper boards, stamped and molded into panels, and glazed together with glue and potash, and then rolled through heavy rollers. After being covered with a water-proof coating and then with one that is fireproof, it is painted, varnished and hung in the usual way.

EXPERIMENTS are believed to show that aseptol, or orthopenot-sulphate, is destined to take the place of carbolic acid as a disinfectant and antiseptic. It is a syrupy brown fluid of aromatic odor, and soluble in alcohol, glycerine and water, and is not irritating in as strong as ten per cent. solutions. As an antiseptic it is said to equal carbolic acid, while possessing also the advantage of pleasanter odor, more solubility, etc.

SOME people have no perspective in their conscience. Their moral convictions are the same on all subjects. They are like a reader who speaks every word with equal emphasis.

A CROSS dog will make the upper strand of a barbed-wire fence feel soft as downy pillows are.—Atchison Champion.

CLEARING-HOUSES were established in the United States about 1853 for the convenience and economy of banking institutions in large cities.

FORTUNE does not change the character, but reveals it.

The Capital of Canada.

Ottawa was fixed on by the Queen as the site of the capital of the new united province of Canada. Quebec, Montreal, Kingston, and Toronto put in their claims, and the contest was peculiarly keen between Upper and Lower Canada, as the position of the capital would involve at least the temporary predominance of the English or French element. The Queen, to whom the question was referred as being too difficult and delicate for provincial solution, preferred Ottawa, to the displeasure of course of every one of the other candidates, and to the general surprise of Canada. Ottawa has but lately emerged into notice from the obscure name of Bytown; it is the smallest of all the competitors, having only 15,000 inhabitants, and is far removed from the great thoroughfare of traffic in the valley of the St. Lawrence. The reasons that seemed to have influenced the Queen's counselors were these- all the other candidates were decidedly either in Upper or Lower Canada, but Ottawa is on the boundary of both provinces, the river Ottawa forming a marked division between the French and English populations. It was therefore a compromise by an arbiter, where the disputants, if left to themselves, might have pushed the case to a disruption. In case of war, moreover, Ottawa is farthest removed from the frontier of the United States, and is susceptible of being strongly fortified. Although in a part of the country that has not yet been fully opened up, it has a great extent of the very best land around it, and needs only some stimulus to become a thriving and populous center.

The city of Ottawa, like the country of which it is capital, is to be judged more by its future than its present. There are many inhabitants in it older than its first house, and I have conversed with a good old lady who lived two months on the site of the Parliament House, in a hut with a barrel for a chimney. All was then unbroken forest, and she had to wait those two months till a road could be cut to her husband's concession twenty miles off. Even now the primitive pine groves and cedar thickets can be seen close at hand, seals are seen disporting themselves in the river, and a fox who commits nightly depredations on the poultry has his headquarters beneath the Parliament House, and defies dislodgment. The town is already stretching out around, occupying at least three times the space that would be alloted to the inhabitants of the old country. Broad rectangular streets run far out into the country, many of them marked by two or three houses, some by none, but all appearing duly completed in the map. A good arrangement this, so far as light and air are concerned, when the sun is in the sky, but rather inconvenient when night comes into the question, and rain or thaw sets in. Lighting and paving then are felt to be at sad discount, or, if attempted on a comfortable scale, the pockets of the taxpayers feel the burden. It is doubtless this circumstance that makes the local taxes in American towns a more serious item than the contributions to the general revenue. Other things in Ottawa have commenced on a large scale. The hotels are metropolitan in size and appearance, and several daily papers wage fierce warfare with each other. In regard, however, to these matters, hotels and newspapers, Ottawa is not distinguished from Canadian towns of the same size. A stranger cannot understand how such large hotels can be supported in small towns, with no great influx of visitors, and yet they seem to get along and prosper. The system of boarding, instead of living in their own houses, seems to be that which supports many of them, although in Canada this does not prevail to anything like the same extent as in the States. As to the daily papers, not much that is eulogistic can be said. They are meager in general news, and pervaded by a bitter spirit of personal attack, that is happily disappearing from the old country.—Rev. John Ker, D. D.

Hindoo Workmen.

The Hindoos of British India, partly from the enervating influence of the climate and the peculiarity of their physical temperament, are generally indolent and listless. They are most unwilling to labor; and thus every species of it is portioned out, as if for the express purpose of employing the greatest number of hands possible, leaving very little for each to do. Hence the vast horde of camp-followers attendant upon our troops, whether in the field or cantonments, and the vast number of servants maintained by European residents for household duties, the absurd, yet immovable, distinctions of caste prohibiting one individual from taking part in that which is regarded as the hereditary occupation of another caste, from the days perhaps of Menou the Lawgiver. It is told, however, of Lord Dalhousie that, having requested a servant to pour some water from a basin, he declined, on the plea that it was contrary to his caste. The marquis sternly drew out his watch and said, "It is now so-and-so o'clock; if before so-and-so I am not obeyed, I shall discharge not only you, but every man of your caste in Government House." And this threat is said to have proved effectual; for in many cases the distinction of caste among servants are carefully maintained, because they favor avarice and sloth, or encourage in every way the disinclination to undergo fatigue. Thus wages are low; and it is only by the exercise of the most rigid case and frugality that the Hindoo workman or laborer and his family can live; and they certainly limit their wants to suit their means; and so instead of seeking by harder work to better their circumstances, they are content to dwell in huts, to feed on pulse and chupatties, vegetables, and ghee or oil; tobacco and betel-leaf being their only luxuries.

Punishment for an Anarchist.

Some years ago a quondam brigand chief was raised to the Presidency of Bolivia. He was noted for his long shaggy hair and beard, on which he never bestowed the slightest pains. On the day of his election he had to attend mass in obedience to the usual custom, and a barber was called in to comb and dress the matted hair and beard of his Excellency. When the tedious and painful operation was over, an official came in to inform his Excellency that there was a criminal sentenced to death and awaiting execution, but that it was customary for a newly elected President to commute the sentence into a lighter one. "Well, and what other punishment am I to give him?" inquired the President, still smarting from the recent operation. "Whichever your Excellency may please." "Then let him have his hair combed and have done with it!" was the reply.—New York Mercury.

POPPING the question has its corollary—being questioned by the pop.—Lowell Citizen.

PITH AND POINT.

NAPOLEON had his double, so had Wellington. A boy's double is a green apple.

IT may sound like an anomally, but the man discovered in crookedness is in a strait.

IT is difficult for a drinking man to hold his breath; it is generally too strong for him.—Texas Siftings.

IT is much harder to satisfy a man who fights with his mouth than one who uses a gun.—Macon Telegraph.

THE oyster is like a man in one respect. He is of little use until you get him out of his bed.—Boston Courier.

A NEVADA man who started out to look for a grizzly bear found him in time for dinner—the bear's dinner.—Puck.

THERE is an art in putting on gloves, says a fashion paper. Come to think of it, you have to get your hand in, as it were, in putting on a glove properly.

"WELL, old fellow, it's all settled. I am going to be married in two months. You will be one of the witnesses, I hope?" "Count upon me. I never desert a friend in misfortune."

WIFE (to second husband)—Ah, James, you are so different from my first husband! Husband—Yes, that's so, when you come down to the fine point. He died four years ago, and I didn't.

RUSKIN is a modest man. He says of Charles Kingsley: "He was a flawed, partly rotten, partly distorted person, but may be read with advantage by numbers who could not understand a word of me."

AN exchange says that James James, a colored man who resides at Santa Rosa, Mexico, is the oldest man in the world, being 135 years old. But is James James older and tougher than Jim Jams?—Texas Siftings.

AN agricultural journal tells farmers "how to preserve a grindstone." It is a queer notion. It would be almost as hard to insert the teeth in a preserved grindstone as in some other things the women folks preserve.

WE left our sanctum at midnight last night, and on our way home we saw a young lady and gentleman holding a gate on its hinges. They were evidently indignant at being kept out so late, as we saw them bite each other several times.—New York Journal.

AN Eastern photographer has succeeded in photographing the flight of a bullet discharged from a rifle at the rate of 1,300 feet per second. By and by he expects to be able to photograph a base-ball as now pitched by the league teams, but he'll have to secure quicker chemicals than he now uses.—Newman Independent.

A LADY lost a brooch which she prized very highly, and, being desirous to recover it, she advertised for it in a paper. Her advertisement had appeared but a few times, when, on going to her bureau drawer, she there saw the missing brooch, looking as natural as ever. We always thought there was efficacy in advertising, and this instance is conclusive.

A DISTINGUISHED diplomatist from the United States of America, a very genial and sociable being, soon after his arrival in London made the round of the sights—Madam Tussaud's among the number. "And what do you think of our waxwork exhibition?" asked a friend. "Well," replied the General, "it struck me as being very like an ordinary English evening party."—English Exchange.

"I GUESS I'd better withdraw from the church for two or three months," said a Dakota man to the minister. "Why, how's that brother, what's the matter?" inquired the pastor. "I feel three or four cyclone lies sort of working around in my mind and they've got to come out. Just give me a leave of absence for say ninety days and I'll be back again with you next fall. I believe they will be some of the thunderingest cyclone lies ever told, and I don't want to disgrace the church."—Dakota Bell.

The Extinct Australian Lion.

It has long been a disputed point, and indeed a vexed question, as to whether the so-called great Australian lion ever existed. Some interesting discoveries, however, have been recently made in the Wellington caves, New South Wales, of undoubted remains of this animal. The bones are at present deposited in the mines department museum, Sydney, and consist of several very complete jawbones containing the teeth in an excellent state of preservation. Prior to being publicly exhibited they were submitted to the inspection of Prof. Sir Richard Owen, of the British museum, and his opinion is that the animal was a marsupial or pouch-bearing lion, fully equal in size to the existing African species. Discoveries of leonine remains have at various times been made in New South Wales, and also in Victoria, and the specimens in question are well preserved. They have been excavated from post-pleiocene deposits, and in connection with them were the remains of what are known as the Tasmanian tiger and the Tasmanian devil. An equally interesting fact is that Prof. Owen, when referring many years ago to the herbivorous characteristics of the "Australian Diprotodon," expressed his conviction that some large carnivorous animal must have been coexistent with him, to keep the race in check, and that probably lions then inhabited Australia, a hypothesis which has been fully verified. These facts are interesting, as helping to establish the fact of the existence in former ages of the lion in Australia.—Chambers' Journal.

Hospital Children.

Children are generally an element of brightness and innocence in hospital life; they so easily forget past pain, are ready to be amused and willing to return the love expended upon them. Yet even among the little ones there are sometimes patients who seem hopelessly degraded, for whom it appears impossible to desire anything but death. Such a one was Tommy, a little imp who was banished from the children's ward as too mischievous to be retained there any longer, and was therefore supplied with a crib among the men. Tommy was by the nature of his malady excitable and the students delighted in making faces at the weird little creature till his shrill laughter rang through the ward. Tommy seldom spoke save to jerk out an oath, and his delight was in destruction. If he could reach a flower or catch a fly, he pulled either to pieces with equal unconcern and both counterpane and crib bore marks of his mischievous propensities. When the nurse was attending to him she had to keep a careful watch, or a bite or scratch, would repay her ministrations. Even after a two months' residence, when his malady was much better, he showed no signs of gratitude or affection to those who had cared for him so long.—All the Year Round.

REMINISCENCES OF PUBLIC MEN.

BY BEN: PERLEY POORE.

William A. Wheeler's wife died while he was a member of the House of Representatives, in the April before he was elected Vice President. That evening some of his brother Congressmen, with a view of rousing him from the stern silence of his grief, went in where he sat beside her remains, and told him of the exposure of Gen. Belknap, coupled as it universally was with Mrs. Belknap's name. There was a long pause, in which he did not seem to have heard what they were saying. Then he uncovered the dear face, and casting upon it a look full of anguish, said: "I would rather my Mary were lying here than for her to be that unhappy lady." Mr. Wheeler was a schoolmaster while studying his profession, and while occupying for the first time the master's desk, in a country village in New York, a little 10-year-old maiden came tripping in as one of his expectant flock, and gave her name modestly as Mary King. At 18 Mary King became Mary Wheeler, and for thirty years they shared a union that was infinitely sweet and tender.

Early in the war 100 army wagons were manufactured for the Government in New Hampshire, under a contract which provided for their delivery at Kingston, where they were inspected, accepted, and sent by railroad to Perryville on the Susquehanna River, opposite Havre de Grace. When they arrived there they were again inspected by Capt. C. G. Sawtelle of the quartermaster's department, who refused to accept them, or to approve the bill of $14,100 for them. So the wagons were packed and remained at Perryville, in full view of the passers-by on the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad. In 1863 a committee of the Senate made a report, recommending that the wagons be accepted and paid for, and an item in an appropriation bill for this was about to slip through when Oakes Ames heard of it. While on Gov. Andrew's council early in the war he had purchased army wagons, and he knew that this lot of them were flimsily made, of cheap stuff, and worthless. He at once sent to his friend Felton, the President of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad, to have one of the wagons put on a platform car and sent to Washington that night, without fail. The next morning the wagon was in front of the Capitol, and as the Representatives arrived, Mr. Ames requested them to step out, and examine for themselves. Need I add that the claim was defeated. This was one out of many instances in which the sterling good sense and practical honesty of Mr. Ames (the father of Gov. Ames) was of great use to the Government during the war. Such a man should never have been made the scapegoat of a lot of politicians, who at that time were greedily enriching themselves.

John C. Colt (who afterward perfected the revolving fire-arms) came to Washington with his submarine torpedo, which he exhibited one pleasant afternoon in the Potomac, in the presence of at least fifteen or twenty thousand people, who thronged both shores. At the hour appointed, a salute was fired from the Navy Yard, in compliment to the officers of the Government, etc. Presently afterward, Mr. Colt sent up from the center of the river a magnificent water-spout, or jet, which was the signal for the commencement of the experiments. Lieut. Boyle then got the ship under way, with all her colors flying and sails set. He then went through the ceremony of christening her, and gave the appropriate name of "The Styx." After she had sailed some distance, and was steady in her course up the river, and her helm lashed, she was abandoned, and a rocket was sent up by Lieut. Boyle, to notify Mr. Colt that he might commence the action. The ship was going with the wind and tide, at the rate of about six miles an hour. Mr. Colt first discharged a heavy battery at some distance ahead of the ship, and then two more, simultaneously, at a distance near enough to her to agitate her somewhat. This was done to show that the batteries could be exploded separately or together, and that in a river or harbor, a friendly ship would be exempted from the destruction, while a hostile ship could be blown up very near her. Soon afterward the water was seen swelling under the bow of the ship, and she was hurled with tremendous force into the air. For some time nothing was distinguishable, but when the vapor had cleared away, it was seen that the whole of the ship, as far astern as the mizzenmast, had been torn into small fragments. There was not a piece of the forward part of the ship left as large as a handspike. The stern, with a part of the mizzen-mast, appeared above water, but not afloat; it settled down into the mud. If she had been struck amidships, there would not have been one timber left fastened to another. Another beautiful column of water was then sent up at a distance from the ship, which closed the exhibition.

The Neapolitan.

The visitor who uses his faculties of observation is not long in making the discovery that the Neapolitan is of a different race to the dwellers in the surrounding country, and he is probably amused to hear with what scorn he is spoken of by his neighbors. No greater insult can be offered to a man hailing from Procida or Capri, or one of the insignificant neighboring islands, than to assume him to be a Neapolitan. And so finely is this distinction drawn that the people living in Santa Lucia, the very heart of Naples, decline to be classified as Neapolitans. In fact, the different "sezioni," or districts into which Naples is divided, speaks a distinguishable patois, and though a stranger has some difficulty in discovering why the Luciani consider themselves superior to the other sections of the community, there is obviously a wide difference between an inhabitant of Naples and an ordinary Italian. In the first place, the Court of Naples in the Bourbon times always spoke French or Neapolitan, and utterly discountenanced Italian. Nothing that could be done to keep Naples Neapolitan was omitted, and everything that could be done to distinguish it from Italian was done. Hence the difference in race was widely accentuated. The Italian learned to look upon the Neapolitan with something more than disfavor. But there is a much more intelligible reason, and one which the stranger is not slow to discover for himself. For lying and cheating the true Neapolitan has no equal; his ways are as childlike and bland as those of our friend the heathen Chinee, and it is a marvel if, in any transaction, he does not succeed with equal cunning in transferring some of your cash to his own pocket without an adequate quid pro quo. Even the Jew is found to be beaten at his own game here, and has never gained a foothold in Naples. Self-respect and shamefacedness are unknown to the Neapolitan; he preserves the most unruffled demeanor in the face of being caught in downright robbery. It is scarcely to be wondered at, then, that his more upright neighbor protests against being confounded with a race he despises.—Murray's Magazine.

"Travel Light."

A venerable old clergyman whose wife died lately said: "We lived together more than forty years, suffered pain and sorrow together, bore poverty, comforted each other in all kinds of hardship and trouble, yet it is strange that of all our life, when I look back, one week comes up before me most vividly, and is the most tender and sweet.

"It was a week we took once for a holiday; we went away up to the mountains. I fished, and she carried the basket. Everybody thought we were foolish, but ah, how sweet it was! I learned to know her better than ever before."

In American cities there is a large class of persons who live to amuse themselves, but in the country there is a still larger number who never amuse themselves at all. There are men and women in our villages and farms who live solely to provide the means to keep alive. Incessant drudgery and the perpetual friction of their minds upon each other make their tempers irritable, their judgment narrow, and even their religion hard and bigoted.

"Nothing widens and lightens our lot so much as travel," says Brunot. "It is like putting windows into a prison. We look out of our own narrow life into all the chances and changes of human destiny."

Travel does not, however, always widen the life and mind of the tourist. Arctic seas or African deserts have nothing new or instructive for the man who goes about the world wearing his own petty needs and opinions over his eyes and ears, like the man in the iron mask.

"I had a miserable time," said an old woman, whose son had taken her to visit the Atlantic cities and Niagara. "I couldn't get a decent cup of coffee anywhere."

Many fashionable American women, who run over to Europe every year, know nothing of Paris but the modistes; of Brussels but the lace shops; or London but the furriers.

A more pitiable spectacle even than these purblind travelers is to be seen in all our summer resorts, where countless commonplace Blanks and Dashes, who are leaders of fashions in their own little towns, stand haughtily aloof, wrapped in their self-importance, afraid to make acquaintance with their fellow-creatures lest they should not receive the homage which they think their due.

"Travel light, if you mean to enjoy yourself," says Dr. Rupp, in his advice to bicyclers. "Leave all your heavy clothing, jewelry, and self-conceit at home."

The sovereigns of Europe, when they wish thoroughly to enjoy a journey, travel incognito. Queen Victoria, when last upon the continent, was known only as a baroness. Would it not be wise for the great people of our villages, when they go abroad, to assume some such comfortable disguise?

Or, wiser still, should they not recognize the fact that this haughty aloofness and assumption of superiority marks them as belonging to a small provincial circle? It shows that they have not gained breadth and liberality by travel or intercourse with the world.—Youth's Companion.

Facing a Hostile Audience.

Only the best singing will be tolerated by a Madrid audience, a fact of which I saw an illustration that was almost tragic. A young American had come there, much heralded, and under an engagement for six nights. She had already sung one night before I heard her, and had failed to please. For this evening another prima donna had been announced, but she had been taken ill, and the American girl unexpectedly appeared in her stead. The rest of the company was as good as could be desired, and met with a hearty welcome.

When the American sang she was quietly disregarded, save when, now and then, a distinct hiss would come from some of the least fashionable portions of the house. How I pitied her as I saw her stand there, with all those hostile eyes looking her over, all that sea of scornful faces turned toward her! How could she go on? But not to do so would have been to forfeit her engagement and lose all that was her due. Upheld by I know not what sense of stern necessity, she steadily sang her part through. When a scene was applauded she stood aside, with her pale face and her set lips, knowing that no share in the applause was for her. Not one expression of Spanish approval or encouragement sustained her from beginning to end. I felt that no gladiator fighting in an arena ever displayed a more dauntless courage.—The Cosmopolitan.

Sympathy Among Fowls.

In the beautiful city of Newton, a few miles from Boston, a flock of pigeons was accustomed to feed with a large number of hens. Both hens and pigeons were on good terms with each other, and seemed to enjoy the mutual companionship. One day the strength of the friendship was tested, and its value to the weaker party was clearly proved.

A cat, bent on mischief, sprang suddenly on one of the pigeons, as all were feeding together, and, seizing him in her mouth, was making off.

Instantly there was a commotion. Two rooster and two or three hens chased the common enemy, and, by their noise and various pecks, so frightened the cat that she dropped the pigeon and ran away.

The partners gathered round the pigeon apparently to see if it was fatally injured; but no harm had been done, and the pigeon soon gathered strength to fly off, when the brace of chanticleers joined in vigorous crowing, to celebrate their great victory. The incident was a touching one to all who saw it, showing that fowls may have such a regard for companions as prompts them to help each other in trouble.

First Governor of Illinois.

Few people nowadays, if asked who was the first Governor of Illinois, would answer Patrick Henry. Yet this is the case. An act was passed by the authorities of Virginia in October, 1778, creating the county of Illinois (in the State of Virginia), which embraced the territory now forming the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin, making probably the largest county ever organized, exceeding the whole of Great Britain and Ireland; and thus the great orator of the American revolution, Patrick Henry, then Governor of Virginia, became the first Governor of Illinois.—Chicago News.

THE AGE OF WOMEN.

The Advance from Richardson's Pamela to Our Day.

[Brooklyn Times.]

The age of women is what they call this last quarter of the nineteenth century sometimes. Of a certainty whatever else it may or may not be, nobody could pronounce it the age of the girl. The girl has had her day. A long day it was and a sunny one, but she does not seem at present likely to get another.

No change wrought in the last hundred years is more marked than the steady advance in the period of life at which the feminine part of humanity is thought to reach its prime. When the novel originated its first heroine was the 14-year-old. Richardson's Pamelas, Clarissas and their kin might better be 13 than very many years above it. Sweet 16 and blooming 17 reigned in the pages of Irving and Cooper, dominating the sentiment of a half to a third of a century ago; 20, 21, and 22 were the next favorites springing up with the women's colleges, as the better education of girls kept them in the schoolroom and out of society longer, while the mature woman of 27 or 33 quite as frequent nowadays finds herself brought to the fore in the modern novel which is a fairly truthful reflex of the civilization it tries to represent.

History and society chronicles tell the same tale as the novel. When the French Revolution was hatching, the wild sayings and gay doings of Marie Antoinette fed the discontent, and yet she whom the folk of Paris judged so harshly and took so seriously was a girl of 14 when she was taken out of the nursery and lifted to the throne. Benedict Arnold's wife was under 20 when his disgrace bowed her to the ground, and pretty Dolly Payne before she became Dolly Madison at 24 had been a quaker belle, had kept house for Mrs. John Tod, had sorrowed as a widow and bloomed out through several years of belledom again. Our granddames not so many generations removed on whom we look back with the awe and reverence that hedge an ancestor were very youthful dignitaries indeed when they took the responsibilities of life upon them. As the boy went to college at 14 so the girl took her place in society, married at 16, had a brood of children while yet under age, and was relegated to knitting work and caps while hardly mature, ending all active career under 40, at an age when the modern woman feels that she is just coming to the full command of her powers.

From being passee at 20 to being charming at 30 tells in itself the whole tale of woman's growth for the past century. That peculiar combination of angel and idiot which was the ideal woman was unthinkable except in the teens. Idiocy was angelic after the first score of years. The rosebud is delightful and everybody loves it, but there is not a woman left who would care to be always 18. Up to 35 a woman is not now at all abashed at owning her age. She knows she has but gained in charm; she knows that the man who fought shy of taking her out to dinner during her first season, and who was mute and bored during the whole time that he sat by her side, will seek her out in company now, and will recognize her added experience and maturity by giving her credit for common sense in the talk which he begins with her. She knows that where her crudeness used to drive off people worth knowing, she can at her will call them about her now.

Frau Von Stein was past 30 when she carried off Goethe captive after he had weathered the dangers of the younger Lillis Charlotte and the rest. And in New York or any of the country's great centers to-day it is not the younger women whose positions in the only society that is worth the name is happiest or best established. The woman who marries is 25 when she used to be 15. The woman who gathers about her any circle that deserves the name of salon is Mary E. Booth at 50; Mrs. Marth J. Lamb, with the gray hairs coming; Mrs. Frank Leslie; Jenny June, with a third of a century of active work in the city behind her; or at the youngest, Miss Grace H. Dodge, on the border line of the thirties; women who are often better looking and always better worth seeing than when they were younger. It is a tribute to the common sense of the day that things should be as they are. The world will always feel and acknowledge a girl's fresh charm. There is nothing else quite like it. But the mature woman, whose face has thought and knowledge in it is the woman who is crowned queen after all.

Men of Genius.

So far from being narrow the man of genius must, one should say, be broad in the range of his conception, if not in that of his execution. There is a sense, indeed, in which every artist would be the gainer by becoming universal. Thus the poet and the painter may each profit from a full and exact study of the facts of natural sciences. But then the artistic benefit depends on the subject being studied not as a savant would study it, merely for the sake of precise knowledge, but for the sake of the poetical aspects, relations, and suggestions which the facts present. So true is this that one is hardly going too far in laying it down as a canon that a painter ought not to be a good reasoner on the causes of natural phenomena, and that a painter ought not to be an authority in the realm, say, of purely historical or ethical discussion.

The lives of great men often shown us a strange and perverse inclination to break through the bounds of their proper domain. More than one man of undoubted genius has, it is averred, expressed regret that he had not attained distinction in some other line than his own. Wolfe, when actually engaged in his last crowning feat of generalship, is said to have declared that he would sooner have written Gray's "Elegy." Goethe, not satisfied to be the greatest German poet, was ambitious to become a servant as well. Suchs facts appear at first sight to contradict our theory, that superlative performance of any kind implies a corresponding concentration of impulse. Yet the contradiction is only apparent. We may be sure that Wolfe—who, by the by, became a soldier soon after he was 13—was, on the whole, more passionately desirous of military than of poetic distinction, just as we know that in Goethe the poetic impulse was the most potent and permanent. Such occasional roving ambitions may mean nothing more than that the great man, like the small one, is apt to overestimate what lies beyond his reach, or perhaps that he, more than common men, is aware of the limitations that hem him in, and is now and again disposed to rebel against them.—Gentleman's Magazine.

CLEVERNESS is a sort of genius for instrumentality. It is the brain of the hand.—Coleridge.

The Newspaper as a Household Companion.

Business houses fail and customers go elsewhere and buy, without delay or discomfort; trade goes on, after the little ripple of excitement dies out, pretty much the same as before; huge structures torn down, and in a short time others rise in their places, and the neighborhood soon forgets the loss; but when the presses of an old journal stop, and the face of the accustomed counselor, guide, and friend fails to be seen at the morning meal, fresh, clean, attractive, and full of matter for study and entertainment, an exclamation of surprise is heard in thousands of households. "Where is the paper?" would be the question from the child to the gray-head. If it were announced that the presses would revolve no more, many a father would feel like putting crape at the door-knob for an old, familiar, and well-beloved friend, whose face would never be seen again. Happily, this rarely happens. When a journal wins its way by merit and faithfulness in the performance of duty into the heart of the family, they are loath to turn it from the door as time goes on. One generation loves it as the preceding did. It is the old friend who has seen the faces of all the ancestors, and its presence is always welcome. It knows their history. Men who make newspapers wear out and die like other people. A black line or two along the page and a few words in a column tell that the writer has laid down his pen, and that the weary hand and once whirling brain have stopped work forever. But such a one leaves his mark and example behind. His work has gone into the journal as a part of its character, and the man who takes up the worn pen he dropped strives to preserve its individuality and its strength.—Baltimore American.

The Sales of "Pickwick."

The publishers of "Pickwick" sent out, "on sale or return," 1,500 copies of each of the first five numbers to all parts of the provinces, but the only result was an average sale of fifty copies of each number! The publication was practically a failure, and it was seriously debated whether it should be discontinued or not. In the fourth number Sam Weller had appeared on the scene, and fortunately at this juncture attracted great attention, calling forth admiration by the freshness and originality of the conception. Sam was received with acclamation by all, and arose to an unheard-of popularity. The sale of the ensuing numbers suddenly increased, and at the completion of the work it had attained to 40,000 copies! When the twelfth number was reached the publishers sent the author a check for £500 as a practical expression of their gratification. During the publication of the work Dickens received from the same source several checks, amounting to £3,000, in addition to the fifteen guineas per number which it was agreed should be paid him. It was understood at the time that Messrs. Chapman & Hall made a clear profit of nearly £20,000 by the sale of the "Pickwick Papers," after paying author's expenses.—Temple Bar.

A Useful Precaution.

It is a useful precaution for the tourist, the commercial traveler, or the emigrant to the West, to take along Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Invalids who travel by steamboat or rail should provide themselves with it, in order to prevent or remedy the nausea which the jarring and vibration of vehicles in transitu often causes them. Vastly preferable is it for this simple, but needful purpose, to the heady unmedicated stimulants of commerce. On board ship, it not only remedies sea-sickness, but neutralizes the pernicious effects of water slightly brackish, which, if unqualified, is apt to give rise to irregularities of the bowels, cramps in the abdominal region, and dyspepsia. To the aerial poison of malaria it is an efficient antidote. Sick headache, heartburn, and wind upon the stomach, are promptly banished by it. It healthfully stimulates the kidneys and bladder, and nullifies the early symptoms of rheumatism.

The Diet of Strong Men.

The Roman soldiers, who built such wonderful roads and carried a weight of armor and luggage that would crush the average farm hand, lived on coarse brown bread and sour wine. They were temperate in diet and regular and constant in exercise. The Spanish peasant works every day and dances half the night, yet eats only his black bread, onions, and watermelon. The Smyrna porter eats only a little fruit and olives, yet he walks off with his load of 100 pounds. The coolie, fed on rice, is more active and can endure more than the negro fed on fat meat. The heavy work of the world is not done by men who eat the greatest quantity. Moderation in diet seems to be the prerequisite of endurance.—Scientific American.

THOUGH electrical storage batteries have attracted attention only within the past seven years, the discovery of the principle is as old as the century, Gausherot having first noticed in 1801 that platinum or silver wires gave off a current after being disconnected from a voltaic battery with which they had been used for decomposing saline water. The first secondary cell of Plante was made in 1860.

The Correct Time.

There are very few men who do not pride themselves on always having the correct time, and wonderful and delicate mechanisms are devised to enable them to do so. But the more delicate a chronometer is made the more subject it becomes to derangement, and unless it be kept always perfectly clean it soon loses its usefulness. What wonder, then, that the human machine—so much more delicate and intricate than any work of man—should require to be kept thoroughly cleansed. The liver is the mainspring of this complex structure, and on the impurities left in the blood by a disordered liver depend most of the ills that flesh is heir to. Even consumption (which is lung scrofula) is traceable to the imperfect action of this organ. Kidney diseases, skin diseases, sick headache, heart disease, dropsy, and a long catalogue of grave maladies have their origin in a torpid or sluggish liver. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, by establishing a healthy, normal action of the liver, acts as a cure and preventive of these diseases.

BY a wise provision of Providence, close beside the little tree on which nutmegs grow often stands a greater.—Texas Siftings.

$500 Reward

Is offered, in good faith, by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy for a case of catarrh which they cannot cure. It is mild, soothing, and healing in its effects, and cures "cold in the head," catarrhal deafness, throat ailments, and many other complications of this distressing disease. 50 cents, by druggists.

A NORTH of England ferryman has the following motto: "No crown, no cross!"

If Sufferers from Consumption,

Scrofula, Bronchitis, and General Debility will try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and permanent benefit. The Medical Profession universally declare it a remedy of the greatest value and very palatable. Read: "I have used Scott's Emulsion in several cases of Scrofula and Debility in Children. Results most gratifying. My little patients take it with pleasure."—W. A. HULBERT, M.D., Salisbury, Ill.

A CROW bar—Putting a muzzle on a rooster.

A Memory of Early Days.

The Confidence

Hood's Sarsaparilla

100 Doses One Dollar

PENSIONS

OPIUM Habit Cured.

OPIUM

Ely's Cream Balm

RRR RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

KIDDER'S DIGESTYLIN

TO NON-UNION PRINTERS.

THOUSANDS

THE CHEAPEST AND BEST MEDICINE FOR FAMILY USE IN THE WORLD!

MARVELOUS MEMORY

PILES

PATENTS

KIDDER'S PASTILLES

JONES HE PAYS THE FREIGHT. $60.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN

Sioux City, Iowa

PAYNE ENGINES.

ENGINES AND BOILERS

WRITE FOR CIRCULAR AND TELL US WHAT YOU WANT.

B. W. PAYNE & SONS,

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER The Best Waterproof Coat.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets

THE ORIGINAL LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS!

SICK HEADACHE,

$500 REWARD is offered by the proprietors of DR. SAGE'S Catarrh Remedy

FOR A CASE OF CATARRH WHICH THEY CAN NOT CURE.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH.

DR. SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE.

PRICE, 50 CENTS.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1880.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, OCT. 19, 1887

In Kansas a building in which liquor is sold is liable to be forfeited to the State. The liquor dealers get around this by setting up saloons in tents.

It must have been an unusual sight to see an audience clapping their hands in church as they did in Dr. Newman's church at Washington one Sunday recently, when that clergyman struck the popular chord and declared that the Chicago anarchists ought to have been hung long ago.

France seems to have lost nothing by Boulanger's retirement. Though an excellent organizer, he was fond of display and of theatrical methods, and accomplished much less than he got credit for. Ferron, his successor, has worked more industriously and more quietly, and is solidifying and organizing the French people into a formidable army. The Germans may have cause to regret their insisting on Boulanger's taking a back seat.

Ex-Senator Jones, of Florida, is still in Detroit, and is suffering from brain trouble. A friend says of it: "It has been coming on gradually for years, but is as gradually growing worse. He is a man of strong will, and evidently has in his own mind realized this breaking down of his mental faculties. He withstands all efforts on the part of his sons and daughter to induce him to take medical treatment, to leave his present location, or make any changes which would be likely to prove beneficial to his condition. His sons are unremitting in their attentions to him, though they must find the burden a heavy one, for the Senator had accumulated little if anything, in a financial way, and he still insists upon living at a prominent hotel in Detroit. The three boys are faithful, affectionate, hard-working sons, and do for their father the best they can. Yet they undoubtedly see, as anybody must who is familiar with his case, that his condition is gradually growing worse, and is entirely a hopeless one now."

Thus far in his speech-making tour Mr. Cleveland has given evidence of only one quality useful to a public speaker—a sense of humor. Here and there is a touch of it that by contrast with the rest of the Government Printing Office matter he offers his Western audiences shows to decided advantage. It would be well for Mr. Cleveland to cultivate humor rather than statistics, and above all to avoid boyish complaints. He had a narrow escape at Milwaukee the other night from another outburst of peevishness like the famous one at Harvard. Referring to the Presidency, he spoke of those who thought their duty as citizens fulfilled "by settling down to bitter, malignant, senseless criticism" of the actions of the incumbent, and characterized as still more unpatriotic those "who, having neither party discontent nor fair ground of criticism, to excuse or justify their conduct, rail because of personal disappointment, who misrepresent for sensational purposes," etc. Mr. Cleveland's notion that he is very badly treated is puerile, and shows a lack of courage. He is the spoiled child of politics.—Grand Rapids Eagle.

In lower Broadway and Wall street there may frequently be seen a ponderous man, whose six feet of height disappears completely in his great girth and huge shoulders, and large, heavy face. His hair hangs in long locks that are touched with gray. He wears neither beard nor moustache. He carries his chin high up in the air, his enormous head dropping back close to his shoulders as if from sheer weight. An expansive neck and throat is thus disclosed that reminds one of a turtle thrusting the back from under the shell. This is Gen. James M. Ashley. He was a Territorial Governor and Congressman during an exciting period of national history, and, as the exponent of the Radical Republican element of Congress during the administration of President Andrew Johnson, was given the title of "the great impeacher." You would know from his face that he had been ranked among statesmen, from his chest and throat that he had the voice of an orator. Ashley represented the Toledo Congressional District of Ohio for so many terms that the Republicans there broke up into factions, and Frank Hurd came to the front. Ashley left the Republican party, affiliated with the greenbackers and Democrats, and finally dropped into the noble army of "has beens" at least ten years ago. The power and force that he exercised in public life has been turned to advantage in constructing and managing the Toledo & Ann Arbor R. R. line, and he is said, after much difficult financiering, to be at least fairly prosperous in his undertaking.—Free Press.

Northern Michigan News.

Daniel Blakeley, of Eastport, is putting in a stock of goods at that place.

J. W. Cook, the Petoskey boat builder, has orders ahead for clinker boats which will keep him busy at work until next June to fill.

The $5 excursion by the G. R. & I. and D. L. & N. roads, will come off Oct. 25th. This early notice will give people opportunity to prepare for it.

Mrs. E. C. Beach of Atwood, had a sale last week, disposing of her farming tools, stock and household furniture. She goes to Florida soon.

The Wilson Hoop Co. is shipping large quantities of hoops on the Friant to Harbor Springs to ship via rail to various points. The factory will run all winter.

Palmiter Bros. will have their saw-mill ready for operation before winter closes in, it being on the dock at Bay Springs, ready to be removed to East Jordan as soon as they can get the foundation ready.

Frankfort Express: The California party consisting of W. H. Francis and family, Miss Annie Smith, Miss May King, Joseph Fullarton, Ben Averill and Bert Crittendon, left for their new home Wednesday.

The Petoskey Democrat advocates the purchase of a snow plow by that village before the snow comes, so as to be prepared. The Brazel snow plow, manufactured by Thompson Smith's Sons, is the best plow for the business, and we would advise our neighbors to send in their orders at once.—Cheboygan Tribune.

Robt Richardl, of Bellaire, returned last week from a business trip to Germany. Mr. Richard has secured the right of a "wave subduer," an apparatus to be hung on the side of a vessel or life boat and which automatically distributes oil over the waves, thereby breaking their force. He also holds a patent on an improved school seat, so regulated as to fit children of all ages.

Citizen: The county board of school examiners held their first meeting under the new law Monday evening, 3d inst., and elected Wm. Harris of Norwood, as secretary. The two examiners holding over, with the Judge of Probate, constitute the board. The secretary is obliged to visit each school district at least once during his term of one year and performs the usual duties of secretary.

Petoskey Democrat: Charlevoix is agitating the subject of securing a driving park and the incorporation of an agricultural and industrial exposition. If Charlevoix once makes up her mind to have a driving park and exposition, there is no power on earth that will prevent her. Her people are united upon any and all enterprises that will benefit the town; and will not let political differences, or the grinding of personal axes defeat the project.

Mrs. Dr. Sweetland has closed the sanitarium for the winter, and taken rooms at the Newman house, where she will give metaphysical treatment, or prescribe her remedies, as her patients wish.—Charlevoix Journal. Queer! As the doctrine upon which "metaphysics" rests, is that disease exists only in the mind, and cannot be reached except by and through the mind, and consequently medicines or "remedies are useless frauds, it would seem that the "metaphysical" patients of the doctor aforesaid would lose faith in her metaphysical soundness.—Petoskey Record.

Glenn & Porter have sold their mill to the East Jordan lumber company, Messrs. Ames & Frost, of Chicago, taking a large interest in the company, which also takes the general merchandise stock of J. C. Glenn. W. P. Porter will retain an interest in the company and will have personal supervision of the mill and lumber interests, while R. R. Glenn will take charge of the merchantile department. J. C. Glenn will retire from active business, and with his family will, in about two weeks, go east where his family will remain during the winter while he will visit the great west, taking in California.

Bellaire Breeze: All but three of the townships in this county have sent in petitions for an opportunity to vote on the prohibition question. Several of the petitions are quite numerously signed, and the names of more than the required one-fifth of the voters have already been secured. This insures the submission of the question, and as soon as the remainder of the townships can be heard from the petitions will be presented to the County Clerk and the campaign will begin in earnest.——John Harriman, of this place, has just received notice of the allowance of his pension claim with arrears amounting to little over a thousand dollars. The claim was filed about the close of the war, but no progress was made in its prosecution until less than a year ago, when it was placed in Roswell Leavitt's hands. Mr. Harriman was a sergeant in the 14th New Hampshire regiment.

East Jordan Enterprise: Sheriff D. B. Jerrue returns to Chicago to-day.——Dr. Bennett tells us that they are having a severe bout of typhoid fever at Dwight's. But the furnace is the much canvassed topic here at present. The Antrim County Iron Furnace Company have accepted a deed of twenty-two acres of land and are negotiating with Messrs Hodge and Phelps for an adjacent forty acres. They will clear off the ground and build kilns this winter. Work on the foundations for the works will be commenced as soon as the frost is out of the ground in the spring, and by August it is expected that the furnace will be in blast. Like the Elk Rapids plant, it is expected to utilize the smoke and from it make creosote, wood alcohol, etc. Between four and five hundred men will be employed, counting wood choppers, and it is evident that Boyne Falls the prettiest town on the G. R. & I. so long deserving, is on the eve of an era of prosperity that will be substantial and permanent.

The latest project on foot at Mackinac Island is a scheme to build an electric railway around the Island. The parties interested in and getters up of the scheme are prominent rail road men and steamboat owners of whom Mr. E. B. Whitcomb, general passenger agent of the Detroit & Cleveland Steam Navigation Co., is the most prominently mentioned. Mr. Whitcomb was up to the Island this week, looking after a franchise from the village council, which franchise he secured readily. The scheme is to build a railway all around the island, following the shore as near as possible so as to command a view of the lake, in all a distance of about 12 miles. The motive power will be electricity and the same machinery used by the railway will be used to light the town with electricity. If satisfactory arrangements can be made with the local power and the right-of-way readily secured Mr. Whitcomb promises to have the railway built and in complete running order inside of a year and a half. The estimated cost of the building and equipment of the road is $65,000.—St. Ignace Watchman.

Northport correspondent Telegram Herald: Stories of buried treasures have been too numerous in the past to invite credence, or even attract serious attention, and the one I am about to relate is given simply because efforts have recently been made to discover the hidden wealth. About thirty years ago while the Mormons were living on Beaver Island, and a few of them were located on the South Fox Island, a sailor died in a hospital in Cleveland. Before he died he confided a secret to the physician who attended him. He claimed that a few years before, he and a companion stole $15,000 in gold from a vessel they were in and buried the money on the South Fox Island. He described the place so minutely that the doctor thought he would have no difficulty in finding it, and accordingly organized a small expedition to go in search of it. The story of the buried treasure was known to the Mormons, but they had no idea of the supposed location of the mine, and eyed with suspicion all who came to the Island. No sooner had the doctor landed and begun his search than his errand was suspected and he was informed that if he found any money the occupants of the land must have a share. He was too familiar with their insular habits to proceed with the search, knowing that not only all of the treasure, but probably his life would be the penalty of its discovery. He made up a story of being driven ashore there, and to give a plausible appearance to his story, managed to drive his small craft ashore to her eminent disadvantage. After suitable repairs had been made he and a companion were allowed to depart. Five years afterward, and after the expulsion of the Mormons from this part of Michigan, the Doctor once more landed at the same place to prosecute a search for the hidden gold. The appearance of the land had undergone a change and the primeval forest had been transformed into a field of ripening grain—not a landmark described in the dying sailor's statement remained, the land having been acquired by Robert Roe, who still owns and cultivates it. The place where the money is supposed to be buried is on Mr. Roe's farm, and not far from his house, but all efforts to find it have proven futile, so far as known. Only a few weeks ago a man came here from some distant place, hired a sail boat to take him to the island, but he failed to strike pay dirt and only remained a few days. Every little while some one goes poking about the grounds there in the hope of finding some of the glittering root of all evil, but the moment anything like that is begun, many pairs of eyes are watching them, and the search is abandoned. Louis Boursaw the assistant lighthouse keeper on the island, thinks he knows the location of the treasure, having surveyed the ground on numerous occasions, and says he will begin digging for it the very first time he can do so without being watched.

Dress Goods!

A good assortment of Plain and and novelty Dress Goods.

DRESS TRIMMINGS IN PLUSHES, VELVETS, CORDS, SETS, AND BRAIDS. Also Buttons.

Our stock of Ladies Jackets and Cloaks is of the best make, with prices to suit the times. It will be to your advantage to call and see our Ladies and Gents underwear before purchasing.
REMEMBER: A full line of staple Dry Goods in stock.

Cor. Bridge & Main sts. B. SEE.

Charlevoix Savings Bank.

Notice is hereby given that a meeting of the Stockholders of said Bank will be held on Saturday, the 29th day of October next at 4 o'clock p. m., at their banking office, in the village of Charlevoix, county of Charlevoix, state of Michigan, for the purpose of electing seven Directors for said Bank and the transaction of such business as may be required to be transacted at the regular annual meeting of said Stockholders.
Dated Charlevoix, Mich., Sept. 27th, 1887.
JOHN NICHOLLS, Vice Prest.

Dissolution Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the co-partnership heretofore existing between George Burns and Wm. Scroggie, under the firm name of Burns & Scroggie, at Charlevoix, Mich., is this day dissolved by mutual consent. Wm. Scroggie and Dean Burns are authorized to collect all debts due said firm, and will also pay all the liabilities of said firm. Wm. Stevens and Sassan Burns succeed Mr. Scroggie, and the business will be continued at the old stand under the firm name of Burns, Stevens & Co. All accounts due the old firm can be paid at the office of Mayne & Kate. Dated at Charlevoix, this 3d of October, 1887.
GEORGE BURNS.
WILLIAM SCROGGIE.

Michigan State Land Office,

Lansing, Sept. 24th, 1887.

Notice is hereby given, that the following described Swamp Land, situated in Charlevoix county, heretofore licensed as Homesteads, which land has reverted to the State, will be Restored to market at this office on the 10th day of November, A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock a. m., and will be subject to sale according to the form prescribed by law.
ROSCOE D. DIX, Commissioner.

Description.	Section.	Town.	Range.
N E ¼ of S E ¼	7	34 N	7 W

Michigan State Land Office,

Lansing, Sept. 24, 1887.

Notice is hereby given, that the following described Primary School and Agricultural College Land, situate in Charlevoix county, forfeited for non-payment of interest, will be offered for sale at public auction at this office on the 10th day of November, A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock a. m., unless previously redeemed according to law.
R. D. DIX, Commissioner.

PRIMARY SCHOOL LAND.

No. of Cert.	Description.	Sec.	Town.	Range.
20550	SW ¼ of SE ¼	16	34 N	7 W
AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE LAND.
15505	N ½ of NW ¼	32	32 N	4 W
17888	N ½ of S E ¼	6	32 N	7 W
20010	SW ¼ of SW ¼	32	32 N	4 W
20045	SW ¼ of NW ¼	32	32 N	4 W
20045	[illegible]	32	32 N	4 W
20046	[illegible]	32	32 N	4 W

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. Probate Court for said County. At a session of the Probate Court for said County, held at the Probate Office, in the village of Boyne City, on Monday, the 3d day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, Jas. A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of James Otis, deceased. A. Buttars, Administrator of said estate, comes into Court and represents that he is now prepared to render his account as such Administrator. Thereupon it is ordered that Monday, the 7th day of November next, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for examining and allowing such account, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office in the Village of Boyne City, in said county, and show cause, if any there be, why the said account should not be allowed. And it is Further Ordered, that said Administrator give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said account, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.
(A true copy.)
JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Probate Notice.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix, holden at the Probate Office in the Village of Boyne City, on Monday, the 5th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the Estate of Isabella Wilson, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John H. Wilson, praying that an administrator be appointed for said estate. Thereupon it is Ordered, that Monday, the 7th day of November, at one o'clock in the afternoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further Ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County of Charlevoix, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.
(A true copy.)
JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the money secured by a certain mortgage, dated the 2d day of August, 1883, executed by Levi House, and Emily House, his wife, of the Township of Hayes, county of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, to Edwin M. Clark of Charlevoix, Michigan. Said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for said county of Charlevoix, in Liber Eight (8) of Mortgages, on page one hundred and ninety-one, (191) on the 25th day of August, 1883, and said mortgage was, on the 24th day of October, 1883, duly assigned by said Edwin M. Clark to Martha J. Ayers, of Plattsburg, Clinton county, New York: said assignment was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said county, on the 25th day of October, 1886, in Liber ten (10) of Mortgages, on page four hundred and eighty-five, (485) and said mortgage is now due and owned by the said Martha J. Ayers. And, whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said Mortgage at the time of this notice, is the sum of Two Hundred and Nineteen Dollars and sixty-two cents, ($219.62) of principal and interest, and no proceedings having been instituted at law or in equity, to recover the debt now remaining due, or any part thereof: Now therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises in said mortgage described, or all of those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the Township of Hayes, in the county of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Lot three, (3) and the south-west quarter of the north-east quarter, of Section Nineteen, (19) in Township Thirty-four, (34) North, of Range Seven (7) West, containing seventy (70) acres, more or less, according to the United States survey, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with the costs of this foreclosure, and the stipulated costs therein mentioned, which will be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the Village of Boyne City, in said county of Charlevoix (that being the place where the Circuit Court in and for said county is held), at one o'clock in the afternoon, on the 15th day of November, 1887.
Dated, August 17th, 1887.
MARTHA J. AYERS, Assignee.
J. M. CLARK, Attorney for Assignee.

The Kalamazoo "DAILY TELEGRAPH."
Contains the Associated Press Dispatches
Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

STANDARD TIME.

Charlevoix and East Jordan.
STR. NORTH STAR,..............CAPT. MEL THOMPSON
Leaving Charlevoix at 6:30 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. and returning leave East Jordan for Charlevoix at 9:30 a. m. and 4 p. m., touching at intermediate points both ways.

Charlevoix and Boyne City.
STR. JOSEPH GORDON..........CAPT. LEWIS GEARD.
Leave Charlevoix at 6:30 a. m. and 1 p. m., and Boyne City at 9:30 a. m., 4 p. m., touching all way ports.

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan.
STR. THOS. FRIANT,.........CAPT. R. VANDERHOEF.
MORNING: Leave Harbor Springs, 7:30; Petoskey, 8:00; Charlevoix, 9:30; arrive, East Jordan 11:30.
AFTERNOON: Leave East Jordan 1:30; Charlevoix, 4:00; Petoskey, 5:30; arrive, Harbor Springs, 6:00.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE.
PROP. LAWRENCE,..................Capt. Geo. Tucar.
Going North, Chicago Fridays 8 p. m.; Charlevoix, Sundays 4 p. m.; Cheboygan, Mondays 9 a. m.
Going South, Cheboygan, Mondays 4 p. m.; Charlevoix, Tuesdays 8 a. m.; Milwaukee, Wednesdays 4 p. m.; Chicago, Thursdays 12 m.
Fordey Bros., agents, Charlevoix.

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS.
CITY OF GRAND RAPIDS,........Capt. H. E. Wilber.
Going North, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays: Leave Traverse City 7 a. m.; Northport 9:30; Charlevoix 11:30, Petoskey 1:30 p. m.; Harbor Springs 2; Cross Village 4:30; Mackinac Island 7:45 arriving at St. Ignace 8:20.
Going South, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, Leave St. Ignace 6 a. m.; Mackinac Island 7; Cross Village 10:15, Harbor Springs 12:45 p. m. Petoskey 1:15, Charlevoix 2:45, Northport 5:15 p. m., arriving at Traverse City at 7:15 p. m.
J. L. Hurd & Co., Agents, Charlevoix.

Probate Notice.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for said county, held at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, on the 6th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the Matter of the Estate of Hugh Miller, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John C. Miller, praying that a certain instrument now on file in this Court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, may be admitted to probate, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Albin Stover and Robert Miller, the executors named in said will, or some other suitable persons. Thereupon it is ordered that Thursday, the 13th day of October next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.
(A true copy.)
JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Bank of Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security
Is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its Capital and conservative management.

Its Officers
Never Speculate. Their business creed is: That to Speculate with ones own money, is folly, that to do so with the money of others, is criminal.

Security in Banking
Is the question of first importance to both Bankers and Depositors; and, believing that it furnishes unusual guarantees, therefore,

This Bank Invites
People generally to intrust their money to its keeping. Just liberally will mark its dealings.

This Bank Will
Borrow Investment money when desired, paying as large interest thereon as shall be compatible with safe use of the money.

Parties Seeking
Productive employment for money, and desiring to escape the expense and trouble of the management of private investments, will find attractive security in this Bank's

Investment Notes,
Now earning Five per cent. yearly interest. These notes afford investors much more perfect security than Savings Bank deposits.

We Solicit Your Patronage.

WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK
DETROIT, - - MICH.
$500,000 TO INVEST IN BONDS
Issued by cities, counties, towns and school districts of Michigan. Officers of these municipalities about to issue Bonds will find it to their advantage to apply to this Bank. Blank Bonds and blanks for proceedings supplied without charge. All communications and inquiries will have prompt attention.
May 87. S. D. ELWOOD, Treasurer.

For Sale.
A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix. tf

Land for Sale.
I have 5 acres just east of the cemetery, one mile from town, nearly all cleared, which I will sell cheap for cash, or approved paper. Address
JAMES METCALF, Charlevoix.

Land for Sale.
I offer for sale the south half of the south-east quarter of section seventeen, (17) in Township Thirty-three (33) North, of Range Eight (8) West, known as the "Weltzel place" in Marion. Apply to
THOMAS WEST,
12m3 457 Lafayette St., Grand Rapids

CROSS & SONS.,
Buy and Sell all kinds of
Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.
Charlevoix, - Mich.

CHARLEVOIX Savings Bank.
Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.
Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; F. A. Smith, Cashier.
DIRECTORS:
Henry Bennett, O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls, A. Buttars,
A. R. Upright, A. Fox,
F. A. Smith.
CAPITAL, ... $25,000
SURPLUS, ... 2,000
The liabilities of Stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art. 3174, Sec. 40 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. Superior facilities for the transaction of every legitimate branch of Banking business extended to our customers on terms as favorable as are consistent with safety.
Drafts drawn direct on the leading commercial cities of the world in large or small amounts. Money to loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest.
We respectfully solicit your patronage.
CORRESPONDENTS:
NATIONAL PARK BANK - - - - NEW YORK.
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK - - - CHICAGO.
NAT. CITY BANK - - - - GRAND RAPIDS.
DETROIT NAT. BANK - - - - DETROIT.

160 Acres in MARION
Township For Sale at a Bargain, Terms to suit.

MONEY TO LOAN ON
Approved Real Estate Security.
THEODORE R. CHAPIN, Boyne City.

JOHN CONNOR,
Fashionable
Boot and Shoe MAKER.
Hand Sewed French Calf Gaiters, $5; Men's Kip and Calf Boots, $4.50, Half-soling, 50 cents. Defy competition.
All Work Guaranteed.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,
ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR,
—ON—
Chalevoix Summer Resorts.
I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.
I employ only first-class workmen, both
Carpenters and Painters.
Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention
J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller
Offer a
Mammoth Stock
OF
BOOTS, SHOES
and other
FOOT WEAR,
--AT--
LOWER PRICES
Than can be found elsewhere in the County.
We have just secured a
FIRST-CLASS
SHOEMAKER,
And will make Repairing a specialty.
We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.
NOTHING SHODDY.
Fox & Miller.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.
The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter chapped hands chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter

RIFENBURG MILLING CO.
Charlevoix, Mich.
Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealer
3 EXTRA GRADES OF
FLOUR
Feed, Corn Meal, Graham
We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL
Litney & Steimel
LIVERY,
And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.
Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the
BEST BOATS!
The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references.
I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the
LEAST MONEY!
All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.
LEAVE ORDERS
with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.
Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.
J. BEAUVAIS.

BETTER THAN MEDICINE!
KEEP YOUR FEET WARM.
You can't enjoy good health unless you clothe the feet properly.
D. SHERWOOD & CO.
have just received the finest line of Fall and Winter
BOOTS & SHOES
ever brought to Charlevoix. Give them a call.

A. J. McLEOD,
Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail
All kinds of
FRESH MEATS,
SALT PORK,
SMOKED & SALTED
HAMS,
Dried and Smoked
BACON, DRIED BEEF,
Bologna, Head Cheese,
Sausage.
Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.
Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.
A. J. McLEOD.

Washburn & Ackert,
FOUNDREYMEN,
MACHINISTS,
And Manufacturers of The
Charlevoix Plow.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!
Builder and Manufacturer of
BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.
Sheet Iron Work given special attention.
MARINE WORK
a specialty.
HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED. W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PAILTHORP & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st. Charlevoix. Office hours 8 to 10 a. m., 6 to 8 p. m.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post-office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 233, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 101, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 130, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.
President—Byron See.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—R. Suffield.
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Iddings, W. A. Brown and C. Y. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Geo. W. Crouter, R. W. Miller, S. M. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Berdan.
All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - - Mich.
Every convenience for the travelling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
Lorenzo Cook, Manager
Charlevoix, - - - - Mich.
The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE.
W. C. Newman, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and Dock work done at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. E. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. R. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. [Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.]

DENTIST

N. J. PERRY, Dentist. Office in West's Drug Store, Charlevoix, Mich.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R.R.
Time Card for Petoskey.
IN EFFECT, JULY 1887.
Leave Going North: *6:05 a m, 5:02 p m, 8:05 p m
Leave Going South: *4:50 a m, 2:15 p m, 10:55 p m
* daily. † daily except Saturday.

Michigan Central
The Direct Route Between
Mackinaw City & Detroit
Jackson,
The South and East.
Trains leave Mackinaw City 8 a m daily except Sunday and 10 p m daily arriving at

Detroit	9.10 p m and 11 a m
Jackson	10.30 p m and 11.20 a m
Toledo	10.55 p m and 4.45 p m
Buffalo	6.15 a m and 8.07 p m
Cincinnati	6.35 a m and 6.40 p m

WAGNER PALACE SLEEPING AND PARLOR CARS.
W. H. JOHNSTON, Mich. Pass Agt, Grand Rapids
O. W. RUGGLES, G. P. & T. Agt, Chicago

DULUTH, SOUTH SHORE AND ATLANTIC R'Y.
"SOO-MACKINAW SHORT LINE."
Only Direct Route to Marquette and and the Iron and Copper Regions of Lake Superior.
Traversing the most Picturesque portion of Upper Michigan through a country unequalled for Hunting, Fishing, Etc.
Two Through Express Trains daily in each direction to which are attached
NEW, ELEGANT and COMMODIOUS
OBSERVATION PARLOR CARS & WAGNER SLEEPING COACHES
Tickets over this route are on sale at all principal ticket offices. Full information as to rates etc., maps and folders will be furnished. Address
E. W. ALLEN,
Gen Pass. and & Tkt Agt, Marquette, Mich

The Savior's Sentence.

A correspondent sends what he believes to be a correct translation of the sentence pronounced by Pontius Pilate on Christ. He says that this curious document was discovered in A. D. 1280, in the city of Aquill, in the Kingdom of Naples, in the course of a search made for the discovery of Roman antiquities, and it remained there until it was found by the Commissaries of Arts in the French army of Italy. Up to the time of the campaign in Southern Italy it was preserved in the sacristy of the Carthusians, near Naples, where it was kept in a box of ebony. Since then the relic has been kept in the Chapelo Caserta. The Carthusians obtained, by petition, leave that the plate might be kept by them as an acknowledgment of the sacrifice which they had made for the French army.

The French translation was made literally by members of the Commission of Art. Denon had a fac-simile of the plate engraved, which, on the sale of his cabinet, was bought by Lord Howard for 2,890 francs:

"Sentence pronounced by Pontius Pilate, Intendant of Lower Galilee, that Jesus of Nazareth shall suffer death by the cross. In the seventeenth year of the reign of the Emperor Tiberius, and on the 25th of March, in the most holy city of Jerusalem, during the pontificate of Annas and Caiaphas, Pontius Pilate, Intendant of the Province of Lower Galilee, sitting in judgment in the presidential chair of the Pretor, sentences Jesus of Nazareth to death on a cross between two robbers, as the numerous testimonials of the people prove that: 1. Jesus is a misleader. 2. He has excited the people to sedition. 3. He is an enemy of the law. 4. He calls himself the Son of God. 5. He calls himself falsely the King of Israel. He went to the temple, followed by a multitude carrying palms in their hands. It likewise orders the First Centurion, Cutillius Cornelius, to bring him to the place of execution, and forbids all persons, rich or poor, to prevent the execution of Jesus.

"The witnesses who have signed the execution against Jesus are: 1. Daniel Robani, a Pharisee. 2. John Zorababel. 3. Raphael Robani. 4. Capet. Finally he orders that the said Jesus be taken out of Jerusalem through the gate of Tournea."—Notes and Queries.

How and When to Take Water.

According to Dr. Leuf, when water is taken into the full or partly full stomach, it does not mingle with the food, as we are generally taught, but passes along quickly between the food and lesser curvature toward the pylorus, through which it passes into the intestines. The secretion of mucus by the lining membrane is constant, and during the night a considerable amount accumulates in the stomach; some of its liquid portion is absorbed, and that which remains is thick and tenacious. If food is taken into the stomach when in this condition it becomes coated with this mucus, and the secretions of the gastric juice and its action are delayed. These facts show the value of a goblet of water before breakfast. This washes out the tenacious mucus, and stimulates the gastric glands to secretion. In old or feeble persons water should not be taken cold, but it may be with great advantage then taken warm or hot. This removal of the accumulated mucus from the stomach is probably one of the reasons why taking soup at the beginning of a meal has been found so beneficial.

Read the Looking-Glass.

I read a sensible article in a London newspaper the other day recommending people to study their countenances by aid of their mirrors. As a general thing, it is not necessary to tell your acquaintances to look in the glass. They do so without being told, and everyone is aware when she does her face wears an expression quite unlike that seen by other eyes. Disappointment at the reflection, for the vision rarely comes up to the expectations and hopes of the vainest mortal, perhaps, but as far as animation goes there is not a trace in the best French plate ever made. This writer suggests her readers should make a practice of smiling and talking, if not eating, before their mirrors just to observe and correct the grimaces with which they favor the world around them. One of the first lessons a singer receives should be this, to watch her countenance while singing.

Precisely as an actor or actress studies a part before a glass, so should the non-professional society man or woman learn how to smile, to be charming, not to screw their faces into knots, or to fall into tricks with such features as nature has blessed them with. An agreeable smile, without affectation, a graceful carriage, are only results of training, and they become habits quite as easily as less pleasing tricks and mannerisms. There are people who appear tolerably well in repose, yet the instant they speak or laugh change to the grotesque and worry the beholder almost to death. A quite pretty actress, who has been seen more or less in society, spoils the contour of her face the instant she opens her mouth to speak. A little control of the muscles of the lips would obviate the fault and make her far more interesting. But wouldn't this study of the countenance make one very self-conscious? asks the reader. Possibly it might; yet, as self-consciousness is a prevailing sin, I see no reason why one can not add to it the grace of expression, and thus neutralize its evil effect. A sweet and gracious manner is always worth cultivating even if it takes a mirror to bring it to perfection.—Boston Herald.

Rose Marble in Tennessee.

The commissioner of agriculture, statistics and mines yesterday received over a dozen specimens of East Tennessee marble. The collection embraces different varieties of black, gray, and mahogany colored marble, the latter being susceptible of the finest polish and resembling in appearance a block of fine-grained mahogany. This species of marble is very rare; the only other quarry of it in the United States is in California. The most remarkable part of the story is that all the different kinds come from quarries on one farm containing not over twenty acres, situated in Hamblen county, East Tennessee, just three and one-half miles from Morristown. The quarry has just been opened.—Nashville Union.

Mrs. Annie Maupin, of Gasconade County, Missouri, is a well-preserved woman. She is ninety-eight years old, can walk two miles at a stretch, and has seventy-two grandchildren.

A Houseful of Snakes.

Years ago a young lawyer of Savannah took his wife and their eldest son to the "springs" in the Barnwell district, South Carolina. In those times, says the Savannah News, even Saratoga had but two hotels, in the shape of large wooden buildings, very unlike the "palatial residences" now erected even at the south; so you may suppose the one in Barnwell was nothing to admire. A dwelling-house with wings and a few small buildings around constituted the "hotel."

When the Savannahian got there no room could be found for him unless he would occupy an outhouse of logs, used for fodder, one-half being supplied with a plank floor, the other being the natural soil. As a party was to leave in two days, these accommodations were accepted—father, mother, and son sleeping in one bed, and the servant-girl where she could. The first night they slept soundly until after midnight, when they became aware of things scampering and gliding over the floor, overhead, and in one instance over the bed. As the light increased they found that their visitors were rats and chicken snakes, but they disappeared very soon. They determined to risk another night, especially as the strictest search could detect the presence of neither rat nor serpent. About the same hour of the night there was a repetition of the occurrences of the night before, and, having discovered that the serpents were only chicken-snakes, the travelers slept on, although the boy declared that something had crawled over his face toward morning. The father dressed and retired, and the mother got up at the proper time. Her habit was to put her keys, stockings, and bags under her pillow before getting into bed. Slipping her feet into her shoes, which had heels, she put her hand under the pillow from which she had just risen, when she felt the cold skin of the snake. She told the child to jump out of bed, and as he did so she slipped off one of her shoes, held it as a hammer, jerked away the pillow, and as the serpent raised its head struck it a deadly blow. It squirmed to the floor, writhed a little, and lay still. To her horror she then discovered it to be a moccasin. The house was within fifty yards of a swamp, which abounded with those interesting reptiles. Upon being complimented on her coolness and bravery, she admitted that had she not thought it a chicken-snake she would have acted differently. She was not one of that kind that scream and jump on chairs at the sight of a little mouse, moreover was a Beaufort girl, like her sex generally in Port Royal, able to break a marsh tacky, steer a boat through the surf, play a drum-fish, and then shine in a drawing-room among the brilliant men and women who then abounded on our seacoast from the Santee to St. Mary's.

The Tichborne Curse.

It seems that in the time of Henry II. a Sir Roger Tichborne married an heiress named Mabel de Lymerstone. She proved to be a Lady Bountiful, always soliciting her knight to give to the poor. These entreaties he constantly refused until, when she became bedridden, he tauntingly offered her for the poor as much ground as she could crawl around. She actually succeeded in covering fifteen acres—hence the name of the field.

Before Lady Mabel died she desired that the rental of these fifteen acres be given annually to the poor every Lady Day, March 25, in the shape of small loaves. She said:

"If any Tichborne deprives the poor of this dole the family shall be punished by the fulfilment of my curse. May the house then fall, the name change and misfortune come. The fulfilment shall be foreshadowed by a generation of seven sons and then one of seven daughters."

Toward the end of the last century the baronet of that day was petitioned by the neighboring gentry to stop the dole as a bad precedent. He complied.

In 1802 this same baronet, the father of seven sons, pulled down the mansion, which he said was inconvenient and decayed. The tower was so solid that gunpowder had to be used to make it fall. He was succeeded by a son who had seven daughters. The title next successively passed to his two brothers. The last of these—father of the drowned Sir Roger and Sir Alfred, sire of the present baronet—did change the family name by making it the double one of Doughty-Tichborne, for which the royal license was obtained.

Then came the misfortunes—the mysterious death of Sir Roger, the almost ruinous lawsuit, the birth of the present baronet after his father's death and the humiliation of the boy's grandmother, Lady Tichborne, stooping to fraud and perjury in supporting the Orton claimant.

Curiously enough this dole proved a turning point in convicting the claimant. He swore that it was distributed in silver, whereas the jurors decided if he had been the heir he must have known that it was in loaves. The dole has, however, been resumed, substituting sacks of flour for baked bread.—New York Herald.

The Value of Accuracy.

The recent publication of the life of Charles Reade, the celebrated English novelist, has brought to light some interesting reminiscences of the man and his methods of work. His habit of collecting a vast number of newspaper scraps concerning odd people, places and happenings, is well known, but it will probably be new to most readers to learn that this custom was adhered to in obedience to a resolution formed as early as 1853. In writing of his intention to become a novelist, he says: "I propose never to guess where I can know."

He adds that this plan "will, I see, cost me undeniable trouble," but the immense mass of reference material he left at his death proves how steadfast he was in adhering to his determination.

A like resolve to know, rather than to guess, would be of immense help to us all, whether novelists, business men or schoolboys. Contingencies are arising every day in which he who can positively testify to a fact possesses an immense superiority over another who only "thinks it may be so."

For instance, make free use of the dictionary for words concerning whose meaning you have merely an ill-defined idea. The correct manner of their pronunciation should also be inquired into, for it happens that young people make use of terms gathered from their reading, with the significance of which they are perfectly familiar, but which they have never heard correctly pronounced.—The

Miraculous Escape.

W. W. Reed, druggist, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "One of my customers, Mrs. Louisa Pike, Bartonia, Randolph Co., Ind., was a long sufferer with Consumption, and was given up to die by her physicians. She heard of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and began buying it of me. In six months' time she walked to this city, a distance of six miles, and is now so much improved she has quit using it. She feels she owes her life to it." Free Trial Bottles at Dr. G. W. Crouter's.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Dr. G. W. Crouter.

FOR LAME BACK, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents.

SHILOH'S COUGH and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

SHILOH'S VITALIZER is what you need for Constipation, Loss of Appetite, Dizziness, and all symptoms of Dyspepsia. Price 10 and 75 cents a bottle.

CROUP, WHOOPING COUGH and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

DAN'L S. WAY,
Photographer.
In Bradbeer's Gallery.
Photographs of all sizes taken.
Old Pictures copied and enlarged.
CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

W. H. FRANCIS
FURNITURE
—AND—
JOBBING SHOP,
Will also do
Contracting & Building,
In Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.
I keep in my shop a full set of hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc. on short notice.
Shop on South Terrace,
Opposite Sheriff Berdan's residence.

MILLINERY,
FANCY GOODS,
DRESS-MAKING.
We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.
DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.
ALDRICH SISTERS.
Ingleside Building.

C. H. Maddaugh,
MERCHANT TAILOR.
I have just received a fine line of Samples of first-class Fall & Winter Tweeds. Call and look them over.
Fine Samples of
OVERCOATINGS!
now awaiting your inspection.
Call and see me, Satisfaction Guaranteed.

CHARLEVOIX
Manufacturing Co.
Charlevoix, Mich.,
Manufacturers of
Sash and Doors,
Blinds, Mouldings etc.
NEWELL
Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails
kept in stock.
Window & Door Frames made to order.
All Kinds of
Building Material
Kept constantly on hand.
PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS,
Furnished on application.
Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building
Correspondence solicited.

New JEWELRY AND SILVER WARE.
I have just received a very fine stock of
Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc
which I will sell at Prices lower than the same goods can be purchased outside.
Did it ever occur to you that by patronizing home Merchants you were benefiting yourselves?
All classes of Repairing done quickly.
C. R. BELLINGER.

Burns, Stevens & Co.
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

W. A. REYNARD,
Has just received at his Fruit Store in the Lewis Block, a choice line of Vegetables and Fruits
OF ALL KINDS,
TO WHICH OTHERS WILL BE ADDED IN SEASON.
I will also keep in stock a full line of
Tobaccos and Cigars.
Butter and Eggs a Specialty.

Farming Lands
500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.
These lands are timbered with beach and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets
By Water and Rail
And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.
The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the center of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is
Not a Wilderness by any Means.
It contains a population of 250,000 souls and is rapidly filling up with settlers from almost every state in the Union.
Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.
and for English or German Pamphlet, Address
W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner.
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.
TITLE PERFECT.

For Finest
JOB WORK,
Patronize The
Sentinel.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY.

Will not stick to the iron or blister the goods, easy to use, makes your linen look like new at home. Ask your grocer for Celluloid starch. It is pure and economical.

HUMPHREYS'

DR. HUMPHREYS' BOOK
Cloth & Gold Binding
144 Pages, with Steel Engraving,
MAILED FREE.
Address, P. O. Box 1810, N. Y.

NOS.	CURES	PRICE.
1	Fevers, Congestion, Inflammations	.25
2	Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic	.25
3	Crying Colic, or Teething of Infants	.25
4	Diarrhea, of Children or Adults	.25
5	Dysentery, Griping, Bilious Colic	.25
6	Cholera Morbus, Vomiting	.25
7	Coughs, Cold, Bronchitis	.25
8	Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache	.25
9	Headaches, Sick Headache, Vertigo	.25

HOMEOPATHIC

NOS.	CURES	PRICE.
10	Dyspepsia, Bilious Stomach	.25
11	Suppressed or Painful Periods	.25
12	Whites, too Profuse Periods	.25
13	Croup, Cough, Difficult Breathing	.25
14	Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions	.25
15	Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains	.25
16	Fever and Ague, Chills, Malaria	.50
17	Piles, Blind or Bleeding	.50
19	Catarrh, Influenza, Cold in the Head	.50
20	Whooping Cough, Violent Coughs	.50
24	General Debility, Physical Weakness	.50
27	Kidney Disease	.50
28	Nervous Debility	1.00
30	Urinary Weakness, Wetting Bed	.50
32	Diseases of the Heart, Palpitation	1.00

SPECIFICS.
Sold by Druggists, or sent postpaid on receipt of price.—HUMPHREYS' MEDICINE CO. 109 Fulton St. N. Y.

STOVES!

AHEAD AGAIN!
THE Round Oak Heating Stoves.
NEW STYLES
Cook Stoves!
Saws & Axes
Job and Tin Work.
L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

F. A. COCHRAN & CO.,
(Successors to PERRY WEED)
Druggists and Pharmacists,
A FULL LINE OF
Drugs and Medicines.
We keep in stock a large assortment of well selected POPULAR MUSIC. Call and see it.

M. S. MOULTON,
WATCHMAKER & JEWELER,
Charlevoix, Mich.
Personal Atttention given to Watch Repairing.
Key-wind Movements changed to Stem-wind and warranted as good as the best.
JEWELRY Repairing done in the best manner.
Having had 30 years experience I am confident I can give the best of satisfaction

MARVELOUS PRICES!
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION
Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. The following books are published in neat pamphlet form, and all are printed from good type upon good paper. They treat of a great variety of subjects, and we think no one can examine the list without finding therein many that he or she would like to possess. In cloth bound form these books would cost $1.00 each. Each book is complete in itself.
1. The Widow Bedott Papers. [illegible]
2. Winter Evening Recreations, [illegible]
3. Back to the Old Home. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Hidden Perils."
4. Dialogues, Recitations and Readings, [illegible]
5. The Standard Letter Writer for Ladies and Gentlemen, [illegible]
6. The Frozen Deep. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
7. Red Court Farm. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne," etc.
8. The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott. [illegible]
9. In Cupid's Net. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
10. Amos Barton. A Novel. By George Eliot, author of "Adam Bede," "The Mill on the Floss," etc.
11. Lady Gwendoline's Dream. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
12. The Mystery of the Holly Tree. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
13. The Budget of Wit, Humor and Fun, [illegible]
14. John Bowerbank's Wife. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
15. The Gray Woman. A Novel. By Mrs. Gaskell, author of "Mary Barton," etc.
16. Sixteen Complete Stories by Popular Authors, [illegible]
17. Jasper Dane's Secret. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Aurora Floyd," etc.
18. Fancy Work for Home Adornment, [illegible]
19. Grimm's Fairy Stories for the Young. [illegible]
20. Manual of Etiquette for Ladies and Gentlemen, [illegible]
21. Useful Knowledge for the Million, [illegible]
22. The Home Cook Book and Family Physician, [illegible]
23. Manners and Customs in Far Away Lands, [illegible]
24. 37 Popular Ballads. [illegible]
25. Called Back. A Novel. By Hugh Conway.
26. At the World's Mercy. A Novel. By Florence Warden, author of "The House on the Marsh," etc.
27. Mildred Trevanion. A Novel. By "The Duchess," author of "Molly Bawn," etc.
28. Dark Days. A Novel. By the author of "Called Back."
29. Shadows on the Snow. A Novel. By B. L. Farjeon, author of "Bread and Cheese and Kisses," etc.
30. Leoline. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Brenda Yorke," etc.
31. Gabriel's Marriage. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "No Name," etc.
32. Reaping the Whirlwind. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Old Middleton's Money," etc.
33. Dudley Carleon. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc.
34. A Golden Dawn. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne," etc.
35. Valerie's Fate. A Novel. By Mrs. Alexander, author of "The Wooing O't," etc.
36. Sister Rose. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
37. Anne. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne."
38. The Laurel Bush. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
39. Robinson Crusoe. [illegible]
40. How to Make Poultry Pay. [illegible]
41. Parlor Magic and Chemical Experiments, [illegible]
42. Gems of the Poets, [illegible]
43. Building Plans for Practical, Low-cost Houses. [illegible]
44. Anecdotes of Public Men—[illegible]
45. Æsop's Fables. [illegible]
OUR UNEQUALLED OFFER.
We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00, or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms
Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS.
Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.
If you want a quiet place to get a shave, hair dress or bath call and see me.
JAY L. PRICE.

NEW SHOP!
All kinds of Blacksmithing,
At the
Shop in the Foundry Building.
Horseshoeing a specialty.
ALL WORK GUARANTEED.
M. SCOTT.

WANTED!
Potatoes, Onions, Apples, Peaches and Blueberries.
We have an old established trade and can place stock to best advantage. Consignments solicited. Correspondence invited from shippers. Stencil and shipping tags furnished.
W. H. THOMPSON & CO.
Commission Merchants,
No. 166 South Water St,
CHICAGO, - - ILL.
Reference: Felsenthal, Gross & Miller, Bankers, Chicago, Ill. 3mo

JAS. A. GELLICK,
Dealer in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS.
We call Special Attention to our
Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES.
We also keep continually on draught
Milwaukee Export and lager Beer.
Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

WORDS BY WIRE.

The Latest News by Telegraph from All Parts of the World.

Political Gossip, Railroad Notes, Personal Mention, and Occurrences of Lesser Note.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

NEW YORK GREENBACKERS.

They Meet in Convention and Nominate a Ticket Headed by Rev. Thomas K. Beecher.

THE National Greenback party of New York State assembled in convention at Albany and nominated a full State ticket, headed by the Rev. Thomas K. Beecher for Secretary of State. This makes seven tickets in the field—those of the Republican, Democratic, Prohibition, George or United Labor, Socialists, and Union Labor parties. The National Reformers propose also to run a ticket. The platform calls for the issue of paper currency to the amount of $50 per capita on the whole population of the country, warns owners of Government bonds that unless this is done "the American people's banks will be broken, as there are more chips on the table than there is money in the box to redeem them with." It denounces the Republican, Democratic, and George parties, although it sympathizes with ex-Father McGlynn in his struggle against the Pope. Boards of trade are denounced as gambling hells that subvert the morals of society and business.

SUICIDE IN A COURT-ROOM.

A Negro Condemned to Five Years in Prison Cuts His Throat and Dies.

A THRILLING tragedy was enacted in the Circuit Court-room at Chattanooga, Tenn. Sam Branch (colored) had been tried for larceny. As the jury filed into the court-room with its verdict he was noticed to tremble and turn deathly pale. "What is your verdict?" asked the Judge. "Guilty of grand larceny," replied the foreman. "What is the sentence?" "Five years in the penitentiary." As these words were uttered by the foreman Branch exclaimed: "God knows I'm innocent," and, pulling a large knife from his pocket, thrust it into his throat, the blood spurting over the jury-box and the Judge's desk. The negro was dead in thirty minutes.

The National Game.

THE record of games won and lost by the teams of the National Base-Ball League is as follows:

Clubs.	Won.	Lost.	Percentage.
Detroit	78	44	.639
Philadelphia	73	48	.603
Chicago	71	47	.601
New York	68	53	.561
Boston	60	58	.508
Pittsburg	52	69	.429
Washington	44	75	.369
Indianapolis	36	88	.290

The American Association schedule of games is appended:

Clubs.	Won.	Lost.	Percentage.
St. Louis	93	32	.703
Cincinnati	80	52	.604
Baltimore	75	57	.568
Louisville	73	58	.557
Athletic	61	70	.465
Brooklyn	58	72	.446
Metropolitan	43	87	.330
Cleveland	39	89	.304

Fire Losses.

DOUGLAS & STUART'S great oat-meal mill at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was completely destroyed by fire. The conflagration was caused by an explosion in the elevator leg, probably due to friction. The loss will reach $110,000; insured for $75,000.

FIRE destroyed about 4,000,000 feet of lumber belonging to the Girard Lumber Company, of Menominee, Mich., with dockage. The loss will reach $75,000; insurance, $30,000.

THE fire losses for September were $7,337,900, against $6,500,000 during the same month last year. The aggregate losses for the first nine months of 1887 are $93,183,500—$10,000,000 greater than for the same period of 1886.

Sparks from the Wires.

LORENZ CHENEY, a prominent farmer of Rock County, Wis., cut his throat and jumped into a creek near his home at Emerald Grove.

WILLIAM B. WASHBURN, ex-Governor of Massachusetts, dropped dead at Springfield, in that State, while attending a session of the Board of Foreign Missions.

GENERAL PITCAIRN MORRISON, a retired officer who entered the regular service in 1820, died in Baltimore at the age of 93.

THE President's sister, Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland, has returned to her profession of teaching, and is engaged in a young ladies' seminary in New York.

ONLY two of the Peoria distilleries now remain outside of the "whisky trust."

YOUNG HAWKINS, who murdered his mother at Islip, Long Island, has made a full confession, detailing the revolting particulars of the crime. He thinks he was crazed by his mother's opposition to his marriage, and admits that he "deserves the severest punishment."

IN relation to the case of United States Consul Hatfield, of Batavia, Java, whose arrest by the Dutch colonial officials has been reported, it is learned at the Department of State that shortly after his arrest the Consul was found to be insane.

CRISPI, Italy's Foreign Minister, says his talk with Bismarck had no political significance. In an interview, however, Sig. Crispi states that Italy, like other powers, has reason to fear the advance by Russia toward Constantinople, and she could not permit the Mediterranean to become a Russian lake.

EAST.

AUGUST STOEPEL, a well-known musician in New York and London, died in the former city, recently, in the arms of his daughter, Mrs. Henry Miller, known in the theatrical profession as Miss Bijou Heron.

THE America's cup remains in America. The Volunteer won a great victory on Friday, and settled for the present her superiority over any yacht ever designed on the other side of the Atlantic. She crossed the finish line in the great international contest ten minutes ahead of the Thistle. When the Yankee's victory was assured cannon were boomed and innumerable steam whistles emitted vigorous screeches. Hundreds of craft of all sorts had gathered to honor Gen. Paine's famous yacht, and all celebrated the victory in boisterous fashion. As the victorious American crossed the line, the American flag was sent to the masthead of everything afloat, and the thousands on the excursion boats burst forth into one long-continued shout of triumph. The correct time at the finish was: Volunteer, 4:22:19; Thistle, 4:34.

A PARTY of enterprising "Napoleons of finance" were rudely interrupted in an important speculation, early Thursday morning at New Castle, Del. They entered the Farmers' Bank there, bound and gagged W. J. Black, who was visiting the cashier, himself. One of them presented a revolver at the cashier's head, but the latter was not satisfied that the draft was genuine, and sent a bullet from his own pistol into that member of the syndicate. The financiers thereupon abandoned the attempt to corner the bank's cash, and retreated with the collapsed member of the firm.

JOHN B. FINCH, of Nebraska, a well-known temperance advocate, died suddenly at Boston.

ANARCHY came out second best in an encounter with the police at Union Hill, near New York, on Sunday. An anarchist meeting had been called, but the police took possession of the hall and refused to admit the mob. Some of the anarchists made a rush upon the officers, but the clubs of the latter quickly subdued the riot.

FOURTEEN deaths from cholera are reported from New York since the arrival of the Atesia, eleven days ago, with the scourge on board. There were four deaths Tuesday.

WEST.

A MILITARY post will be established at Denver.

MANY of the miners in the Springfield, Ill., district have struck for increased wages. The movement is expected to become general, and to cause 2,500 men to abandon the mines.

THE people of St. Louis were very demonstrative in their reception to the Presidential party Monday. Everywhere the distinguished guests were received with the utmost enthusiasm. Mrs. Cleveland won all by her grace and beauty. The programme was elaborate, and was pleasantly carried out. The Presidential party was driven through the fair grounds, but did not alight. The procession made its way back to the city, where they went directly to the Merchants' Exchange. The President was loudly cheered upon his appearance on 'Change. Mayor Francis delivered an address of welcome, and the President responded in a five minutes' speech. After referring to the growth and prosperity of the city in highly complimentary terms, he said:

I am here reminded of what I suppose to be the fact that more than one-half of your voters are of foreign birth and parentage. The growth and increase of your city in every way indicate, I think, that the condition of your population thus made apparent is by no means to be depreciated, and my observation during a long residence in a city similarly situated has led me to know the value to any community of the industrious, frugal, and thrifty men and women who come from foreign lands to find new homes with us; who invest themselves with our citizenship and who are satisfied and content with the freedom of our Government and with our laws and institutions. The line is easily drawn between them and the non-assimilating immigrants who seek our shores solely for purposes involving disturbance and disadvantage to our body politic. I hope I may, without impropriety, say this much in recognition of what has been done for St. Louis by its naturalized citizens as well as remembrance of many kind and valued friends and associates of former days.

Three or four times during the delivery of the President's remarks—at every pause—some voice proposed three cheers for Grover Cleveland, and the lungs of the multitude responded.

FOUR persons were killed and two seriously injured by a boiler explosion in George P. Plant's flour-mill. Mrs. Thos. S. Rivers, wife of the foreman, was blown from the boiler-room across the alley into a room sixty feet from where she was standing and was killed, as was her husband, who was buried under the debris. Fritz Kullman was also buried in the ruins and was taken out dead. Henry Tenne was instantly killed by the steam and the force of the explosion. Engineer Benjamin Meyers was seriously injured. Minnie Reichman, aged 5, had both legs broken, and is so injured that recovery is not probable. A piece of the boiler flew 200 feet and crushed down upon the roof of a two-story house, crashing through to the cellar, demolishing the whole house. Another piece of the boiler smashed into an adjoining livery stable and pulled down a wall and part of the roof.

A MACKINAW CITY (Mich.) special says: The Canadian propeller California, laden with 21,000 bushels of corn and 800 barrels of pork, ran aground, Tuesday morning, just off St. Helena's Island. There were 27 people on board; 13 were saved, and 14 lost. The boat is a total wreck. It is understood she was insured for $25,000. Owen Rourke, a wheelsman, says: "After all hope had been given up, the passengers and crew gathered in the cabin and put on life preservers. I was standing aft when an immense sea struck her and threw her over on her side. When she came down she appeared to strike bottom, and the whole cabin collapsed with a crash." Rourke says he pulled himself into a life-boat and cut it loose. There were eight others in the boat with him. They drifted around the Straits four hours, the boat being full of water. A fireman and a passenger from Montreal, who were hanging on the side, were swept overboard and lost. A. G. Hawkins, watchman, says: "I was in the cabin, tying with the crew and passengers on the floor to keep warm, when the crash came. I made a rush for the stairway with the rest. It was a terrible jam. Just as I got out of it the railing gave way and a dozen or more fell to the main deck. I reached a gangway and got out. I drifted about till early this morning, when I was picked up by the propeller Faxton." This was the experience of nearly all the saved. All had life-preservers on, and it was a question only of endurance whether they reached the shore a mile distant. Four bodies were cast up by the waves unconscious, but were revived under careful treatment. It is believed that there were in all twenty-five persons on the California, of whom thirteen were lost. All of the saved were from Montreal, Toronto, or Kingston, Ont.

SIOUX CITY (Iowa) special: "Sioux City is in gala attire to-night, the occasion being the opening of the corn-palace jubilee, a celebration gotten up in honor of King Corn, the principal product of this section. After over a month's hard work on the corn palace, a structure entirely original and very striking in architecture and the uniqueness and originality of its decorations, which are entirely made of corn and the products of the fields, the show opens with the most favorable weather that could be imagined."

THE schooner Pulaski, coal laden, went to pieces at Good Harbor, Lake Michigan. The crew were saved.

IN St. Louis, on Tuesday, the President held a general reception for two hours at the Courthouse. After that, with Mrs. Cleveland and a large company, a steamboat excursion was made to Jefferson Barracks. In the evening the President and Mrs. Cleveland attended the ball of the "Veiled Prophets," and immediately afterward took the train for Chicago, leaving at 11:15. The party arrived at Chicago Wednesday morning, and were given an enthusiastic reception.

SOUTH.

ROBBING stage-coaches has become so entirely safe an industry in Texas that a single thief is considered sufficient for its prosecution. Recently one man stopped a coach near Ballinger, plundered five men and three women, and then held the whole party till another stage came in sight, when he released the heroic victims, sent them off, and turned his attention to the approaching stage, which he also robbed.

MR. MILBURN, a prohibition member of the Tennessee Legislature, being at Greenville, in that State, remarked that the people thereabout had sold out to the whisky men. A young person of the name of Ward imprudently disputed the proposition, and intimated that the legislator was a liar. Whereupon Mr. Milburn immediately shot the young man dead.

IN Houston, Texas, Mr. B. F. Kegans, Deputy Sheriff, killed John Millenger, a leading merchant. Kegans owed Millenger $19.49 for groceries, and the latter having refused to let the amount be increased, the Deputy Sheriff naturally shot him in self-defense.

A SPECIAL dispatch from Ballinger, Tex., gives particulars of an audacious robbery perpetrated by a solitary road agent:

The Ballinger and San Angelo stage was again robbed last night about eight miles out from this place by the same lone highwayman who held it up last Thursday night. He was recognized by his voice, his looks, and his horse. He was not as successful in this as in the last, there being only male passengers, and it appears that they were not loaded down with filthy lucre. H. F. Gay, of Hurt & Gay, of this city, was relieved of $3, and the other party of a like amount. There were two ladies aboard, one of whom had over $15, but the bandit was too gallant to accept it, saying that he never took money from the ladies. He then proceeded to go through the mail-bags, opening every letter, but it is said only got about $15 all told. He then moved up to meet the out-going stage, and commanded the parties just robbed not to move until he fired his pistol. After waiting about an hour the stage pulled up, having eluded the robber by taking a new route.

POLITICS.

A SPECIAL from Memphis, Tenn., says: "Returns so far indicate that the prohibition amendment was defeated in the State, Thursday, by a very small majority. The anti-Prohibitionists carried this city by a majority of 4,292 out of a total vote of 9,919. County district returns are coming in slowly, but Shelby County will give about 6,000 majority against the amendment. Ladies worked for the amendment at all the voting precincts in the city. The indications are that the vote on the adoption of the prohibition amendment will be close. East Tennessee is claimed to have given a Prohibition majority of 10,000. This is based on private dispatches to Prohibitionists. Davidson County will give an anti-majority of nearly 2,800."

GENERAL.

A SAN FRANCISCO dispatch says the suit of the Chemical National Bank, of New York, against William Kissane, alias William K. Rogers, who has obtained such notoriety by the exposure of his criminal career in the East, has been dismissed by United States Circuit Judge Sawyer. The bank claimed that Kissane swindled it out of $1,230 in 1854, and asked judgment for about $11,000, including interest. Kissane demurred, and the Court sustained the demurrer, saying that the statute of limitations had run against the bank's claim. The bank argued that Kissane's whereabouts had been unknown, but the Court held that, even if Kissane did disguise himself and assume an alias, it did not disbar him from having full benefit of the statute.

THE schooner Havana, ore laden, bound from Escanaba to St. Joseph, was wrecked on Lake Michigan during a fierce gale that raged all day Monday, and three of her crew perished. The schooner City of Green Bay, laden with iron ore and bound from Escanaba to St. Joseph, Mich., was driven ashore near South Haven and went to pieces, five of the crew of six perishing. The schooner Ebenezer was lost on Lake Michigan, but the crew escaped.

MR. BAYARD, Secretary of State, does not think the German assumption of sovereign power in the Samoan Islands requires any action on the part of the United States. Under a treaty with Samoa the American Government is entitled to the use of a fine harbor and coaling station, but this right has not been put to any use. Germany has assured the Washington authorities that her intention is not to annex the Samoan group, but only to punish the dethroned King for alleged unfair treatment of a German trading company.

THE National Farmers' Alliance held its seventh annual convention in Minneapolis, with delegates present from Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Dakota.

FOREIGN.

COL. SIR JOSEPH WEST RIDGWAY, recently in charge of the British commission on the Afghan boundary question, will succeed Maj. Gen. Sir Redvers Buller as Under Secretary for Ireland.

IT is semi-officially announced that M. Flourens, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, in conversing with Count Von Munster, the German Ambassador, on the subject of the frontier shooting incident, pointed out, first, that not a single stain of blood had been found on German soil; second, that Kaufmann, after firing, fled, showing that he was conscious of having committed an illegal act. The French official inquiry, therefore, argued Flourens, proved that the German agent knowingly committed an offense. Count von Munster replied that as the German inquiry had not been concluded he could give no pledge as to what would be done. The French Government will insist upon the punishment of Kaufmann, the question of indemnity being of second importance. The Procurator of Nancy will meet the German law officers at the scene of the incident for the purpose of making a joint examination. M. Lebigne, a banker at Nancy, who is the lessee of the ground where the shooting occurred, and who was one of the party of sportsmen, says the party did not cross the frontier line. "After the shooting," he says, "we found blood-pools on French soil. I requested a sergeant of gendarmes to mark a tree at the spot. I swear that neither challenge nor cry was addressed to us. Had the Germans uttered a sound we must have heard them."

M. SCHNAEBELE, JR., son of the French officer who caused the complications a few months ago between Germany and France, has been sentenced to three weeks' imprisonment for crossing the frontier and affixing a treasonable placard, bearing the tri-color, upon a tree on German soil.

MARKET REPORTS.

NEW YORK.
CATTLE	$ 4.00	@ 5.50
HOGS	5.00	@ 5.75
WHEAT—No. 1 White	.87½	@ .88½
No. 2 Red	.81	@ .82
CORN—No. 2	.52	@ .53½
OATS—White	.35	@ .40
PORK—New Mess	15.25	@ 15.75
CHICAGO.
CATTLE—Choice to Prime Steers	5.00	@ 5.25
Good	4.00	@ 4.50
Common	3.00	@ 3.50
HOGS—Shipping Grades	4.25	@ 5.00
FLOUR—Winter Wheat	3.75	@ 4.25
WHEAT—No. 2 Red Winter	.72	@ .72½
CORN—No. 2	.42	@ .43
OATS—No. 2	.26	@ .26½
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	.23	@ .24
Fine Dairy	.18	@ .18
CHEESE—Full Cream, cheddars	.11	@ .11¼
Full Cream, new	.11¼	@ .12
EGGS—Fresh	.17	@ .18
POTATOES—Choice, per bu	.70	@ .80
PORK—Mess	15.50	@ 16.25
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—Cash	.69	@ .70
CORN—No. 3	.43	@ .43½
OATS—No. 2 White	.28¼	@ .29½
RYE—No. 1	.48	@ .50
PORK—Mess	14.50	@ 15.25
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	.70	@ .70½
CORN—Mixed	.39½	@ .40½
OATS—Mixed	.23	@ .24
PORK—New Mess	15.00	@ 15.50
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—Cash	.75½	@ .76
CORN—No. 2	.45	@ .45½
OATS	.28	@ .29
DETROIT.
BEEF CATTLE	3.75	@ 4.50
HOGS	3.50	@ 4.50
SHEEP	4.00	@ 4.75
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	.73	@ .76
CORN—No. 2	.45	@ .45½
OATS—No. 2 White	.30	@ .31
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	.76½	@ .77½
CORN—No. 2	.44½	@ .45½
OATS—No. 2	.28	@ .28½
PORK—Mess	14.50	@ 15.00
LIVE HOGS	4.50	@ 5.00
BUFFALO.
WHEAT—No. 1 Northern	.84	@ .85
CORN—No. 2 Yellow	.49	@ .49½
CATTLE	4.00	@ 5.00
INDIANAPOLIS.
BEEF CATTLE	3.50	@ 5.00
HOGS	4.25	@ 5.00
SHEEP	3.00	@ 4.00
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	.71	@ .72
CORN	.41½	@ .42½
OATS—No 2 Mixed	.26	@ .26½
EAST LIBERTY.
CATTLE—Prime	4.50	@ 5.25
Fair	4.00	@ 4.50
Common	3.00	@ 3.50
HOGS	4.75	@ 5.50
SHEEP	3.50	@ 4.00

IN CHICAGO.

The Nation's Head and His Charming Wife Given a Cordial Welcome.

Magnificent Parade of Soldiery and Citizens Witnessed by Enormous Crowds.

The General Public Received at the Palmer House in a Gigantic Crush.

Two Enormous Receptions—Women Crushed and Many Lose Consciousness.

[Special telegram from Chicago.]

The President and Mrs. Cleveland were given an enthusiastic reception by the people of Chicago on Wednesday. The arrangements were generally exceedingly well planned, and were carried out without misadventure of any kind. The procession was a grand affair, the street decorations tasteful and effective, and apparently the best use was made of every hour of the time given to this city by the distinguished visitors. The people upon the streets and stationed at every point where a view of the President and his wife could possibly be expected greatly outnumbered those engaged in any similar demonstration of interest and respect for a public personage that has ever been witnessed here.

[illegible]

houses. Every rickety coal-shed was loaded down with people, who paid a good price for the privilege of standing on the crowded elevation for three agonizing hours at the risk of breaking their necks. The prices charged for seats were in some cases exorbitant, but there were takers for all of them. "Five dollars secures you a good seat here," was the modest song of one philanthropist, who had fitted up a few tiers of bleaching boards on Wabash avenue. "These seats are for your accommodation, ladies and gentlemen. The President passes here; fine view of the whole procession. Get your lady a seat, sir; only $5 apiece, $10 for the two of ye." The jam seemed to be equal at all points along the line, for there was no place where the crowd did not overflow into the street and become a solid mass of humanity, so that it was with great difficulty that sufficient space was cleared to allow the pageant to pass through. The decorations along the line of march were very fine, and many of them in the business heart of the city were rich and gorgeous.

When President Cleveland and his party reached the reviewing stand, and leaving their carriage climbed upon the new pine platform to confront the chilly east wind, they found Michigan avenue paved with faces for a long distance to the north and south.

The appearance of the President was a signal for cheers and long continued shouting. About him on the platform stood Mayor Roche, Postmaster General Vilas, and many aldermen and other city officials, while scores of distinguished citizens occupied chairs near at hand.

A ball of dense smoke suddenly sprang out from the side of the United States ship Michigan, which lay in the harbor in plain sight from the reviewing stand, her rigging covered with fluttering flags and gay bunting. Out of the smoke as it hovered above the water came the short bark of a cannon, and after an interval which seemed strangely long it was the first gun of twenty-one fired in honor of the President. As the last report of the cannon faded out Mayor Roche, standing within arm's length of President Cleveland, delivered a neat address of welcome.

President Cleveland in beginning his speech in reply to that of the Mayor advanced to the front of the platform and gave forth his words in strong tones. The eager thousands about him crowded forward with great interest.

[illegible]

covered from her temporary prostration. After lunching, Mr. Cleveland gave a reception at the Palmer House. He was plainly dressed in an English worsted black coat tightly buttoned around him, black broadcloth trousers, and congress gaiters. An old-fashioned turned-down collar surrounded his neck, to which was attached a ready-made tie of black silk. In his left hand was a handkerchief of generous proportions and snowy whiteness. Taking up a position to the right of the staircase he waited a moment to allow the ladies who were to receive to step into the beautifully decorated rendezvous partitioned off for their comfort. Mrs. Cleveland was given a chair beside a large pillow to the right, and for the first half hour of the reception remained seated. By her side stood Gen. Breckenridge and Judge Tuley, while gathered about her in different positions were the ladies composing the reception committee. Each was provided with a huge

REVIEWING THE PARADE.

[illegible]

THE PRESIDENT AND MRS. CLEVELAND.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for October 16—"Power to Forgive Sins."

(From the Chicago Standard. By Rev. J. M. Coon.)

The subject for this lesson may be found in the first eight verses of the ninth chapter of Matthew. Time, summer of A. D. 28. Place, Capernaum, after crossing the sea from the Gadarenes.

SPECIAL MENTION.

The palsy. Many infirmities were included under the general name of palsy in the New Testament. 1. The paralytic shock, affecting the whole body. 2. The hemiplegy, affecting only one side of the body; the most frequent form of the disease. 3. The paraplegy, affecting all the system below the neck. 4. The catalepsy. This is caused by a contraction of the muscles in the whole or a part of the body and is very dangerous. The effects are very violent and fatal. For instance, if, when a person is struck, he happens to have his hand extended, he is unable to draw it back; if not extended, he is unable to stretch it out. It gradually becomes diminished in size, and dried up in appearance. Hence it was called the withered hand (Matt. 12: 10-13). 5. The cramp. This, in Eastern countries, is a fearful malady, and by no means unfrequent. It originates from chills in the night. The limbs when seized by it remain immovable, and the person afflicted with it resembles one undergoing a torture. This was probably the disease of the servant of the centurion (Matt. 8: 6; Luke 7: 2). Death follows from the disease in a few days. (Barnes.)

[illegible]

WAR REMINISCENCES.

Old Soldiers Rehearsing the Stirring Scenes Through Which They Passed.

Anecdotes of the Battle-Field, the Camp-Fire, and the Merry March.

The Soldier Tramp.

SCENE—A CITY POLICE COURT.

"Yer honor, I pleads guilty; I'm a bummer;
I don't deny the cop here found me drunk;
I don't deny that through the whole long summer,
The sun-warmed earth has been my only bunk.
I hain't been able fur to earn a livin';
A man with one leg planted in the tomb
Can't get a job, an' I've a strong misgivin'
'Bout bein' cooped up in a Soldier's Home.

"Whar did I lose my leg?" At Spottsylvania—
Perhaps you've read about the bloody fight—
But then I guess the story won't restrain you
From doin' what the law sets down as right.
I'm not a vag through choice, but through misfortune,
An' as fur drink—well, all men have their faults;
But Judge, I guess I've had my lawful portion
O' tough experience in prison vaults.

I served as private in the Tenth New Jersey,
An' all the boys'll say I done what's right;
Ther ain't a man can say that Abram Bursey
Was ever found a-shirking in a fight.

[illegible]

Western Louisiana, in April, 1863. The pounding of the artillery sent him fleeing to the rear. He was found hiding in a ditch.

In the midst of a stirring and fierce campaign, cowardly soldiers often escape punishment, because in the midst of the marching and fighting, there is not time nor opportunity for a court-martial. Should such a soldier redeem himself by good conduct before the campaign is over, he is pretty safe from punishment. Turpin's Captain probably thought that it would be well to give the delinquent another chance.

The chance was not long coming. On the 31st of the next month the regiment reached the lines outside Port Hudson, where one bloody and ineffectual assault had already been delivered. We all knew what awaited us there. Brave men marched into the rifle-pits, knowing that the chances were large in any case that the soldier would never see home again. The prospect was too much for Turpin. He deserted on the way. I have seen men who were in the crowded hospitals at Baton Rouge at this time, who tell me that Turpin was skulking about the town. More than one who knew him warned him of what was in store for him, and advised him to return to the regiment. But he did not.

Port Hudson fell July 9. A few days

[illegible]

There was a sudden click in the wire, and then the circuit closed.

"Ellsworth was the celebrated Confederate operator who accompanied John Morgan in his raids through Kentucky and Ohio. Saville and he had worked together before the war and had become familiar with each other's style.

Evacuation of Charleston.

I see there is little in this department of your paper about the historic city of Charleston, S. C., and, as it is known now, the "Earthquake City." Right here were enacted some of the most direful episodes ever heard of in the annals of American or European war. There, in that sad little city, was where I tried to do my duty as a "Southern soldier," and God and man can testify as to how well or poorly done. I saw as brave men as ever lived tremble and others meet death with the stoicism of an Indian warrior. There, too, I saw brave and noble women driven wild in the agonizing terrors of war. It is not my wish to dwell on those terrible scenes, for there is a sorrow in some soldier's heart that can never be understood. There, in that "City by the Sea," my dear brother met his fate; there, while standing by my side with all his proud strength, the whistling leaden hail

[illegible]

FREE GRACE.

Divine Services in the Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Rev. Dr. Talmage's Sermon Last Sunday Morning—Other Worlds Than Ours Inhabitable—The Religion of Christ Not an Abstraction.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 2.—The capacity for a still larger audience has been made at the Brooklyn tabernacle. An adjoined lecture room has been built so that during the week it is used by itself, but on the Sabbath it is thrown into the main auditorium and filled by those sitting or standing. Notwithstanding the enlargement the crowds that go away not able to get inside the building are greater this fall than ever before. To-day the pastor explained appropriate passages of Scripture. Prof. Browne rendered upon the organ the First Sonata in D minor, Ritter. The text of the sermon was from II Corinthians, viii. 9: "Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, though He was rich, yet for your sakes He became poor." Dr. Talmage said:

That all the worlds which on a cold winter's night make the heavens one great glitter are inhabitantless is an absurdity. Philosophers tell us that many of these worlds are too hot, or too cold, or too rarefied of atmosphere for residence. But, if not fit for human abode, they may be fit for beings different from and superior to ourselves.

[illegible]

than a barn door. The rajah of Cashmere sent to Victoria a bedstead of carved gold and a canopy that cost $750,000, but the world had for the Prince of Heaven and earth only a litter of straw. The crown jewels in the Tower of London amount to $15,000,000, but this member of eternal royalty had nowhere to lay his head. To know how poor He was, ask the camel drivers, ask the shepherds, ask Mary, ask the three wise men of the East who afterward came there, young Caspar and middle-aged Balthasar and old Melchoir. To know how poor He was, examine all the records of real estate in all that oriental country, and see what vineyard, or what house, or what field He owned. Not one. Of what mortgage was He the mortgagee? Of what tenement was He the landlord? Of what lease was He the lessee? Who ever paid Him rent? Not owning the boat on which He sailed, or the beast on which he rode, or the pillow on which He slept. He had so little estate that in order to pay his tax He had to perform a miracle, putting the amount of the assessment in a fish's mouth and having it hauled ashore. And after His death the world rushed in to take an inventory of His goods, and the entire aggregate was the garments He had worn, sleeping in them by night and traveling in them by day, bearing on them the dust of the highway and the saturation of the sea. Paul in my text did not go far from hitting the mark, did he, when he said of the missionary Prince: "For your sakes He became poor?"

The world could have treated Him better if it had chosen. It had all the means for making His earthly condition comfortable.

[illegible]

the tune; yes, that's the tune. Thank God, I have got home once more!" "Bonny Scotland and Bonny Doon" were the last words he uttered as he passed up to the highlands of the better country. And there are here to-day hundreds homesick for Heaven; some because you have so many bereavements, some because you have so many temptations, some because you have so many ailments; homesick, very homesick, for the fatherland of Heaven, and the music that you want to hear now is the song of free grace, and the music you want to hear when you die is free grace, and forever before the throne of God you will sing of the "grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, though He was rich, for your sakes became poor."

Yes, yes; for your sakes! It was not on pleasure excursion that He came, for it was all pain. It was not on astronomical exploration, for He knew this world as well before He alighted as afterward. It was not because He was compelled to come, for He volunteered. It was not because it was easy, for He knew that it would be thorn, and spike, and hunger, and thirst, and vociferation of angry mobs. For your sakes! Wipe away your tears. To forgive your wrongdoing, to companionship your loneliness, to soothe your sorrows, to sit with you by the new-made grave, to bind up your wounds in the ugly battle with the world and bring you home at last, kindling up the mists that fall on your dying vision with the sunlight of a glorious morn. For your sakes! No, I will change that. Paul will not care, and Christ will not care if I change it, for I must get into the blessedness of the text myself, and so

[illegible]

Pretty Legends Connected with Trees.

Near an old German castle is a lime, which a boy, accused of killing his master, planted with its head in the earth, to attest his innocence if it grew and flourished. Two friends were attacked by robbers in a wood, and one of them was killed. The robbers having been put to flight by a flash of lightning, the surviving friend, found kneeling at the side of his dead companion, was condemned to death for his murder. On his way to execution he planted a stick, which he adjured to take root and grow if he was innocent; as, of course, it is proved that he was by the beautiful apple tree that the stick became. Somewhat similar is the account of the Luther elm near Worms. A bigoted old Catholic lady, planting a stick in the ground, declared her resolution not to accept the new faith till that dry stick became green. The fact that it did so proves the interest taken by trees in the preservation of orthodoxy, but it would seem that the elm tree takes a special interest in matters of this sort, for is not the elm tree the symbol of St. Zenobius, when the coffin of that saint was carried past it a dry elm tree suddenly burst into leaf?"

Another way by which trees revealed their inherent sympathy with humanity is by bleeding. Both Virgil and Ovid tell the story of Polydore, one of the

[illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.
Established, 1869.
WILLARD A. SMITH EDITOR.
ED F. PARMELEE ASSOCIATE EDITOR.
CHARLEVOIX, OCT. 19, 1887.

Wedding Bells.

From the Albion Mirror.

The wedding of Mr. Harvey Lee Iddings, of Charlevoix, to Miss Nellie Blanchard Gale, daughter of Mrs. Horatio Gale, which took place last evening, at the residence of the bride's parents, on Michigan avenue, was an exceedingly pleasant event, and one which called forth the benedictions of a large circle of friends, both here and elsewhere. The wedding itself was comparatively private, only the relatives of the contracting parties and most intimate friends being present. At six o'clock the young couple, attended by Mr. Chas. Gale, brother of the bride, and Misses Winnifred and Marguerite Gale, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Alpheus Gale, entered the parlor to the strains of a wedding march, played by Mr. O. H. T. Peabody, cornet, Miss Mattie Crittenden, violin, and Miss Georgie Gale, and took their places in front of the bay window, which was a perfect bank of flowers, mosses and evergreens. From the ceiling hung a quantity of tulle, very tastily arranged, from which was suspended two white doves. The ceremony was brief but very impressive, being performed by Rev. J. T. Iddings, father of the groom; assisted by Rev. D. L. Barnes, of Kalamazoo, and concluding with the repetition of the Lord's Prayer, the bride and groom kneeling. The bride was very becomingly arrayed in a dress of white corduroy satin, trimmed with point lace. The reception, which took place between the hours of eight and half-past ten, was very largely attended by friends of the contracting parties in this city and elsewhere. The guests, upon entering the parlor, were met by Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Gale, then by Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard, grandparents of the bride, and were next presented to the bride and groom. They were then received by Rev. Iddings and wife, and by Mr. and Mrs. Alpheus Gale. The rooms were very tastefully decorated, but there was no attempt, in any particular, at lavish display, or show. The guests were all very cordially received, and were made to feel that they were invited because they were wanted. There was no stiffness, no formality, and we know that there was no guest who did not thoroughly enjoy himself. Refreshments were served at the residence of Mr. Blanchard, next door, carpet being spread between the two residences, and the way lighted by Chinese lanterns. Here all were well served by waiters from Kalamazoo. The presents received were numerous, elegant and practical, and the room containing them was quite a center of attraction.

The guests departed with the hope that a long line of usefulness and prosperity may be awarded the young couple, and we desire to extend best wishes for future welfare. The young couple left on the midnight train for Chicago, where they take a boat for their future home at Charlevoix, where a new house, "The Pines," awaits them. The bride has always been a resident of this city, and will be very greatly missed by hosts of friends, who truly loved her; but we trust that new scenes will bring other friends, who will endeavor to make her feel at home among them.

Neighborhood News.

East Jordan voted down a fire engine 46 to 6.

The Cheboygan mills have cut 107,081,000 feet of lumber this season.

Springwater is the name of a new settlement about five miles south of Boyne Falls.

Traverse City has never had a piece of property advertised for sale for delinquent village tax. This year's tax is all collected.

Lallar & Cornwell, Cadillac, have on exhibition a pumpkin four feet and eight inches in circumference, and weighing fifty-three pounds.

East Jordan Enterprise: E. A. Burdick will harvest about 2,000 bushels of good potatoes, which, at present prices, will probably net him over $1,000.

The Bay View Camp association has accepted an offer made by H. M. Loud of Oscoda, who proposed to build an edifice worth $2,000 for a teacher's institute home. The association furnishes the site.

Mancelona Herald: The Antrim Iron Company paid the G. R. & I. company $8,244.14 for hauling freight during the month of August, while their freight bills for September amount to just $9,114.33.

The first regular train on the "Soo" branch of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic Railway, left the "Soo" at six o'clock Monday morning. Five trains will run daily, making western and eastern connections. The "Soo" people feel that they are now out of the woods.

Atwood news, from the Breeze: John Jolliffe has gone to Traverse City to work in the asylum.——M. E. Byers has let a job of clearing 35 acres to Isaac and Frank Brown, of Eastport. They have also taken a job of logging 15 acres for John Jolliffe, Jr.——Dr. L. M. Kanagy had 30 bushels of winter wheat to the acre on a piece of new ground. Ethan H. Jolliffe had a piece that went over 28 bushels to the acre.——Charley Brown has closed his labors with the Atwood band. The band has made rapid progress under the efficient management of Mr. Brown.

During the month of September there was a total of 168 disasters on the lakes, distributed as follows: Lake Michigan, 63; Lake Superior, 10; Lake Huron, 57; Lake St. Clair, 4; rivers, 19; Lake Erie, 18; Lake Ontario, 8. By stranding, 37; loss, $44,600. Heavy weather, 51; loss, $89,400. Collisions, 10; loss, $7,200. Ashore, 12; loss, $23,100. Disabled, 27; loss, $16,600. Fire, 5; loss, $16,700. Sprung leak, 18; loss, $10,000. Loss on cargoes, $33,200.

Our Schools.

Report of the Charlevoix Public schools for the month ending October 14th, fall term 1887:

NO. ENROLLED.
First Department, Mrs. Upright	57
Second Department, Miss Mason	39
Third Department, Miss O'Neill	45
Fourth Department, Miss Nelson	42
Fifth Gram. Section, Miss Gray	48
Fifth High School	24
Total	255
NO. BELONGING.
First Department	50
Second Department	36
Third Department	44
Fourth Department	37
Fifth, Grammar Section	43
Fifth, High School	24
Total	233
DAYS ATTENDANCE.
First Department	876
Second Department	727½
Third Department	799½
Fourth Department	761
Fifth, Grammar Section	875½
Fifth, High School	432
Total	4471½
DAYS LOST BY ABSENCE.
First Department	52
Second Department	39
Third Department	25½
Fourth Department	21
Fifth, Grammar Section	28½
Fifth, High School	5½
Total	172½
AVERAGE ATTENDANCE.
First Department	43.8
Second Department	36.4
Third Department	40
Fourth Department	38
Fifth, Grammar Section	43.7
Fifth, High School	21.6
Total	223.5
CASES TARDY.
First Department	6
Second Department	7
Third Department	7
Fourth Department	5
Fifth, Grammar Section	1
Fifth, High School	1
Total	27
NO. OF PUPILS NEITHER ABSENT NOR TARDY FOR THE MONTH.
First Department	15
Second Department	19
Third Department	18
Fourth Department	26
Fifth, Grammar Section	28
Fifth, High School	15
Total	121
ATTENDANCE AND PUNCTUALITY PER CENT OF NO. BELONGING.
First Department	96.7
Second Department	96.8
Third Department	98
Fourth Department	98.3
Fifth, Grammar Section	98.3
Fifth, High School	99.2
Average	97.8

Ironton Notes.

The furnace shut down over Sunday.

An unabridged puff for our town in the Enterprise last week

Mrs. Purvis and her mother, Mrs. Mosher, visit relatives in Lansing this week.

Miss Nellie Noyes was at Boyne City visiting friends on Saturday and Sunday.

The H. H. society had successful meeting on Wednesday evening. The historical paper was well received as was the musical part. Adjourned to meet with Mr. and Mrs. Parish, tonight.

James Friel met with a painful accident last week. While chopping a tree down with Mr. Fairburn, he received an ugly cut on the knee cap from Fairburn's ax which glanced. The wound is doing well.

Report of Ironton schools for month ending October 14th:

Number enrolled, Grammar Department	21
Number enrolled, Primary Department	44
Whole number enrolled	65
AVERAGE NO. BELONGING.
Grammar Department	23.5
Primary Department	35.5
Total	59.
NO. DAYS ATTENDED.
Grammar Department	400
Primary Department	610
Total	1010
PER CENT OF ATTENDANCE TO WHOLE NO. OF DAYS.
Grammar Department	85
Primary Department	86
Total per cent	85.5
AVERAGE DAILY ATTENDANCE.
Grammar Department	20
Primary Department	30.5
Total	50.5

Monthly examinations ommitted on account of review work.

Boyne Falls Items.

Mr. Duvoll has a force of men at work on the new shingle mill.

D. B. Jerrue, wife and child were in town Wednesday en route to Chicago, their future home.

Archie D. Carpenter moved to Cadillac last Wednesday, at which place he has an engagement in a drug store.

An agent of the Detroit Evening News was in town Friday and secured several subscriptions to that journal.

I. Dawdy sold his hotel property to D. S. Judd of Pontiac, and gave possession last Thursday. M. Soules has charge of the hotel until the arrival of the new landlord.

The mother of J. W. Barnes returned to her home last Monday evening. The relatives of the family gathered at the residence during the evening and had a pleasant reunion before her departure.

Petoskey Record: In the wild gale of Monday, the two bald eagles that have built their nest for many years in a tall pine in the sand dunes at the head of the bay, were to be seen for hours sweeping to and fro along the bluffs west of the Arlington, apparently enjoying the battle with the wild winds.

REMEMBER the annual cheap excursion to Detroit, Tuesday Oct. 25th, 1887. Round trip only $5. Tickets good 10 days; plenty of coaches; no change of cars; everybody go. Train leaves Petoskey 8:20 a. m.; Boyne Falls, 9:01 a. m.

General and Political.

Old Marshal Blucher is still warmly remembered by the Prussian people. On the recent anniversary of his death his statue in Berlin was covered with laurel, and one aged veteran who fought under Blucher laid at its feet a wreath of oak leaves.

Mr. Robert Garrett, it is said, is angry at the sale of the B. & O. telegraph system by the syndicate to the Western Union, and will fight the matter in the courts. He is credited with declaring that before Mr. Gould secures legal possession of the lines, he will have to pay a much larger sum than $5,000,000.

President Cleveland's appointees and their friends promptly responded to the invitation sent out by the Chicago News for personal opinions of the Cleveland administration. Strange as it may appear, the federal officeholders are quite unanimous in praise of their master. The mugwumps, however, are not gushing.

Miss Meade, a Pennsylvania girl, is the reigning beauty at Homburg. The Prince of Wales has declared her to be the handsomest woman he ever saw. But Miss Meade declines to be caught by such cheap taffy, and refuses to be introduced to the first gentleman of England. All of which goes to show that Miss Meade possesses good sense as well as beauty.

So long as Mr. Cleveland suffers postmasters and custom house employes to run primaries and conventions and boss the machine in their respective counties he has no right to expect that Democratic committees or any other organization of the sort will serve the cause of reform. The stream is not accustomed to rise higher than its source.—New York Tribune.

The reports that come to the Republican State Committee from all over the State are of an encouraging nature. They indicate harmonious and united action, and growing activity, earnest interest and a determination to carry the state ticket. They also indicate the general feeling of defeat with which Democrats are already enshrouded. New York Tribune.

In the good old times of low tariff, a bushel of wheat would buy two yards of calico; now it will buy fifteen or twenty. Then a bushel of corn would buy one pound of nails; now it will buy ten pounds. Then it took the price of a good cow to buy a pair of blankets; now the price of an ordinary cow will buy six pairs of better goods. It is well to consider these things before casting your vote in favor of a policy which will bring those "good old Democratic times" back again.—Toledo Blade.

The Democratic party promised reduction of taxation, and has not reduced taxes a penny, but has increased appropriations. It promised in some states reform of tariff, and in others defence of protection and restoration of wool duties; it has not raised the duties on wool, but has tried to abolish them; it has not changed the tariff at all, but has cast four-fifths of its votes against the maintenance of the protective system, and so has broken each and all of its contradictory pledges. The party is weaker than it was in 1884, because it has been tried, and the people know it better.—New York Tribune.

Decorative Art.

Miss Foote, teacher of Decorative Art work, invites the ladies of Charlevoix to meet her at Mrs. Litney's millinery store Thursday afternoon, when samples of her work will be on exhibition. Classes in Lustra, Tapestry and Velvet Painting, embroidery of all kinds, and paper flower making. Rooms at Miss Buttars'.

REMEMBER the annual cheap excursion to Detroit, Tuesday Oct. 25th, 1887. Round trip only $5. Tickets good 10 days; plenty of coaches; no change of cars; everybody go. Train leaves Petoskey 8:20 a. m.; Boyne Falls, 9:01 a. m.

Leaders of various Protestant denominations have issued a call for a general conference of evangelical Christians of the United States at Washington Dec. 7, 8 and 9 next, to consider questions affecting the welfare of the whole church

REMEMBER the annual cheap excursion to Detroit, Tuesday Oct. 25th, 1887. Round trip only $5. Tickets good 10 days; plenty of coaches; no change of cars; everybody go. Train leaves Petoskey 8:20 a. m.; Boyne Falls, 9:01 a. m.

Teacher's Examination.

Teachers examinations for Charlevoix county will be held as follows: At Charlevoix, on Friday, the 28th day of October; East Jordan, on Friday the 25th day of November, 1887. Examinations to commence at 8:30 and end at 5 p. m. WILLIAM HARRIS, Sec'y Board Examiners.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Detroit, Charlevoix and Escanaba Railroad Company, will be held at the general offices of the Company, at Charlevoix, Michigan, on Tuesday, the 15th day of November, 1887 at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of said company and to vote on extending the line of said road from Charlevoix, its present terminus, to the Straits of Mackinac.
Dated this 6th day of October, A. D. 1887.
J. MILO EATON, Sec'y.

BAY SPRINGS
BAY SPRINGS!
We wish to call the attention of parties residing near the center of the County, that in the Basement of the Waldron Building, can be found a large stock of GENERAL MERCHANDISE, consisting of Groceries, Provisions, Dry Goods, Clothing, Boots & Shoes, etc.
CASH paid for Wood, Ties Posts, and Farm Produce. Give me a call.
Bay Springs Cash Store.

Best peaches of the season at O. W. Smith's for $2.50 per bushel.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE. One span of horses, one yearling colt, two spring colts, one yoke of oxen, two two-year old heifers, two yearling heifers; must be sold soon. Terms reasonable. Inquire at this office.

THE PROPERTY known as the Sweetland Sanitarium, on the South upper terrace in the village of Charlevoix, is for sale or rent. Enquire of E. H. Green, Charlevoix, Mich. tf

Mrs. Litney & Carr cordially invite the Ladies to call and examine their mammoth new stock of fall and winter millinery. Their stock comprises everything in all the latest novelties in their line. It will pay you to inspect their goods before purchasing elsewhere. adv

Horse for Sale.

A six year old gray mare, weight, 1,200 pounds; good, sound, kind and gentle. A good work horse, and a perfect horse for ladies' driving. Inquire at this office.

CLOTHING.

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.

My Prices are so Low

that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

GREAT EXCITEMENT!

OVER THE WONDERFUL BARGAINS IN LADIES,' CHILDRENS, AND GENTS' UNDERWEAR, AT

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO'S.

And there is no end to the comments on the Great Piles of CLOAK and Winter Goods, that they are offering at such remarkably low figures. And, too, their Gent's Gloves and Mittens, almost make one speechless, for never were such values given before, at least 25 per cent below all other competitors.

OCTOBER FASHION SHEETS FREE. AND ALL OF BUTTERICKS PAPER PATTERNS IN STOCK.

THIS WEEK

We open a handsome line of entirely New Patterns in

DRESS GOODS,

direct from the Manufacturers.

Victoria Plaids, new designs, popular price,	50c.
Heavy, all-wool Cloth Suitings, 27 in.	65c.
Full lines of 36 and 50 in. Flannels,	50 to 75c.

Advance Sale of Blankets, next week.

CLOAKS

We are opening the best and cheapest line of Cloaks ever offered in Charlevoix. They were not made to order especially for us, but are new goods direct from a factory which has been compelled to sacrifice.

Within a few days we shall display the finest line of

LAMPS, LAMP GOODS,
GLASSWARE,
DINNER and TEA SEATS

that we have ever shown and at much lower prices.

COME and SEE THEM,

J. L. HURD & CO.

ALICK ROSENTHAL, LEWIS BLOCK

CLOAKS! CLOAKS CLOAKS! CLOAKS CLOAKS!

ARE HERE!

OF EVERY DESCRIPTION!

For Ladies, Misses, and Children.

COME, COME AND SEE THEM. And see them!

Alick Rosenthal, Lewis' Block.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.
VOL. XIX. NO.—26 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1887. WHOLE NO. 935

CLOAKS, CLOAKS! CLOAKS! CLOAKS!

GRAND SPECIAL SALE!

Friday, Saturday and Monday, October 28th, 29th & 31st.

OUR CLOAK DEPARTMENT IS OVERSTOCKED, AND WE ARE GOING TO SACRIFICE IN PRICES TO DISPOSE OF THEM.

CLOAKS FOR YOU! CLOAKS FOR EVERYBODY!

Good-Black Ladies' Newmarkets, $3.50. Extra Good Cloak For $8. Fine Short Wrap for $8. Nice Childs Cloak $2.

The above are only a few of the many low prices. Remember this for three days only.

Alick Rosenthal, Lewis' Block.

SCHOOL BOOKS

BUY YOUR SCHOOL SUPPLIES AT HEADQUARTERS. WE HAVE EVERYTHING NEEDED IN THE SCHOOL ROOM, AT UNIFORMLY LOW PRICES.

F. G. HINES & CO.

We will furnish the new books adopted by the board at introduction price. Remember that we sell everything that can be called for in any of our Schools.

SCHOOL BOOK SCHOOL BOOK

SCHOOL BOOKS

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO

Best in The World

"The Royal Jewel"

Call at our store and examine the incomparably fine line of Stoves now on exhibition.

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $ $ $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

We are NOT CLOSING OUT

We never did
We do not want to
We are not going to close out

WE AIM TO KEEP OUR STOCK

Complete in Every Department
AT ALL TIMES.

OUR STOCK OF

STAPLE DRY GOODS
--AND--
BOOTS and SHOES,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER TRADE WAS NEVER MORE COMPLETE THAN NOW.

UNDERWEAR! We have a good line of Ladies', Gents' and Childrens' Underwear.

CLOAKS AT A BARGAIN CLOAKS

We keep Lime, Cement, Stucco & Plastering Hair,
We carry a full line of
EVERYTHING
usually kept in a first class stock of General Merchandise. We aim to merit the patronage of the prompt paying trade by keeping good goods and selling everything at a uniformly reasonable price.

Resp'y Yours.
Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

EMREY BROS.

Boots and Shoes for almost nothing, to close out.

We have a number of pairs of Boots and Shoes which we will almost give away as we are closing them out.

We are also going out of
CROCKERY
and have a complete assortment which must be sold

WE WILL NOT TAKE A BACK SEAT ON SUMMER DRY GOODS,
PRICES ALWAYS LOW.

IN GROCERIES and Provisions we can suit you. We receive Fresh Goods weekly.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY
SMITH & PARMELEE,
Charlevoix, - Michigan.
Address all business correspondence to the firm
TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
One year - $1.50 | Six months - $.75
Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Will Barry is cutting meat at McLeod's again.

—Mrs. L. H. Bartholomew returned from southern Michigan, Friday.

—Boyne Falls is to have another paper. Mr. Isimond of Ashley, drives the quill.

—James Washburn and son Will are at Glen Haven, doing a job for parties there.

—Just step into Bellinger's and see what a nice stock of jewelry he purchased Monday.

—It is reported on good authority that Sheriff Jerrue has sent his resignation to the Governor.

—Miss Ellie Berdan is stopping with her sister, Mrs. Robert O'Neill, during her parents visit south.

—J. L. Hurd and wife returned from their Chicago trip on the Lawrence, Wednesday. Mr. Hurd brought a large new stock of goods back with him.

—Rev. C. F. VanAuken will commence a series of evangelist services in the Congregational church some time next week, possibly on Sunday. —Kalkaska Leader.

—"Link" Kanagy, who has been seriously ill with typhoid fever in Chicago, is convalescent. His niece, Miss Lulu, of this place, has been with him for some time.

—W. S. Stripp of Eveline, had about 2,500 bushels of potatoes this fall. He leaves about six acres in the ground this winter, which he thinks will yet develop considerable.

—J. L. Hurd has a new advertisement in this issue. Mr. Hurd is adding largely to his stock and expects to still continue increasing. Mr. H. is wide awake to the wants of his customers.

—Charlton, the Canadian timber man, is doing nothing in Charlevoix or Emmet counties this winter. He is engaged further north, near Mackinaw, where John E. Darrah, of this county, has a large contract with him. Mr. Charlton visited the camps last week.

—The editor of the East Jordan Enterprise, in his last issue exposes his ignorance by attributing the editorial comments of the Detroit Tribune on the Boyne City fire to the Charlevoix correspondent of that paper. He knows that the language he quotes was separated from the dispatch by a dash and was in smaller type than the special. A newspaper man of the brains of a canary bird could not fail to see that it was no part of the dispatch. The insinuation was repudiated here as emphatically as anywhere. A copy of the special may be seen by any person who desires.

—Petoskey Democrat: The new law in regard to mortgages, which took effect Sept. 28, is perfectly worthless so far as accomplishing the end at which it aims is concerned. It provides that the register of deeds shall keep a record of all mortgages in a book kept for that purpose, and the assessing officer directed to assess the same. The object is to make the holders of all mortgages pay tax thereon the same as on real estate. The trouble is just here: The law provides for the recording and assessment of mortgages, but makes no provision whatever for the assignment of mortgages. To avoid paying tax a man has only to assign the mortgage to some friend. There is no provision made for assignments whatever.

—The corporation hose tower is progressing.

—The livery men report a hustling business on the Petoskey route.

—This week would be a bad time to take the census of Charlevoix.

—We understand G. W. Cook will add a livery outfit to his dray and stage line.

—Mrs. G. H. Gayles and daughter have taken rooms at E. M. Clark's for the winter.

—Gard Brown and wife are expected home from their extended Ypsilanti visit, this week.

—The Board of Supervisors at their last meeting voted to appropriate the sum of two hundred and forty-four dollars to the Charlevoix County Agricultural Society.

In 1830 Michigan had 150,000,000,000 feet of pine. She has now about 15,000,000,000 feet. It is also said that the white pine of the north can not be cultivated, belonging as it does to the primeval forest.

—The Sheboygan (Wis.) Manufacturing Co. failed last week, succumbing to a judgment of $60,000. This institution has done quite an extensive business in lumber in the Pine Lake region, during the past ten years or more, and were the owners of the schooner Stampede.

Alick Rosenthal makes advertising a success. Last week he issued a supplement, from which he reports very gratifying results. This week he has a large new advertisement of a special sale of cloaks. Read it. Rosenthal is one of the kind of business men and Charlevoix has several of them who make advertising pay.

Atwood news from the Breeze: Owen Wood expects to start for Oregon in a few days.——John Greenman and Geo. Coon are logging twelve acres for Geo. Fuller.——Wm. Knight has picked 800 bushels of apples, 500 bushels of which are in bushel crates stored in his cellar.——Mrs. Beach has indefinitely postponed her return to Florida on account of yellow fever at Tampa.

—The following are among the Detroit excursionists who left yesterday: Harrison Berdan and wife, W. A. Brown, F. H. Phillips, Lew Smith, Chas. Swallow and wife, Bryant Weed, Perry Weed, Mrs. C. Y. Cook, C. H. Ball, Miss Ella Aldrich, John McElroy, Will Seroggie, N. Ainslie, wife and Son, A. F. Myers, Thomas Cunningham, Dr. Perry, Mrs. O. D. Hilton, L. Benson, Mrs. James E. Wood, Miss Lottie Moore, Del Gardiner, Mrs. John Litzau and son, Jos. Beauvais, Sims Baker, Will Graves. Capt. Berdan and wife will be absent six weeks; W. A. Brown goes to attend the annual meeting of the State Bankers' Association.

—Judge Mills, of Kalamazoo, informed us last summer that if the SENTINEL would draw up a petition to the Secretary of the Treasury and obtain signatures of those cognizant of the facts, that there was a probability that Miss Mary Wakefield, of this place, would receive fitting recognition from the government for her heroic conduct at the time of the Champlain disaster last June. The petition was prepared, circulated and sent to Judge Mills, who forwarded it to Harry Smith, of Washington, a personal friend of Judge Mills, who in turn presented it to the Secretary of the Treasury. From the following Washington dispatch of the 17th inst., it seems probable that Miss Wakefield's bravery will receive handsome recognition: "Mr. Harry Smith, the journal clerk of the house, has presented to the secretary of the treasury a petition from the citizens of Charlevoix, Mich., requesting that the gold life saving medal be conferred upon Miss Mary Wakefield of that place, for heroism in saving lives from the wreck of the steamer Champlain in June last. It is probable that the request will be complied with. Mr. Smith is also trying to secure a more substantial reward for the brave girl whose exploit is so well known to the people of Michigan—a place in one of the departments. The prospect that he will succeed is very good."

—The crop of cold noses comes early this fall.

—Rev. C. F. VanAuken has been around among his friends for a week past.

—Mrs. J. J. West, Miss West, and Miss Cody return to Chicago next Monday.

—The first snow of the season came Sunday, falling to the depth of about two inches.

—Mrs. D. A. Sears, Miss Sears and Miss Curtiss, returned to East Saginaw Monday.

—Prof. Dewey's writing school is well attended, and satisfactory progress is made.

—Washburn & Ackert are putting one of their superior furnaces in the M. E. parsonage.

—Warden Dougherty, of the Chicago Resort, has been doing some good grading on the grounds.

—Thomas Cunningham went to Detroit yesterday to spend the winter with his son, Captain Edward.

—Orders on the Rifenburg flouring mill are still increasing, and the mill is crowding things to keep up.

—Resort Warden Lawrence has just completed a fine job of grading from the Belvedere House east to the road.

—President Cherrie, Treasurer Meech, Secretary Eaton, and Mr. A. D. Cruickshank, went to Bellaire last week on railroad business.

—A. F. Myers, who was one of the excursionists leaving yesterday, goes to Ann Arbor to consult an occulist concerning his injured eye.

—Albert J. Beattie, of Norwood Township, left yesterday to visit relatives and friends in Livingston county. He has lately completed a new house on his place.

—At the Common Council Wednesday evening, the street committee was instructed to investigate and report on the feasibility of lighting Bridge street with gasoline.

—A sailor on the schooner Dan Mabee jumped from the rail to the revetment to take a line, one day last week, and fell into the river. He reached a pile, which he lovingly embraced until rescued by citizens.

—The opinion seems to be gaining ground that the cause of the destruction of the court house was either spontaneous combustion or lightning. It seems evident that the first fire discovered was in or about the oil room, and as it is in this room that the telephone was located, and as there was a thunder storm that evening, it is a reasonable theory that lightning did the work, through the agency of the telephone wire, and the lamp-cleaning appurtenances in the room.

The following from the Northwestern Lumberman: The extension of the Toledo, Ann Arbor & North Michigan road, north from Mt. Pleasant, is opening up large bodies of timber that hitherto have been difficult to reach, and a dozen saw and shingle mills along the line are already contemplated. Besides pine and hemlock, there is a vast quantity of hardwood timber that will be brought into use, and the road for several years is destined to do a large business in forest products.

That period has been reached when speculation and "by-and-by" predictions concerning a railroad for Charlevoix, are memories. The time has come when a railroad in this neck-of-the-woods is a sure thing. The Rubicon has been crossed! The Toledo & Ann Arbor will be built to Mackinaw, and will be in Charlevoix before 1889 is ushered in! We are justified in settling our minds on this fact, and transferring our predictions to the probable date of the completion of the C. & W. M., which is surely coming. There is the best of authority for the statement, and evidence to verify it is multiplying. The completion of the great east and west railroad systems north of us are doing the work as surely and inevitably as the great plan of creation brings the seasons.

FAIRYLAND.

BY HON FORO.

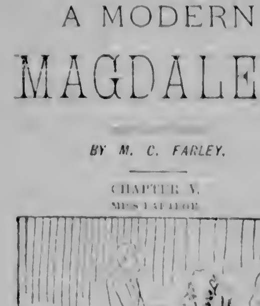
[illegible]

A MODERN MAGDALEN.

BY M. C. FARLEY.

CHAPTER V.

[illegible]



MANY of the passengers are killed outright. Few escape without bruise or injury of some kind. Many are borne away from the scene of the disaster, only to die of their wounds later on. Among the latter number was Miss Lafarge.

She and her traveling companion are rescued, both in an unconscious condition, and are conveyed to a neighboring farmhouse.

They are disrobed and put to bed, and medical help summoned.

Miss Lafarge is by far the greater sufferer of the two. She is burned shockingly, and perhaps fatally. Her head and neck present a frightful appearance, and she is unconscious and remains so.

Her companion has escaped with a comparatively light injury, which consists in a broken right arm. Presently the surgeons and physicians arrive. They consult each other; they argue; they disagree.

In the midst of their arguments my lady struggles back to consciousness. She realizes vaguely that she is no longer a "lady in black," but that, attired in a long white gown, with her arm tightly bandaged and held in a sling, she occupies a narrow cot in close proximity to another cot, upon which lies a long, still object, covered over with a sheet. Around this cot, and bending over the still object, which my lady feels intuitively is Miss Lafarge, the physicians are gathered. She catches the import of their words dimly, and she shudders all over. She wonders if it is really so horrible as those doctors say.

Will Miss Lafarge die? The thought paralyzes my lady for a moment. Her brain whirls. How solemn the doctors look. She wonders vaguely if she is going to die, too. Then the room dances about in a curious fashion; the windows fly up to the ceiling, and the ceiling seems to sink down to the floor. Then, nothing! When she opens her eyes again the doctors are all gone. A motherly old woman sits at her side with a camphor bottle in her hand, and two men are carrying out something long and white on a board, and the other cot is empty.

"Poor dear, I'm afraid the shock was too much for you," the motherly woman is saying, and she knows now, without being told, what has happened to her late traveling companion.

"She was a baby any way, that Lafarge," is the first thought that comes to her, after the momentary horror passes away; "inane little thing, she ought to have died."

The night settles down upon the scene. Morning dawns. And with the morning comes returning strength and a clear brain. My lady insists upon sitting up and being clothed, and asks for her gown. Much against her will, the "motherly woman" fetches in a quantity of garments, and with great perturbation spreads them out before her guest for inspection.

"You ladies were brought in here at the same time, and those who disrobed you not being here now, I am unable to say which one of the gowns belongs to you. The other lady being dead, poor dear—and laid out in the west chamber there—can't tell me which is hers. So you will have to do it for her."

My lady is a lady of fertile brain, and a mind that is quick to perceive an opportunity, and here is an opportunity.

Will she use it?

The lady closes her handsome eyes. She hesitates; and as is proverbially the case, "the woman who hesitates is lost."

It is very evident the opportunity will not be lost, for presently she opens wide her handsome eyes, snaps her little white teeth, and says vivaciously—lying like a lord—or a lady, may be:

"The gray things are mine, please. The black gown belongs to my poor friend. If you will be so kind as to assist me a little, I'll put my gown on now."

She rises, and with the assistance of the "motherly woman," attires herself in the gray gown that had been worn by Miss Lafarge.

"Le roi est mort. Vive le roi," she mutters, her white teeth gleaming as the garment falls about her graceful figure. "Lafarge is dead. Long live Lafarge." And then she laughs softly, and strokes the back of her velvety hands together, although the action gives her pain, and brings the tears to her handsome eyes. When all is done to her satisfaction, she asks her willing attendant very prettily to add one more kindness to the many she has rendered, and bring pen, ink and paper.

This is done.

And now she sits down to her task, for task it is to one in her condition, and grasping the pen firmly in her left hand, she tries to scrawl, and does scrawl the following:

Died, May 1, [illegible] of Past Portland, from injuries received in the late X. Y. Z. Railway disaster.

This finished, she scrutinizes it carefully, nods her head with satisfaction, folds it as well as she is able, and takes up her pen again.

Her eyes shine with a wicked triumph.

This time the scrawl is only a matter of two lines, and is directed to

MISS ELIZABETH CHIDLEY,
Stubblefield.

And it merely announces the fact that Miss Chidley's long-expected cousin and guest, Marion Lafarge, will arrive at Stubblefield by the afternoon train on the following day.

These messages written, they are at once dispatched to the telegraph office, for my lady, having once decided upon a course of action, loses no time in the execution of the same.

Then she sits very quietly and meditates for a little time; but not for long. The next thing she does is to send for the nearest undertaker. And when this gentleman arrives, she is quite prepared with her little tale of woe. And she tells him of her poor friend who died so dreadfully the day previous, and who was friendless and poor. And who had better be—all things considered—buried quietly near the spot where she had met her death.

Then she displays a comfortably filled purse, which she has discovered in the pocket of the gray gown, and she says, prettily and pathetically, that she will herself pay the funeral expenses. And that, as she is obliged to resume her journey at the earliest possible moment, ere she sets forth upon her way, she particularly desires to have the melancholy pleasure of following the remains of her late friend to the silent tomb.

My lady looks so pretty and so very sad, and her words fall so plaintively upon the undertaker's ears, that the sympathies of the worthy man are at once enlisted.

The result being that, at ten o'clock on the ensuing morning, the poor, charred remains of the real Marion Lafarge are interred in the rustic burial ground close at hand, with my lady, in a hired carriage, acting the part of chief mourner for the loss of one whom she had known less than four-and-twenty hours.

But all this has taken time.

During the thirty-six hours that have elapsed since the disaster the railway company have been busy. The wreck of the train has been cleared away. A temporary bridge has been thrown across the chasm, and traffic is at once resumed.

The pseudo-Lafarge hastens to claim the dead girl's luggage—which she accomplishes by means of the brass checks found in the pocket-book along with the dead girl's money. My lady pays her reckoning with the undertaker, makes a neat little speech, accompanied by a neat little gift to the "motherly woman," and then flits away.

As the train goes screeching off with her at last, she leans her blonde head, in its neat cottage bonnet, back against the cushions of her seat, and smiles a smile of deep and unalloyed satisfaction.

And by and by, as time hangs a little heavily upon her hands, my lady amuses herself in a desultory fashion by making little left-hand drawings on a scrap of blank paper which she presently discovers in her traveling bag.

The curious thing is that the drawings, crude as they necessarily are, yet display a marked likeness to Bywater Park and the country surrounding it. And, as if to accentuate the resemblance still farther, my lady finally traces, in curious, scrawling letters, the name of Bywater Park itself. What does she mean?

CHAPTER VI.

AT STUBBLEFIELD.

TIME, four o'clock in the afternoon. Scene, a light, two-wheeled carriage at a dead stand-still in the middle of a country road, and Elizabeth Chidley, spinster, round, roly-poly and rubicund, bolt upright in the carriage, and glaring alternately first at the black imp perched up behind her on the driver's box, and then at the two black, balky ponies in front of her. Either way she looks, the picture of an ebony image of insubordination confronts her.

"Do you mean to tell me that you will not obey my orders?" shouts the angry spinster.

"Now, look a here, mistiss," returns Obe, argumentatively, "de good Lawd knows I'se willin' nuff—'taint that. But I done tole yer when yer bo't dem Ingin hosses how't would end. What kin a pore brack boy do agin two brack Ingin debbils, when dey make up dor min's to be contrairy? Ef dey done feel like goin', den dey'll go an' yer kain't stop 'em. But of dey done stop, de Lawd hisself kain't start 'em to go aga'n 'less de notion is in em. Shore's yo's bawn, mistiss."

The attitude and appearance of the ponies themselves testified to the truthfulness of Obe's statement. They were evidently in a state of rebellion, and stood firmly braced on their short legs, stubbornly resisting every inducement to proceed that had, so far, been brought to bear upon them.

Miss Chidley grew purple from indignation.

"Obe, take this whip and give them a few cuts across their backs. They will come to their senses then, I'll warrant."

At this, the ponies, a pair of well-matched black beasts, whose diminutive size and shaggy heads betrayed their origin—turned their pointed ears backward as if they too understood the spinster's command—and resented it.

"This is enough to provoke a saint," screams Miss Chidley, as the black boy makes no effort toward obeying. "Obe, give me that whip. I'll start them to know the reason why. See if I don't."

"Better not," returns Obe cautiously, keeping a wary eye upon the willful horses. "Better not. I done tole yer 'bout dese yer Ingins when yer got 'em—tricky as Satan hisself. Guess yer'd best sit down, mistiss. Ef dey done start on a sudden, you'll be mighty apt to feel oncomfurtable."

It seemed as if the horses had made up their minds to "start on a sudden;" for, sure enough, they now lift their heels in the air, and the next moment, with a snort of disdain, dash forward and go tearing down the road like veritable demons of evil.

Obe grits his teeth and grasps the lines tightly, as the light carriage plunges from side to side, in danger of upsetting every moment, and Miss Chidley, collapsed and angrier than ever, flops down to the bottom of the vehicle a red and tumbled heap of womanhood.

"Brace yo'self, mistiss," cries Obe, "brace yo'self. We're off now fo' shush! Horay fo' dese Ingin debbils. I done tole yer dey were tricky."

Miss Chidley, quite as obstinate in her way, as the horses were in their way, or as Obe was in his way, shut her lips tightly as her head bumped against the sides of the carriage.

"Never mind, Obe," she manages to scream up at the black imp of a driver. "They don't know any better. Have patience. Time and kindness will tame them."

"Dar's time 'nuff—'taint dat ar'," says Obe dryly. "Ef on'y de drattod harnesses hold togedder—which kaint be reckoned on—wid sech warmints in em."

Away the ponies go, plunging up the little hill, snorting down the long level stretch of shaded road toward the river, Obe sawing away at the lines, and his mistress bobbing about the bottom of the carriage.

"Don't let them run into the river," cries Miss Chidley, as this possibility suddenly pops across her mental vision, and the river itself spreads out broad and shining in the immediate foreground. "I don't care to be drowned."

"Nebber mind de ribber," is Obe's consoling reply, as the willful beasts make straight for the banks, "nebber mind 'bout de ribber mistiss. You's a Baltis' anyway, an' water 'grees wit' de Bapt'sts."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Making Scented Extracts.

Pomades are the commercial vehicle for absorbing and transporting the perfumes of the jonquil, tuberose, and a few other species of flowers. A square frame, or chassis, of white wood, and about twenty inches by thirty inches in size, is set with a pane of strong plate-glass. On each side of the glass is spread a thin, even layer of grease, which has been purified and refined. Thus prepared, the frames are piled up in ranks six or seven feet high, to await the season of each special flower. When the blossoms arrive the petals are picked from the stems—the pistils and stamens being discarded—and laid so as to cover the grease in each frame. These being again piled so as to rest upon their wooden edges, which fit closely together, there is formed a series of tight chambers, the floors and ceilings of which are of grease, exposed to the perfume of the flower leaves within. The grease absorbs the perfume, the spent flowers are removed daily, and fresh ones supplied, and this process goes on from two to four or five months, according to the desired strength of the pomade, which, when sufficiently charged with perfume, is taken from the glass with a wide thin spatula, and packed in tin cans for export. By those methods the delicate odors of flowers are extracted and retained for transport to distant markets, where, being treated with alcohol, they yield their perfume to that stronger vehicle, and produce the floral waters and extracts of commerce. Coarser pomades are made by boiling the flowers in the grease and subjecting the residue to pressure. The spent pomades are used for toilet purposes and in the manufacture of fine soaps. The process of preparing perfumed oils involves the same principle, except that instead of solid grease, superfine olive oil is used. With this oil, pieces of coarse cotton fabric are saturated, which are then spread upon wire netting, stretched in wooden frames about three feet by four feet in size. The flowers are spread upon the saturated cloths, and the frames piled one above the other, so that the perfume of the flowers is absorbed as in the previous process. Essences and "flower waters" are produced by ordinary distillation, in which the flowers are boiled with water in large alembics. The vapor carries off the perfume, and is condensed in adjoining copper tanks, like ordinary spirits. Some of the retorts used for this purpose are of sufficient size to receive at once half a ton of fresh flowers with the requisite water for their distillation. When "flower waters" are to be produced, alcohol is used in the distilling tank to receive the perfumes. By skillful combinations of the perfumes of different flowers, sometimes with the addition of chemicals, a large variety of handkerchief extracts, such as "Patchouli," "Jockey Club," "West End," etc., are produced.—Chambers' Journal.

Blizzard Philosophy.

A feller had better conquer the devil than to conquer man.

Hits a blamed sight better to git beat with a full hand than to win on a pair of jacks.

"The pen is mightier than the sword," pervidin hits not in the fist of a fool.—Western Blizzard.

Nobody Worships Them, However.

Visiting Hindoo—And you really have no idols in this country?

American Citizen—Idles? I should say we have. There is a perfect army of tramps here.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

LIVE ISSUES.

Ringing Speeches Delivered at Various Places in Iowa by Able and Far-Seeing Men.

Senator Allison at Dubuque, Gov. Larrabee at Odebolt, and Ex-Gov. Gear at Mediapolis.

Points Made Well Worthy of Perusal by Both Democrats and Republicans.

[illegible]

...duce the surplus, it has increased that surplus to the extent of $74,000,000, withdrawing large sums from production, labor, and business.

Promising to reduce taxes it has absolutely and completely failed to do so, whereby from month to month large sums, unnecessary for the operations of the Government are drawn from the people into the Treasury, thus continuing to depress the labor industries and business of the country.

We have seen the Democratic party demonstrate its sectionalism in its power, in its policies, and in its leaders, holding that control in one section united now by a sentiment as it was formerly by a simple interest. This sectional control dominates at home and abroad, in the departments, and in the country, and in the House of Representatives, as I have shown.

Governor Larrabee.

Governor Larrabee opened his campaign at Odebolt, giving a clear and forcible exposition of the principles of his party. Following is a synopsis of his remarks on some of the prominent questions at issue: The Governor began by comparing the Government to a private corporation, in the affairs of which all stockholders have an interest. The essential thing is to select judicious and honest officials to manage its affairs and then agree upon its policy that will best promote the interests of all. Men may differ in this, but they should honestly endeavor to determine the best policy to be pursued. Referring to national politics, the Governor said that the Republican party, in favoring protection to American industries, is endeavoring to carry out the policy of the fathers of the Republic. The desire to foster home industries led to the throwing off of the British yoke. And after the nation was established, the second bill passed by Congress was one for the raising of revenue, and the encouragement of home industries. The South, being devoted to cotton raised by slave labor, did not feel an interest in the building up of manufactures at the North, and clamored for free trade. Yielding to that clamor, Congress in 1816 reduced the duty on imports. The depression following was so marked that, after a sad experience covering a period of eight years, the protectionists succeeded in restoring the tariff. Speaking of this experience, Henry Clay said he never saw worse times than during the seven years preceding the restoration nor better times than followed the restoration of the protective duties. The Calhoun nullification movement in the South led to the re-enactment of the low tariff, and hard times followed till 1842, when protection was again adopted. The free-trade acts of 1846 produced a similar result of disaster, though the evil effects were somewhat mitigated by the discovery of gold in California and the loss of crops for three successive years in Europe and a period of foreign wars. But in 1857 the legitimate result of free-trade legislation was exhibited, and that depression lasted until the Republican party succeeded to power and at once established the policy of protection to American industries. During the twenty-four years of Republican rule, despite the waste and expense of the war, this policy of protection has given the country an era of unequaled prosperity. The highest prices has been paid for labor and the products of the farm.

The threat of tariff reduction implied in the recent success of free-trade Democracy has produced a paralyzing effect upon our industries. And this shows what would be the evil results if that threat is carried into execution. We are again declining toward the normal condition of things under Democratic rule. Wheat and cattle have been lower in Chicago since the inauguration of a Democratic President than at any time within thirty years. History but repeats itself. Democratic rule always tends to low prices of labor and produce.

The Governor spoke with force on the transportation question. He said there should be ample provisions to secure the enforcement of its laws, both State and National, against pooling, rebates, discriminations, etc. The [illegible] ...fected whereby it [illegible] the State should [illegible]

[illegible]

Then turning from National to State politics, he called attention to the question of the right of a State to control corporations created by and under State laws. Iowa was the first State to take this step. In 1874 the granger law was adopted, which prescribed the maximum schedule of rates for the carrying of freight and passengers. This had been the first law in the interest of the people as against the corporations, and the interstate commerce law followed in the same line, and was passed by Republicans. He pointed out the provisions of the new law, and indorsed it. It had not given the relief expected, because it was changing old and settled customs, and in the nature of things would require time. But much of the dissatisfaction had grown out of the unaccountable delay of the President in complying with the provisions of the law. The law provided for the immediate appointment of a commission who were to have sixty days to study and formulate a policy of enforcing the law, but the President neglected to appoint this commission until a few days before this law went into operation. The gentlemen had no time to study the law, and they were under the necessity of suspending it in cases, that they might investigate and not do wrong to any people.

But the people of the United States could hardly expect to realize perfection in a single act of Congress, and that the first one on the question. We could with reason hope that with a few amendments, such as time would dictate, the question was near a satisfactory settlement. The Parliament of Great Britain had during the last fifty years enacted over 3,300 laws of control over railroads in that country and had not yet solved the transportation problem. Great Britain had little more than double the mileage of railroads that belonged to the State of Iowa alone.

Ex-Gov. Gear then called attention to the difference between the platforms of the Republican and Democratic parties in Iowa on the transportation question.

A Blow to the German Machine.

The worst blow that the German machine has yet received came to-day. W. Benton Crisp, President of the Democratic City Convention, the organization that fixes dates for the primaries and runs the municipal election machinery, resigned, and in a strong letter gives his reasons. He declares that the present Democratic City Convention does not, as it is intended, "represent the Democratic party, but it registers simply the decrees of a few unscrupulous persons."—Baltimore special.

Under Restraint.

An old negro, who during many years had daily visited the Postoffice, was asked how he could afford to lose so much time that way.

"Man ain't losin' time w'en he's tendin' ter his bizness, is he?"

"Of course not, but is it business with you?"

"Bizness wid me!" he indignantly exclaimed. "Bizness wid me, indeed. Go on, now; go on. W'en er man—er man comes talkin' round me dat way, w'y, I—I—I—has all I ken do ter hol' my han's down an' keep 'em offen him. Go on, now, an' doan multiply words and language wid me."

"I didn't mean to insult you. I have seen you go to the Postoffice so often and never having seen you get anything——"

"Hol' on now right whar yer is: hol' on. Didn't I git one duzz yere circ'lars yistiday, an' er postal card las' year? An' didn' I git er circ'lar 'bout some medicine las' Chris'mas? Tell yer whut's er fack: Artor studyin' dis thing ober, I think yer better go erlaung, fur I'se put ter er mighty heap o' trouble keepin' my han's offen yer."—Arkansaw Traveler.

A Pair of Funny Toads.

"No one knows the funny things toads will do," said the Hon. James A. Sweeney, a Luzerne County naturalist and ex-member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, to a correspondent of the New York Times. "On a recent cloudy day, after a hard rain, there was a cool breeze blowing. I was walking in a friend's garden, near Hazelton, when I heard a peculiar sound. Looking in the direction from which it came, I saw two toads in an open space in the garden. One was quite large and the other was at least a third smaller. They were both standing on their hind feet, facing each other. The large toad had its fore feet over on each side of the smaller toad's shoulders; the small toad had his left fore foot on the large one's right leg. As they stood in that way they uttered strange guttural sounds, as if they were discussing some subject between themselves. Suddenly the small toad thrust its right foot or hand, you might call it, against the large one's stomach, and the next instant the latter threw the former to the ground and a lively wrestle between them began.

"During the struggle on the ground the skins of both toads burst open on the back, and I supposed I was about to see the interesting process of toads taking off their old coats, rolling them up in little balls, and swallowing them, as naturalists say they do. I did witness the process of shedding the skins, but something much more singular than the swallowing incident occurred. The day was raw and windy, as I said, and after the toads had rubbed their skins in a comical way toward their heads until they had both pulled themselves clear of them each one began to shiver perceptibly with the cold. Suddenly the small toad hopped quickly to where the skin of the big one lay and picking it up in his mouth, hopped away several feet. The big toad followed the purloiner of his cast-off clothing with his eyes, and gave two or three appealing croaks, but made no further effort to recapture the stolen goods. When the small toad saw that he was not followed, he deliberately set to work to don the skin he had taken. It took him some time to do it, but he finally accomplished his purpose and went masquerading around in the misfit garment exactly like a clown in a circus wearing the big baggy costume some of them appear in.

"The little fellow seemed to enjoy the novelty of the situation, and hopped around the large toad in what must have been a most tantalizing manner. The big toad was shivering like a person chilled through, and by and by picked up the skin of the small one and began to force it on his body. The process was a difficult one, but after several minutes of unceasing effort, he stood habilitated in the cast-off garments of his diminutive companion. If the effect of the big skin on the little toad had been comical, that of the little skin on the big toad was more so. The sleeves of the coat, so to speak, only came half-way down the arm, and the legs of the trousers covered the toad's legs as though they had been knickerbockers. The body of the garment was so tight that the toad could not work either his legs or his arms, and he stood there the picture of comical despair. By and by he began to swell himself up, and that apparently stretched the skin, for he was able afterward to move away slowly."

Curious Effect of Arctic Cold.

A person who has never been in the polar regions can probably have no idea of what cold really is; but by reading the terrible experiences of arctic travelers in that icy region some notion can be formed of the extreme cold that prevails there. When we have the temperature down to zero out-of-doors we think it bitterly cold, and if our houses were not as warm as, at least, 60 degrees above zero, we should begin to talk of freezing to death. Think, then, of living where the thermometer goes down to 35 degrees below zero in the house in spite of the stove. Of course, in such a case the fur garments are piled on until a man looks like a great bundle of skins. Dr. Moss, of the English polar expedition of 1875 and 1876, among other odd things, tells of the effect of cold on a wax candle which he burned there.

The temperature was 35 degrees below zero, and the doctor must have been considerably discouraged when, upon looking at his candle, he discovered that the flame had all it could do to keep warm. It was so cold that the flame could not melt all the wax of the candle, but was forced to eat its way down the candle, leaving a sort of skeleton of the candle standing. There was heat enough, however, to melt oddly-shaped holes in the thin walls of wax, and the result was a beautiful lace-like cylinder of white, with a tongue of yellow flame burning inside it and sending out into the darkness many streaks of light. This is not only a curious effect of extreme cold, but it shows how difficult it must be to find anything like warmth in a place where even fire itself almost gets cold. The wonder is that any man can have the courage to willingly return to such a bitter region after have once got safely away from it, and yet the truth is that the spirit of adventure is so strong in some men that it is the very hardship and danger which attracts them.—Exchange.

Boxing the Ears.

Dr. Samuel Sexton says, on the subject of boxing the ears, he has upon his records fifty-one cases in which the ear has been injured by blows of the hand or fist. Of those thirty-one were males and twenty females. Of the males thirteen had been boxed upon the right ear, thirteen upon the left and three upon both ears. One was kicked by a companion upon the left ear while bathing, and the right ear of another was injured by having the head violently squeezed between the hands of another person. Of the females fourteen were struck upon the left ear and six upon the right. Five of the women were assaulted by their husbands. Of the entire number eight were boxed in play, four by school-teachers, two by parents, and one, a fervent lover, by his sweetheart. Several cases occurred among pugilists, and others were due to assaults and brawls. The nature of the injuries varied to a considerable degree. One had inflammation in the ear, with suspicion of intracranial trouble. He had had a running of the ear for twelve years, following a blow upon that organ. The patient subsequently died of brain disease. In another case the ear became inflamed and the hearing was very much impaired. In still another, the patient was slapped by his father upon the left ear. Immediate pain and deafness followed, with a bloody discharge from the ear. It was three months before this case recovered. The dangers to which Dr. Sexton calls attention are so grave that parents, teachers, and others should never punish those committed to their charge by boxing the ear.—Medical Record.

PITH AND POINT.

KISSES between women are mere formalities. They excite men's envy, nevertheless.

A WOMAN looks beneath the bed for a man. A man goes out between the acts to look for him.

PRIDE is stronger than poverty. When they are associated, the latter is always kept out of sight.

"THERE goes the champion light weight." "That so? He don't look much like a fighter." "He isn't; he's a coal dealer."

"Who is that pretty girl you walked home from church with last Sunday?" "Oh, she sings in the choir." "Ah, yes, I see—a chants acquaintance."

The doleful song of every drone
Whose chance has left him all too soon,
Is whined in dreary minor tone
And mostly called Inopportune.
—Texas Siftings.

IT was doubtless the briefless barrister who wrote the hymn beginning:
"Just as I am without one Plea."
—Texas Siftings.

JACK—What! Are you smoking cigarettes? Harry—Yes, dash it all! Cora refused my offer of marriage last night, and I don't care what becomes of me.—Tid-Bits.

THE man who can preserve his dignity after his hat has been blown off and crushed under the wheels of a passing vehicle, is eligible for membership in the Concord School of Philosophy.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE has never been sorry that she wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin," from which we infer that she has never seen it played by any portable theatrical company.—Detroit Tribune.

LIFE is short, and women are many. Most men have not time for more than a superficial examination of each one of their fair friends, and to her who crowds her best goods into the show-case is awarded the highest prize.—Hebrew Standard.

REPORTER (interviewing rich man)—You began life barefooted, and worked for a dollar a week, I believe? "No, sir, I didn't." "Well, that will have to go in, anyway. They all do it, and if we should make an exception in your case, our readers would complain."

THE editor of a London journal, who has doubtless been reading the Chicago papers, prints the following under the head of "Foreign Agricultural Items:" "In consequence of the drouth it is thought that the St. Louis hay crop will be a failure."—Arkansaw Traveler.

AN exchange says "if 32,000,000 people should clasp hands, they could reach round the globe." May be so; but we shall not engage in the experiment of clasping hands, for somebody would be sure to steal our diamonds and pick our pockets.—Norman Independent.

MAMMA (to little Joy, aged 4, who wants to stay in bed)—Come, dearie, it is time now to get up. Don't you hear that robin outside your window? He says, "Get up, get up, get up now, get up quick." Joy (listening thoughtfully)—Yes, I hear him; but he says it to his own children.

LOVERS are prone to self-depreciation. Said he, tenderly, as they sat looking at the stars: "I do not understand what you can see in me that you love me?" "That's what everybody says," gurgled the ingenuous maiden. Then the silence became so deep that you could hear the stars twinkling.—Boston Courier.

DURING the performance at the re-opening of the Eden Theater, at Brussels, the whole of the papering on the ceiling fell down in one piece, probably on account of the heat, and covered all the occupants of the stalls and pit. The tumult that ensued under this paper blanket beggars description.—L'Independance.

A MAN at Plainfield desired to leave his traveling bag and overcoat while he walked to a place five miles distant. He put them in a field, unprotected from thieves except by the sign: "Small-pox—Beware!" and when he returned they were there in the field. But they were twenty feet under ground, buried by health officers.—Exchange.

ELKTON claims to have a man 114 years old. He walks to town every election day and votes the straight Democratic ticket. He also walks in about once a month and inquires when they are going to hold another election, or if they can't have a special election. It is also reported that he recently took a son of his, aged 94, across his knee and administered a sound rebuke. The son says he'll wait till he's a little older before he tackles his father again. It seems the boy went in swimming when his father had told him not to.—Dakota Bell.

Our Alu Countree.

The boodlers came down like a wolf on the fold, And they scooped in the silver and greenbacks and gold; From the town on the lake to the town by the sea, They raked in the boodle from A unto Z.

The people were stupid and silly and green; And the boodlers the cheekiest thieves ever seen; in the street, in the office, by night and by day, They grabbed what they wanted and took it away.

They laughed when the newspapers gave them a blast, And they winked in the face of the judge as he passed; For they knew, while this land should be peopled with men, That boodlers who'd boodled would boodle again.

People put them in prison, but then, all the same, Elected new boodlers to keep up the game; From Tweed to McGarigle—who but believes It's the fate of the land to be governed by thieves?

Pickpockets and gamblers, thieves, drunkards, and toughs, Ex-convicts and sluggers, bartenders and roughs, Forgers, fences, and liars, and confidence men We've elected to office again and again.

And we'll do it again; we'll let people see There's a chance for the thief in the land of the free; Long live Saint Barabbas! A pledge let us borrow—To the health of good Sodom and righteous Gomorrah.—Burdette, in Brooklyn Eagle.

Unruly Japanese Haranguers.

Young men clad in the garments formerly worn by students have been numerous in the streets of Osaka, Japan, lately. They lecture in out-of-the-way corners, and even in crowded streets when no constable is at hand, upon political subjects, and frequently urge the doctrine that "official salaries are the life blood of the people."—Chicago News.

The Dimensions of the Earth.

The dimensions of the earth are as stated in the following table:

	Statute miles.
Diameter at the poles	7,898.8809
Diameter, mean	7,911.8860
Diameter at the Equator	7,924.9111
Difference of the diameter at poles and Equator	26.0302
Flattened at each pole	13.0151
Circumference round the poles	24,818.0452
Circumference, mean	24,855.9338
Circumference round the Equator	24,893.8214

GREAT CONQUERORS.

The Men Who Have Changed the Aspect of the World—Powerful Warriors of Ancient and Modern Times—Alexander, Hannibal, Cæsar, Mohammed, and Bonaparte.

Leaving Sesostris and Cyrus and the other primitive Oriental soldiers of nations in the shades of barbarism, as personages not sufficiently distinct to be discussed, the first great conqueror whose achievements constituted a new historic point of departure for the human race was Alexander the Great. His marvelous career of conquest is a luminous track in primitive history.

It was Alexander, who put an end to the attempts of Asiatic monarchs to overrun Europe. He inoculated Western Asia with Greek civilization, and built a city in which the East and West could meet and compare notes. He was not a mere militarist, but a man of the finest intellect sharpened by the best Greek culture. It is sufficient to say that he was the pupil of Aristotle and worthy of such a teacher. He made the civilization of Greece triumphant over Asiatic barbarism, mysticism, fanaticism, and despotism. He established the supremacy of Europe or of the rational western mind over that of the servile, mystical East on a firm foundation. He was accompanied in his brilliant transit across the vast continent of Asia by Greek scientists, who were enabled to enlarge the bounds of knowledge. No nation except the primitive Hellenic nation ever produced two such contemporaries as Alexander the Great and Aristotle, who is still the world's master intellect in the realm of reflective thought. Alexander perished young, but he left a name which resounded throughout the world of his day.

So much for the great Greek conqueror. His conquests, beyond a doubt, promoted civilization and enlightenment. When he lay dead at Babylon the wags of Athens said that the putrefaction of the body of such a personality must fill the world with the odor of it. Hannibal, the Carthaginian, was perhaps the greatest military leader, the fullest of resource and strategy that ever lived. But he did not conquer Rome, because the higher powers play with loaded dice and would not suffer the seat of empire to be transferred from rational Europe to barbaric Africa, whither it would have gone in the event of the final success of Hannibal. Such a success, as I have said, was not permissible by the higher powers, or by that "Divinity which shapes our ends, rough hew them as we may." Europe was foreordained to be the seat of civilization and enlightenment, and such it has been hitherto and such it remains to the current date. We are an outpost of Europe toward the sunset. Possibly the continent of North America may yet succeed to the leadership of the human race, which Europe has hitherto held—Quien sabe, as the Spaniards say.

When we come to the name of Julius Cæsar we are told that it is that of the greatest human being who ever lived. However that may be, there is no doubt but that he was a cardinal historic character. He, too, like Alexander, was a man of splendid intellect, as the schoolboy of the present day knows. It was the genius and indefatigable activity and unparalleled military successes of Cæsar which transformed the aristocratic Republic of Rome, with its haughty Senatorial oligarchy plundering and swaying the then world at their own will and pleasure, into an imperial militarism.

The word "republic," in the sense of a government of the people, by the people, for the people, did not belong to primitive Rome at all. It was in effect after the time of Sulla and Marius governed by an oligarchy of the most despotic, arrogant, and all-absorbing kind. Brutus, the assassin of Cæsar, slew him in the interest of the oligarchy, and not at all in the interest of popular liberty. The Roman Senators wanted to keep on enriching themselves at the expense of their world. Cæsar put an end to their sway, and for this men of their order stabbed him to death.

But Cæsar cared not to live any longer. He was world-weary and life-weary at the age of fifty, although his genius made him the foremost man of all the world, an intellectual Colossus, indeed, who dwarfed all his contemporaries in brains, as well as with sword. Cicero, great as he was intellectually, was cowed in the presence of Cæsar. Hence he hated him, and rejoiced at his assassination. But the name of Cæsar ruled the world for centuries. Napoleon the Little, as Victor Hugo called him, dreamed that he was a Julius Cæsar, and could revive in modern Europe the antique Roman Cæsarism. It was an absurd attempt, and ended in a most disastrous discomfiture.

Julius Cæsar was not only a great militarist and civilian, orator, and writer, but he was also Pontifex Maximus, or high priest of the Roman religion, of his time, which was a mere ritualism. In his speech in the Senate on occasion of deciding the fate of Catiline, Cæsar voted for the exile of that conspirator on the ground that the infliction of death was not a punishment, because, he said, that death was the end of our conscious, individual being. He thus agreed with the Hebrew Ecclesiastes, who says that there is no knowledge, not device in the grave, whither we are going.

Mohammed, the Arabian prophet, was the only conqueror of the Semitic race. He and his successors quickly overran with their fierce, fanatical legions all Northern Africa and Western Asia, in fact almost the entire seat of primitive civilization, and finally established themselves at Constantinople, from which they have not even yet been dislodged. In fact, all Western Christendom was for a time in imminent peril of being Mohammedanized. But this wave of Arabian conquest was the only wave of the kind. William of Normandy, named emphatically the Conqueror, is one of the most important military personages known to history. He was not a Frenchman, but a Northman. In Normandizing England he did great things, for undoubtedly the tremendous part which England has played in the colonization and conquest of the outlying world was due to this Normanization of her population. The spirit of the Norman was heroic, while that of the Saxon was of the persistent, dull, plodding sort. The commingling of Saxon and Norman made the modern Englishman, with his "secular might" and his morning drum beat encircling the entire globe. We, as a nation, are one of the results of that commingling. Clive and Hastings, the conquerors of India, and Wolfe, the conqueror of North America, or resister of it from the sway of the Frenchman, were exemplifications of the Norman spirit of domination.

Frederick the Great was a greater, because a more permanently successful, militarist and conqueror than Napoleon Bonaparte. He created Prussia, and in effect the present German Empire, and thus put an end to the supremacy of the Latin nations and of the Roman Church of the Continent of Europe. Frederick the Great was a rationalist and an administrator of national affairs such as the world never saw before him and has never seen since. He was a genuine king, and capable of ruling a nation.

A Wonderful Quoit Pitcher.

"Talking of life-preservers," said the truthful tourner, as he knocked the ashes out of his pipe and addressed a reporter, "you remember the old steamer Roustabout that used to run from Buffalo to Chicago. I was mate on her the year before she was lost. We were about sixty miles out from Chicago when Mike Lannagan, who was doing something up on the mast, fell, struck on his head on the roof of the cabin and bounced clean out into the lake. Well, the captain he see him fall and he stopped and backed old Roustabout quicker'n you could say 'scat.' Mike went down like a plummet, for he was knocked insensible, and I knowed there was no use to heave a life-preserver for him, so I just hurried up the boys in getting the boat down, although I didn't expect it 'ud do much good. We had Jim King on board—passenger from Chicago. You remember Jim King, don't you?"

"Can't say that I do," remarked a bystander.

"Well, Jim was champion quoit thrower in them days. He's dead now, poor fellow, but Jim was a hoss on throwing quoits. I tell you quoits was a great game them days. Every village had a quoit club, and the boys on the farms used to throw horse-shoes. It was somethin' like base-ball in those times, although I never could see as much fun in base-ball as I could see in a game of quoits."

"Oh, come off," cried the impatient listener. "What did Jim do; or, did he do anything? Did the man drown?"

"Now, don't be too fly. Who's tellin' this yarn?"

"Well, you don't seem to be."

"Go on! Go on!" said the crowd.

"Well, you know, in quoits a 'ringer' was when you put the quoit around the stake. It counted double. Well, Jim he picks up the round life-preserver—it's like a great big quoit, you know—and as the cap'n came running aft Jim he sings out: 'Cap'n, I'll bet you $5 I'll make a ringer on that man if he comes up within the length of this line.'

"'Bet you $20 you can't,' said the cap'n.

"'Take you,' said Jim, and just at that mint up bobs Mike's head about sixty feet astern. Jim threw, and I'll be durned if that life-preserver didn't go plump over Mike's head clear down to his shoulders, and there it stuck. We got down the boat and when we got to Mike he hadn't come to yet and didn't for some time after. He'd been a goner if it hadn't been fur that ringer, although it took the skin offen his nose."

"Didn't the captain pay the bet?"

"Pay it? You just bet he did. And Jim he handed it over to Mike, and Mike he blew it all in when he got to Detroit. I wish some of it was here now, fur I'm mighty dry. Thanks. Don't mind if I do."—Detroit Free Press.

In Self-Defence.

Returning from a drive in the suburbs of Atlanta I asked the colored driver if a mounted man whom we saw in the distance were a policeman.

"Yes, sah," he answered, and then, as if the question had suggested the thought, he said proudly: "I'll be thirty years old next August, boss, and I ain't never been arrested yit."

I was about to murmur my congratulations when he startled me by adding: "And I ain't never had but one warrant out agin me, and then they didn't kotch me."

"How was that?" I asked.

"Well, I kep' out of the way until the trial, and then I gave myself up in court."

"What were you tried for?"

"For shootin' a nigger."

I began to think that my driver was not the innocent lamb his first declaration might have led me to consider him, so I asked him about the circumstances of the shooting.

"Well, boss," he said, "it was like this: I was livin' on a plantation, and one day I got into a row with another young feller about a gal. It was in a store, and the first thing I know he hit me with a churn handle and then I shot him. They got a warrant out for me, but I wouldn't a had any trouble only the other feller had a good many white friends and they pushed the case agin' me. It cost my father a hundred dollars to get me clear."

"Then you were acquitted?"

"Oh, yes, sah."

"How was that, when you say you shot the man?"

"Oh, yes, I shot him, and hit him pretty bad, too, but I got off on self-defence," and then he added, apparently without the least thought of the absurdity of the idea, "I wouldn't ha' shot him only he started to run."—Boston Home Journal.

An Intelligent Official.

In one of the Dakota cities where the postoffice free-delivery system went into effect the men appointed carriers were somewhat inexperienced. One of them seemed to get over his route in a remarkably short space of time. Long before the others returned he was back with an empty pouch looking for another load. The postmaster questioned him a little, but he insisted that he knew what he was doing and didn't need any instructions. The fourth day he came back with about half the letters he took out.

"What is the matter?" asked the postmaster.

"The boxes on my route are all full."

"What boxes?"

"Them little iron boxes that you put up around on the lamp posts that say 'U. S. Mail' on the end. I've been putting the mail into them every day and have left them unlocked, too, but I don't believe the big fools around the neighborhood know enough to go to them and get out their letters. I caught one man to-day putting letters he wanted to mail into one of them, though I know there are a dozen for him in it now. I threatened to kick him if I caught him trying it again and he said he was going to report me."—Dakota Bell.

A Barrel Churn on Wheels.

A Pittsfield, Ill., man is said to have made a big barrel churn on wheels. He goes through the country gathering the cream, and when he has secured the proper quantity returns home. On the way home he connects the churning gear, and as he drives along the churning goes on as the wagon goes along, and when he arrives there is nothing to do but take out the butter and draw off the buttermilk.—New York Sun.

The Ignorant Contractor.

Col. McCracken, U. S. A., was the chief quartermaster, stationed at San Antonio, Texas. He had advertised for bids to supply the post with corn, and the contract was to be awarded on a certain day. Col. McCracken was believed to be an honorable and conscientious officer, who would not take a bribe under any circumstances.

Tom Rowell, of the firm of Rowell & Smith, was a sharp, shrewd business man, who was very anxious to get the contract to supply the post of San Antonio with corn, but he did not think it was quite safe to offer the quartermaster a bribe, as he had done on previous occasions with other quartermasters. After thinking over the matter for some time he adopted the following plan to carry out his purpose:

He called at Quartermaster McCracken's office, and asked that officer in an insinuating manner to see that he got fair play when the bids were opened. Col. McCracken replied in a very dignified manner:

"The contract, sir, will be awarded to the lowest and best bidder."

Tom Rowell took up his hat and bowed himself out. In doing so he dropped on the floor an envelope containing five one thousand dollar bills, the name of the firm of Rowell & Smith being on the envelope.

Rowell immediately went to the office of the chief of police, and informed him that he had lost an addressed envelope containing five one thousand dollar bills.

Rowell argued in this way:

"If Col. McCracken keeps the money, I'll get the contract, and I can well afford to let him keep the $5,000. If he, on the other hand, thinks I am trying to bribe him and gets mad about it, I will simply say I dropped the envelope on the floor accidentally, and had no intention of bribing him, and that I didn't know where I had lost the money."

Rowell had scarcely returned to his office from notifying the police of his loss, when in rushed Col. McCracken, his face flushed, very much excited and holding the envelope in his hand.

"What do you mean, sir," he exclaimed, "by trying to bribe a United States officer? This is an insult, sir," and he slammed the envelope down on the table.

Rowell made out that he was very angry at the insinuation. He pounded on the desk with his fist and roared out:

"And what do you mean, sir, by charging me with attempting to bribe anybody? I merely asked you to see that my bid was properly considered. I dropped that envelope without knowing it, and I have been hunting all over town for it. I want you to understand, sir, that I am a gentleman, even if I am only a civilian."

"Now, that is just a little thin," retorted Col. McCracken."

"Well, sir, I'll prove to you that you are mistaken, and then I shall expect an apology," replied Rowell. And going to the telephone he requested the chief of police to come immediately to the office of Rowell & Smith. That official was there in a few minutes and fully confirmed Rowell's statement that he had notified the police of the loss of the money as soon as he had missed it.

Col. McCracken was overwhelmed with mortification at having unjustly accused an innocent man of having attempted to bribe him. He was profuse in his apologies, which Rowell at length accepted.

The bids were opened next day, and it was found that Rowell's bid was not the lowest, but Col. McCracken, feeling that he owed Rowell some reparation, decided that the bondsmen of the lower bidder were not good, and gave the contract to Rowell, who cleared upwards of $25,000 out of it, without having to spend a cent to lubricate anybody.—Alex. Stewart, in New York Mercury.

Is Kissing Unhealthy.

There is a Scandinavian tradition to the effect that kissing was first introduced into England by Rowena, the beautiful daughter of Hengist. Again, in Cromwell's time, when the banished Cavendish visited a French nobleman at his own chateau, the mistress of the house, at the head of her maidens, thus greeted him: "Forasmuch as ye be an Englishman, whose custom it is in your country to kiss all the ladies and gentlemen without offense; and, although it be not so here in this realm, yet will I be so bold as to kiss you, and so shall all my maidens."

And now at this late day the habit, which is as old as the first courtship, and which has produced barrels and barrels of satisfaction from the day which is mentioned in the sixth chapter of Genesis, when "the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair"—this beautiful habit is condemned by a hard-hearted old scientist, who is probably so repulsive and gloomy that no pretty woman has ever ventured to place her pearly lips in contact with his cuticle of mucuous membrane.

The idea! Only think of it. The old fellow says that kissing is unhealthy, that the mouth is inhabited by an innumerable number of animalcule, and that these are set free in the act of kissing, and pass from mouth to another. All right; let them come. We are not afraid of animalculæ.—Exchange.

A Burial Invention.

The Paris authorities have tested an automatic contrivance by an Austrian inventor for lowering coffins into graves without ropes. A coffin was placed on a kind of rectangular platform and surrounded with funeral drapery, which concealed the grave. When a spring was pressed the platform with its lugubrious burden descended slowly into the earth. The price of the apparatus is £80 ($400), and the inventor states that it is used in Vienna and Milan, the rate payable being 6f. ($1.20) for each burial. The prefecture of the Seine has asked for some modifications in the machinery before deciding on taking it into use.—London Telegraph.

Ingenuity of a Dog.

It is about as difficult for a dog to get a really satisfactory scratch at his back as it is for a one-armed man to rub his elbow, but a Hartford (Conn.) dog does it. In front of his master's house is an old stone hitching post, which time and weather have made rough and scaly. Proceeding to this the dog sits down, throws himself backwards till he is leaning against this, and then proceeds to rub his back as cleverly as a 'longshoreman or one of the ancient Scots who used to bless the Duke of Argyll.—Chicago News.

LET us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.—Abraham Lincoln.

The Delights of a Rose Scent Jar.

'Tis a pity that so few housekeepers, comparatively, know the never-ending satisfaction to be derived from the possession of a rose scent jar, yet at the cost of a little painstaking they are within the reach of the majority.

Nothing gives a more subtle, delightful perfume to an apartment than one of these jars, which should be opened every morning, after the necessary cleaning and dusting is finished, for an hour, then carefully closed.

All your friends will ask, "What gives your rooms so delightful a fragrance?" It is such a pure yet delicious odor that it charms every one.

The preparation of the rose stock should be detailed to the care-taking member of the family who never forgets anything.

Gather the rose petals in the morning, let them stand in a cool place, tossed up lightly for one hour to dry off, then put them in layers with salt sprinkled over each layer into a large covered dish; a glass berry dish is a convenient receptacle. You can add to this for several mornings till you have enough stock, from one pint to a quart, according to the size of the jar; stir every morning, and let the whole stand for ten days. Then transfer it to a glass fruit jar, in the bottom of which you have placed two ounces of allspice, coarsely ground, and as much stick cinnamon, broken coarsely. This may stand now for six weeks, closely covered, when it is ready for the permanent jar, which may be as pretty as your ingenuity can devise or your means purchase. Those with double covers are the best, and very pretty ones in the blue and white Japanese ware—I believe the dealers call it kanga—holding over a quart, can be bought for seventy-five cents.

Have ready one ounce each of cloves, allspice, cinnamon and mace, all ground (not fine), one ounce of orris root bruised and shredded, two ounces of lavender flowers, and a small quantity of any other sweet-scented dried flowers or herbs; mix together and put into the jar in alternate layers with the rose stock, and a few drops of oil of rose geranium or violet, and pour over the whole one-quarter pint of good cologne.

This will last for years, though from time to time you may add a little lavender or orange flower water, or any nice perfume, and some seasons a few fresh rose petals. You will derive a satisfaction from the labor only to be estimated by the happy owners of similar jars.

Ladies in the country might find it profitable to prepare the rose stock for city customers.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Killing Beef for Hebrews.

As is well known, the Israelites are very particular as to the use of butcher's meat, which, in order to be "kosher"—i. e., to comply with the ritual requirements—ought only to be taken from animals that are killed not only in the presence of, but by, a person of the faith, specially appointed for the purpose. Complaints in this respect have been of frequent occurrence, many butchers or dealers of game and fowl offering their Jewish clients "unclean" meat. At a recent trial of this kind in Berlin the rabbi of the principal synagogue was called upon the stand and testified as follows: "The Mosaic law requires that the Jew butcher be a person of good reputation and morals, and, after undergoing an examination by the rabbi, should only exercise his particular function on the strength of a certificate. One of the tests of his fitness for the place consists in promptly resharpening a knife which the rabbi has purposely blunted. During the act of butchering he has to say certain prayers; he must see that the blood falls upon ashes or peat, and, above all things, he must avoid being touched by any one while in the act, this in itself rendering the slaughtered animal unclean. He is required to put his seal upon the carcass, giving the date on which the animal is killed. No Israelite is permitted to eat fowl which has been killed more than three days before."—Paris American Register.

WHEN Howard Paul saw Buffalo Bill's cowboys on a Sunday drunk in London he said it reminded him of an adjournment scene in the New York Legislature.—Fall River Advance.

Terrible Are the Ravages

Upon the system inflicted by diseases of the kidneys and bladder. They wreck the constitution more speedily in some cases than consumption and other maladies of a fatal pulmonary type. As you value your life, arrest a tendency to debility, and consequent inactivity of the renal organs, should you experience any such. Infuse vigor and activity into the vitally important secretive action of the kidneys with that salutary diuretic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The proper degree of stimulation is imparted by it to the bladder also, when that organ is sluggish. With this timely check, Bright's disease, diabetes, catarrh of the bladder, and other kindred disorders, may be prevented. Liver complaint, constipation, nervous ailments, and rheumatism are likewise conquerable with this sovereign household remedy. Against the effects of exposure to damp or otherwise inclement weather, it is a benign safeguard, and revives strength after undue fatigue.

New Version of the Early Worm.

The old story of the early bird and the worm that used to be told to enforce the virtuous practice of early rising became, in a later and degenerate age, somewhat less effective by turning attention to the worm's views of the affair. Recently it has appeared with a new amendment which restores all the point and piquancy of the original.

A father has been lecturing his son upon the evils of staying out late at night and getting up late in the morning. "You will never amount to anything," he continued, "unless you turn over a new leaf. Remember that the early bird catches the worm."

"How about the worm, father," inquired the young man, borrowing the old sarcasm; "wasn't he rather foolish to get up so early?"

"My son," replied the old man solemnly, "that worm hadn't been to bed at all. He was on his way home."

It's Always the Way.

"Didn't I tell you so?" said a gentleman to an acquaintance whom he chanced to meet on the street; "it's always the way." "What's always the way?" inquired a mutual friend of the two men, who happened along just then. "Why, just this," replied the first speaker; "you see Smith, here, the last time I met him he had one of the worst coughs you ever heard. He complained of a loss of appetite, of night-sweats, of low spirits and other unmistakable premonitory symptoms of consumption. I told him to get a supply of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery at once. He did so, and look at him now! Did you ever see a healthier-looking man? The 'Discovery' has snatched thousands from consumptives' graves. I knew it would cure Smith. It's always the way."

WHEN the fierce tragedian cried, "What ho! there," the new super walked on the stage and asked what hoe he wanted.—Texas Siftings.

WE ought not to be too anxious to encourage nutried innovation, in cases of doubtful improvement. For a quarter of a century Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy has been before the public and passed through the severest test and is pronounced the most reliable remedy for that disagreeable malady. Thousands of testimonials of its virtues. 50 cents per bottle. By druggists.

The Original Whisky-Maker.

John Large, the original whisky maker of Western Pennsylvania, came to America when [illegible] joined the [illegible] was 18 years old, [illegible] 26 years old, [illegible] he was 36 years [illegible] among the first [illegible] laration of Inde[pendence] [illegible]—[illegible] bury Post.

THE latest craze among the young ladies is a hair [illegible] locks of hair [illegible] gentlemen friends [illegible] for James Spry, [illegible] Shindel, Eugene [illegible] Vechten will [illegible]—Cedar Rapids [illegible]

She Broke the Engagement

[illegible]

"I'LL be round [illegible] the second hand [illegible]

If Sufferers

Scrofula, Bronchitis [illegible] Scott's Emulsion [illegible] Hypophosphites [illegible]

IF the keeper [illegible] isn't the keeper [illegible]

Prof. Loisette's Memory Discovery.

No doubt can be [illegible] and genuineness [illegible] System, as it is so[illegible] Mark Twain, Mr. [illegible] Judah P. Benjamin [illegible] For full details [illegible] at 237 Fifth Ave., [illegible]

The Favorite Line to California.

The Great Rock [illegible] offers a choice [illegible] River, on both [illegible] First-class excursion [illegible] as low as the lowest [illegible] Holbrook, G. T. & [illegible]

FREE!—To M[illegible] Meerschaum [illegible] W. TANSILL & Co. [illegible]

THE entire ass[illegible] were nine children [illegible] magnanimously, [illegible]

Ely's Cream Balm

CATARRH.

PANTS SHOES

KIDDER'S DIGESTYLIN

FOR INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

FOR CHOLERA INFANTUM.

PENSIONS

OPIUM

PENSIONS

$250

FREE

PENSIONS

OPIUM

HOME STUDY

INDIAN'S CATARRH CURE

MUSIC

Make No Mistake

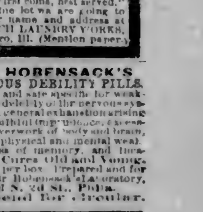
Hood's Sarsaparilla

100 Doses One Dollar

CATARRH

Smith's BILE BEANS

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER



DR. HOBENSACK'S

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., BUFFALO, N. Y.

MARVELOUS MEMORY DISCOVERY.

READ THIS!

400,000 LADIES' HOME JOURNAL AND PRACTICAL HOUSEKEEPER

From now to January 1888—FOUR MONTHS—balance of this year,

ONLY 10 CENTS

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps,
Josiah Allen's Wife,
Mary J. Holmes,
Marion Harland,
Rose Terry Cooke,
Louisa M. Alcott,
Will Carleton,
Robert J. Burdett,
Harriet Prescott Spofford,
Christine Terhune Herrick

CURTIS PUBLISHING CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

PATENTS

WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN

Cures Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Catarrh, Croup, Sore Throat, RHEUMATISM, Lame Back, Stiff Joints, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Wounds, Old Sores and All Aches and Pains.

It Cures You. That's the Idea!

WIZARD OIL COMPANY CHICAGO.

C. N. U.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the Advertisement in this paper.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, OCT. 26, 1887.

It is announced that Thomas Nast, the cartoonist, has practically severed his relations with Harper's Weekly. It is whispered that he is likely to start a pictorial paper at the beginning of the next Presidential campaign, and that he will uphold the Republican nominee, whosoever that may be.

Those who find fault with the President for using his official time traveling around the country in a $200,000 car are inconsiderate. They forget that in course of little more than a year that $200,000 car will be at the service of another man. Mr. Cleveland is only making hay while the sun shines.

Harper's Weekly declares, doggedly, that President Cleveland has "done more than any other man to arouse and interest the public mind in the question" of civil service reform. Undoubtedly, and he has done it by showing how little, after such great professions, his Administration is guided by civil service reform principles.

The Democratic editors are not harping so much as they were on the fact that Col. Fred Grant is the son of his father. This is to be regretted. The more they talk about that fact the larger will be Col. Grant's majority. If the New York Democrats could have kept this question out of the campaign they would have had some little chance of defeating him.

General Sheridan lives simply but comfortably in the house on Rhode Island avenue, Washington, bought with the fund presented to him by his admirers after the war. He is at his office early in the morning, usually walking down in fair weather, and returning about 5 o'clock. He is intensely fond of his children, who are handsome, healthy little youngsters. Sheridan receives as Lieutenant General of the army a salary of $11,000 a year, with allowances which bring this amount up to $13,000.

The Chicago Mail has learned that an enterprising man in Chicago proposes to procure tin boxes, just large enough to hold an ordinary sandwich, a piece of pie, a flask of coffee and a Chinese napkin. He will fill a light wagon with them and at a certain hour—lunch hour—will deliver a box and contents for the sum of fifteen cents. He says that his scheme is working, that he has secured over 300 subscribers on State and Dearborn streets. As rapidly as business increases he will put on more wagons. A great scheme. What next?

The New York Tribune says: "Mayor Roche's warning to George Francis Train that he must stop his incendiary speeches or go to jail, seems to have had only a momentary effect, and he has broken out worse than ever. We repeat our advise to him to come back. The children want him and the birds are hungry. What is more, if he stays too long in Chicago he may not be able to get away. And what would New York do without Train?" The people of Chicago will undoubtedly be perfectly willing to worry along without George Francis, if he will only take the Tribune's advice.

Detroit Journal: "One of the speakers at the Arbeiter Hall meeting in Detroit, yesterday, said that the Anarchists were being sacrificed to the reign of terrorism in Chicago. What caused the terrorism? The advocacy of bomb-throwing by the Anarchists, and the bombs that were thrown at their meeting in accordance with a previous understanding that bombs were to be thrown. Detroit or any other city would be terrorized, and insist on the punishment of the men capable of exposing a community to the horrors which Spies, Parsons and their colleagues so earnestly and hotly advocated—before their arrest, but which they now so earnestly repudiate."

Extremes beget extremes. If the Anarchists could not obtain control of affairs in this nation, our republican form of government would speedily become an absolute despotism. Their wild intemperance of speech and deed leads straight in that direction. Such creatures as Johann Most are fit only to live under the most despotic forms of government. They cannot enjoy the blessing of free speech without abusing it. They construe liberty to mean license, and would betray the sacred trust of self-government, if it were committed to them. These alien apostles of sedition are not wanted in this country, and if congress does its duty, at the next session, they will be incontinently kicked out of the nation whose hospitality they have abused and whose people they have insulted.

Northern Michigan News.

A man who tried to kiss a Cadillac girl got 60 days in jail.

The first train into Sault Ste. Marie took a Chinese laundryman into that town.

Wexford's tax rolls are equalized at $2,872,000. Last year they were $2,895,000.

Antrim's deputy game warden will receive $2.00 per day for services actually rendered.

Cadillac's school census numbers 1,156 children. The average daily attendance is 531.

Emmet county pays her prosecuting attorney the smallest salary of any county in the state.

The Western Union Telegraph Company will lay a new cable across the Straits of Mackinaw, a distance of six miles.

"Billy McLala, the pugilist and professional tough, of St. Ignace, was salted for two years at Jackson by Judge Steere, last week.

Dexter & Noble are shipping flour to Baltimore and the steamer Queen of the Lakes is transfering it to Traverse City for shipment.

James Jones of Mancelona, an indigent insane person, has been admitted to the asylum at Traverse City, by Probate Judge McLaughlin, of Antrim county.

The Edison light company want permission to place a light across the Sault canal at a height of 180 feet which they think would clear the masts of all vessels.

A pun from the Bellaire Breeze: In selecting a Poor Manager to take charge of the county paupers and county farm, care should be taken not to secure a poor manager.

Last week the Manistique people struck a fine artesian well at a depth of 220 feet. It is a gusher, and the flow is large enough to supply the whole of the western part of the village.

The Cheboygan and St. Ignace papers are disputing over the question whether the new line of fast boats between Chicago and the Straits will run to St. Ignace or Cheboygan.

S. E. Wait of Traverse City, has on exhibition an apple of the Alexander variety, raised on the farm of Brinkman Bros., of Old Mission, which weighs twenty-four and one-half ounces.

While out hunting last week in Waverly township, near Cheboygan, Edward Spencer had his head literally blown to pieces by the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of Jas. E. Hall, who preceded him through the brush.

Talk now that the Kalkaska branch will be built down through Dexter & Noble's logging road, cross Torch river and around by Kewadin. It would make a saving of nine miles or about $90,000 in the construction of the road. Very little surveying would result, they say.—Progress.

Mancelona Herald: The Herald has frequently advocated the necessity of a poor farm for the keeping and maintaining of county paupers, and we are glad to state the county fathers have taken our advice and have purchased sixty acres of land of Jas. McAllister, near Bellaire, for that purpose.

The Antrim County Board of Supervisors have authorized the printing of 200 circulars giving a synopsis of the game and fish laws, and that they will be sent to Justices of the Peace, Postmasters and others in the county. This is done as a preliminary step toward enforcing the laws and properly protecting our fish and game hereafter.

The output of Greilick Bros.' mill at Traverse City, foots up 9,500,000 feet of merchantable lumber, for the season now closing. The bulk of this cut is marketed at Milwaukee where the firm have a yard and have handled 2,000,000 feet in addition to that cut at their Traverse City mill. This is believed to be the largest exclusive hardwood lumber business done in the state, by a home firm. The firm have also shipped 65,000 ties and 40,000 posts the past season.

Petoskey Democrat: Late authentic accounts from railroad officials are to the effect that there is not a particle of doubt but what the T. & A. A. & N. road will be continued on from Charlevoix through Petoskey to Mackinaw. We are only too glad to learn that the above is an assured fact. With enterprise and energy exhibited in this matter by the business men of our sister village, they certainly deserve to succeed in securing a railroad.— Mr. C. F. Hankey informs us that work has commenced on their elevator at Harbor Springs and will be pushed forward as fast as possible.

Petoskey Record: Arthur Connable left last Thursday for Northport on the tug Martin, which is under charter to R. Connable & Son. The firm has a stock of ice at that point, and will freeze fish there as well as in the Petoskey house this fall.——The stock interests of this northern country are certainly looking up. In addition to the herd of Holstein Fresian cattle belonging to the Atkins bros., there have been received by C. P. Wilson a registered Jersy bull and registered heifer, and he also has the registered cow of H. B. Daggett. The two former were shipped up to him by S. H. Chipman from his Warsaw, Ind., farm. B. Bain has also got in a high grade Jersey cow. We hope it will not be long until our farmers generally will learn that it costs no more to feed fine cattle than scrubs, and will take steps to improve their stock.

Elk Rapids Progress: Bellaire the county seat of this county, is in the geographical center of this county. It is located on the Intermediate river and has about 500 popuation. We should judge that the merchandise is somewhat overdone as there are more places of business than in Elk Rapids. It has a fairly good building for its town hall, a first class hotel building, the Inter Lake, two fine churches, a newspaper, the Breeze, two large wooden bowl and scoop factories, saw mill, etc. It has doubled its population since we were there last and a large number of residences have been built. Riverside terrace has been cleared of the standing timber and when the stumps are pulled it will be rather pretty. The only drawback to the future of the town is that it is almost inaccessible from this portion of the county, except by a hard day's labor. Possibly that was what was intended when the county seat was removed, and if it was, they hit it. But we are glad to see that the town has prospered and hope for its continuance, as in the prosperity of all towns and county, our village will prosper too.

Traverse Bay Eagle: We understand that an old mortgage for quite a large amount, held by Detroit parties on a large portion of the present village of Williamsburg, is about to be foreclosed. If this be true, a number of innocent purchasers of village property in the town may be made to suffer.——Some idea of the fruit interest of Grand Traverse may be gathered from the amount of fruit handled by one firm during the present season. Besides strawberries, peaches, grapes and other small fruits Messrs. Perkett, Lardie & Co. have bought and shipped 4,300 half bushel crates of huckleberries, 875 one third bushel crates of plums, 750 barrels of pears and 3,200 barrels of apples. They now have on hand 3,300 barrels of apples. While this firm are the largest shippers of fruit they are by no means the only ones, but the amount handled by other parties we are unable to learn.——Wm. Taylor, Samuel Hulett and Wm Brown, of Kingsley, were in town Tuesday as witnesses on a case in the Circuit court. On Tuesday night they started out to see the elephant, and it would appear that they succeeded in finding him. Sometime during the night while on the road not far from the fair grounds, they were attacked by four or five men who came out of the bushes and knocked them down and robbed two them, Hulett and Brown. The former claims to have lost $50 and the latter $100. Both were badly injured and left senseless on the ground. Taylor was not badly hurt and succeeded in getting away.

Boyne Citizen: At the meeting of the village council Wednesday night, it was decided to rebuild the court house with all possible dispatch, so that the Circuit Court could meet there the 15th of November. The insurance money from the building, $1,800, is to be turned over by the county to the village, who will make up the balance necessary for completing the building. A building committee consisting of councilmen Allen, Newville and Norton were appointed, who are to procure material and have the worked commenced immediately. The saloon was granted permission to remain open until 10 o'clock p. m. W. A. Norton was elected to complete the term of C. A. Shepard, removed.——While no new facts have been discovered regarding the court house fire, the necessity for a legal investigation to either fix or remove suspicion, sift rumors and preserve testimony while it is fresh, is apparent. The Board of Supervisors made a mistake in not appointing a committee of investigation, as the prosecuting attorney can not undertake such investigation without specific charges. Meanwhile, reputations suffer and absurd rumors become current. The theory that East Jordan parties were the incendiaries, as advanced by the state press, was at once repudiated by all fair minded people here. The Detroit Tribune of Thursday exonerates East Jordan by quoting a communication from W. A. Norton and S. B. Thatcher, denying such theory as an "unjust imputation" against "honorable opponents." Coming from such a source, the vindication ought to be conclusive. The latest rumor at Charlevoix advances the theory that a league of half a dozen officials and residents here caused the setting of the fire. The motive for such an absurdity must surely be malicious.

Dress Goods!

A good assortment of Plain and and novelty Dress Goods.

DRESS TRIMMINGS IN PLUSHES, VELVETS, CORDS, SETS, AND BRAIDS. Also Buttons.

Our stock of Ladies Jackets and Cloaks is of the best make, with prices to suit the times. It will be to your advantage to call and see our Ladies and Gents underwear before purchasing.

REMEMBER: A full line of staple Dry Goods in stock.

Cor. Bridge & Main sts.

B. SEE.

Charlevoix Savings Bank.

[Notice of meeting of stockholders; fine print not legible.] JOHN NICHOLLS, Vice Prest.

Dissolution Notice.

[Fine print not legible.] GEORGE BURNS. WILLIAM SCROGGIE.

MICHIGAN STATE LAND OFFICE.

[illegible]

Probate Order.

[Fine print not legible.] JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Probate Notice.

[Fine print not legible.] JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Mortgage Sale.

[Fine print not legible.] MARTHA J. AYERS, Assignee. A. M. CLARK, Attorney for Assignee.

The Kalamazoo "DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Contains the Associated Press Dispatches

Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

Standard Time.

Charlevoix and East Jordan. [Schedule not legible.]

Charlevoix and Boyne City. [Schedule not legible.]

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan. [Schedule not legible.]

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE. [Schedule not legible.]

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS. [Schedule not legible.]

Probate Notice.

[Fine print not legible.] JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Bank of Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security

Its Officers

Security in Banking

This Bank Invites

This Bank Will

Parties Seeking

Investment Notes,

We Solicit Your Patronage.

WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK, DETROIT, MICH. $500,000 TO INVEST IN BONDS [fine print not legible]

For Sale.

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix.

Land for Sale.

[Fine print not legible.] JAMES METCALF, Charlevoix.

Land for Sale.

[Fine print not legible.] THOMAS WEST, 457 Lafayette St., Grand Rapids.

CROSS & SONS., Buy and Sell all kinds of Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc. Charlevoix, Mich.

CHARLEVOIX Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres., John Nicholls, Vice Pres., F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS: Henry Bennett, John Nicholls, A. H. Upright, O. D. Wood, A. Butters, A. Fox, F. A. Smith.

CAPITAL ... $25,000
SURPLUS ... 2,000

[Fine print not legible.]

CORRESPONDENTS: National Park Bank, New York. Commercial Nat. Bank, Chicago. Nat. City Bank, Grand Rapids. Detroit Nat. Bank, Detroit.

160 Acres in MARION Township For Sale at a Bargain, Terms to suit.

MONEY TO LOAN ON Approved Real Estate Security

THEODORE R. CHAPIN, Boyne City.

JOHN CONNOR, Fashionable Boot and Shoe MAKER.

Hand Sewed French Calf Gaiters, $5; Men's Kip and Calf Boots, $4.50; Half-soling, 50 cents. Defy competition.

All Work Guaranteed.

J. T. Kirkpatrick, ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR, —ON— Chalevoix Summer Resorts.

I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.

I employ only first-class workmen, both Carpenters and Painters.

Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention.

J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller

Offer a Mammoth Stock OF BOOTS, SHOES and other FOOT WEAR, —AT— LOWER PRICES Than can be found elsewhere in the County.

We have just secured a FIRST-CLASS SHOEMAKER, And will make Repairing a specialty.

We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.

NOTHING SHODDY.

Fox & Miller.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter.

RIFENBURG MILLING CO. Charlevoix, Mich. Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealer

3 EXTRA GRADES OF FLOUR

Feed, Corn Meal, Graham

We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL.

Litney & Steimel LIVERY, And Feed Barn Charlevoix, Mich.

Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the BEST BOATS!

The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references.

I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the LEAST MONEY!

All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made. LEAVE ORDERS with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.

Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.

J. BEAUVAIS.

BETTER THAN MEDICINE! KEEP YOUR FEET WARM.

You can't enjoy good health unless you clothe the feet properly.

D. SHERWOOD & CO. have just received the finest line of Fall and Winter BOOTS & SHOES ever brought to Charlevoix. Give them a call.

A. J. McLEOD, Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail All kinds of FRESH MEATS, SALT PORK, SMOKED & SALTED HAMS, Dried and Smoked BACON, DRIED BEEF, Bologna, Head Cheese, Sausage.

Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.

Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.

A. J. McLEOD.

Washburn & Ackert, FOUNDREYMEN, MACHINISTS, And Manufacturers of The Charlevoix Plow.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN Boiler Works!

Builder and Manufacturer of BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.

Sheet Iron Work given special attention.

MARINE WORK a specialty.

HENRY BARTH, Prop. Charlevoix, Mich.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at law. Office in Butters' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PAILTHORPE & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey, Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D. [rest not legible]

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Bexter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 293, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 101, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 146, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m. [List of officers and committees not fully legible.]

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE, RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r. Charlevoix, Mich. Every convenience for the traveling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE, Lorenzo Cook, Manager. Charlevoix, Mich. The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE. W. C. Newman, Prop'r. Charlevoix, Mich. Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. E. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. H. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. (Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.)

DENTIST

N. J. PERRY, Dentist. Office in West's Drug Store. Charlevoix, Mich.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card for Petoskey.

IN EFFECT, OCT. 1887.

Leave Going North	2 05 a. m.	8 18 p. m.
Leave Going South	8 20 a. m.	†11 00 p. m.

† daily except Saturday.

Michigan Central

The Direct Route Between Mackinaw City & Detroit Jackson, The South and East.

Trains leave Mackinaw City 8 a. m. daily except Sunday and 10 p. m. daily arriving at

Detroit	9.10 p m and 11 a m
Jackson	10.30 p m and 11 20 a m
Toledo	10.55 p m and 1.45 p m
Buffalo	6.15 a m and 8.07 p m
Cincinnati	6.35 a m and 6.40 p m

WAGNER PALACE SLEEPING AND PARLOR CARS.

W. H. JONSTON, Mich. Pass Agt., Grand Rapids. O. W. RUGGLES, G. P. & T. Agt., Chicago.

DULUTH, SOUTH SHORE AND ATLANTIC R'Y.

"SOO-MACKINAW SHORT LINE."

Only Direct Route to Marquette and and the Iron and Copper Regions of Lake Superior.

Traversing the most Picturesque portion of Upper Michigan through a country unequalled for Hunting, Fishing, Etc.

Two Through Express Trains daily in each direction to which are attached NEW, ELEGANT and COMMODIOUS OBSERVATION PARLOR CARS & WAGNER SLEEPING COACHES

Tickets over this route are on sale at all principal ticket offices. Full information as to rates etc., maps and folders will be furnished. Address E. W. ALLEN, Gen Pass. and Tkt Agt, Marquette, Mich.

Experiences of Divers.

The experiences of a diver are many and interesting. After he has once reached the sunken vessel, whether by being lowered straight down from the wrecking craft or by walking along the bottom of the ocean to avoid currents, he must search through the hull of the ship as though she were floating upon the surface of the water. To do this he carries a small lamp with him, which gives out a peculiarly brilliant light when under the water, and makes the surrounding objects glisten with all colors of the rainbow. Care must be taken that the air-tube does not get tangled up in any way or cut by friction against the side of the vessel. Unfortunately divers have frequently lost their lives by this means when exploring the intricate passages of a vessel at great depths below the surface of the water. Danger is also experienced from heavy pieces of timber, boxes, barrels, and even dead bodies, which are often floating around in the hold of a sunken vessel. A diver once telling of the trouble that he had in exploring a wreck, said that he was constantly annoyed by several heavy chests which kept moving about with every swell of the sea. One came so near to his diving-bell that he was forced to give it a violent push, which sent it against the opposite wall of the small cabin. Instantly it rebounded and came within an inch of the diver's head-dress which it would have quickly broken had it struck it. But by dodging in time the chest passed harmlessly over him, and the next moment collided with another similar chest. The force of the collision broke one of the hoops of the huge box, and the next moment a glittering pile of newly-stamped gold coins rolled out upon the floor of the cabin. The chest had been used as a sort of treasure-box by the captain, and all of his valuables were locked up in it. Besides gold and silver pieces of money, rich jewels and precious stones escaped from the brass-bound chest and presented to the diver's gaze a rare sight. The light from his small lamp, shining through the water, made the golden heap seem brighter than ever.—Argonaut.

Growth in Children.

The rate of growth of children varies according to sex. Thus, at the age of eleven and twelve years, boys are larger and heavier than girls; but from that age on the evolution of the girls is more rapid, and they soon overtake the boys and pass them, till the age of fifteen years is reached, when the boys regain the ascendency, while the girls remain nearly stationary. A curious relation has been discovered between growth of children in stature and in weight. Mr. Malling-Hansen, director of the deaf and dumb institution of Copenhagen, has for three years weighed and measured his pupils daily; and he has observed that their growth does not take place regularly and progressively, but by stages separated by intervals of rest. Weight also increases by periods after intervals of equilibrium. While the weight is increasing, the stature remains nearly stationary, and vice versa. The maximum of increase of stature corresponds with a minimum period of augmentation of weight. The vital forces appear not to work on both sides at once. These variations are subject to the influence of the seasons. During autumn and early winter, according to M. Malling-Hansen, the child accumulates weight, while his stature increases slowly; but during spring, stature receives a veritable push, while weight increases but little. Some local habits have an influence on the stature.—Popular Science Monthly.

Writing Society News.

The very ornate descriptions of one of the fashionable weddings of the past week which appeared in the columns of some of our usually prosaic contemporaries seems to justify the remark of the mistress of a Back bay mansion where a wedding was celebrated a few weeks ago. The reporter arrived on the scene after the wedding was over, but, nothing daunted, he asked the lady of the house to be kind enough to furnish him some of the details of the ceremony. "Well," said the lady, "the bride looked charming in white satin. Now, if you can't get up a beautiful description of the wedding with that information, you are not so smart as most reporters." The scribe fully justified the lady's expectations in the next morning's paper.—Boston Herald.

A Paradoxical Authoress.

Miss Mary Murfree is a perpetual surprise. Everybody has grown accustomed to the fact that Charles Egbert Craddock is a woman, but nobody who met the fragile, pale-faced lame girl during her recent flying visit to New York found it easily possible to understand how such a quiet little creature who was obliged to sit to receive her guests could have obtained such a mountaineer's familiarity with the rocks and the trees of the Tennessee crags, or have drawn such bold and masterly sketches of the rough characters who live among them. She writes like an active fearless man accustomed to every phase of a wild, out-of-door life. She looks like the most delicate of fireside-bred women. She is small, with big eyes that look bigger when a crowd has been lionizing her till she is pathetically tired, and dark-haired. She does not look like an invalid precisely, but is evidently far from strong. She is very simple, natural and straightforward in conversation, modest to a degree in spite of an amount of adulation that might have turned any woman's head. Any reference to the long mystification about her identity calls out a roguish smile, and they say that when Aldrich was made speechless with amazement on his first presentation to her, she merely said: "You know I owed you one for Marjorie Daw." Her present home is in St. Louis and she will spend the summer there busy with new literary plans.

Easily Explained.

"Your story does not hold together. You say that they were cast upon a desert island, with nothing but what they stood in, and yet you say that they went to work immediately and built houses and tilled the land and slew wild goats, dressed their skins, and made themselves shoes and clothing."

"Ah! but you see there was a woman in the party with a handful of hairpins and she taught her fellow-castaways how to use them."

"O, well! why didn't you tell me that in the first place?"—Boston Transcript.

Mr. Henry Violet of Johnson county, Missouri possesses a four-legged chicken.

Features of the "Thousand Islands."

If the islands and islets still remained merely in their original condition, as rounded, dome-shaped knolls, clad with pine and maple and Virginia-creeper, rising hump-like in slow slopes from the water's edge, they would still be extremely romantic and picturesque. But they are far more than this. The ceaseless action of the river at their sides, aided by the disintegrating frosts of winter, and the pressure of the ice-packs when the lake "breaks up" in early spring (exactly as if it were an academy for young gentlemen in the Easter holidays), has cut many of their edges into steep little cliffs, fantastically weathered, as granite almost always weathers, into beautiful broken crags and pinnacles. Thus the cliffs often spring sheer from the surface of the water, worn by rain and frost into quaint, jutting shapes, and with rare ferns and flowers and creepers hanging out here and there from their creviced nooks. The summits remain for the most part smooth and polished by the ice-action; and the contrast between their bald, round surfaces, almost gray with age and lichens, and the jagged and ruddy outline of the more recent fractures, makes an extremely bold and effective element in the total picture. The islets are also of every imaginable shape, size, and grouping—some of them big enough to hold two or three farms, and others of them rising solitary from midstream, crowned by a single waving stem of Canadian cedar. Here is one, for example, a mere bare pinnacle of moldering rock; and here is another, a craggy little island, yet covered with endless variety of timber, whose drooping foliage hangs over the bank and reflects itself placidly in the silvery mirror below. Thus cluster after cluster passes before one's eyes, all fairy-like, green, and romantic, but all as infinitely varied in shape and contour as intricate intermixture of rock and vegetation, and land and water, can possibly make them.—Grant Allen, in Popular Science Monthly.

Snowdonia or Switzerland.

Llanberis has been called the Chamounix of Wales, just as Snowdonia has had bestowed upon it the name of Switzerland of Wales. With regard to Llanberis, if in calling it the Welsh Chamounix the object is to imply that, like the little village at the foot of Mont Blanc, it is the headquarters of tourists, and the starting point of climbers intending to go up Snowdonia, at the base of which it lies, there is no objection to the assimilation. But as regards Snowdonia, there is certainly no reason why it should be compared to Switzerland, with which it has but little likeness. It is very hard to understand why people always will compare one thing with another wholly irrespective of the merits of either. For it is only misleading people into the belief that this part of the principality is similar to the land of William Tell, than which a greater mistake could not be made. The beauties and attractions of Wales are sufficient to induce visitors to come to the principality or they are not. If they are, it is because they have distinctive and characteristic features of their own; if they are not, it is absurd to deceive people by appealing to their recollection of the Alps, as that can only lead to disappointment and comparisons which can not be to the advantage of Wales. Then again to dub Wales the British Switzerland is almost an admission that Welsh scenery has not proved sufficiently attractive of its own merits. Can anything be so unwise? If we were asked what makes the great charm of Welsh scenery, we would for our part, declare most emphatically that it is precisely its peculiar appearance, unlike we have seen in the Alps or Pyrenees, and that it is worth seeing if only for that very reason. If Wales were a kind of Switzerland, of Auvergne or of Provence region, the best thing to do would be to give it as wide a berth as possible, and not to go near it on any account, as an imitation, however good, is never equal to the original.—Art Journal.

A Woman's Weakness.

A high official of the government was in a communicative mood. He sat, tipped back in his comfortable office chair, and said to a Boston Traveller correspondent: "I have made a discovery that is worth millions to bashful men. You know, there are some fellows who never can go into ladies' company without being embarrassed, but I have found out something that will make a bashful man the equal of the most self-conscious woman that ever lived. Now let me tell you my secret. I started out on the broad, general platform that a woman is more sensitive about her feet than anything else. Having settled that in my mind, I began a series of experiments. The horse-car is my favorite place. I love to see a queenly woman get into the car and sit down with the air of knowing that she is the best dressed lady present. In an apparently unconcerned way I attract her attention by looking steadily at feet, with an occasional glance at her face, of course I avoid all appearance of impertinence. I assume the air of a man who sees something that interests him. No matter how calm the victim is when she entered the car, inside of five minutes she will be so nervous that she will fairly ache to get to her destination. She may have the handsomest foot in the world, and know that it is incased in a nicely fitting shoe, but she will wilt all the same. It is a woman's weakness. I have tried it on young girls of 16 and old women of 80—the result is the same. Achilles was venerable only in his heel, but you can't look steadily at a woman's little toe for two consecutive minutes without making her feel as though she would like to murder you."

A mammoth tooth, four inches long and weighing one-fourth of a pound, has been found on the banks of the Mackinaw.

"I'm sorry I can't accommodate you, Mr. Paperwait," said Mrs. McKerrel, shaking her head resolutely, as she often did of a Saturday evening, "but all my boarders settle weekly; my motto is, 'Pay as you go.'" "O, yes," exclaimed Paperwait cheerfully, "so is mine, so is mine. But I'm not going yet, you know; I'll be here six months yet." And a happier man never vetoed a bill.—Burdette.

Snifkins—Mr. Swiggins, I must thank you for the rendition of that last song. I don't remember when anything sounded so grateful to my ears. Swiggins—Yes; I have been very much complimented on that little piece. —Snifkins—It was splendid. You sang so loud that Mrs. Coldcash couldn't hear a word of what I was saying to her daughter in the corner. Do sing again!—Tid-Bits.

Miraculous Escape.

W. W. Reed, druggist, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "One of my customers, Mrs. Louisa Pike, Bartonia, Randolph Co., Ind., was a long sufferer with Consumption, and was given up to die by her physicians. She heard of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and began buying it of me. In six months' time she walked to this city, a distance of six miles, and is now so much improved she has quit using it. She feels she owes her life to it." Free Trial Bottles at Dr. G. W. Crouter's.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Dr. G. W. Crouter.

FOR LAME BACK, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents.

SHILOH'S COUGH and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

SHILOH'S VITALIZER is what you need for Constipation, Loss of Appetite, Dizziness, and all symptoms of Dyspepsia. Price 10 and 75 cents a bottle.

CROUP, WHOOPING COUGH and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

DAN'L S. WAY, Photographer. In Bradbeer's Gallery. Photographs of all sizes taken. Old Pictures copied and enlarged. CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

W. H. FRANCIS FURNITURE —AND— JOBBING SHOP, Will also do Contracting & Building, In Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.

I keep in my shop a full set of hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc. on short notice.

Shop on South Terrace, Opposite Sheriff Berdan's residence.

MILLINERY, FANCY GOODS, DRESS-MAKING.

We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.

DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.

ALDRICH SISTERS. Ingleside Building.

C. H. Maddaugh, MERCHANT TAILOR.

I have just received a fine line of Samples of first class Fall & Winter Tweeds. Call and look them over.

Fine Samples of OVERCOATINGS! now awaiting your inspection.

Call and see me. Satisfaction Guaranteed.

CHARLEVOIX Manufacturing Co. Charlevoix, Mich., Manufacturers of Sash and Doors, Blinds, Mouldings etc. NEWELL Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails kept in stock. Window & Door Frames made to order.

All Kinds of Building Material Kept constantly on hand.

PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS, Furnished on application.

Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building

Correspondence solicited.

New JEWELRY AND SILVER WARE.

I have just received a very fine stock of Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc which I will sell at Prices lower than the same goods can be purchased outside.

Did it ever occur to you that by patronizing home Merchants you were benefiting yourselves?

All classes of Repairing done quickly.

C. R. BELLINGER.

Burns, Stevens & Co. LIVERY STABLE CHARLEVOIX.

The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.

Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.

Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

W. A. REYNARD, Has just received at his Fruit Store in the Lewis Block, a choice line of Vegetables and Fruits OF ALL KINDS, TO WHICH OTHERS WILL BE ADDED IN SEASON.

I will also keep in stock a full line of Tobaccos and Cigars.

Butter and Eggs a Specialty.

Farming Lands

500,000 ACRES Of Splendid MICHIGAN LANDS For Sale By The G. R. & I. R. R.

50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.

[Fine print not legible.]

By Water and Rail

[Fine print not legible.]

Not a Wilderness by any Means.

[Fine print not legible.]

Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.

[Fine print not legible.] W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner, GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.

TITLE PERFECT.

For Finest JOB WORK, Patronize The Sentinel.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY.

Will not stick to the iron or blister the goods, easy to use, makes your linen look like new at home. Ask your grocer for Celluloid starch. It is pure and economical.

HUMPHREYS'

DR. HUMPHREYS' BOOK Cloth & Gold Binding. 144 Pages, with Steel Engraving, MAILED FREE.

[illegible]

HOMEOPATHIC SPECIFICS.

Sold by Druggists, or sent postpaid on receipt of price.—HUMPHREYS' MEDICINE CO.

STOVES!

AHEAD AGAIN!

THE Round Oak Heating' Stoves.

NEW STYLES Cook Stoves!

Saws & Axes

Job and Tin Work.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

F. A. COCHRAN & CO., (Successors to PERRY WEED.) Druggists and Pharmecists, A FULL LINE OF Drugs and Medicines.

We keep in stock a large assortment of well selected POPULAR MUSIC. Call and see it.

M. S. MOULTON, WATCHMAKER & JEWELER, Charlevoix, Mich.

Personal Attention given to Watch Repairing.

Key-wind Movements changed to Stem-wind and warranted as good as the best.

JEWELRY Repairing done in the best manner.

Having had 30 years experience I am confident I can give the best of satisfaction.

MARVELOUS PRICES! BOOKS FOR THE MILLION

Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. [List of 45 titles not legible in full.]

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.

We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00, or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

FRANK E. WOODS Bath & Barber Rooms

Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS.

Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.

If you want a quiet place to get a shave, hair dress or bath call and see me.

JAY L. PRICE.

NEW SHOP!

All kinds of Blacksmithing, At the Shop in the Foundry Building.

Horseshoeing a specialty.

ALL WORK GUARANTEED.

M. SCOTT.

WANTED! Potatoes, Onions, Apples, Peaches and Blueberries.

We have an old established trade and can place stock to best advantage. Consignments solicited. Correspondence invited from shippers. Stencil and shipping tags furnished.

W. H. THOMPSON & CO. Commission Merchants. No. 166 South Water St, CHICAGO, ILL.

Reference, Felsenthal, Gross & Miller, Bankers, Chicago, Ill.

JAS. A. GELLICK, Dealer in Choice Wines, Fine Liquors EXCELLENT CIGARS.

We call Special Attention to our Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES.

We also keep continually on draught Milwaukee Export and lager Beer.

Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN

A DAY'S DOINGS.

Eventful Happenings in Every Hemisphere, as Transmitted by Telegraph.

Political, Social, Financial, Commercial, Industrial, Criminal and Other News.

THE VERY LATEST BY TELEGRAPH.

CLEVELAND.

The President Visits the Sioux City Corn Palace—Hearty Receptions at Omaha, Kansas City, and St. Joseph.

THE President's train made no stops on the way from Minneapolis to Omaha except a brief one at Council Bluffs and one of half an hour's duration at Sioux City to enable the travelers to visit the corn palace at that place. The party spent twenty minutes in the palace. There was no speech-making, the whole time being given up to sight-seeing. Mrs. Cleveland said she never dreamed such effects could be wrought out of corn. "What is this?" asked the President, picking up an ear of corn of various colors. "That is squaw corn, and was raised by the Indians on the reservation in Nebraska," explained Judge Whiting. "With your permission I will take this," said the President, and it went into his pocket. The President was in excellent humor, and talked freely. He pronounced the Corn Palace "a grand and wonderful affair," and declared it to be "the first new thing he had seen." To Colonel Lamont he remarked "You see, the West beats the East." He expressed himself astonished to find Sioux City so large and prosperous a city. The party arrived at Omaha at 10:30 Wednesday morning, and after the usual speeches were taken for a drive. The crowd that greeted the President was the largest ever seen in the streets of the city. It was augmented by people from all parts of Nebraska and Western Iowa. At St. Joseph, Mo., the President was accorded an enthusiastic welcome, and at Kansas City, which was reached at 8.15 p. m., he was greeted by an enormous crowd.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

The Commission Again Sitting at Washington.

...out wriggling and twisting in a vain endeavor to free themselves from the hook. The President was not without his share of luck. With a light trout rod in hand he deftly guided the line as the fish began to bite, and his patience was soon rewarded by the safe landing of a magnificent specimen of yellow bass. This was quickly followed by others, until seven as fine fish as ever bit had succumbed to his skill. Two of these were large, weighing fully five pounds each. The President was delighted. He said the fishing far excelled anything he ever had in the St. Lawrence country. One particularly fine specimen required fully twenty minutes to land, so large was he and savage in his plunges after he took the hook. The President and Mrs. Cleveland spent Sunday quietly at the home of Postmaster General Vilas. They had expected to attend church, but were deterred from so doing by the inclemency of the weather. They left Madison on Monday morning at 9 o'clock for St. Paul.

MINNEAPOLIS (MINN.) special: "There is a flood of wheat pouring into Minneapolis. Large receipts are expected next week if the weather is favorable. The amount of wheat now in store in elevators and warehouses in Minnesota and Dakota, outside of Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Duluth, is 10,820,000 bushels. On Oct. 1 the amount was 10,420,000 bushels, distributed along the several lines of railroad."

AN aeronaut named Hathaway ascended to a height of one thousand feet in a balloon at Galesburg, Ill., and made the descent with a parachute in thirty seconds. He struck the ground very lightly, and remained standing.

A TRAIN upon which Governor Foraker was traveling to Zanesville, Ohio, left the track and came near going over a steep embankment. The Governor was compelled to crawl through a window in order to get out of the car in which he was riding, and then he was taken on to his destination, where he braced up his shattered nerves by making a speech of an hour's duration.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND and party left the capital of Wisconsin on Monday morning at 9 o'clock. A stop of twenty minutes was made at La Crosse, where the party was escorted through the streets by the Governor's guard. St. Paul was reached at 5.30 p. m., and the crowd of 15,000 people assembled at the depot gave the distinguished visitors a hearty welcome. Mayor Smith made a brief speech of welcome. The President in his response said, among other things:

My visit to your town is a social one, and trusting that we have a sort of friendly feeling for each other, I want to suggest to you a reason why I am particularly and personally interested in St. Paul and its people. Some years ago a young girl dwelt among you and went to school. She has grown up to be a woman and is now my wife. If any one thinks a President ought not to mention things of this sort in public I hope he or she does not live in St. Paul, for I don't want to shock anybody when I thank the good people of this city because they neither married nor spoiled my wife (laughter and applause), and when I tell them that they are related to that in my life better than all...

FROM the disclosures made at the trial of a number of negro Masons for murder at Greenwood, Miss., it would appear that the lodges among the colored people in that vicinity are criminal organizations, whose principal business it is to exterminate such persons as have been unfortunate enough to incur the enmity of the members.

THE Piedmont Exposition at Atlanta, Ga., was opened Monday, addresses being delivered by H. W. Grady, Governor Gordon, and the Hon. S. J. Randall.

A SYNDICATE of Ohio and Eastern capitalists has purchased 68,000 acres of coal lands in Breathitt County, Ky., and has organized a company with $2,000,000 capital. Mines will at once be opened and roads built.

IT is stated that the scourge raging at Tampa, Fla., is unquestionably yellow fever.

POLITICS.

THE Nebraska Republicans had a lively two days' session at Lincoln. The issue was between the railroads of the State and the people. The railroads attempted to defeat the renomination of Judge Maxwell for the Supreme bench, and to squelch all attempts to adopt resolutions favoring an extra session of the Legislature for the enactment of additional railway legislation. Five hundred and fifty delegates were present. George D. Meiklejohn, of Nance County, presided. Judge Maxwell was renominated for Supreme Judge with a hurrah, only one ballot being required to settle the matter. The platform condemns a system of revenue that compels the farmers of the West to pay tribute to the manufacturers of the East, favors pensioning Union soldiers, sympathizes with Ireland, commends the efforts of Parnell and Gladstone, pledges the party to submit a prohibitory amendment, condemns the President for his attempt to return the flags, favors the admission of Dakota, views with alarm the abuse of the veto power of the President, and sustains the Board of Transportation in its efforts to secure reasonable freight and passenger rates.

GENERAL.

A NEW YORK telegram says that J. Randolph Tucker, of Virginia, has been retained in the case of the Chicago anarchists. The announcement caused considerable surprise in legal circles, and it was generally believed that Mr. Tucker must feel pretty sure of securing a favorable hearing before the United States Supreme Court or he would not have taken hold of the case. It was also the general opinion that the selection of the able Virginian as an associate of General Pryor was an excellent one, as Mr. Tucker's long service as Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the lower house of Congress adds weight to the cause he is to advocate.

THE visible supply of wheat and corn is...

POWDERLY'S MESSAGE.

The General Master Workman's Annual Report to the Knights of Labor.

He Fully Explains His Position on the Anarchist, Denver, and Other Questions.

Following is an abstract of the address of General Master Workman Powderly to the General Assembly of the Knights of Labor, recently in session at Minneapolis:

"The highest tribunal known to the laws and regulations, as well as to the true and loyal members of the Order of the Knights of Labor, is convened for the eleventh time in regular session. I am to make to the representative assembly report for the eighth time. I ask that it will receive that consideration at your hands which its merits deserve, and that such recommendations as I may make will be received and acted on according to their importance and necessity. We adjourned a year ago with dissension in our own ranks, that dissension was enlarged upon and scattered to the world by enemies from within and from without. The news of discord reached the ears of the employers of labor, and they in many instances took advantage of what they mistook for our weakness and rushed into conflict with our members in various parts of the country."

Mr. Powderly gave a complete history of the famous Chicago strike of last year. All the correspondence, both telegraphic and written, between Mr. Powderly and Messrs. T. B. Barry and Carlton, who were in charge of the strike in Chicago, is quoted in full and reasons given for each step taken.

Mr. Powderly then continued: "The relation of the order to anarchy has taken up so much space in the public press and has been the subject of so much discussion in the assemblies of some large cities, that it is proper to speak of it here and report to you my doings in connection therewith. Let me say here that I have never, as has been so much asserted in the press of the land, confounded socialism with anarchy. I draw a wide line of distinction between the two, as every reading, thinking man must. I will ask of the General Assembly to define the position of the order on the attempts that have been made to prostitute it to such base uses as the anarchists would put it. I have never publicly uttered a sentiment regarding the course of the seven men who are condemned to death in Chicago (this is written Sept. 19, 1887). I will now give my opinion. If these men did not have a fair trial, such as is guaranteed every man in the United States, then they should be granted a new trial. If they have not been found guilty of murder, they should not be hanged. If they are to be hanged for the actions of others, it is not just. The man who threw the bomb in Chicago should be hanged and his accomplices should receive the punishment allotted to such offenses by the laws of the State of Illinois."

All letters relating to the anarchy subject were quoted at length. The Denver question was given in full, and of the matter Mr. Powderly said: "I regarded the whole affair as an outrage and the questions as being impertinent, rascally, and prompted by malice or revenge. The resolution which should pass is one to demand that every avowed anarchist should be obliged to withdraw from the order or be expelled. We have nothing to fear from the trade-union, but everything to fear from the contaminating influence of the men who preach destruction in the name of our order, and who at the same time assert that they are socialists, while giving the lie to every principle of socialism when they advocate violence of any kind. As to the Home Club I believe that this report would not be complete without an explanation..."

...famous impresario. He was known, indeed, quite as well in England and the United States as in Paris, and wherever he was known he was liked. His long experience of life in every quarter of the globe had given him a rare fund of anecdote, and his conversation was set off by an originality of expression which gave it a peculiar zest. Moravian by birth, he had a remarkable faculty for acquiring languages, but, with the exception of Italian, which he learned with care, he spoke them all with a strong accent. Maurice Strakosch had an eventful career. He was first destined for the operatic stage, and and he studied for some time under the direction of Pasta, who had already retired from public life. Seeing, however, but little chance of distinction as a singer he turned his attention to the piano and became a virtuoso of mark, playing with success in the chief capitals of the world. When in America he married Amelia Patti, who possessed one of the finest contralto voices of the day. Adelina has often declared that her sister Amelia had the most splendid contralto she had ever heard, and even if some allowance were made for sisterly partiality, Mme. Nicolini is not far wrong, in such noble style does Mme. Strakosch still sing. It was under Maurice Strakosch's auspices that Adelina Patti, after having made a marked success in the United States, first appeared in Europe at the Covent Garden Theater, and she went through the continent with him until her marriage with the Marquis de Caux.

KING OF THE ANARCHISTS.

Chicago Reds Made Captive by George Francis Train's Silly Bombast.

[Chicago special.]

George Francis Train opened his campaign in Chicago at the Princess Theater Sunday afternoon before a highly appreciative audience of about six hundred. Nearly all the leading socialists and anarchists were present and greeted the celebrated crank with a cheer. His speech was a curious mixture of bombast, eloquence, rhetoric, history, fiction, anecdote, and insanity. He caught the audience from the first word spoken and retained their strictest attention until the close of his talk. Said he:

I have come to Chicago for the purpose of starting the Daily Anarchist. I examined Herr Most down the throat of the New York labor people. When I started there Herr Most was uppermost among the Socialists there. After I had spoken his talk secured none and instead. I told them, and I tell you, that if these seven Socialists hang I will lead 1,000,000 workingmen against Chicago and cut the throats of the men who so foully murdered them. [Long...]

A wild anarchist yell, such as has not been heard in Chicago for a year, was the answer given the daring or crazy orator. The crowd gave cheer after cheer for Train, Spies, Parsons, and other anarchists. Train was surrounded by the crowd, who tacitly crowned him the King of the Anarchists. A dozen or more detectives and officers in citizen's clothes made no move, and seemed dazed at the recklessness of the man who had thrown down the gauntlet to the police force and authorities. Socialists and anarchists who have not smiled for months went out of the hall with a new light in their eyes and congratulated each other that a new apostle had arisen.

LUXURY ON WHEELS.

The Saloon and Dining-Room of the President's Car.

President Cleveland, says the Chicago News, does not accept any favors from the railroad companies, but pays out of his own pocket for the best conveniences and comfort that modern railroad enterprise can afford. The saloon of the President's car is furnished with all the comforts and attractions that brighten the elegant modern parlor, and his bedroom is furnished as choicely as the upholsterer's art can suggest. As Mr. Cleveland pays in full for all he gets as he goes, there is no danger of the railroads that carry him coming into any conflict with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

DINING FIFTY MILES AN HOUR.

THE CAR SLEEPING ROOM.

THE compass was invented in China 1120 B. C.; used in Venice A. D. 1260; improved at Naples 1302. Its variations first observed in 1500; its dipping in 1576. The dipping needle is the invention of Robert Norman, a compass-maker of Ratcliff, England, by whom it was devised in 1580.

IN 1752 Buffon and Dalibard ascertained the identity of electricity and lightning by insulated rods; and the very same year Franklin made the same determination by a kite.

TALLOW candles took the place of prepared splinters of wood in 1290.

DEATH IN AWFUL FORM.

Details of the Terrible Accident on the Chicago and Atlantic Railroad.

Passengers Mangled and Burned Out of All Semblance of Humanity.

[Special telegram from Kouts, Ind.]

The worst horrors of Chatsworth were duplicated here Tuesday. A dozen blood-stained, smoke-begrimed, injured victims of railroad carelessness or blundering were brought into the village's little station-house, and nine charred corpses, victims of the same blundering or carelessness, were laid upon the station platform, while three miles west, down the track of the Chicago and Atlantic Railway, near a lonely old water tank, piles of fearfully tangled debris marked the spot where a collision seldom equaled for terrible results had occurred.

Boone Grove consists of a station building and a simple little store. It is forty-nine miles out of Chicago on the Chicago and Atlantic road. The roadbed enters on a heavy down grade, which runs two and a half miles west of the State ditch. On the north of the track is a large water tank. The country thereabouts is a wide prairie, relieved but infrequently by sparse growths of stunted trees. There is no habitation within a mile of the water tank, immediately in front of which Tuesday's terrible accident occurred. Conductor Parks was in charge of the train when it left Chicago. The train proceeded without accident to Hulbert's, six and one-half miles west of the scene of the accident. There one of the eccentric straps of engine 26 broke, and Engineer Barney Connors disconnected one side of the engine and ran, as it is termed in railway parlance, "on one leg," or with only one piston rod. He pulled his engine into Boone Grove thus crippled. He telegraphed tidings of the accident to Huntington and then resumed his run, with half force. He passed the water tank on the prairie, then reversed his engine and went back for water. Half a mile back, as a warning to trains following, stand the semaphore lights, which were properly turned...

...man sleeper.

The passenger train was driven its own length ahead and then the rear coach forced its way through and on top of the coaches in front. The freight engine was wrecked entirely. Its tender was thrown over the engine and onto the coaches, while eighteen refrigerator cars were strewn zig-zag across the track or piled in an indescribable mass—one within the debris of another. Dressed beef sufficient to feed an army was scattered in the adjacent fields, while fruits lay about as plentiful as though rich orchards had yielded their bounty to the earth and been spirited away.

The ready and dangerous stove in the second coach responded at once to the deafening invitation the crash of the collision offered to join in the wreck of destruction and death, for the heavy Pullman had scarcely settled into position after its terrific plunge through the two coaches when fire added its horrors to the already terrible scene. All the fatalities were from the flames, which instantaneously enveloped the shattered cars.

Conductor Parks, Engineer Connors, and all the trainmen escaped miraculously, and immediately set about the rescue of the doomed people imprisoned in the burning wreck. They worked in the face of the flames, drawing away from their grasp all within reach until they were compelled to desist by the fire's dangerous advance. On either side of the tangled wreckage, reaching out from its midst, were the heads, arms, or feet of the passengers who begged piteously to be released before the flames took them in their fatal embrace. Little Herman Miller was found under the foremost coach, his arms extending above his head. Visible through the splintered timbers were the other members of his family, already in the throes of death from the breath of the hot flames encircling them. In broken English the boy begged of those endeavoring to save him to save his mother and sister. The boy's head was split open, but he retained his consciousness until he, free himself from farther danger, gazed back at the quivering forms of his father, mother, and sister encircled in flames.

An unknown victim, who was caged in the very center of the debris—a large, powerful man—made a desperate battle for life. He fought his way from one end of his prison to the other end 100 feet away—in an effort to keep beyond the reach of the flames. He tore down the broken frames as if they had been reeds, plunged headforemost through the litter, or rooted up the earth to force his passage from the path of the flames. As safety was about reached the flames descended in front of him, he inhaled them, and falling, yielded up the struggle. Of all the victims his form alone retained any human semblance, for the fire leaped over the prostrate man as if content with victory over so stubborn a victim without destruction.

A pathetic incident of the wreck is related by the station agent. It is of the story of a young lady from Ohio whose name could not be remembered. She was one of the passengers on the ill-fated train, and when the crash came, with the presence of mind and energy worthy of a strong man, she seized an ax from its resting place on the side of the car and hewed her way through to a window. Her own safety assured, her thoughts turned to the helpless unfortunates whose cries for assistance sounded behind her. They did not call in vain, for she rushed in the direction of the cries and personally aided the sufferers from the wreck. To use her own language: "I did all I could, and would have continued had I not heard Dr. Perry crying and moaning piteously that his feet were burning. Then my strength gave way, and I was compelled to desist and seek assistance myself."

The collision is attributed to the carelessness of the engineer of the freight train which dashed into the delayed passenger. The freight men, it is said, were warned to go slow and look out, but it seems they drove ahead, passed a danger signal at Boone Grove, and three miles beyond ran into the passenger.

Frank Cramer, General Western Agent of the Guion Line, was one of the passengers who escaped from the wreck unhurt. He said: "I was asleep when our train was run into, but the shock awoke me quickly enough. There were only seven persons in the sleeper I was in. I think they all escaped without injury. I dressed quickly and got out. The forward coaches were telescoped and the whole train was burning. The train men were doing all they could, but many who were killed or wounded badly must have been burned up, because the fire broke out as soon as the wreck occurred, and the means of extricating people caught in the wreckage were scanty. I have no doubt persons who might have been saved perished in the flames because there were no facilities for reaching them."

SIOUX CITY'S CORN PALACE.

Hundreds of Curious Shapes and Fantasies Made Out of the Corn Plant.

[Sioux City (Ia.) special.]

The grand attraction of the Harvest Jubilee at Sioux City, Iowa, is the corn palace, an allegorical temple of Ceres, designed by a skilled architect, and made of corn and the other cereals of the Northwest. Within the palace is exhibited all the grain grown in Iowa, Nebraska, and Dakota and all the other products of the farm.

The Corn Palace, as it stands, is in truth a revelation. It fronts on Fifth street 210 feet and on Jackson street 100 feet. Rising from the center of the structure, as at first planned, 100 by 100 feet, is the dome or cupola, surmounted by a spire 100 feet high. Each of the four corners rises boldly into square pavilions. The extension now includes on the Fifth street front Armory Hall also, and beyond that two additional pavilions, companions in form to the four pavilions of the original plan, making, as before stated, a frontage on Fifth street of 210 feet. Imagine such magnificent proportions, broken by the pavilion towers, by projecting minarets, by arched openings and immense panels, behind them rising in relief the great roof; above all the towering cupola and spire, connected in relief with the pavilions with flying buttresses. Imagine those proportions clothed all about with the products of the cornfield and decked out with these in a profusion of beauty, one grand, harmonious whole, a stately witness of the bursting bounty of the empire of the Northwest, the realm of King Corn. It is a spectacle to enchain attention, to command admiration.

Take the great fronts of the structure on Fifth and Jackson streets, and none who have not seen would believe that such magical effects could be wrought out of the materials of the cornfield. Take the 210 feet frontage on Fifth street, and every square inch of it is wrought into some cunning and representative form of the king of products. The walls rise one harmonious, though variegated, mass of the stalk and leaf; at the base wicker work, green as the rushes of the Nile, and here and there, pendent, in rich contrast, are the golden ears. The double arches of the openings in the pavilions are faced with rows of ears, sometimes richly fringed with the husk, sometimes of one color and...

...by the dark seeds of the sorghum plant, corn ears of flaming red or some other relieving color. Still above, rise the graceful minarets, raimented in rich colors of native grasses, and crowned with tufts of millet and flying banners. In the background rises the roof, a seeming solid mass of corn almost, and from it towers the cupola, its arches wrought like those below, and here and there panels of curious forms of corn, red, white, violet, yellow and all colors under the sun, surrounded and interwoven with the plant itself and other products in every conceivable shape.

Passing to the interior of the great structure, amazement finds fresh stimulus at every turn. There hangs a sunflower, perfect in form and color, yet every fiber from the corn plant. Yonder are the tiger lilies, of the same element, illusion perfect—who would have believed it? Everywhere, bouquets, panels, ceilings, mottoes, draperies, pendants, stars, statues of Ceres, bells, latticework, beaded curtains, all forms of farmers' implements—every last one made of the corn or of the plants that grow with it. As you enter the wide portal, above will be the seal official of the city—every bar and coloring made of corn; beyond, a great spider and his web will be spread out above; still in her hangs a mammoth bell; to the left there is a tableau of "The Golden State;" further on, the figure of an Indian and an eagle all made and dressed with the blade and grain and stalk of corn. One great marvel of the scene will be a landscape, "The Setting Sun," the great orb itself made all of corn, the beams shot with the brilliancy of the grain, and the perspective executed with such skill as to deceive the keenest eye. These are but samples. A hundred other curious shapes and fantasies would weary the onlooker if all were not so new, so strangely made out of material so long thought common and despised, yet now found to outblush the rose and shame the lily.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SUDDEN SUMMONS.

Death at New York of Hon. Thomas C. Manning, Ex-Minister to Mexico.

[New York telegram.]

Judge Thomas C. Manning, ex-United States Minister to Mexico, died at the Fifth Avenue Hotel on Tuesday. He had been ill for about a week, and took sick shortly after his arrival in the city to attend the meeting of the Peabody Educational Fund, of which he was one of the trustees. The cause of his death was an obstruction of the bowels.

Judge Thomas Courtland Manning was aged about 60 years, and a native of Edenton, N. C. He graduated from the University of North Carolina, and after practicing in Edenton for several years removed to Alexandria, La., in 1855. In 1864 Mr. Manning was appointed Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

After the war Judge Manning devoted himself to the law and declined the nomination for Governor of Louisiana. He served as a Tilden elector in 1876, and in 1877, when Governor Nicholls was installed, he was appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Two years later he retired, but was again restored to the Supreme bench, and served with distinction until 1885. His next and last position, that of Minister to Mexico, was conferred by President Cleveland.

Judge Manning was of massive figure and dignified, courtly bearing. He bore a great resemblance to Salmon P. Chase, and was always very highly regarded as a man and a jurist.

WAR ANNALS.

Old Soldiers of Both Armies Fighting Their Battles Over Again.

Anecdotes of the Battle-field, the Weary March, and the Cheerful Camp-fire.

Confederate Soldier's Lament.

BY JOHN DIXEY.

I'm an ex-Confed'rit soldier, I fit in sixty-one
At the battle of Manassy, wot the Yankees call Bull Run;
An' till Bobby Lee surrendered kep' on the scent fur blood,
Sometimes kivered with glory and sometimes kivered with mud.

I togged it in the valley with Stonewall Jackson's band,
An' lived on faith an' 'taters while skedaddlin' through the land;
We got dead loads of fightin' in the hottest uv the strife,
An' other discombobolutions uv a Confed'rit soldier's life.

The ol' Kaintucky rifle hangin' on my cabin wall
Went in for the Confed'racy, an' staid until its fall,
While the first cuss that toted it, and quit with nary rel,
Got its own fingers to Varginny, and tuk home Yankee lead.

I didn't luv the kyarpet-bagger, an' I dussn't luv 'm yit,
Although I hain't no kind o' grudge agin the men I fit;
An' ez a right smart time hez passed, it kinder strikes me odd,
That the broken nails cracked in wah time git...

I've rather to much rheumatix fur fightin' now-a-days,
Ol' Uncle Sam hez used me square, an' I lost my sertaintaste craze,
When it's suddenly diskivered that the cause wo thought was lost
Hez but Rip Van Winklezing, an' is wuth a pretty fortune cost,

So now I'm kickin' desp'rit because I didn't a quit—
When we was led the host of it in the late Varginny reel,
We had the Fed'ral hosts surrounded with a corperll's cyrel uv men,
It jest makes me mad ez sin to think we didn't know it then.

The men wot did the fightin' thought they had about enuff,
While don't allows they hadn't, which on us is mighty tuff,
But I wonder, ef we wuzzn't beat by an overwhelmin' foe,
Why it is he didn't say so some twenty years ago?

• • • • • •

'Taint wuth while to keep the wah ragin' till the tide's setin' to its retreat,
An' no nine-ty-nine horse-power jawin' will prove to the world we wan't beat.
An' I reckon it's the sellfest convietion uv the boys wot fit for the South,
That whar muskits an' cannon's a failure, thar's no use to shoot off your mouth.

Then hurrah for the flag of the Union, that floats o'er the land uv the free!
...

...let any citizen in, but to allow no one to pass out. For three or four days this duty was kept up, and a scorn at it it was in the warm weather. Hundreds of people were turned back with the sole explanation: "You can't go out; it is our orders." There seemed to be at least a suspicion on the part of the military authorities at Washington that the assassin was still in the city. When it was positively known that he was not, the pickets were drawn in, and we had rest again in a pleasant camp.

A few days later came the day when, by order of the War Department, a hundred guns were fired in memory of the illustrious dead. It was a deeply solemn ceremony. Washington was completely girdled by fortifications, and around the whole vast circle, in regular time and succession, the heavy guns boomed out a nation's sorrow for the dead.

And now Washington was a gigantic camp. The armies of the East and West were concentrated there, preliminary to the final break-up, by rail, by steamer, some marching. Corps after corps, division after division, poured in, and were encamped everywhere in the suburbs, till the military population exceeded the civil at least thrice.

In those days the streets of the capital were thronged. It seemed as if the population of the country was being turned that way. With the others came the blacklegs, the sharpers, the disreputable classes, the whole making such a daily panorama as Pennsylvania avenue may not witness again. And it is unnecessary to say that the shopkeepers of Washington throve and fattened, and swindled the soldiers in the most barefaced manner.

The 23d and 24th days of May, 1865—the grand review that fitly ended the great tragedy of four years' war! It quickens the pulse to think of it.

Two hundred thousand veteran soldiers, the saviors of this country, marching from the Capitol past the President's house, with burnished arms, proud banners, with one incessant and prolonged burst of military music! The firm tread of legions of infantry, the clatter of hoofs, the rumble of artillery! March, march, march!—mile after mile of those grand columns, hour after hour, for two entire days, passing in review before President, Cabinet, great General, and the Diplomatic Corps!

They passed in review before the people, too. They were there—the people—other hundreds of thousands of them. Along the avenue, from housetops to...

"Do my eyes deceive me!" cried Jones. "They do not nor no mine deceive me; you are the man." "Let us shake," said the man from Massachusetts, and immediately there was a grasping of hands and mutual apologies for the harm each one had done to the other.

After the Battle.

The aspect of troops of all arms of the service, writes Colonel J. B. Gandolfo, in St. Louis Globe-Democrat, is very different in battle from the trim and neat parade appearance, but nowhere is this difference so marked as in the artillery. It was always most interesting to me, to watch a battery going into action. The artillerymen were very careful at all times to be dressed strictly in accordance with regulations, and when a battery took position every cannoneer looked as if he had just prepared himself for inspection. Nothing could be neater and more uniform than their appearance. But this did not last long. As the fire began to get hot a jacket here and there would be thrown off; next the collars would go, and often the shirts. The men were soon bathed in perspiration, which they would hastily brush off with their powder-blackened hands, leaving great marks wherever they touched themselves. When the men began to fall and were carried to the rear by their comrades, blood stains were added to the powder marks, and at the close of the fight the artillerymen, so remarkable for their fine appearance at its opening, presented the most horrible spectacle that can be imagined. But they soon removed all trace of the fray, and by the next day were as clean and neat as ever.

Evading the Provost.

While we lay in camp near Chattanooga, one day there came to us from that city a scout. He seemed to have no special business, but a close observer might have noticed him in private conversation with a number of the soldiers. However, from his visit, it became pretty generally known throughout the camp that the following day a provost marshal would be there to search the camp for goods that had disappeared from a supply train the night previous. Whether the "hurrying to and fro" that followed this news had any relation to it or not, we will leave old soldiers to judge. However, it was a strange coincidence that there was some excitable movement in camp and mysterious visits to various points in every direction. I began to consider whether a fellow...

UNOCCUPIED FIELDS.

Discourse by Rev. Dr. Talmage at the Tabernacle.

The Churches Must Stop Bombarding the Old Ironclad Sinners—Why People Go Into Skepticism—Northern Nations Devastated by Alcoholism.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 9.—The audiences at the Brooklyn Tabernacle this autumn are larger than at any time during the history of this church, and greater numbers go away not able to get in. Led by cornet and organ the congregation sang with great power the hymn:

> The morning light is breaking,
> The darkness disappears,
> The sons of men are waking
> To penitential tears.

The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., read and explained passages of Scripture concerning the dawn of universal righteousness. The subject of his sermon was "Unoccupied Fields," and the text from Romans xv, 20: "Lest I should build upon another man's foundation." Dr. Talmage said:

Stirring reports come from all parts of America showing what a great work the churches of God are doing, and I congratulate them and their pastors. Misapprehensions have been going the rounds, saying that the outside benevolence of this particular church are neglected, when the fact is that large sums of money are being raised in various ways by this church for all styles of good objects, not always through the boards of our own denomination. This church was built by all denominations of Christians, and by many sections of this land and other lands, and that obligation has led us to raise money for many objects not connected with our denomination, and this accounts for the fact that we have not regularly contributed to all the boards commended. But I rejoice in that you have done, as a church, a magnificent work, and am grateful that we have received during the year, by the confession of faith in Christ, 725 souls, which fact I mention, not in boasting, but in defense of this church, showing that it has been neither idle nor inefficient. The most of our accessions have been from the outside world, so that, taking the idea of my text, we have not been building on other people's foundations.

In laying out the plan of his missionary tour Paul sought out towns and cities which had not yet been preached to. He goes to Corinth, a city mentioned for splendor and vice, and Jerusalem, where the priesthood and the Sanhedrim were ready to leap with both feet upon the Christian religion. He feels he has especial work to do, and he means to do it. What was the result? The grandest life of usefulness that a man ever lived. We modern Christian workers are not apt to imitate Paul. We build on another people's foundations. If we erect a church we prefer to have it filled with...

...Complutensianism, we are as impolitic and little understood as if a physician should talk to an ordinary patient about the pericardium and intercostal muscle and scorbutic symptoms. Many of us come out of the theological seminaries so loaded up that we take the first ten years to show our people how much we know, and the next ten years get our people to know as much as we know, and at the end find that neither of us know anything as we ought to know. Here are hundreds and thousands of sinning, struggling and dying people, who need to realize just one thing—that Jesus Christ came to save them, and will save them now. But we go into a profound and elaborate definition of what justification is, and after all the work there are not, outside of the learned profession, 5,000 people in the United States who can tell what justification is. I will read you the definition:

"Justification is purely a forensic act, the act of a judge sitting in the forum, in which the Supreme Ruler and Judge, who is accountable to none, and who alone knows the manner in which the ends of His universal government can best be obtained, reckons that which was done by the substitute in the same manner as if it had been done by those who believe in the substitute, and not on account of anything done by them, but purely on account of this gracious method of reckoning, grants them the full remission of their sins."

Now, what is justification? I will tell you what justification is—when a sinner believes God lets him off. One summer in Connecticut I went to a large factory, and I saw over the door written the words: "No Admittance." I entered and saw over the next door: "No Admittance." Of course I entered. I got inside and found it a pin factory, and they were making pins, very serviceable, fine, and useful pins. So the spirit of exclusiveness has practically written over the outside door of many a church: "No Admittance." And if the stranger enters he finds practically written over the second door: "No Admittance." And if he goes in, over all the pew doors seems written: "No Admittance;" while the minister stands in the pulpit, hammering out his little niceties of belief, pounding out the technicalities of religion, making pins. In the most practical, common sense way, and laying aside the non-essentials and the hard definitions of religion, go out on the God-given mission, telling the people what they need, and when and how they can get it.

Comparatively little effort as yet has been made to save that large class of persons in our midst called skeptics, and he who goes to work here will not be building upon another man's foundation. There is a great multitude of them. They are afraid of us and our churches, for the reason we don't know how to treat them. One of this class met Christ, and hear with what tenderness and pathos and beauty and success Christ dealt with him: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind and with all thy strength. This is the first commandment, and the second is like to this, namely, thou shalt love thy...

They take the fire to keep up the warmth. In southern countries, like Arabia and Spain, the blood is so they are not tempted to fiery liquids. The great Roman armies never drank anything stronger than water tinged with vinegar, but under our northern climate the temptation to heating stimulants is most mighty and millions succumb. When a man's habits go wrong the church drops him, the social circle drops him, good influences drop him, we all drop him. Of all the men who get off track but few ever get on again. Near my summer residence there is a life-saving station on the beach. There are all the ropes and rockets, the boats, the machinery for getting people off shipwrecks. Summer before last I saw there fifteen or twenty men who were breakfasting after having just escaped with their lives and nothing more. Up and down our coasts are built these useful structures, and the mariners know it and they feel that if they are driven into the breakers there will be apt from shore to come a rescue. The churches of God ought to be so many life-saving stations, not so much to help those who are in smooth waters, but those who have been shipwrecked. Come, let us run out the life-boats! And who will man them? We do not preach enough to such men; we have not enough faith in their release? Alas! if when they come to hear us we are laboriously trying to show the difference between sublapsarianism and supralapsarianism, while they have a thousand vipers of remorse and despair coiling around and biting their immortal spirits. The church is not chiefly for goodish sort of men whose proclivities are all right and who could get to heaven praying and singing in their own homes. It is on the beach to help the drowning. Those bad cases are the cases that God likes to take hold of. He can save a big sinner as well as a small sinner, and when a man calls earnestly to God for help He will go out to deliver such a one. If it were necessary God would come down from the sky, followed by all the artillery of heaven and a million angels with drawn swords. Get full such redeemed men in each of your churches, and nothing could stand before them, for such men are generally warm-hearted and enthusiastic. No formal prayers then. No heartless singing then. No cold conventionalisms then.

Furthermore, the destitute children of the street offer a field of work comparatively unoccupied. The uncared-for children are in the majority in Brooklyn and in most of our cities. When they grow up, if unreformed, they will outvote your children, and they will govern your children. The whisky ring will hatch out other whisky rings, and grog shops will kill with their horrible stench public sobriety, unless the church of God rises up with outstretched arms and enfolds his dying population in her bosom. Public schools cannot do it. Blackwell's Island cannot do it. Almshouses cannot do it. New York Tombs and Raymond Street Jail cannot do it. Sing Sing cannot do it. Church of God, wake up to your magnificent mission! You can do it. Get somewhere, some-...

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for October 23—"Three Miracles."

[From the Chicago Standard.]

The lesson for the above date may be found in the ninth chapter of Matthew, from the eighteenth to the thirty-first verses, inclusive. Time, A. D. 28. Place, Capernaum.

CRITICISM AND EXPLANATION.

V. 18. These things. The truths spoken during the feast at Matthew's house, and recorded in the preceding verses of this chapter. There came. Into the presence of Jesus while he was yet speaking to the Pharisees and the disciples of John. A certain ruler. One of the rulers of the synagogue, named Jairus. See Mark 5. 22. Worshiped him. Bowed down before him in expression of profound respect. Even now dead. Luke says she "was dying," and Mark speaks of her as being "at the point of death;" but Matthew condenses the narrative so as to present at the outset what was actually true before Jesus reached the home of Jairus. Come and lay thy hand. Thus showing the ruler's confidence in Christ's healing power, but indicating a smaller measure of faith than that of the centurion, who believed his servant could be healed by a "word only," even though such word were spoken by Jesus when distant from the scene of suffering. See Matthew 8: 8.

V. 19. Arose and followed. Responded immediately to the entreaty of Jairus, by rising from the table and starting for the ruler's house. Observe again how quickly Jesus responded to the cry of a believing soul, and how willingly He withdrew himself from social enjoyment in order to minister relief to others who were in anxiety and distress.

V. 20. A woman. One who, for twelve years, had been afflicted with an aggravated, wasting, and incurable disease. Her unavailing efforts to secure healing by human agencies, are described in Mark 5: 26. Came behind him. Choosing this method of approach perhaps because of her timidity, or from a reluctance to have public attention called to her peculiar affliction. Hem. The border, or fringed edge of the Savior's garment.

V. 21. If I may but touch. Or, if I only touch. This silently cherished conclusion was an evidence of her faith, which, however invisible it was to others, was nevertheless recognized by Jesus, and by him was promptly and silently rewarded. Whole. Delivered from disease, and restored to health.

V. 22. Jesus turned. Although the touch had been unobserved by others, Jesus doubtless deemed it best that her faith and his power should both receive recognition. Be of good comfort. Thus Jesus quiets her fears, and encourages her public confession of faith. Hath made thee whole. Literally hath saved thee. ...

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, OCT. 26, 1887.

Marine Jottings.

The tug Higgle is now doing harbor towing.

Capt. Duncan Buchanan is back on the quarter-deck of his schooner—the Stampede—again, apparently as well as ever.

Capt. Robert O'Neill, late first mate of the propeller City of Grand Rapids, is master of the fishing tug Minnie Warren.

Ben Campbell is actively preparing for the construction of the Stockbridge yacht. He has arranged to have her iron keel cast at Elk Rapids.

Capt. John Mason is sailing the fishing tug Martin while Capt. Tim Smith is in Detroit. The Martin and crew spent Sunday, Monday and Tuesday in this port.

Capt. Bouchard, of the steamer Cummings, reports that during last Friday's gale, there were 40 steam barges and vessels sheltered at Beaver Harbor—the largest number ever known.

Vessel men say that the entrance to the harbor is in worse condition than it was last season, notwithstanding the fact that $12,000 was expended on it this season. They are very shy of the bottom, just outside the piers, when going out loaded, and the propeller masters are very cross when in this vicinity in a gale.

17—Prop Westover, 525 tons iron P. L. I. Co. to Michigan City.
19—Schr B. F. Wade, 125 cords wood Downer to Chicago.
19—Schr Evening Star, 180,000 feet hardwood lumber P. L. I. Co. to Chicago.
20—Schr Mocking Bird, 100,000 ft hemlock, 40,000 ft hardwood lumber, 2[illegible] bolts to Chicago.
20—Schr Lenzena, 10 cords wood, Master to Sheboygan.
20—Schr Hattie Fisher, 75 c bark, 12 c wood, Drapu to Milwaukee.
21—Schr Sea Gem, 75 c slabs Crane & Whitford to Milwaukee.

Religious.

Congregational Church.

Rev. C. F. VanAuken conducted the services last Sabbath morning. Prof. Enos read one of Spurgeon's sermons to a good congregation. It is expected that Rev. Mr. Downs, the new pastor, will occupy the pulpit next Sabbath.

M. E. Church.

No services were held last Sabbath evening, owing to the storm.

Keep in mind our Tuesday evening Bible drill. Bring your bibles and pencils, and take a part in the service. Prayer meeting Thursday evening, led by W. A. Smith. Preaching services at the usual hours. Subject in the morning: "Telephones." Sunday school at 12.

Hazings from Hayes.

G. O. Scott went up to Cheboygan on business last Wednesday.

G. W. Van Schoik raised some of the finest pumpkins this year we ever saw. One weighed 92 pounds, and several more were nearly as large.

James Watt, of Carpenter, is building a house on his farm on section 11.

Whitford & Cramm shipped a cargo of wood Friday, and Mr. Whitford left on the same vessel for Milwaukee on business.

Levi House has shaken the dust of Hayes from his feet, and become a citizen of Charlevoix.

Dr. W. J. Hill, of Petoskey, late of the Grand Rapids Soldiers' Home, is teaching in the Murray district. The Dr. is the author of several temperance articles that lately appeared in the Record.

Mr Armstrong has purchased 20 acres of Andrew Holmes, and moved into the old Fairgrove school house until he builds on his own premises.

Miss Addie Lewis is teaching in the Maple Grove district.

Miss Nellie Burnett has purchased a fine new organ.

Joseph Hanson, of Garden, Mich., is in town looking after his possessions.

Boyne Falls Items.

Frank Newville, proprietor of the Boyne City stage route, has built a commodious shed back of the depot for the accommodation of his teams this winter.

George Hauser manufactured a lot of hemlock shingles last Wednesday that were fine. We do not see why hemlock cannot be utilized for the manufacture of shingles as well as pine and cedar.

W. D. McClure, of Chicago, was in town Friday, looking after the interests of Harper Bros. They are publishing a series of readers that are far in advance of the school readers now furnished by that house.

Chris Horn arrived home from Jackson last Thursday, and will assist his brother in the grist mill; and we would say right here that the boys are having a good run of custom.

Mrs. Pierce Kinsella has been visiting relatives in Charlevoix and vicinity the past week.

O. H. Marsh and wife returned home from their tour of visiting last Thursday.

Bernard Burns, of Charlevoix, was in town two nights the past week.

D. S. Judd, our new landlord, arrived Saturday with his family, and will proceed to renovate the hotel and make it first-class in every particular.

Alex Cameron was called over to Marion Friday to relieve the distress of a valuable horse owned by George Cooper, that had been staked.

H. Halliday and family, of Advance, were in town Tuesday, on his way to the State of New York, where they intend to spend a few weeks visiting.

Sam Cramer went to Brutus Monday. He has an engagement in the mill at that place.

Dennis Kearney, the Sand-lot demagogue, threatens to remain permanently in New York. What a streak of good luck that would be for San Francisco!

Teachers' Association

The Charlevoix Teachers' Association will meet in the High School room at Boyne City, on the evening of November 4th at 7:30 o'clock and will hold over on the 5th. The following programme has been prepared and will be presented:

A paper on School Government by Miss Mason, of Charlevoix.

The Teacher's work outside the Text Book, by Principal A. C. Chew of Boyne Falls.

A reading by Miss Effie Johnson of Boyne City.

A paper on How to Teach Language by Superintendent Miss Ida M Garner of Boyne City.

How to teach Penmanship.

The Association will consider the organization of a branch of the State Reading Circle for this county at this meeting.

The members of the Association at Boyne City have kindly promised to furnish music for the occasion and the Ex. Committee urge every teacher in the county to endorse and help to make this meeting a success by being present and taking part in the discussions. The Query Box, now a prominent feature of the meeting, will be there, and time given for informal discussion after each paper has been presented.

Historical Society.

The Historical Society will meet with Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Wood this week Friday evening, Oct. 28th. The paper of the evening will be by Hon. E. H. Green. Conversation, led by Prof. R. M. Enos, assisted by others. Remainder of programme furnished after the usual manner. Members will please be in attendance, as the plan of work for the coming winter is to be decided upon.

Neighborhood News.

Wilson Bros. took 5,500 pounds of fish, in Little Traverse Bay, in one day, from two nets.

Petoskey Independent: We regret to learn that Mr. A. McCarty has decided to leave Petoskey, for he is one of our pioneers, and, whatever may be said of his business, every one admits that Mr. McCarty has been one of our best citizens. He has sold his stock and leased his building to Geo. Suggitt, and will open a saloon on Woodward Avenue, Detroit, two blocks north of the city hall. He expects to start with his family for his new home the first of next week.

The Central Lake correspondent of the Bellaire Breeze "gives away" the northern Michigan potato crop after this fashion: The grizzled granger from his hoary brow now wipes the dripping sweat. The corn sheaves stand in gloomy solitude athwart the field, and the broad blowing breeze rustles among their leaves. The well worn hoe rests idly in the old man's hand, and as he takes another chew he gently swears. Then as he rolls the quid in luscious revelry, and squirts a brown stream upon the dog, he meditates: "Ef that air boy of mine on'y had a shot gun instead of that 'ere blasted ryful, he mought er used this 'ere hull crap o' taters fer ammernishun."

Harbor Springs Republican: We are indebted to Capt. Bouchard, of the steamer Cummings, for the following particulars: A man by the name of N. Phillips, of Grand Rapids, who was perambulating the north shore of Lake Michigan in a small boat, landed at Hat Island (uninhabited) one week ago last Sunday, and while on shore, his boat broke loose and floated to Cross Village, and was secured by parties living there. A number of books, among other things, were found in the boat all safe, although somewhat damaged. Mr. P. remained on the little island until Wednesday afternoon without anything to eat. Finding that he must do something, he bravely went to work and constructed a rude raft out of boards, etc., which he found on the island, and tied together with withes, and getting on board allowed it to drift out into the lake in the hope of getting in the track of passing vessels. Luckily he was picked up when nearly exhausted and famished by Mr. McCauley, of St. James, who took him to Beaver Island, where he received kind treatment by the citizens. He must have suffered greatly, from what we have been able to learn.

Northport and vicinity: A. J. Slyfield, of Frankfort, who kept the light-house on South Manitou Island in 1854, when the schooner J. Y. Scammon, owned by Hannah, Lay & Co., was lost, is trying to secure evidence that he rescued the crew and passengers, for the purpose of claiming some kind of a reward. Mrs. A. A. Nolce, of Leland was one of the passengers.—Men who went from here to the head of Carp Lake, where Thompson Smith & Sons, of Cheboygan, are engaged in lumbering, returned without getting work. They report that the men are being sent home, as the water in Carp Lake has been so raised by shutting the dam at Leland, as to completely inundate the woods.——The Rev. Geo. Nelson Smith, of Northport, has been detailed by the Swedenborgian church for evangelical work in this part of the State, and began his labors by a service in the M. E. church here last Sunday evening. He will be in Traverse City for the next two weeks, going thence to Petoskey.——Charles Oberst has put about six hundred bushels of potatoes in his cellar, and says they will stay there until tubers touch the dollar mark. In spite of the bad year, George A. Craker raised about 2,000 bushels, which he sold to Charles Joynt. Peter Olsen had nearly as many, and several other farmers will dig 1,000 bushels, and this in spite of the fact that generally potatoes are less than half a crop.

FOR SALE—A good cow.
J. MILO EATON.

Specialties.

Just received, quinces, Cape Cod cranberries, Jersey sweet potatoes, Concord, catawba and California grapes, new figs and dates, chestnuts and hickory nuts, oranges and lemons, fresh oysters. All goods kept by me are the best to be found in the market.
O. W. SMITH.

Ironton Notes.

The excursion takes to Detroit from among us, Mr. J. G. Waldron and Henry Hammond and wife.

Mrs. T. C. Bird returned from a W. C. T. U. meeting at Kalkaska on Saturday.

Owen Hammond has quit his post in the furnace to attend to matters on the farm while his parents are in Detroit.

A supper at the Congregational church Friday evening last yielded $20.

Mr. Box and Miss Lenzena, returned from their Canada visit on Thursday, and report a good time while away.

The H. H. society adjourned to meet with Miss Noyes, Wednesday eve., Nov. 2nd. On the programme is a continuation of County History, a reading by Miss Mattie O'Neill, and recitation by Matt Allen. Much interest is being developed through the Query boy.

General exercises in the schools on Friday afternoon conducted by C grade, Grammar Department. The exercises will be in honor of Susie Schoflen, a member of the class, who is leaving school.

Duane Parish shouldered one of his enormous "yarns" and brought it home with him from Thumb Lake, to give us a benefit and remain over Sunday with his family.

Ah There, Charlevoix.

Central Lake Cor Bellaire Breeze

If Charlevoix is not a railroad terminus, she still has her own individual attractions. There are the Chicago and Kalamazoo resorts—two little villages of summer cottages which seem perfect kaleidoscopes of gay colors and pretty designs; there is Round lake, one of the finest refuges for vessels on the Michigan, coast besides being a nice little body of water for pleasure; there is Grand Traverse bay, of the beauties of which no one need be told; there is a profusion of shade trees throughout the streets; and then, there are the Smiths.

I asked an old fellow, with whom I happened to be in conversation, if there weren't a good many men of that name in Charlevoix.

"Well," said he, after a moment's thought, "I dunno but the be a right smart grist on 'em, but I swow, I never thought on't afore."

There is Smith the editor, and Smith the banker, and Smith of the agate works, and Smith the drayman, and Smith the shoemaker, and blacksmiths and tin-smiths, and a Smithson's camp withal. I never knew many people of that name, and had begun of late, to fear that the family was extinct, but I am now hopeful that if the coming winter isn't too severe, the name of Smith may live.

* * * * *

The Fountain City House is a good sort of a hotel with a proprietor who is striving, in his own weak way, to merit a place in the realms of bliss hereafter. At this place you get real cow's cream, nine kinds of pie if you want it, a clean napkin, and only pay a quarter of a dollar therefor. Antrim county hotel keepers please copy; not necessary as concerns the pie, but, gentlemen, let us at least have clean napkins and cream in our coffee.

* * * * *

At Charlevoix everybody says "Ah, there!" I saw a dude fall from the swing bridge when the draw was open and splash around in the chilling waters of the river. The fellow who was turning the bridge shouted, "Ah, there!"

A fat man who was waiting to get across, bawled, "Ah, there!"

A small boy who had been shying chips at the passing tug, yelled, "Ah, there!"

A woman with a market basket and a little girl with a poodle, both screamed, "Ah, there!" and when, at last, the young man crawled out and blew the water from his nose and mouth, he cast one look of pained uncertainty upon the crowd and murmured, "Ah, there! Thanks, awfully; but it is really quite cawld and dawmp."

The railroad car stove is being [illegible] while alleged experiments are going on to secure something which can be substituted for this death-dealing machine.

Like Robert T. Lincoln, whose name is receiving respectful, and in some parts of the country, enthusiastic mention as a possible presidential nominee on the next Republican ticket, our own Gov. Alger does not take kindly to the mention of his name for any position within the gift of a National Convention. Gov. Alger is frequently mentioned by the press all over the country as a magnificent man for the second place on the ticket, but we understand the distinguished gentleman quietly but firmly asks that some other name be chosen for that honorable office. But why should Michigan be content to furnish a man for second place? Is there any man in the United States who would grace the Executive chair better than Russell A. Alger? Is there a man in the country more familiar with the duties of a President than Michigan's popular ex-Governor? Is there to-day before the people a man more popular with all classes irrespective of politics—than Mr. Alger? And did not the Grand Army men, at their recent encampment in St. Louis signify that Michigan's brave soldier was almost the idol of their affections and had he consented, would have been elected Grand Commander? In short, no man has yet been mentioned that carries more strength—politically, morally and socially—than the name of Gov. Alger as the Republican nominee for the President of the United States.—State Republican.

Teacher's Examination.

Teachers examinations for Charlevoix county will be held as follows: At Charlevoix, on Friday, the 28th day of October; East Jordan, on Friday the 25th day of November, 1887. Examinations to commence at 8:30 and end at 5 p. m. WILLIAM HARRIS, Sec'y Board Examiners.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Detroit, Charlevoix and Escanaba Railroad Company, will be held at the general offices of the Company, at Charlevoix, Michigan, on Tuesday, the 15th day of November, 1887 at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of said company and to vote on extending the line of said road from Charlevoix, its present terminus, to the Straits of Mackinaw.

Dated this 6th day of October, A. D. 1887.
J. MILO EATON, Sec'y.

Best peaches of the season at O. W. Smith's for $2.50 per bushel.

Go to Scott's shop for a first class job of horseshoeing.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE—One span of horses, one yearling colt, two spring colts, one yoke of oxen, two two-year old heifers, two yearling heifers; must be sold soon. Terms reasonable. Inquire at this office.

THE PROPERTY known as the Sweetland Sanitarium, on the South upper terrace in the village of Charlevoix, is for sale or rent. Enquire of E. H. Green, Charlevoix, Mich. tf

Mrs. Litney & Carr cordially invite the Ladies to call and examine their mammoth new stock of fall and winter millinery. Their stock comprises everything in all the latest novelties in their line. It will pay you to inspect their goods before purchasing elsewhere. adv

Horse for Sale

A six year old gray mare, weight, 1,200 pounds; good, sound, kind and gentle. A good work horse, and a perfect horse for ladies' driving. Inquire at this office.

CLOTHING.

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything now.

My Prices are so Low

that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

GREAT EXCITEMENT!

OVER THE WONDERFUL BARGAINS IN LADIES,' CHILDRENS, AND GENTS' UNDERWEAR, AT

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO'S.

And there is no end to the comments on the Great Piles of CLOAK and Winter Goods, that they are offering at such remarkably low figures. And, too, their Gent's Gloves and Mittens, almost make one speechless, for never were such values given before, at least 25 per cent below all other competitors.

OCTOBER FASHION SHEETS FREE. AND ALL OF BUTTERICKS PAPER PAPER PATTERNS IN STOCK.

SEE THIS LIST!

WE ARE OFFERING

POSITIVELY UNEQUALLED BARGAINS!

IN ALL LINES OF SEASONABLE GOODS.

SPECIAL DRIVES IN

Cloaks, from $3.50 up.
Dress Flannels, 50 in. 50 Cents.
Dress Flannels, 6 qr. 75 Cents.
Dress Goods, mixed 2-fold, 15 c.
Shirting Flannels, Gray mxd, 15c
Shirting Flannels, High Color Plaids, 17 cents.
Cotton Flannels, 7 to 14 Cents.
Shaker Flannels, 8 to 25 Cents.
Heavy Blankets, $1 per Pair.
Horse Blankets, 80c to $3.00.

WE ARE

Headquarters For Lamps & Lamp Goods

Patent Extension Brass Hanging Lamps, $3.00
Vienna Shades, 7 inch, 10 Cents.
Best Tubular Lift Lanterns, complete, 75 cents.

Good Japan Tea, 4 lbs for $1.00.
Maple Syrup, $1.00 per gallon.

J. L. HURD & CO.

The Best Groceries At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture

AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice.

Finest Job Work!

AT THE

Sentinel Office.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO.—27. CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1887. WHOLE NO. 936

CLOTHING CLOTHING! CLOTHING.

GRAND SPECIAL SALE!

Friday, Saturday and Monday, November 4th, 5th & 7th.

Our Line Of OVERCOATS IS OVERSTOCKED, AND WE ARE GOING TO SACRIFICE IN PRICES TO DISPOSE OF THEM.

LOOK AT THESE PRICES:

A good wool Suit, $4.00.
A good boy's Suit, $3.50.
A good all-wool Undershirt, 85c.
A good all-wool Suit, $8.00.
A good Overcoat, $4.00.
A Fine Merino Undershirt, 40c.
A good Fur Cap, 90c.
A good child's Suit, $1.50.
A fine Overcoat, $8.00.
A good Scotch Cap, 35c.

We have heretofore been giving Special Prices on Ladies Goods. NOW WE GIVE THE MEN FOLKS A CHANCE.

Alick Rosenthal, Lewis' Block.

SCHOOL BOOKS

BUY YOUR SCHOOL SUPPLIES AT HEADQUARTERS. WE HAVE EVERYTHING NEEDED IN THE SCHOOL ROOM, AT UNIFORMLY LOW PRICES.

F. G. HINES & Co.

We will furnish the new books adopted by the board at introduction price. Remember that we sell everything that can be called for in any of our Schools.

SCHOOL BOOKS

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO

We are NOT CLOSING OUT

We never did We do not want to We are not going to close out

WE AIM TO KEEP OUR STOCK

Complete in Every Department AT ALL TIMES.

OUR STOCK OF

STAPLE DRY GOODS

—AND—

BOOTS and SHOES,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER TRADE WAS NEVER MORE COMPLETE THAN NOW.

UNDERWEAR! We have a good line of Ladies', Gents' and Childrens' Underwear.

CLOAKS AT A BARGAIN CLOAKS

We keep Lime, Cement, Stucco & Plastering Hair,

We carry a full line of

EVERYTHING

usually kept in a first class stock of General Merchandise. We aim to merit the patronage of the prompt paying trade by keeping good goods and selling everything at a uniformly reasonable price.

Resp'y Yours.

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

Best in The World

"The Royal Jewel"

Call at our store and examine the incomparably fine line of Stoves now on exhibition.

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $ $ $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

EMREY BROS.

JUST OPENED!

A FINE LINE OF Hanging Lamps for the Holidays.

A complete new line of Hosiery of every variety at the lowest prices you ever saw.

We are leading the GROCERY Trade BECAUSE our goods are the best our prices the lowest.

We are closing out on Boots and Shoes and Crockery. What we have left in these lines will be sacrificed.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year - $1 50 | Six months - $ .75
Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Harry Nicholls returned from Chicago, Saturday.

—Prosecuting Attorney Corbett was in town Friday and Saturday.

—Supervisor Ranney, of South Arm, was in town several days last week.

—Rev. John Redpath, of Boyne Falls, made us a pleasant call last Saturday.

—Capt. Eli Toulouse has removed his family to Gladstone, in the upper peninsula.

—Dr. Wm. Preston is located at Wichita, Kansas, and reports a good business there.

—Dr. W. A. Atchison is getting ready to remove with his family to his former home in California.

—R. M. McKeel, who has been in Chicago the past year, has returned to Charlevoix, where he intends to remain.

—Rosenthal's special sales for next Friday, Saturday and Monday are for the benefit of the men. Read about his bargains in clothing.

—Emrey Bros. are receiving a choice line of winter goods. They are having a good run of trade which is constantly increasing. See their new announcement.

—The Board of School Examiners of Charlevoix County have appointed Wm Harris, of Norwood, secretary of the Board. Under the law his salary will be $670 per annum.

—The Rifenburg Milling Co. have recently added to their mill a valuable machine for the extraction of cockle from wheat. Flour must be good with the appliances they have for purifying the grain. There is no better flour than that made at the Rifenburg mill.

—Secretary of the State Fish Commission is now sending out blanks to all the fishermen in the state, and which are required by a state law of 1883 to be returned before the 25th of November with a statement of the number of fish caught, their average and total weights, and a description of the nets used.

—Secretary Harris informs us that at the teachers' examination held in this village on the 28th, 16 candidates appeared for examination, and that the following were granted third grade certificates: Frank H. Ranney, Edith Barnes, Nettie C. Gray, William J. Hill, Cora A. Faunce, Fannie A. Seibert, N. N. Card, Nellie Noyes, Mrs. Delia Porter, Mrs. R. C. Marsh, John B. Williams.

—The Charlevoix county Board of Supervisors, at their recent session, virtually repudiated the new law providing for the taxation of mortgages. The law makes it the duty of the Boards of Supervisors to provide the County Clerk with the blank books prescribed. The State authorities so notified the Board, and the matter was referred to a committee, which reported in favor of securing the books. The Board "took action," as the law provides, but the "action" was promptly tabling the report, in which condition the matter now rests. There can, therefore, be no mortgages taxed in this county this year. The law is inoperative in this county, however, as it covered all mortgages as far back as 1880, and the destruction of the records presented an obstacle in the way of its complete enforcement. It seems to be the general opinion that the law will be repealed or modified at the next session of the Legislature.

—F. J. Meech has been in Detroit on business.

—The Detroit excursionists are straggling back.

—Fox & Miller have an unusually large stock of boots and shoes this fall.

—Sims Baker has rented the Stevenson blacksmith shop on Antrim street.

—Fat our turkey first. The President has designated Thursday, Nov. 24th, as a day of National Thanksgiving.

—A. J. McLeod went to Grand Rapids yesterday on business connected with his office of U. S. Deputy Marshal.

—C. R. Bellinger has just opened an unusually fine line of silverware and jewelry. Notice his new advertisement.

—Miss Belle Scott has moved her stock of goods to the Inwood building on Bridge street, formerly occupied by Mrs. G. W. Jefferies.

In consequence of the running time of the boats to Boyne City, there will be two sessions of the Teachers' Association at that place on Saturday, to accommodate those who cannot get there on Friday evening.

—At Prof. Dewey's writing school Saturday evening, Miss Gladys Jefferies and Miss Blanche Bartholomew were a tie on first prize for best penmanship, and Miss Cassie Allen took the prize for greatest improvement.

—The McGibeny Family, now in Iowa, are traveling in their own car, which contain all the conveniences and comforts of a home kitchen, dining room, adjustable state-rooms, an Emerson piano, etc. They report a fine business.

—Wrong again, brother Dixon. No one has said that Charlevoix would have a railroad before snow flew this fall. It is evident that the editorial mantle of Tommy Nelson rests easily on the shoulders of our dear brother of the Enterprise.

—Hunters should remember the fact that the hunting of deer with dogs is now punishable by a fine of $50, or imprisonment in the county jail, besides giving any person the privilege of killing the offending dogs as a public nuisance.

Jerome A. Heath has rented the D. C. Nettleton wagon shop on Bridge Street, and will do all kinds of wagon and sleigh repairing. He has also received one of the celebrated Hur saw gummers, warranted not to heat or spring the plate of the thinnest or hardest saw.

—The steamer North Star on her trip down from East Jordan Wednesday morning, was disabled by blowing her cylinder head off, which flew about twelve feet, falling on Engineer Kelley's left foot, mashing it badly. Kelley shut the throttle quickly or otherwise would have been scalded to death.

—We clip the following from a northern New York paper: "We recall at this time a celebration of the national anniversary in the Chaney neighborhood in the Town of Potsdam, July 4th, 1848. Winslow T. Barker, then a law student in the office of Hon. Wm. A. Dart, after a prominent lawyer at Canton, and later a public man and distinguished judge in the state of Iowa, (since dead) delivered the oration, and Walter P. Brown, then a school teacher at Potsdam, now a banker at Charlevoix, Mich., read the declaration of independence. It was the year of a Presidential election, and partisanship was rather high in those days. Among those in attendance was a blacksmith by the name of Roberts, well known in Potsdam in those days. He was a flaming Democrat. The two principal parties at that time were Democrat and whig. Barker was a well known Democrat, and Brown was as well known to be a whig. After the close of the exercises various comments were made, and some person asked Roberts how he liked the proceedings. He replied: 'I liked Barker's speech first rate, but that Brown's speech was a little too d—d whiggy to suit me!'"

Death of John A. Bacot.

The startling intelligence was received here last night that John A. Bacot, of Hayes township, died suddenly yesterday afternoon, by taking Paris green by mistake.

Religious.

Baptist Church.

There will be preaching service service next Sabbath both morning and evening. Covenant meeting on Thursday evening.

M. E. Church.

Morning and evening services as usual next Sabbath. Prayer meeting Thursday evening. Bible reading service Tuesday evening. Attend all these services.

—Council meeting this evening.

—The factory shut down Saturday.

—Giken is making immense lifts lifts of Mackinaw trout these days.

—Circuit Court convenes at Boyne City Nov. 15th.

—The new M. E. Church vestibule is nearly completed.

—The city hose tower is enclosed most of the way up.

—The propeller Lawrence last night brought a large amount of merchandise for Charlevoix and outlying points.

—Advices from New York, concerning the railroad, continue to be encouraging.

—Geo. W. Miller has a pig that follows him about the streets. Yesterday he walked into our sanctum with the pig at his heels.

—A correspondent at St. Andrews' Bay, Florida, writes us of the death at that place, on the 22d, of Frank Morehouse, late of Ironton. He arrived there about five weeks ago, in company with his brother, and sank steadily to his death.

—The D. C. & E. R. R. officials have been notified by the Chicago Resort Association that a resolution had been passed by the Association granting right of way across their Charlevoix grounds. Mr. Moore adds: "We are very much interested in your railroad —The moon cast its effulgent rays upon an amazing sight of juvenile deviltry in Charlevoix Monday night. It was hallow eve, and Young America reigned supreme. Marshal Brink tried to keep the boys within due bounds, but had hard work. He charged a brigade of 700 of them, more or less, and ran his face into a barbed wire fence, demolishing the fence. Even the girls were out on a lark, and knowing that they could do no serious damage, the Marshal winked and told them to wade in. Well, we were all young once.

—Detroit Tribune: There were five swarthy figures grouped about the organ in the Woodward avenue methodist chapel last night. They sang the opening words of the hymn, "How happy are they who their Savior obey, and have laid up their treasures above." But their pronunciation was: "Not go sinh n zhe, Pah pe nain dah mo wod. Kezh a mun e doon, Kan wahb man zig." The singers were two sons, a grandson, a daughter and a son-in-law of old Chief Petoskey of the Ottawa tribe of Indians. They were under the leadership of John R. Robinson, of the methodist Indian mission at Petoskey, who had come to Detroit with his charges on an excursion and had engaged to give a concert at the chapel. They sung about a dozen hymns, some in English and some in the Chippewa tongue, and closed the concert with the doxology in both languages. Mr. Robinson gave a brief history of himself, in which he stated that he was a son of Rix Robinson, who during his lifetime was an intimate friend of Lewis Cass. He also told how he (John R.) had gone to the bad, but finally was converted at Pentwater, and for the past fifteen years had been working among the Indians of Northern Michigan. The names of the Indians with him are Louis, William and Basil Petoskey, and Mr. and Mrs. Moses Wahkazoo. They will remain in Detroit until Thursday next, and in the meantime will give concerts at the different churches.

A ROMANCE.

BY [illegible]

I.

A hillside green with [illegible] sprinkled,
Slopes [illegible] to the brooklet [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
And by [illegible]
[illegible] with cowslips growing,
[illegible] blossoms snowing,
[illegible] Kitty Kearney.

The beechen branches 'bove, descending,
Across the stream their shadows sending,
Seemed half to earnest, half pretending,
To kiss the wind-blown tresses,
While happy Kitty, pink toes swishing
In tiny waves, sits playing fishing,
The flowers culled, with fondly wishing
They grew on Sunday dresses.

II.

The hillside, now a-bloom with clover,
O'er which the busy brown bees hover,
Still slopes to where she, crossing over
The brooklet to its journey,
With looks up light, and sweet voice singing
A gladsome song, whose full notes ringing
Has checked the mower's scythe in swinging;
And why Kitty Kearney.

Now, cowslips long have ceased their blowing
Beside the brooklet's dimpled flowing,
But lily buds and roses glowing
Their beauty 'bove the tidal,
Are sweet the [illegible] beside the splendor
Of young love; they are true and tender,
And wait the clasp of fingers slender—
Aye! they may grace a bridal.

III.

A hillside brown, where thickly lying,
The golden sheaves 'round one of dying,
While southward summer birds are flying,
And sluggish in their journey
The brooklet flows o'er dead leaves wrinkled,
And mirrors tresses thickly sprinkled
With silver threads, and sad face wrinkled,
Of lonely Kitty Kearney.

Yet o'er the brook she goes to gather,
With halting step, the sheaves she'd rather
Have bound with him, in brighter weather,
But still, on seaward journey,
The faithful brooklet tired growing,
Turns softer now, for tears are flowing,
For him the reaping [illegible] sowing—
Heart broken Kitty Kearney.

DRIFT AWAY.

BY ANNIE C. M'KEEVER.

Drift away, oh! clouds of somber,
Crimson lined in billowy masses;
Drift away to silent footsteps,
I shall watch you as you pass;
I shall watch [illegible] and love you
For the beauty that you gave—
Beauty dying in the twilight,
Like the blues on his grave.

Drift away to unknown heavens,
Crimson clouds along the west,
But remember that you're bearing,
In your downy, [illegible] breast,
Hopes that whisper softly to him
Of a love that never dies—
Love that tires of waiting lonely
Ere the call to other skies.

Drift away, oh clouds of sunset!
Purple with the later light,
See! the stars are all about you—
Diamond eyes of early night
Drift away! but while you're passing,
Bear this message up to him,
That the earthly skies that told me
Soon shall part and let me in!

A MODERN MAGDALEN.

BY M. C. FARLEY.

CHAPTER VI.—[CONTINUED.]

"Stop them, stop them. Don't you see where they are going?"

"Kain't be stopped, mistiss. Hain't I done tole you dat dey won't start or stop 'less dey like of themselves."

The brutes dashed down the slope to the water's edge, coming to an abrupt halt on the verge of the river itself.

"Oh, I'm killed! I'm drowned!" screamed the spinster, wringing her hands.

"No. Dey done stop agin!" exclaimed Obe in profound amazement. "Come out ob de kerrige, mistiss, while I done try a rassel alone wid dese little willains."

Miss Chidley sprang out of the carriage, pale and panting. "I'm going back to Stubblefield, Obe. And I—I—I guess I'll walk back this time. We'll never reach the station at these rates. Take the ponies home, and put the bay horse in the shafts. Miss Lafarge will wonder that nobody is sent to meet her, I'm afraid. But it is no use trying to go with these ponies. Make haste now."

Obe leaps to the ground, takes the beasts by the bridles, and, strange to say, meets with not the slightest resistance. Meek as lambs, the ponies suffer themselves to be turned about. Obe climbs up on the box again, gathers up the lines, and the ponies prance gayly back over the road they have so lately come, finally disappearing in a cloud of dust in the distance.

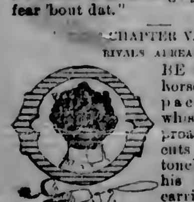
Miss Chidley goes forward gingerly, and at her leisure, nursing her wrath for the time to come. "I shall never hear the last of this adventure," murmurs she. "Yesterday the carriage was upset, and the day before that they kicked in the dashboard to the light wagon. To-day, those dreadful beasts attempt to drown me in the river, and nobody knows what they will do to-morrow. But Elizabeth Chidley knows no such word as fail. If Obe fancies I am conquered, and that the ponies will be sold, he will find out his mistake. I'll keep 'em and try 'em again some time."

Miss Chidley stoops and plucks a gay yellow dandelion from the many which gleam like golden stars from the green turf at her feet. The month is May, and her roving eyes linger lovingly on the pleasant scene about her, albeit never a May time during the forty years of her life has she failed to see the same fair fields that she looks upon now. Miss Chidley has traversed half the distance that intervenes between Stubblefield and the river, when Obe once more comes into view. This time he sits grinning behind a high-stepping bay horse, driven at full speed, and as he passes his mistress the boy shows all his white teeth in a broad and comprehensive smile.

"I'se bound to make de train dis time, mistiss," says he. "Wif dis yer hoss I'll ketch Miss Lafarge yet. Doan yer fear 'bout dat."

CHAPTER VII.

RIVALS ALREADY.



HE drives the bay horse at a racing pace. The shrill whistle of the approaching train cuts the air. He touches the whip to his horse, and the carriage whirls over the ground at lightning speed. Covered with foam and dust, the horse dashes up to the platform and stops with a suddenness that nearly unseats the driver in the face of the engine itself, as the train rushes into the station. Obe springs from his perch and hastens along the platform. A crowd of people come pouring from the cars; among them, a lady in gray, wearing a cottage bonnet and a drab veil.

"Hello, Capting Hazard!" cries Obe, recognizing this gentleman among the throng. "Is dat you?"

"Nobody else," returns the Captain. "And see here, Obe. I wish to speak to you."

"I'se at yer sarvice, Marse Capting."

Obe marches to Hazard's side, and waits respectfully the Captain's pleasure.

"I see you have the carriage here, Obe," begins the Captain hurriedly. "And I wonder if I can borrow it long enough to drive out to Bywater Park and return. The truth is, there's a young lady arrived by this train, whom we did not expect for some days yet, and I have no conveyance here. It is quite fortunate that I happened to come down to post letters, or we might not have been apprised of her arrival for some hours yet."

Obe scratches his woolly head in great perplexity. Nothing would suit him better than to grant the Captain's request, for Obe adores the lazy, good-natured military man; but then, there is his own young lady's interest to be consulted.

"De fax are," begins Obe, with manifest hesitation, "that you'd be parfiely welcome to de use of de kerrige. But trufe kompels me to say dat ole miss be a expectin' oh her relashum by dis yer saim train. Ef de young miss done come, I'se boun' to fetch her straight to Stubblefield. 'Fore de Lawd, Capting, I'se done tole de trufe."

"Oh! Miss Lafarge," says the Captain. "I remember hearing your mistress speak of her a few days ago. But perhaps she did not come. Look alive, Obe, and find out if she did or not."

Obe grins, touches his cap and darts away, only to presently reappear, looking very gloomy, with the announcement that "she" was in the waiting-room now.

Hazard vents his disappointment in a whistle, then a thought occurs to him. He turns to Obe. "Do me a favor Obe, and as you pass Bywater Park on your way to Stubblefield, just stop at the Park, and tell them to send down a horse and buggy."

"Deed I will," says Obe. "But Marse Capting, why kaint bofe ole dese ladies be stowed away at de saim time in de kerrige which is already here? Dey will not be crowded in dat yer seat, I know."

"The very thing," answers Hazard, who has already introduced himself to poor Loo, who, homesick and tired, sits curled up in the waiting-room, and whose unspoken opinion of things is plainly written upon her face.

Hazard states the case to her.

Just now she is too much crushed in spirit to do anything but acquiesce in silence. Moreover she stands in great awe of the gallant Captain, whose exploits have reached her ears long years ago. So she agrees, without ado, to riding in the Stubblefield carriage, and she gathers up her little bags and bundles and announces herself in readiness to go.

Miss Lafarge, pale and interesting, with her bandaged arm carried in a silken sling, stares a little as Captain Hazard introduces himself to her notice, and prefers his request. But she too consents readily enough, and the two ladies take their places in the vehicle.

Miss Lafarge has ample time, before the carriage stops at Bywater Park, to make herself interesting and entertaining to her companion.

Obe drives slowly to enable the Captain to keep pace with the carriage. And Miss Lafarge improves this opportunity to the utmost, by relating her late experience in the railway accident.

Loo, anxious and uneasy, glances into the fair face of her companion, who bears up under this gaze with admirable composure.

The Captain too, turns a pair of admiring eyes upon Miss Lafarge, as she relates her story with grace and spirit, and Loo grows glum and more distrait still as she sees this. She knows without being told that the Captain is comparing her sallow skin and dark eyes unfavorably with the exquisite blonde at her side, and a pang shoots through her heart that it should be so.

Miss Lafarge takes the Captain's glances and his compliments quite as a matter of course. She too perceives the little rankling thorn in Loo's breast, and the knowledge fills her heart with joy. To her the time passes all too quickly, and the carriage stops at the Park gates sooner than she thought would be the case when the two ladies set out together.

Arrived at the Park, the Captain assists Miss Loo to alight. He gathers her bags and bundles in one hand, begs to be allowed the privilege of calling at Stubblefield the ensuing day, lifts his hat, and, with a sweeping bow to Miss Lafarge, watches the carriage as it rolls away.

Then he tucks Loo's trembling hand, in a matter-of-fact fashion, under his arm, and marches her up the walk to the house.

CHAPTER VIII.

KINDRED.

ADAM DUNDAS greets her grandniece with stately politeness. She darts a sharp glance at poor Loo's cheap but well-fitting traveling gown, and notes the fact that the color does not become the sallow complexion of the wearer. But the small hands are tidily gloved, and the small feet are encased in well fitting and well made shoes. Loo is not handsome at best, and just now appears less pretty than usual. Her long journey has tired her, and she feels a little lonesome and sad at finding herself so far from her father. Moreover, the sharp contrast between her present surroundings and the home she has just quitted has its effect upon her. She is impressed with the air of solid elegance that everywhere meets her eyes at Bywater Park. There are no sham pianos here, doing duty as bedsteads at night. She feels intuitively, rather than sees, the fact that everything is what it seems to be: even to the dignified old lady who receives her so coldly.

Overcome for a moment by the unaccustomed splendor about her, and choked by a feeling of actual homesickness that will rise up in her bosom, Loo pauses before her aunt, and stands trembling, forlorn and pale on the threshold of the new home that now receives her.

Captain Hazard sees her confusion and her air of humiliation. He turns a glance full of pity upon her. His look does what words would have failed to accomplish.

Loo hates to be pitied. The blood runs through her veins like fire. She lifts her head erect, the color leaps into her sallow cheeks, her dark eyes shine like stars.

The Captain's look of pity changes rapidly from pity to astonishment, and from astonishment to admiration; for Loo, under the influence of strong emotion, is handsome. She has regained her self-possession, and returns Madam Dundas' greeting quietly.

"Really, her manners are not so bad after all," says Madam to herself, as Loo sinks down upon the seat indicated to her by her grim old relative.

The Captain tells a man servant to drive down to the station for Loo's luggage, and this necessitates a rummaging expedition in Loo's hand-bag for the checks. The brasses found, the Captain goes his way, and leaves the young lady alone with her aunt.

"I wish to say to you," begins Madam, calmly, "and I may as well say it now as at some future time, that my object in inviting you to live at Bywater Park is more to please the Captain than from any interest which you may suppose I feel in either your father or yourself. The Captain has some absurd ideas about what he considers my duty is to you. He feels that the ties of blood which bind the daughter of Frederic Bolton to me give you the right to claim something in the way of assistance from me."

Loo's head lifts itself a trifle higher at this, the color deepens in her cheeks, her eyes sparkle. Madam, who is keenly watching every change in that expressive face, gloats secretly at the sprit which shows itself.

"Aunt Dundas—perhaps I should say Madam Dundas—I came here for the purpose of earning that salary which you were kind enough to offer in return for my services. I care less for the ties of blood which bind us together than you do yourself. I look upon you in the light of an employer; any other claim which I might have upon your time or attention is ignored."

"Cap'n, I'se done tole de trufe."

Madam taps the polished floor with the toe of her high-heeled slipper. Then she leads the way into the drawing-room, and, pointing to a handsome piano which stands open in a recess, says, not unkindly:

"I am passionately fond of music. Do you sing?"

"A little," is the quiet reply.

"The Captain plays tolerably, but his efforts are all instrumental—not vocal. I think we will be able to get on very well together. It may be rather lonely for you to live with an old woman like me; but I am sure I shall enjoy the society of a young girl like yourself. We will drive to the village to-morrow, and you shall select some new gowns. All girls are fond of new gowns."

Madam, impelled by some impulse, stretches out her wrinkled old hand and lays it on the girl's head.

The act breaks down the barriers that have been rising in Loo's heart. She is quick to feel the change in Madam's manner.

The warm tears spring to Loo's eyes. She seizes Madam's hand, and raising it to her lips cries impulsively:

"I don't care for the gowns, aunt; only be kind to me. Nobody in the world was ever kind to me."

Then she chokes and half repenting this show of emotion, drops Madam's hand again.

And Madam rings the bell for her maid, who is told to show Miss Bolton to the room assigned to her use, and to be ready for the usual five o'clock tea.

Loo went away, wondering curiously if she had mortally offended her aunt in the very beginning of the acquaintance. She has hardly time to make a tour of inspection through the apartments to which she is conducted, when her one small trunk arrives.

The maid announces demurely that Madam has ordered her to take care of the young lady's toilet, and Loo, not quite daring to rebel against her aunt's dictum, submits in silence. The maid rummages through the small trunk and drags out Loo's best gown, a pale yellow thing with scarlet ribbons, which Loo has in her secret heart thought a master piece, to be reserved for very grand occasions only, and insists upon robing the young lady in it. The gown is cheap, but it is certainly becoming, and Loo is more than pleased with the result as she surveys her reflection in the glass.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Two Wrongs Make a Right.

"So this is Mudville that the tornado destroyed?" queried a passenger of a conductor of the Dusty Bumper division.

"Yep."

"Did it do much damage?"

"Nop; not much. It blew down a couple of barns, the school house, and washed away the bridge."

"Quite a serious accident, then, I should should say. Will we be delayed?"

"Yep, unless we have another tornado."

"Another tornado?"

"Yep; so's to blow the bridge into place again."

THERE is nothing brings out the presence of mind of a woman so much as a fire in the next block, and it generally fetches tears of admiration into the eyes of her husband to see that, while he is scurrying around after hose pipes and ladders, she is heroically planning to save her baby, her bonnet, the clothes line, a pattern for a new pillow sham, and all the firewood out of the back cellar.—Fall River Advance.

ONE of our subscribers has lately returned from a vacation trip to Amherst, N. H. He informed us of a river there known as the Quoquina-pasacasa-anananagnog. After using its waters for laundry purposes, the natives utilize the name for a clothes-line.—Cambridge Gazette.

WE can be thankful to a friend for a few acres or a little money, and yet for the freedom and command of the whole earth, and for the great benefits of our being, our life, health, and reason, we look upon ourselves as under no obligations.

BILL NYE.

The Genial Humorist Writes About Hotel Changes.

America has made many gigantic strides, aside from those made at the battle of Bull Run, and her people spend much of their time pointing with pride to her remarkable progress, but we are prone to dwell too much upon our advantages as a summer resort and our adroit measures of deciding the Presidency before we are asked, while we forget some of our more important improvements, like the elevated railway and the American Hotel.

Let us, for a moment, look at the great changes that have been wrought in hotels during the past century. How marked has been the improvement and how wonderful the advancement. Everything has been changed. Even the towels have been changed.

Electric bells, consisting of a long and alert wire with an overcoat button at one end and a reticent boy at the other, have taken the place of a human voice and a low-browed red-elm club. Where once we were compelled to fall down a dark, narrow staircase, now we can go down the elevator or wander down the wrong stairway and find ourselves in the laundry.

Where once we were mortified by being compelled to rise at table, reach nine feet and stab a porous pancake with our fork, meantime wiping the milk gravy out of a large yellow bowl with our coat-tails, now we can hire a tall, lithe gentleman in a full-dress suit to pass us the pancakes.

Even the barrooms of American hotels are changed. Once the bartender waited till his customer ran all his remarks into one long, hoarse word, with a hiccough on one end, and then he took him by the collar and threw him out into the cold and chaotic night. Now, the bartender gradually raises on the price of drinks till his customer is frozen out, and while he is gone to the reading-room to borrow some more money the chemist moves the bar somewhere else, and when the guest returns he finds a barber-shop where he thought he left a barroom.

One hundred years, on their swift pinions, have borne away the big and earnest dinner-bell and the sway-backed hair trunk that surprised man so when he sat down upon it to consider what clothes he would put on first.

All these evidences of our crude, embryotic existence are gone, and in their places we have electric bells and Saratoga trunks wherein we may conceal our hotel room and still have space left for our clothes.

It is very rare now that we see a United States Senator snaking a 2-year-old Mambrino hair trunk up three flights of stairs to his room in order to secure the labor vote. Men, as well as hotels and hotel soap, have changed. Where once a cake of soap would only last a few weeks, science has come in and perfected a style of pink soap, flavored with vanilla, that will last for years, and a new slippery-elm towel that is absolutely impervious to moisture. Hand in hand, this soap and towel go gayly down the corridors of time, welcoming the coming and speeding the parting guest, jumping deftly out of the hands of the aristocracy into the hands of a receiver, but always calm, smooth, and latherless.

Nature did not fit me to be the successful guest at a hotel. I can see why it is so. I do not know how to impress a hotel. I think all the way up from the depot, as I changed hands with my hot-handled and heavy bag, how I will stride up to the counter and ask for the room that is generally given to Mr. Blaine, but when I get there I fall up against a cold wave, step back into a large India-rubber cuspidor, and my over-taxed valise bursts open. While the porter and I gather up my collars and gently press them in with our feet, the clerk decides that he hasn't got such a room as I want.

I then go to another hotel and succeed in getting a room which commands a view of a large red fire-escape, a long sweep of undulating eaves trough and a lightning-rod—usually No. 758—near the laundry chimney and adjoining the baggage elevator.

After I had remained at the hotel several days and paid my bill whenever I have been asked to do so and shown that I did not eat much and that I was willing to carry up my own coal, the proprietor relents and puts me in a room that is below timberline, and though it is a better room, I feel all the time as though I had driven out the night watchman, for the bed is still warm, and knowing that he must be sleeping out in the cold hall all night as he patiently watches the hotel, I cannot sleep until 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning, and then I have to get up while the chambermaid makes my bed for the day.

I try hard when I enter a hotel to assume an air of arrogance and defiance, but I am all the time afraid that there is some one present who is acquainted with me.

Curious Facts About Rats.

The rat is finely equipped for the peculiar life he is ordained to lead. He has strong weapons in the shape of four long and very sharp teeth—two in the upper jaw and two in the lower. These teeth, says the Boston Herald, are wedge-shaped, and, by a wonderful provision of nature, have always a fine, sharp, cutting edge. On examining them carefully the inner part is found to be of a soft, ivory-like composition, which can easily be worn away, and the outer side is composed of a glass-like enamel, which is exceedingly hard. The upper teeth work into the under, so that the centers of the opposed teeth meet perfectly in the act of gnawing: hence the soft part is being continually worn away, while the hard part keeps a sharp, chisel-like edge all the time, and at the same time the teeth are constantly growing up from the bottom, so that as they wear away a fresh supply is ready. Should one of these teeth be removed, by accident or otherwise, the opposite tooth will continue to grow, and, there being nothing to wear it away, it will project from the mouth and be turned upon itself, and if it be an under tooth it will often grow so long as to penetrate the skull.

There is a fact but little known which well illustrates the ravages rats can inflict on a hard substance by these little, sharp teeth. Many of the elephants' tusks imported into London are found to have their surfaces grooved into small furrows of unequal length and depth, as though cut out by a very sharp-edged instrument. No man would take the trouble to do this so carefully, but the rat has found out the tusks which contain the most gelatine—a most delicious morsel for his palate—and he gnaws away as much as suits him and leaves the rest for the ivory-worker, who is neither unable nor unwilling to profit by the fact marked by the rat's teeth. The ivory which contains a large amount of gelatine is softer and more elastic than that which does not, and as elasticity in the thing needful for billiard balls, he selects this rat-gnawed ivory and turns it into beautiful elastic spheres, to be used upon the finest billiard tables. The elasticity of some of these balls is so great that when thrown forcibly on a hard floor they will rebound to a height of three or four feet.

Rats have a remarkable instinct for finding out where there is anything good for food, and it has often been a subject for wonder how they manage to get on board ships laden with sugar and other attractive cargoes, but the mystery has been solved, for they have been seen to come off shore to the ship by means of the rope by which she is moored to the wharf. By the same means they will leave the ship when she comes into port, particularly if they find their quarters filling or filled with water.

Hard Roads to Travel.

When a ne'er-do-well of the upper class is "sent out" to the colonies, it is very often the case that no introductions are given to him. If he has just commenced his downward course, and has not acquired habits which will disgrace himself and his family, he is more lucky and may be furnished with letters to a few leading people in his new home. Even then he may not choose to present them. If he is already a drunkard he is pretty certain to possess few or no letters. Shame prevents his friends at home from introducing such a one to their colonial acquaintances.

So the young man lands with no friends except those he may have made on the voyage. He is sent out presumably to work for himself, and for that purpose his family has thoughtfully provided him with a small annuity, which he receives by monthly installments. In most cases this will effectually prevent him seeking any employment.

He can live on the small sum without doing any work, and that is the course he generally adopts. But it may be he has formed good resolutions, and lands prepared to do his best and turn over a new leaf in a new country. He therefore presents himself, with this object, to some person, either to a clergyman or to some one to whom he brings letters.

He obtains employment through the agency of his new friend, and all goes well for a time. Glowing accounts reach home of his new departure, his success. But by and by the old Adam revives in him. He has now no home influence to check him, no circle of friends to lure him from evil. The result is that he lapses back on the old track.

If a man is unable to "keep straight" in the midst of family and kind friends, it is not likely that he will manage to do so when cast by himself into a strange life with perfect liberty to do and see and be what he pleases.

The usual plan which custom favors is to attempt to get such a ne'er-do-well upon a "run." It sounds attractive both to the youth himself and to his distant friends. Under the guidance of a sturdy squatter he may learn the art of managing a run, and may thus eventually be able to purchase one for himself. Meanwhile he will be "far from the madding crowd," away from the temptations of cities and city life. And if such a plan were to be adhered to the scheme would work well.

But, unfortunately, it is rarely possible to adhere to it. For the run holder knows too well the style of man the youth represents. He has tried him before over and over again, and now he knows him and fights shy of him. Or he takes him for a considerable premium, perhaps, and the youth who pays for his situation does not consider himself bound to work.

If the run-holder disagrees with this view of matters it is comparatively easy to leave the run. He is his own master, and the little annuity so thoughtfully provided by his friends renders him independent. So he betakes himself once more to the town, and gathering round him his chosen companions, he proceeds, as often as not, to live as gayly as he may.

If any unexpected installments of money come in he drinks them away. By this time he has lost all respect for himself and does not attempt to struggle against his vices. He may linger on in this condition for years. He may take to the turf and other forms of gambling, and thus add something to his small pension. But the end is usually the same.

Colonial clergymen can best say how often it is their painful duty to write home the last sad news of such a one. Incidents like these form one of the saddest and most distressing pages in colonial life.—London Exchange.

Rev. Whangdoodle Lectures on Fools.

Beriuldred Awjience—Ef I waster describe de different kinds ob fools dar am in dis heah town hit would take me mor'n a week. We has only got time ter deal wid a few, and ef all de fools wore white caps dis heah world would look like one big goose ranche.

I has allers noticed no matter how big a fool a man may be he can allers find a bigger fool to admire and encourage him in his foolishness.

A fool may be described as a man who keeps on makin' de same blunders ober and ober widout knowin' it. Eberybody am lierable ter make blunders, but de man what's got sense don't foller hit as a regular bizness.

De scrciety young man who goes by de name of dood am not classified wid de reglar fools. He don't berlong ter de human family. Dar's mighty little difference between a dood and a munkey, and what difference dar is am in favor ob de munkey.

Den dar's de talkative fool. De man who am sittin' in de mos' darkess ginerally does da mos' talkin'. De fraugs quit croakin' when a light am brought ter de water side. A had cole must be awful lonesome in de head ob a man who talks too much; leastways dat's what Opie Reid says.

No remidy has been diskivered ter cure a fool. Fish has been suggested for brain food, but brains ain't fed inter a man. Dey am borned in him. Yer can't measure a man's brains by de size ob his head no moah den you kin measure his elerquence by de size ob his mouf.

Fine close don't help a fool, dey only make his foolishness more conspicuous. Lots ob ambishun and too few brains am what ails most fools.

De man who laffs at eberyding and de man who frets at eberyding am fools, but ob differunt kinds.—Texas Siftings.

"HE who goeth into his garden to look for spiders and cobwebs will doubtless find them; but he who goeth to seek a flower may return to his house with one blooming in his bosom."

THERE is nothing so valuable, and yet so cheap, as civility; you can almost buy land with it.

Take Care of the Hair.

No careful observer fails to notice, as he looks over assemblies of men past 30 years of age that a very large proportion is bald, or in a stage of partial baldness, which indicates the speedy loss of the hirsute appendage. The percentage of men of all ages who show signs of baldness has been put at 30 per cent., and by some observers as high even as 40 per cent. From careful observations in churches, theaters, lecture-rooms, and political assemblies, we are satisfied that these estimates are too high, and that 23 or 24 per cent. is a more exact estimate.

This exhibit is alarming, as it indicates that the time is near when we shall be a nation of bald-heads, and that alopecia as a disease will afflict the youth of our schools, as through heredity physical deformities and illness are multiplied and extended to an enormous extent.

What is the cause of this early loss of hair? It is not due to the hats or caps we wear, not to the clipping of the hair close, not to living in hot rooms; it is not due to the forms of foods we consume, but, in our view, it is largely due to modern methods of treatment of the hair and scalp. The erroneous views prevails that the skin which holds the hair follicles and the delicate secretory organs of the scalp must be kept as "clean," so to speak, as the face or hands; consequently young men patronize barbers or hairdressers, and once or twice a week they have what is called a "shampoo" operation performed; and this consists in a thorough scouring of the hair and scalp with dilute ammonia water and soap, so that a heavy "lather" is produced, and the glandular secretions, which are the natural protection of the hair, and promotive of its growth, are saponified and removed. No act could be more directly destructive of a healthy growth of hair than this, and no one is more common.

The practice of frequently washing the head in warm or cold weather, at home, with or without the adjuncts of soap, alcohol, ammonia, or perfumery, is deleterious and promotive of early loss of the hair. Men in active indoor business—clerks, bankers, shop-keepers in cities—are continually washing the head. Many do this night and morning, under the false notion that it is necessary to cleanliness, and promotive of a vigorous growth of hair, and when alarmed at its rapid disappearance in early life they are at a loss to understand the reason. The secretion of wax in the ear passages is nature's method of protecting the delicate machinery upon which hearing depends. It closes the organ to the entrance of insects and dust; and fortunately the secretion is, to a considerable extent, placed beyond easy interference, and thus the sense of hearing is protected from injurious "washouts."

The waxy secretion which is poured out from the glandular organs which are found in connection with the follicles of the hair is nature's product, and is designed to preserve and protect the wonderful and beautiful head-covering. If we persist in removing it altogether we must march with the bald-pates before the frosts of age come along to change its color. Women do not shampoo or wash the hair as often as the other sex, and consequently they are in a large degree exempt from baldness in middle life. It is true, however, that many women in cities make frequent visits to the hair-dressers, and subject their tresses to the "scouring" process. If this becomes common, it will not be long before baldness will overtake the young mothers as well as the fathers, and the time will be hastened when children even will have no hair to destroy with ammonia or other caustic cosmetics.

The advice we have to offer to young men and maidens is, let your hair alone; keep at a safe distance from hairdressing rooms and drug-shops, where are sold oils, alkaline substances, alcoholic mixtures, etc., for use upon the hair. They are all pernicious, and will do you harm. The head and hair may be washed occasionally with soft, tepid water, without soap of any kind. As a rule, the only appliances needed in the care of the hair are good combs and brushes; and they should not be used harshly, so as to wound the scalp. Avoid all "electric" and wire-made brushes. No electricity can be stored in a hair-brush; if it could be, it is not needed. The hair is a beautiful gift of nature, and it must not be destroyed.—Popular Science News.

Insuring Plate Glass.

"Our business is not so risky as fire insurance," said a member of a company that insures plate glass, "because we can better protect ourselves against overvaluation and our losses are lessened by salvage. Plate-glass windows, as a general thing, meet with damage from three different causes. Fire destroys the most, many are broken by accident or through malice, while a few are blown in by wind-storms. It is very seldom that a window is so badly shattered that we can't save some portion of it, and as we make it a rule to replace all panes that are broken, instead of paying out the value in cash, you can readily see that our losses are not so heavy, unless a very large pane gets shivered into atoms. We buy the glass at a good discount and have our own men to put it in. All the glass you see in the outside office is salvage, and it is only in exceptionable cases that we are unable to replace a pane from our stock on hand. Even the scraps are of value. They are put to many uses, especially for shelves in front of the cashiers' windows in banks and other offices.

"Plate glass is one of the most peculiar things in the world. At times it will stand any amount of hard usage, and then again the least thing will break it. I could tell you many queer stories in this relation. I have dropped a heavy hammer on a piece without injuring it, and when I have tried to show a friend how hard a blow it would stand I have had it grind into powder."—New York Evening Sun.

Mammon Serving Two Masters.

"Money," remarked the President, as he deposited a roll, the fruits of judicious combination—"money is power in the concrete."

"And also in the abstract," added the treasurer a few hours later, as he conveyed the same roll to where the Ottawa hears no sound save its own O's and A's.—Burdette.

THE veteran Russian anatomist, Wenzel Gruber, who recently celebrated the fortieth anniversary of his appointment in the medical school at St. Petersburg, has superintended the dissection of 30,000 bodies and has written 510 memoirs and pamphlets on anatomical subjects.

EVEN reckoning makes lasting friends, and the way to make reckonings even is to make them often.—South.

LIFE is half spent before one knows what life is.

PITH AND POINT.

A SHELF anchor—a clothespin.

ANY carpenter can frame an excuse.

TO SAVE time—let your watch run down.

THE check that rogues best—the bank check.

Men differ very much from mules,
As all experience teaches,
Men kick, when kicking, with their boots,
But mules kick with their breeches.
—Boston Courier.

The chaps who claim they never yet
Have ordered up a drink,
Know all the deep significance
That lies within a wink.
—Texas Siftings.

IT was very likely Mrs. Partington who hurriedly concluded her category of baby diseases and troubles by "And so on 'ad infantum.'"—Texas Siftings.

MINISTER (making a call)—And do you always do as your mamma tells you to, Flossie? Flossie (emphatically) —I guess I do, and so does papa.—New York Sun.

AN English writer says: "The girl of England stands alone." That's just the difference; the girl of America always has a host of admirers about her.—Somerville Journal.

"DON'T you suppose," said a member of the police force, "that a policeman knows a rogue when he sees him?" "No doubt," was the reply, "but the trouble is that he does not seize a rogue when he knows him."

STRANGER—Have you any anarchists in this town? Resident—Not one. This is a prohibition town you see. "What has that to do with the matter?" "Everything. You never find any anarchists where there is no beer."

"HOW is it, Jones, that you are so much down on Smith? You are always speaking harshly of him. Did he ever do you any injury?" "No," replied Jones, confusedly, "the fact is I once did him an injury." "Oh! I see; that explains your bitterness against him."—Boston Courier.

IN Chicago — Citizen (to visiting friend) — "There's the handsomest gambling-house in the country." "What, you don't mean to say it is a gambling-house?" "Yes." "Has the new mayor made an effort to close it?" "No." "What is the name of the place?" "Board of Trade." — Arkansaw Traveler.

"WE must have peace and order in this community at any price," said the Kentucky man as he stood up in a law-and-order meeting, swabbed out his revolver with his handkerchief and put in new cartridges. "How many did you get when you shut just before you came in?" asked the chairman of the meeting. "Seven at six shots, and one of them was the county judge and another the sheriff."—Dakota Bell.

CUSTOMER—You said this compound would make my hair grow. It's a fraud, sir; for I have tried it three months and am just as bald as ever. Barber—Why didn't you put the compound on your hair if you wanted it to grow? You put it on the bald place to try to make it grow. Just as well rub it on your cheek to make your brass grow as to put it on your bald head in hopes of raising hair. Buy some hair, put the compound on it and if your hair don't grow I'll refund your money.—Newnan Independent.

OVER in Petosky, Mich., a lady rubbed phosphorus on her bunion, presumably, to ease the pain, and then retired to her downy couch. Along in the night her husband, who was a drinking man, by the way, thought he saw a fiery eye looking at him. He imagined that he saw a frightful winged monster with one blazing eye, staring at him; and after standing it as long as he could, he decided to kill it. Slowly he reached under the bed till he found his boot-jack, and after spitting on his hands, he whaled away. The next moment his poor wife gave a yell that nearly lifted him out of bed, but when he found out the true state of affairs, he was immediately relieved, even though his wife has been obliged to walk on crutches ever since.—Peck's Sun.

Only Practicing.

They were sitting on the sofa in the dim twilight, when he gently stole his arm about her waist. There were a few minutes of silence, she probably waiting for him to make the long-looked-for proposition. It did not come, so she murmured:

"Do you think it right to put your arm about my waist?"

"Yes, I see no wrong," he replied.

"You have a purpose, then, in it?" she whispered.

"A selfish purpose, perhaps," he returned. "I am practicing, so that when I come to the proper person I will not be awkward."

"You will remember, sir, that familiarity breeds contempt," was the angry retort.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Oberammergau's Passion Play.

The Passion play at Oberammergau will not be performed again till 1890, but during the last month the villagers have been giving a series of dramatic representations in their theater of Muller's drama, "Emperor Otto the Great and His House," in which the role of the Emperor was taken by the wood-carver, Mayer, who takes the part of Christ in the Passion play. The costumes and scenery, all of which were much admired by the Prince Regent of Bavaria, who recently drove over from his hunting lodge in the vicinity, and was present at the performance, were made and painted in the village.—Home Journal.

No Regard for Her Feelings.

An Austin family has a colored servant that, while very attentive to her duties, has never been "known to give anybody a civil answer. Purely as an experiment the lady of the house bought her a new calico dress, and gave it to her, saying:

"I am glad to have the pleasure, Matildy, of giving you this dress."

"Yer mout hab hed dat pleasure long ago, ef yer had had any regard fo' my feelings," was the gracious reply.—Editor's Drawer, in Harper's Magazine.

DR. A. B. GRIFFITHS has demonstrated that iron sulphate, or copperas, acts upon the cellulose of the microscopic fungi which prey upon plants, but does not affect that of the higher plants themselves. It is therefore, a remedy for the most virulent epidemics which attack field and garden crops and destroy such parasitic germs and fungi as the potato disease, wheat mildew, etc. In one English district this year's crop of winter beans has failed on account of a growth of fungus on the roots of the plants a disease which a timely application of iron sulphate would have cured. It is also said to be an efficient remedy for poison by ivy; dissolve a tablespoonful of copperas in two-thirds of a tea-cup of boiling water, and when cold apply with a cloth to the poisoned places.

JOHN WILKES BOOTH.

A Talk with the Man who Captured Him

[Lippincott's Magazine.]

Capt. Edward Doherty, the man who commanded the expedition which captured John Wilkes Booth, has lately received a government appointment as Indian post-trader in Dakota. He is a tall, straight, broad-shouldered man of 46 years. He has a dark complexion inclined to be florid, a broad, open face, a high forehead, and hair as black as a piece of cannel coal. He talks well, and chats very entertainingly about his experiences at the time of the assassination. He told me the story of Booth's capture not long ago.

Said he, "Twenty-one years ago! It does not seem as many days. The scenes of that time are photographed on my memory. I was sitting in Lafayette Park talking with a brother officer. It was my day off, and I was rejoicing my soul in the bright rays of the spring sun. The trees had begun to leaf. The first flowers were out in the park, and the grass was of its greenest. My friend and myself were talking to a couple of ladies, when an orderly came up and gave me a message. It was to report to Col. Baker immediately. When I reached Col. Baker's headquarters I was directed to take twenty-five men and proceed on the track of Booth to Fredericksburg. A very short time after this I had my detail at the Sixth street wharf at Washington; there I found a steamboat, the John S. Ide, ready to carry us to Belle Plaine. Here we left the boat, and landing our horses, we struck across to the Rappahannock at Port Conway. At the house by the port we questioned the people, and finally got them to admit that the men we were in search of had passed onward. They had been [illegible] frightened; confessed that he had been with Booth, and consented to guide us back to Garrett's farm, where Booth had stopped. We then started back to Garrett's, and reached there in the early morning. We surrounded the place, and I went up to the door and knocked loudly upon it. In a moment the old man Garrett appeared, in very light attire, carrying a candle. He told me that the man I described had been there, but that after the cavalry had passed he had taken his crutch and hobbled off to the woods. In the meantime men had been hunting about the place, and one of them called out to me that he had a man in his corn-crib. I went to the crib and found it was Garrett's son, who said he was there to watch the men in the barn, fearing that they might steal the horses. I thus found that Booth and Harold were in the barn. Harold had returned from Bowling Green to Garrett's. We surrounded the barn, and Boston Corbett was stationed at a place where there was a hole in the boards about two feet square. As we surrounded the barn we heard men moving about in the hay.

"I told Booth that I knew it was he, and we carried on a short conversation before he was shot. He first asked:

"'Who are you? You may be my friends.'

"On my answering, he replied: 'I am a cripple, and alone. Give me a chance for my life. Draw your men up at fifty paces, and I will come out and fight you.'

"I replied that I did not come there to fight. I said, 'I came here to capture you. I have fifty men, and propose to do it.'

"About this time he said, 'There is a man here who wants to surrender awful bad,' and with that the boy Harold came out. As Harold left, Booth made a movement as though to raise his carbine, and Boston Corbett fired. The ball struck Booth just behind his ear, in about the same place where he struck the President. The bullet lodged in a vertebra of the neck, and this part of his anatomy was afterwards cut out, and the bone with the ball in it was kept in the Medical Museum at Washington. Just before Corbett fired the straw at the back of the barn was lit by a detective, and as the blaze leaped upward I rushed up and seized Booth, throwing my arms around his waist under his uplifted arms, and dragged him out of the burning barn. We carried him to the porch of the Garrett farm-house, and he died within a few hours.

"We sent for a doctor, but he could do nothing. Booth's intellect was clear, but he was in great agony. He did not deny his crime. The only expression that he made was, 'Useless! useless!' He did not say, 'I died for my country,' nor, 'Tell mother,' as has been reported. At one time I offered him some water, and at another time brandy. He refused the brandy, but took the water. He could not swallow from a cup, and I soaked a towel and gave it to him to suck."

A Tramp Who Paid His Board.

"Do you know it is a funny thing, but we have entertained many an angel unawares in this way. Not a great while ago a very impressive-looking man came to the desk, and, saying he was in hard luck and a perfect stranger in the city, asked us to give him his breakfast. He said he had just landed from Australia and was awaiting a remittance from England. Well, we took no stock in that part of his story, but he got his breakfast all the same and was most profuse in his thanks. It must have been nearly a month before we saw him again. Then he entered the hotel very modestly, recognized the clerk who had befriended him, and asked for a suite of rooms on the parlor floor. At the same time he asked the clerk to take care of about £2,000, mostly in English money. It turned out that he was the young son of an English lord, who had been trotting around the globe, and had simply missed connections when he reached New York. He was with us for three months, and before he left had knocked a large hole in that £2,000.—New York Sun.

Polar Bears Hunting Seals.

The polar bear has quite a varied diet, depending on the season and his whereabouts. If near a country where waters abound in seal this is his main sustenance, and the cleverness he displays in catching them is wonderful; for the Esquimaux considers the seal the wariest and slyest game in his country, and especially in the summer time when the polar bear secures the most. When a seal comes up through the ice on a pleasant summer day, he is quite wary at first as he stretches himself for a comfortable snooze on the ice so close to his hole that the slightest motion of his body will send him over the slippery edge, and with a stroke or two of his fins and a splash of his tail he is out of sight beneath the ice again. Having kept a sharp lookout in every direction for a number of minutes, and seeing nothing suspicious, he allows his heavy head to fall on the ice to take a nap; but they are short naps indeed, and every two or three minutes he raises his head and surveys the surroundings for probable mischief. The polar bear, seeing these movements from the top of some high hummock of ice, crawls stealthily on his prey, taking advantage as much as possible of every little piece of rough ice to conceal his figure, already well protected by his white color on the ice. Having gotten as near as he possibly can by such methods he lies flat on the ice and commences "hitching" himself along by short, spasmodic actions, watching the seal keenly all the while. Should it look up from its slumbers the bear remains motionless as a piece of ice, for which he hopes to be taken by this ruse, until the seal throws his head down again, when he once more commences "hitching" forward. By this series of very slow and laborious creepings he manages to get within ten or twenty feet of his victim, when, watching his best opportunity when the seal is in the midst of one of his short slumbers, he makes a quick rush, striking it over the head with his paw, and grasping it by the neck with his teeth. A single miscalculation in this scheme and the seal is below the ice through his hole, dashing a mass of spray in Mr. Bruin's face with his pliant tail. Should the seal have crawled up on the edge of an ice floe from the water and attempt to escape thereto, the bear being close upon him, the latter will not hesitate—so the Esquimaux say—to dive after the seal, and, although in the water the seal is his superior in activity, occasionally the bear is rewarded with his prey by a lucky snap of his paws. The polar bear is credited with killing walrus, but I think he never attacks any but the smaller ones in a fair combat, so much larger is the walrus than his bearship. The Esquimaux claim—and I think their story is true—that the polar bear has been known to take a stone or huge piece of ice in his forepaws, and, from a favorable attitude—the side of an iceberg or the top of a cliff—hurl this missile with such certainty as to alight on a walrus' head, and so stun it that its capture becomes easy afterwards.—Lieutenant Schwatka.

Wedding-ring Romances.

In speaking of wedding rings we learn that these important symbols have not always been manufactured from the precious metal, gold. We are told that in lieu of a ring the church key has often been used; and Walpole tells of an instance where a curtain ring was employed. The Duke of Hamilton fell so violently in love with the younger of the celebrated Misses Gunning at a party in Lord Chesterfield's house that two days after he sent for a parson to perform the marriage ceremony, but as the Duke had neither license or ring the clergyman refused to act. Nothing daunted, Hamilton declared "he would send for the archbishop." At last they were married with a ring of the bed curtain, at 12:30 at night, at Mayfair Chapel. Forgetful bridegrooms have been reduced to greater straits than this even; in one instance a leather ring had, on the spur of the moment, to be cut out of a piece of kid from the bride's glove. A tragic story of a forgotten wedding-ring is told in the "Lives of the Lindsays." When he should have been at church, Colin Lindsay, the young Earl of Balcarres, was quietly eating his breakfast in night-gown and slippers; when reminded that Mauritia of Nassau was waiting for him at the altar, he hurried to church, but forgot the ring; a friend present gave him one, which he, without looking at, placed on the bride's finger. After the ceremony was over the Countess glanced at her hand and beheld a grinning death's head on her ring. She fainted away, and the omen made such an impression on her that, on recovering, she declared that she was destined to die within a year; a presentiment that probably brought its own fulfillment, for in a few months the careless Colin was a widower.—Jewelry News.

Carrier Pigeons in War.

Steps have been taken in nearly all the European countries to establish military communication by means of carrier pigeons in time of war. England, France, Germany, Belgium, and Italy have definitely organized military carrier-pigeon services, and some have subsidized the private training-establishments with the right to use the pigeons in war.

This method of communicating originated in China, or, at least, in the East, and it was most likely in use by the ancient Arabians. William of Orange and Napoleon I. used the messengers during their wars; but the greatest service was that rendered in 1870 between Paris and Tours.

During the siege of Paris 150,000 official dispatches and about 1,000,000 private communications, representing a money value of about $18,000, were conveyed by these pigeons. In this case the messages were reduced by microscopic photography so that a tiny piece of silk paper one and three-fourths inches long by one and one-fourth inches wide could contain 3,500 messages of twenty words each, or 70,000 words. The total dispatch thus arranged weighed at most less than one-quarter of an ounce and was secured by a light thread to the tail-feathers of the pigeon. Upon arrival the dispatch was removed, enlarged by photography, and deciphered.—Public Service Review.

A GREAT SWORD CONTEST.

The Fight of Tom Montvey Against Three Mexicans.

[Pittsburgh Dispatch.]

"One day I fell in with a young fellow, an American, who had been in Spain and had bested all the Spanish swordsmen of that day," said a sporting man to a reporter, describing an adventure in Mexico. "He was going under the name of Tom Montvey, though that was not his proper cognomen, and a finer looking and more companionable young fellow you never saw. He spoke the Spanish language like a native, and, made up in the costume of the country, he readily passed for a Mexican.

"We became great friends, and he prevailed upon me to take a trip with him through the country. I found that in the little towns and villages remote from the capital the feeling against an American was more bitter, and I would have fared badly had it not been for Tom. We stopped for a long time in the city of Guanajuato, capitol of the State of that name. There were many Spaniards and native Mexicans there who considered themselves master of the sword, and Tom soon had his hands full. I never saw a man with such a sword arm.

"Well, he conquered some of their best swordsmen, and the whole country was talking of his prowess. They called him a devil, and many a gay Mexican youth would have given his entire fortune to have been able to run a sword through his heart, for the beautiful senoritas of Guanajuato were smitten with Tom's handsome figure, and to tease their lovers it became fashionable for them to promise their hand as soon as the lover should succeed in wrestling a victory from Tom. In this way it came about that almost every gay youth in the city cordially disliked Tom, and they hated me because I was an American, and, if I do say it myself, could handle a sword about as well as some of them. Things were getting warm, and, to cap the climax, I found favor in the dark eyes of a rosy beauty, and two or three yellow skinned youngsters who had in vain sought her smiles, put up a job to shut out my light.

"Tom got wind of the affair, and forewarned is forearmed. We were to attend a grand festival given by one of the nabobs of the State, whose residence and beautiful grounds were in the outskirts of the city. This was the occasion which was to be taken advantage of by four young greasers to forever settle my chances with the sweetest little Mexican girl I ever saw. Well, we went to the fete, and I was so taken up with the fascinating senorita that I forgot about the scheme on my life, but, thanks to ever vigilant Tom, he was cognizant of every move made by the enemy. Of course he was the great lion of the occasion, but as everybody thought he was a Mexican it was all right.

"To make a long story short, the four conspirators set upon me in a little grove near the house. The moon was shining through the branches of the trees, and, save for the shadows it was light as day. I was taken by surprise, and never thought of a sword, but I banged the first fellow a pelt in the jaw with my fist, and laid him out. The others were making at me with drawn swords, when Tom jumped in and took up the fight. Talk about sword play! I don't believe there was ever another battle like it. Tom's cuts, thrusts, and parries were so rapid that it looked as though he was using a dozen swords. Not a word was spoken, and I stood there like a jay watching the fight. I suppose I should have come to my senses had Tom been getting the worst of it, but as it was, I never moved until three Mexicans were stretched on the grass. The fellow that I knocked down had disappeared.

"That was a contest that was a contest. Though it wasn't for a stake it would have cost us our lives had Tom lost. As it was we made a dead sneak out of the city that night and got back to the City of Mexico as fast as we could. I would never have been here if we had remained to see the result of the fight."

A Valuable Enemy.

Not many years ago a Kentucky horse-driver found himself in a small town in Lumpkin County, Georgia, says the American Magazine. Having disposed of his stock he celebrated the fact by going on a spree and bantering nearly every man who would have anything to do with him for a fight. He aspired to "run the town," and, being a huge, muscular fellow, seemed likely to succeed.

No one wanted to accommodate him, though several intimated that if nothing but a fight would do "Old Hall" would be in town that afternoon, and, as he was never known to refuse a banter, would doubtless respond to the driver's pugilistic desires.

Said one man: "Old Hall! He'll fight anything from a circular-saw to a blind preacher." Another remarked: "Why, Old Hall! He'd raythur fight than wear his clothes."

Our driver avowed that if Old Hall didn't show up he would have him run down with dogs rather lose the chance of whipping him. In the afternoon, sure enough, Old Hall appeared, and was pointed out to the swaggering Kentuckian as he stood at the bar of the principal saloon, "takin' a patch of Georgy red-eye," as he phrased it.

Old Hall was small, lean, and vicious looking. The large driver gazed down on him for a moment, and remarked:

"Ef that's yore bully I'll just unbully him fer yo in about ten seconds."

Then, walking up, he slapped Old Hall on the shoulder, saying:

"Es yore name Hall?"

Old Hall—the impersonation of terrier-like pugnacity—glared up at him and replied:

"Yes, my name's Hall."

"Well, you've got ter fight. Ef yore name's Hall I'll jest change hit to Bawl afore ye know whar ye air."

"You're a liar!" was Old Hall's prompt response, and at it they went without further parley.

To the surprise of every one Hall, after a severe tussle, whipped the driver, who seemed much cast down and thoroughly cowed. Then the numerous men whom the latter had bantered bristled up and wanted also to whip the bully. They found an unexpected obstacle in Hall, who interposed as follows:

"The fust man that teches this feller has got ter jump on the two on us. I've fout all over old Lumpkin, 'n Berrien, 'n Loundes kyounties for more'n twenty year, 'n thish yere is the fust man I've ever made ter holler. He's Old Hall's friend. He's done fer me what no other man has ever done, 'n ef ye think I'm a-goin' ter stand by 'n see my repper-tashun ruint by lettin' him git whipped by every little flee dog in the settlement es wants to bounce him, yo don't know Old Hall."

The driver was not further molested.

The Chinese Empress' Pastime.

The empress regent of China is one of the most remarkable women of the age. Not content with directing the intricate policy of the most populous empire in the world with wonderful cleverness and sagacity, she has now entered the ranks of competitors for the light-weight championship of the celestial empire. Attired in a sort of a bloomer costume, she takes daily lessons in boxing from an old eunuch. Her appearance at the age of 50, in short skirt, hitting out at her venerable preceptor and occasionally receiving punishment herself, must be comical to the last degree, and the reports on the matter form the subject of a most disrespectful merriment on the part of the almond-eyed denizens of the Chinese metropolis. The empress regent was a concubine of the Emperor Hein Fung, on whose death she was appointed to act as co-regent with the dowager empress during the minority of her son, the late Emperor Tung Chi. When the latter died, a few moments after this marriage, one of those curious intrigues which mark the history of Oriental courts took place. His young bride, who was enceinte at the time of the young monarch's death, died mysteriously before the birth of her child, and the old dowager empress and co-regent took her departure for another world rather suddenly a few days afterward, leaving the present empress in undisputed possession of power. With unusual ability she has guided the policy of the empire through the tumultuous times which have resulted from the opening up of the country to foreign trade, and has so conducted affairs as to have brought the nation to an infinitely higher degree of prosperity and tranquillity than it enjoyed when she took up the reins.—Hong Kong Times.

Cruelty to Animals.

It is a hard story that Mr. R. N. Boyd has to tell of the treatment shown to donkeys in the mining regions of Chili. These animals are used for carrying the ores from the mines to the smelting works, and in all the desert country they are the usual beasts of burden.

"If there existed in the Province of Coquimbo a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, they would find a field worthy of their labors. The unhappy brutes employed for mining purposes are ill-treated, overworked, starved, and forced to carry a load of over two hundred weight of mineral on their raw and bleeding backs.

"The ores are packed in leather bags, and fastened over the donkey's back by means of long thongs. With this load they have to cover a distance of twenty or thirty miles, along the dry, dusty valleys, or on the steep paths leading over the mountain tops. There is no water on the wayside to refresh the weary, thirsty animals, not a blade of grass for them to nibble at.

"In the evening they get a scant allowance of hay, and on this they have to subsist while in the barren district, and to work until their skins cover nothing but bones, and the emaciated beasts sink beneath their load. Then it is considered advisable to send them away for a short time to a pasturage in one of the watered valleys, in order that they may recover their strength.

"The men who drive these poor beasts along the uninteresting roads, in clouds of dust, and all the melancholy pace of the beast of burden, do not lead an enviable existence, but they seem reconciled to their lot, and are, to all appearences, indifferent to the sufferings of their unhappy mute companions".—Youth's Companion.

English and American Smokers.

"One of the features of American street life that strike an Englishman on first arriving here most forcibly," said a young Londoner whose acquaintance I made at the Palmer House, "is the abundance of cigars. I was simply astounded to observe, on my arrival here, teamsters, porters, cabmen, aye, even peddlers with handcarts, smoking cigars. In England, you know, where cigars cost just as much as they do here, a man who never smokes anything on the street but a cigar is looked upon as an epicure, and, if he is not a gentleman of landed property, is regarded as a very extravagant fellow. What do we smoke? Why, pipes, of course. I know fellows—London fellows, too—who are worth all the way from £100 to £1,000 a year, who are inveterate smokers, and who yet regard cigars with about as much reverence as you do diamonds, no doubt. The most extravagant of them smoke two cigars, at three pence or six cents apiece per day. No; I must say that the princely extravagance of the American smoker, who, though he may be too poor to buy himself a warm overcoat when the cold winds come, will still scorn to smoke a pipe on the street, floors me. In London, if a costermonger or a cabman appeared among his comrades with a lighted cigar in his mouth, he would be hooted from one end of the street to the other for endeavoring to assume a luxury his circumstances in life did not entitle him to."—Chicago Journal.

European Names.

Sweden and Norway were anciently called Scandinavia, which the modern antiquarians think means a country and woods that have been burned or destroyed. The appellation, Sweden, is derived from Sintuna or Suithcod; the native term Norway, or the northern way, explaining itself. Prussia from Peuzal, a Sclavonic race; but some writers supposed it took its name from Russia and the Sclavonic syllable po, which means adjacent or near. Denmark means the marches, territories, or boundaries of the Danes. Russia is the ancient Sarmatia, which has been subsequently named Muscovy. It derives its present name from Russi, a Sclavonic tribe who founded the Russian monarchy. The original savage inhabitants used to paint their bodies in order to appear more terrible in battle. They generally lived in the mountains and their chariots were their only habitations. Spain, the ancient Iberia, from Iberius; or Hispania, from the Phœnician Spaniga, which signifies abounding in rabbits—which animals are very numerous in that country—hence Spain. France, from the Franks, a people of Germany who conquered that country. Its ancient name was Celta, Gaul, or Gallia Baracchatta, the latter signifying striped breeches, which were worn by the natives. Switzerland, the ancient Helvetia, was so named by the Austrians, who called the inhabitants of these mountainous countries Schweitzers. Italy received its present name from a renowned prince called Italus. It was called Hesperia from its western locality.

A Hint.

A 3-year-old boy, while on a visit to his relatives, stopped his play and approached an indulgent auntie when she was seeding raisins for cooking purposes, knowing from experience that something odd would be forthcoming if the child was not invited to have some of the raisins, the auntie refrained from asking him if he wanted any. Surprised at this unusual conduct on the part of his relative, the little fellow stood it as long as he could, and then drawled out: "Who did you say 'Here' to, auntie?" His raisin feast was provided.

Where Water Is a Deadly Drink.

Strangers in Mexico are at first greatly troubled with thirst, as rapid evaporation renders the mouth and throat extremely dry. Water affords no relief, and is, withal, more dangerous to indulge in than any "tangle-foot," whose effects may be slept off. When we reflect that this old, old city—the ancient Tenochtitlan of the early Aztecs—has been the site of a populous city for more than six hundred years, and during all that time, while empires have arisen and fallen, dynasties decayed, and myriads have lived, died and been buried here, this cup-like hollow, high up in the hills, has never been drained, but, on the contrary, has been drained into from all the surrounding country, one has no disposition to taste the waters of so vast a charnel-house. To be sure, there is the living spring of Chapultepec, still brought down to the capital by that old Spanish aqueduct (five miles long and three hundred years old); but unless you live close by one of its few fountains and see the sweet, pure water taken therefrom, you can never be sure of what you are drinking. The licensed carrier, who peddles water from door to door, at the rate of a jarritotul for a tlaco (1½ cents), is quite as likely to have drawn it it from some filthy well filled with washings from the Campo Santo. Other portions of this volcanic country abound in such a conglomeration of minerals and chemicals as to render the water extremely dangerous, and the traveler is warned that to drink much of it may entail incurable ills.—Philadelphia Record.

Stereoscopes.

The beautiful optical instrument called the stereoscope, by which two pictures taken from slightly different standpoints are made to blend into one image, has hitherto been regarded merely as a pleasant manner of examining photographs, and, most unaccountably, it seems to have gone completely out of fashion. According to a French paper, it is made to fulfill a very useful office at the Bank of France, it being employed there for the detection of spurious bank notes. For this purpose a genuine note is placed side by side with the suspected one inside the instrument, and when the two images are superposed, the slightest difference between them becomes at once evident. It is said that a forged note which appears perfect to the unaided eye cannot bear this stereoscopic test.—Chambers' Journal.

The Night Clerk.

Manager Shepherd, of the West Hotel, Minneapolis, is quoted as saying: "One of the most responsible positions in a hotel is that of night clerk, and yet that is where beginners serve their apprenticeship. For at least eight hours the night clerk has exclusive control of the hotel. He has no one to turn to in case of an emergency. If anything happens he must rely solely upon his own judgment, for he has no time to call upon any one. The most serious thing that can happen, of course, is fire. The safety of all the patrons in the house is dependent upon the coolness and judgment of the night clerk. A level-headed man who doesn't lose his wits is invaluable as a night clerk."

A Sudden Sensation

Of chilliness invading the backbone, followed by hot flushes and profuse perspiration. We all know those symptoms, if not by experience, from report. What's the best thing on the programme? Quinine? A dangerous remedy, truly. Produces curlus of the bones, only affords temporary relief. Is there no substitute? Assuredly, a potent but safe one—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a certain, speedy means of expelling from the system every trace of the virus of miasma. Use it promptly, persistently. The result—a cure is certain to follow the use of this beneficent restorative of health. Dyspepsia, liver complaint, nervous affections, rheumatism and inactivity of the kidneys and bladder, are also among the maladies permanently remediable through the genial aid of this wholesome botanic medicine, recommended by the medical fraternity.

The Nearest Fixed Stars.

According to the Rev. Dr. Pritchard, of Oxford, who has been photographing the heavenly bodies, fifty millions of miles is the amount of space which separates us from the star 61 Cygni, supposed to be the nearest to us of all the bodies in space outside our own planetary system. The light which now reaches us from this star started on its journey about eight years ago.—London Exchange.

MRS. BENTON, of Cinderella fame, is now producing that piece in Los Angeles, Cal. The children of several former residents are in the cast. As usual, the papers state that "the youngsters displayed a brightness and ability that are peculiar to the children of Los Angeles."—Nashville American.

ADVERSITY is the trial of principle. Without it a man hardly knows whether he is honest or not.

DON'T hawk, hawk, and blow, blow, disgusting everybody, but use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

A FAST man is very slow when it comes to paying his debts.

How to Gain Flesh and Strength.

Use after each meal Scott's Emulsion with Hypophosphites. It is as palatable as milk, and easily digested. The rapidity with which delicate people improve with its use is wonderful. Use it and try your weight. As a remedy for Consumption, Throat affections, and Bronchitis, it is unequaled. Please read: "I used Scott's Emulsion in a child eight months old with good results. He gained four pounds in a very short time."—THO. PRIM, M. D., Alabama.

A LADY correspondent wants to know why, since the invention of needle guns, women can't fight as well as men.

A Sore Throat or Cough, if suffered to progress, often results in an incurable throat or lung trouble. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" give instant relief.

"WHICH will you have, chloroform or laughing gas?" inquired the dentist. "Ether will answer," replied the patient.

Catarrh Cured.

A clergyman, after years of suffering from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, and vainly trying every known remedy, at last found a prescription which completely cured and saved him from death. Any sufferer from this dreadful disease sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Prof. J. A. Lawrence, 212 East Ninth street, New York, will receive the recipe free of charge.

GET Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners applied to your new boots and shoes before you wear them out.

IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

The Old Silver Spoon.

How fresh in my mind are the days of my sickness,
When I [illegible]
The burning [illegible], the sinking and weakness,
And even the old spoon that my medicine bore.
The old silver spoon, the family spoon,
The old chamber spoon that my medicine bore.
How loath were my fever-parched lips to receive it,
How nauseous the stuff that it bore to my tongue,
And the pain at my towards, oh, naught could relieve it,
Though tears of disgust from my eyeballs it wrung.
The old silver spoon, the medicine spoon,
How awful the stuff that it left on my tongue.

Such is the effect of nauseous, griping medicines which make the sick room a memory of horror. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, on the contrary, are small, sugar-coated, easy to take, purely vegetable, and perfectly effective. 25 cents a vial.

AN editorial writer employs the sword of Damocles" so often that the exasperated compositor cries, "D nocles!"—Texas Siftings.

"Don't Marry Him!"

"He is such a fickle, inconsistent fellow, you will never be happy with him," said Esther's friends when they learned of her engagement to a young man who bore the reputation of being a sad flirt. Esther, however, knew that her lover had good qualities, and she was willing to take the risk. In nine cases out of ten it would have proved a mistake; but Esther was an uncommon girl, and to every one's surprise Fred made a model husband. How was it? Well, Esther had a cheerful, sunny temper and a great deal of tact. Then she enjoyed perfect health and was always so sweet, neat, and wholesome that Fred found his own home most pleasant, and his own wife more agreeable than any other being. As the years passed and he saw other women of Esther's age grow sickly, faded, and querulous, he realized more and more that he had "a jewel of a wife." Good health was half the secret of Esther's success. She retained her vitality and good looks, because she warded off feminine weaknesses and ailments by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

"HAVE you heard why the English dude is not wanted in America?" "No; why?" "Because the Yankee dood'll do."

Offer No. 172.

FREE!—To MERCHANTS ONLY: A triple-plated Silver Set (6 knives, 6 forks, 6 teaspoons, 1 sugar-spoon, 1 butter knife), in satin-lined case. Address at once, R. W. TANSILL & Co., 55 State street, Chicago.

FLORIDA: "Its Advantages and Drawbacks." For this book free, or Florida maps, books, lands, or tickets, address O. M. CROSBY, Box 1??, New York.

Sick Headache

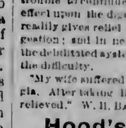
Is one of the most distressing affections; and people who are its victims deserve sympathy. But the great success Hood's Sarsaparilla has had in curing sick headache makes it seem almost foolish to allow the trouble to continue. By its toning and invigorating effect upon the digestive organs, Hood's Sarsaparilla readily gives relief when headache arises from indigestion; and in neuralgic conditions, by building up the debilitated system Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes the difficulty.

"My wife suffered from sick headache and neuralgia. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla she was much relieved." W. R. BABB, Wilmington, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar



Ely's Cream Balm

Price 50 Cents.

Will do more in Curing

CATARRH

Than $500 in any other way.

Apply Balm into each nostril. ELY BROS., 235 Greenwich St., N. Y.

KIDDER'S

DIGESTYLIN

A SURE CURE FOR

INDIGESTION and DYSPEPSIA.

Over 5,000 Physicians have sent us their approval of DIGESTYLIN, saying that it is the best preparation for Indigestion that they have ever used.

We have never heard of a case of Dyspepsia where DIGESTYLIN was taken that was not cured.

FOR CHOLERA INFANTUM.

IT WILL CURE THE MOST AGGRAVATED CASES.
IT WILL STOP VOMITING IN PREGNANCY.
IT WILL RELIEVE CONSTIPATION.

For Summer Complaints and Chronic Diarrhea, which are the direct results of imperfect digestion, DIGESTYLIN will effect an immediate cure. Take DIGESTYLIN for all pains and disorders of the stomach; they all come from indigestion. Ask your druggist for DIGESTYLIN (price $1 per large bottle). If he does not have it, send one dollar to us and we will send a bottle to you, express prepaid. Do not hesitate to send your money. Our house is reliable. Established twenty-five years.

WM. F. KIDDER & CO., Manufacturing Chemists, 83 John St., N. Y.

MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

RADWAY'S PILLS,

For the cure of all disorders of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Bladder, Nervous Diseases, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Constipation, Costiveness, Indigestion, Biliousness, Fever, Inflammation of the Bowels, Piles, and all derangements of the Internal Viscera. Purely vegetable, containing no mercury, minerals, or deleterious drugs.

A FINE, SURE MEDICINE.

RADWAY & Co.—Gentlemen: Your Pills have often warded off sickness in my family. I never think it safe to be without them; they are a fine, sure medicine. Most respectfully yours,
HENRY KENWORTH, Chebanse, Iroquois County, Ill.

What a Physician Says of Radway's Pills.

I am using your R. R. Relief and your Regulating Pills, and have recommended them above all pills, and sell a great many of them. I have them on hand always, and use them in my practice and in my own family, and expect to, in preference of all Pills. Yours respectfully,
DR. A. C. MIDDLEBROOK, Doraville, Ga.

DYSPEPSIA.

DR. RADWAY'S PILLS are a cure for this complaint. They restore strength to the stomach and enable it to perform its functions. The symptoms of Dyspepsia disappear, and with them the liability of the system to contract diseases.

Dyspepsia of Long Standing Cured.

DR. RADWAY—I have for years been troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and found but little relief until I got your Pills, and they made a perfect cure. They are the best medicine I ever had in my life. Your friend forever,
WILLIAM NOONAN, Blanchard, Mich.

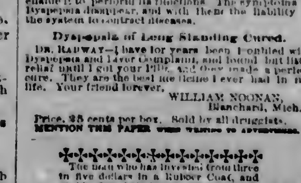
Price, 25 cents per box. Sold by all druggists. MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

A WET HEN

The man who has invested from three to five dollars in a Rubber Coat, and at his first half hour's experience in a storm finds to his sorrow that it is hardly a better protection than a mosquito netting, not only feels chagrined at being so badly taken in, but also feels if he does not look exactly like

Ask for the "FISH BRAND" SLICKER does not have the FISH BRAND, send for descriptive catalogue. A. J. TOWER, 20 [illegible]

PAYNE ENGINES.



ENGINES AND BOILERS of all Sizes.

WRITE FOR CIRCULAR AND TELL US WHAT YOU WANT.

B. W. PAYNE & SONS,

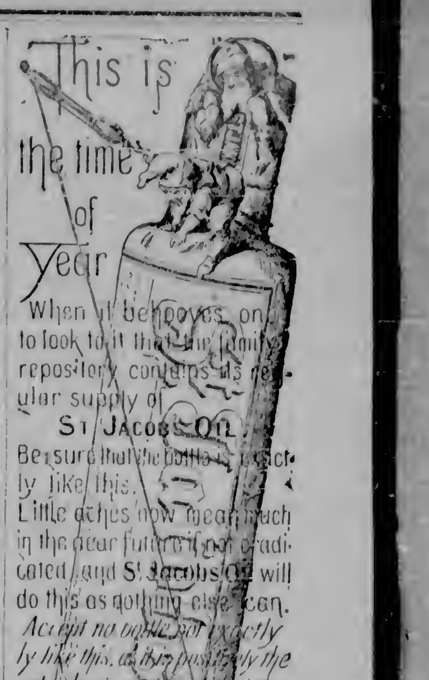
Drawer 1130, ELMIRA, N. Y.

BRANCH OFFICES: 10 South Canal Street, Chicago, Ill. 45 Dey Street, NEW YORK.

PILES Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is a sure cure for blind bleeding or itching piles. Cure guaranteed. Price 50c and $1. At druggist's or mailed by WILLIAMS MFG. CO., Cleveland, O.

C. N. U.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.



This is the time of Year When it becomes you to look to it [illegible] repository [illegible] supply of St. Jacobs Oil. Be sure [illegible] Little [illegible] Accept no [illegible] THE CHARLES A. VOGELER COMPY, BALTIMORE, Md.

PENSIONS [illegible] MENTION THIS PAPER.

OPIUM Habit [illegible]

$250 A MONTH [illegible]

PENSIONS [illegible]

$5 [illegible]

PATENTS [illegible]

OPIUM [illegible]

KIDDER'S PASTILLES [illegible]

FRAZER AXLE GREASE.

Best in the World. Get the genuine. Every package has our trade-mark and is marked Frazer's.

JONES HE PAYS THE FREIGHT

LOOK COLT REPEATING RIFLE [illegible]

JOHN P. LOVELL [illegible] MENTION THIS PAPER.

WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN

Cures Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Catarrh, Croup, Sore Throat, RHEUMATISM, Lame Back, Stiff Joints, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Wounds, Old Sores and All Aches and Pains.

It Cures You. That's the Idea!

Sold by Druggists. Address WIZARD OIL COMPANY, CHICAGO, ILL.

MENTION THIS PAPER.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, NOV. 2, 1887.

It is worthy of remark that the "New South" is even more enthusiastic for Jeff Davis and Democracy than the Old South.

It is a little late in the season for snake stories, but Union county, Iowa, send out a dynamite tale that will do very well to fill the vacuum. It appears that a hog swallowed one of the dynamite cartridges with which a farmer was blowing up stumps. Then a horse was seen to kick the hog, there was an explosion, and neither hair nor hide of that hog was visible afterward. The horse and a companion hog were dead near by. Being very much stranger than fiction, this story must be true.

A Eau Clair (Wis.) special of the 25th says: Considerable excitement was created here to-day by reported discovery of gold one mile from the west bank of the Chippewa river about fifteen miles from its mouth. Specimens have been brought here of high value, and a mining company will be formed. The reported find of [illegible]

Northern Michigan News.

The Traverse City school district owes $21,000.

At Cheboygan, Knights of Labor are trying to organize a co-operative woodworking concern.

Shingle mills will be added to the three Cummer saw mills, at Cadillac, to lessen the waste of timber.

Elk Rapids has three hotels, and yet the Progress wants somebody to build another one with two hundred rooms.

The Cheboygan River Booming Company recently had a sale of stray logs at which 36,000 feet went at $5.90 a thousand.

Daniel McCoy, of Grand Rapids, has purchased of the Indiana Railroad Company a tract of pine land near Cadillac, estimated to cut 55,000,000 feet. The Consideration was $150,000.

The doctors of Antrim county have been paid $2,000 from the treasury of the county for professional services rendered to the county during the past year, and even then their bills were cut down by the board of supervisors.

The people of Northport and some other points on the eastern shore of Lake Michigan, are complaining for lack of shipping facilities. [illegible]

[illegible]

Dress Goods!

A good assortment of Plain and and novelty Dress Goods.

DRESS TRIMMINGS IN PLUSHES, VELVETS, CORDS, SETS, AND BRAIDS. Also Buttons.

[illegible]

REMEMBER: A full stock of Staple Dry Goods is stock.

Cor. Bridge & Main sts.

B. SEE.

[illegible]

CHARLEVOIX

Savings Bank.

[illegible]

160 Acres in MARION

MONEY TO LOAN ON

THEODORE R. CHAPIN.

JOHN CONNOR, Fashionable

Boot and Shoe MAKER.

All Work Guaranteed.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,

ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR,

Charlevoix Summer Resorts.

Carpenters and Painters.

J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller

Offer a Mammoth Stock of FALL

—AND—

WINTER

BOOTS, SHOES

and other FOOT WEAR,

—AT—

LOWER PRICES

Than can be found elsewhere in the County.

We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.

NOTHING SHODDY.

Fox & Miller.

Bank of Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security

Its Officers

Security in Banking

This Bank Invites

This Bank Will

Parties Seeking

Investment Notes,

We Solicit Your Patronage.

CROSS & SONS,

Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.

Charlevoix, Mich.

The Kalamazoo "DAILY TELEGRAPH."

RIFENBURG MILLING CO.

3 EXTRA GRADES OF

FLOUR

Feed, Corn Meal, Graham

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL

Litney & Steimel LIVERY, And Feed Barn

Charlevoix, Mich.

Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the BEST BOATS!

LEAST MONEY!

LEAVE ORDERS

JOS. BEAUVAIS.

BETTER THAN

MEDICINE!

KEEP YOUR

FEET WARM.

You can't enjoy good health unless you clothe the feet properly.

D. SHERWOOD & CO. have just received the finest line of Fall and Winter

BOOTS & SHOES

ever brought to Charlevoix. Give them a call.

A. J. McLEOD,

Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail

FRESH MEATS,

SALT PORK,

SMOKED & SALTED

HAMS,

Dried and Smoked BACON, DRIED BEEF, Bologna, Head Cheese, Sausage.

Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.

Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.

A. J. McLEOD.

Washburn & Ackert, FOUNDREYMEN, MACHINISTS, Charlevoix Plow.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN

Boiler Works!

BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.

Sheet Iron Work given special attention.

MARINE WORK a specialty.

HENRY BARTH, Prop.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED. W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & BRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Dutton's Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PAILTHORP & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st. Charlevoix. Office hours 8 to 10 a. m., 6 to 8 p. m.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post-office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 291, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 104, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

[illegible]

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE, RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE.

NEWMAN HOUSE.

FILE DRIVER.

SURVEYORS.

DENTIST.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R.R.

Time Card for Petoskey.

[illegible]

Michigan Central

The Direct Route Between Mackinaw City & Detroit, Jackson, The South and East.

WAGNER PALACE SLEEPING AND PARLOR CARS.

DULUTH, SOUTH SHORE AND ATLANTIC RY.

"SOO-MACKINAW SHORT LINE."

Hunting, Fishing, Etc.

Two Through Express Trains daily

OBSERVATION PARLOR CARS & WAGNER SLEEPING COACHES

MAXIMILIAN.

The widow of Gen. Miramon, who was Maximilian's companion in captivity and who perished with him, has written her memoirs. They are as yet unpublished, but a friend was allowed to read some portions of the book, among others the chapter describing the last act of the melancholy drama of June 19, 1867. We give these touching pages as follows:

The prisoners had been incarcerated in the convent of the Capuchins, a square, heavy, massive building constructed on the usual model of Spanish convents. On the first floor a narrow court with high walls led into a corridor thirty-six feet long and about nine feet wide, upon which opened three cells. They still bore the names which had been given them by the Capuchin Sisters. The first, called "Eleven Thousand Virgins," was occupied by Gen. Mejia; the second, called "Santa Rosa," by Gen. Miramon, and the third, "Santa Theresa," more spacious than the others, was allotted to the emperor. The austerity of the cloister was evident in the interior of these cells, transformed into prisons. A brick floor, whitewashed walls, a narrow camp-bed, two or three chairs, a table, and washstand of the simplest description.

It was 8 o'clock in the evening, and the emperor was at dinner, seated on the camp-bed with a tray on his knees which held the dishes. On the little table of white wood was a candelabra with several wax candles which lighted the room, and Maximilian's shadow was thrown with vivid distinctness on the straight, bare, white walls. Near him were Gen. and Mme. Miramon. All three were silent and absorbed in [illegible]

"Not that I know of general."

"I think they will choose the Cerro de las Campanas."

"I think so, too," stammered the colonel.

"Ah, well, so much the better. It is a very conspicuous spot."

Miramon sat up till midnight, at which hour M. Lombardo, brother of Mme. Miramon, brought him the following telegram:

All is lost. Adieu until we meet in heaven. CONCHA DE MIRAMON.

Miramon crushed the telegram in his fingers. "My only regret in dying is to leave my wife. Leave me now," he said to M. Lombardo, "but be at the Cerro to-morrow with my other friends who have promised to be there. Bring a covering to throw over my body to conceal it from curiosity."

Miramon slept three hours; he took a cup of chocolate, and dressed himself with the greatest care. At 6 o'clock he was ready to start, accompanied by a priest—M. Ladron de Guevera.

In the corridor he found the emperor, who was bidding farewell to the licentiate Eulalio Ortega. The sun was rising, and his rays shone on the high plateaus resplendent in the valley of Queretaro. Its joyous light penetrated even to the narrow court of the convent.

"What a beautiful day, Don Eulalio," said the emperor. "I would have chosen just such a day for my death."

At that moment a clarion sounded, and the emperor, who did not know what it meant, said to Gen. Miramon:

"Miguel, is that for the execution?"

"Indeed, sire, I can not tell you; this is the first time I have ever been shot."

This reply brought a last smile to the lips of Maximilian.

[illegible]

Corn-Field Songs.

[illegible]

An Enterprising, Reliable House.

[illegible]

An Answer Wanted.

[illegible]

THE REV. GEO. H. THAYER, of Bourbon, Ind., says: [illegible] SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.

ARE YOU MADE miserable by Indigestion, Dizziness, [illegible]

WHY WILL YOU cough when Shiloh's Cure will [illegible]

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

Charlevoix and Elk Rapids

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS.

MILLINERY,

FANCY GOODS,

DRESS-MAKING.

ALDRICH SISTERS.

C. H. Maddaugh,

MERCHANT TAILOR.

I have just received a fine line of Samples of first class Fall & Winter Tweeds. Call and look them over.

Fine Samples of

OVERCOATINGS!

CHARLEVOIX Manufacturing Co.

Charlevoix, Mich.,

Manufacturers of

Sash and Doors,

Blinds, Mouldings etc.

NEWELL Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails kept in stock.

Window & Door Frames made to order.

Building Material

PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS,

Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building

Correspondence solicited.

Everything New

Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc

SILVER WARE, A Specialty.

C. R. BELLINGER.

Burns, Stevens & Co.

LIVERY STABLE

CHARLEVOIX,

The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.

Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

W. A. Reynard,

Dealer in Fruit, Nuts and Confectionery.

I also keep in stock a full line of Tobaccos and Cigars. Butter and Eggs a Specialty.

Farming Lands

500,000 ACRES

Of Splendid MICHIGAN LANDS

For Sale By The G. R. & I. R. R.

50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.

By Water and Rail

Not a Wilderness by any Means.

W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner, GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.

For Finest

JOB WORK,

Patronize The

Sentinel.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY.

CELLULOID STARCH

HUMPHREYS' HOMEOPATHIC SPECIFICS.

MARVELOUS PRICES! BOOKS BY THE MILLION

STOVES!

AHEAD AGAIN!

THE Round Oak Heating Stoves.

NEW STYLES

Cook Stoves!

Saws & Axes

Job and Tin Work.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

F. A. COCHRAN & CO.

Druggists and Pharmacists.

A FULL LINE OF

Drugs and Medicines.

M. S. MOULTON,

WATCHMAKER & JEWELER,

Charlevoix, Mich.

Personal Attention given to Watch Repairing. Key-wind Movements changed to Stem-wind and warranted as good as the best.

JEWELRY Repairing done in the best manner.

FRANK E. WOODS

Bath & Barber Rooms

BATH & BARBER ROOMS.

JAS. A. GELLICK,

Choice Wines,

Fine Liquors

EXCELLENT CIGARS.

Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES.

Milwaukee Export and Lager Beer.

W. H. FRANCIS

FURNITURE

—AND—

JOBBING SHOP,

Contracting & Building,

Shop on South Terrace,

NEW SHOP!

Blacksmithing,

Shop in the Foundry Building.

Horseshoeing a specialty.

ALL WORK GUARANTEED.

M. SOOT

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

THE WIDE WORLD.

A Catalogue of the Week's Important Occurrences Concisely Summarized.

Intelligence by Electric Wire from Every Quarter of the Civilized World.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

Adjournment of the Eleventh General Assembly—The Powderly Men Not Altogether Happy.

AN immense amount of business was accomplished in the closing hours of the Eleventh General Assembly of the Knights of Labor, which completed its sixteen days' session at Minneapolis on Wednesday, the 19th inst.

[illegible]

GEN. BOULANGER.

[illegible]

MRS. LACHS PUNISHED.

[illegible]

EAST.

[illegible]

WEST.

[illegible]

SOUTH.

[illegible]

WASHINGTON.

[illegible]

LABOR.

[illegible]

GENERAL.

[illegible]

FOREIGN.

[illegible]

STATUE TO GEN. MEADE.

[illegible]

STATUE OF GEN. MEADE.

MARKET REPORTS.

[illegible]

HON. WM. B. ALLISON.

The Iowa Senator Presents a Masterly Discussion of National Politics.

Report of His Speech Delivered at West Union, Iowa, on the Opening of the Campaign.

[From the Des Moines Register.]

Mr. Allison called attention to the fact that this administration has been in power two years and seven months, and that we now have the opportunity of comparing the results with the like period of Republican administration. That in order to secure power they had charged the Republican party with wastefulness and extravagance in public expenditures, with the establishment of useless offices to provide for favorites; that the Democratic party had promised to introduce economy and reform in our administration, whereby useless offices should be abandoned and rigid economy instituted in expenditures of the public money. That instead of abolishing useless offices they have created new ones. That they have increased the compensation of many persons in office. That instead of diminishing employes in the departments they have been increased. That in all the departments of the government expenditures have been increased. That the estimates of the departments and appropriations have been increased. That the ordinary expenditures for the fiscal year ending on the 1st of July last have been greater than for any other fiscal year since 1880. [illegible]

[illegible]

Worry, Not Work, Kills.

[illegible]

A Fair Retort.

[illegible]

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for October 30—"The Harvest and the Laborers."

[From Chicago Standard. By Rev. J. M. Coon.]

The lesson for the above date may be found in the ninth chapter of Matthew, from the thirty-fifth to the thirty-eighth verse, and the first eight verses of the tenth chapter. Time, probably A. D. 29, in the winter, near the close of the second year of Christ's ministry. Place, cities and villages of Galilee. It is not known from what village the twelve were sent forth.

SPECIAL MENTION.

The Synagogue.—The synagogue was the local, as the temple at Jerusalem was the national house of worship of the Jews. The origin of the institution is uncertain. Some Jewish writers have referred it back to the time of the patriarchs, but it probably had its rise during the period of the Babylonian captivity. When, under the direction of Ezra, the ancient order of things was re-established in Judea, synagogues were provided in the larger towns, as places of assembly for religious worship, for the benefit of those who could not go oftener than three times a year or less to the Holy City. In the time of our Savior these institutions were very numerous, being found in almost every town and village, however small. [illegible]

FORBIDDEN HONEY.

Sermon by Rev. Dr. Talmage in the Tabernacle.

Depleting and Injurious Books of the Period—The Popular Taste for Pure Literature is Poisoned by the Scum of the Publishing House.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 16.—"Seven hundred and eighty-one thousand three hundred and sixteen dollars and twenty-four cents have been paid cash down in this church for religious uses and Christian work during the nineteen years of my ministry," said the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., in answer to the misrepresentations that have been going through some of the religious papers depreciating the work of the Brooklyn Tabernacle. After giving out the hymn:

Our God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,

Dr. Talmage preached a sermon, the subject of which was "Forbidden Honey," the text being I. Samuel xiv, 43: "I did but taste a little honey with the end of the rod that was in my hand, and, lo, I must die." Dr. Talmage said:

The honey bee is a most ingenious architect, a Christopher Wren among insects, a geometer drawing hexagons and pentagons, a freebooter robbing the fields of pollen and aroma, a wondrous creature of God whose biography, written by Huber [illegible] book may for you or me decide everything for this world or the next. It was a turning point with me when in Wynkoop's bookstore, Syracuse, one day I picked up a book called "The Beauties of Ruskin." It was only a book of extracts, but it was all pure luxury, and I was not satisfied until I had purchased all his works, at that time expensive beyond an easy capacity to own them, and what a heaven I went through in reading his "Seven Lamps of Architecture" and his "Stones of Venice," it is impossible for me to describe except by saying that it gave me a rapture for good books, and an everlasting disgust for decrepit or immoral books that will last me while my immortal soul lasts. All around the church and the world to-day there are busy hives of intelligence occupied by authors and authoresses from whose pens drip a distillation which is the very nectar of heaven, and why will you thrust your rod of inquisitiveness into the deathful saccharine of perdition?

[illegible]

Stimulating liquids also come into the category of temptations delicious but deathful. You say: "I cannot bear the taste of intoxicating liquors, and how any man can like it is to me an amazement." Well, then, it is no credit to you that you do not take it. Do not brag about your total abstinence, because it is not from any principle that you reject alcoholism, but for the same reason that you reject certain kinds of food—you simply don't like the taste of them. But multitudes of people have a natural fondness for all kinds of intoxicants. They like it so [illegible] while I speak: "Do you think card playing will do us any harm?" Perhaps not, but how will you feel if in the great day of eternity, when we are asked to give an account of our influence, some man shall say to you: "I was introduced to games of chance in the year 1887, in Brooklyn, at your house, and I went on from that spot to something more exciting, and went on down until I lost my business and lost my morals and lost my soul, and these chains that you see on my wrists and feet are the chains of a gamester's doom, and I am on my way to the gambler's hell." Honey at the start, eternal catastrophe at the last.

[illegible]

Stock gambling comes into the same catalogue. It must be very exhilarating to go into Wall street, New York, or State street, Boston, or Third street, Philadelphia, and depositing a small sum of money run the risk of taking out a fortune. Many men are doing an honest and safe business in the stock market, and you are in ignorance if you do not know that it is just as legitimate to deal in stocks as to deal in coffee, or sugar, or flour. But nearly all the outsiders who go there on a little financial excursion lose all. The old spiders eat up the unsuspecting flies. I had a friend who put his hand on his hip pocket and said to me in substance, "I have there the value of $150,000." His home is to-day penniless. What was the matter? Wall street. Of the vast majority who are victimized you hear not one word. One great stock firm goes down, and whole columns of newspapers discuss their fraud, or their disaster, and we are presented with their features and their biography. But where one such [illegible]

[illegible]

BULLETS AND BAYONETS.

Stormy Scenes, Amusing Anecdotes, and Interesting Incidents of the Late War.

Bloody Battles, Buzzing Bullets, Bright Bayonets, and Buggy Beds.

Brentwood.

COMPANIES F and E, numbering ninety-seven men, and about as many more who had escaped from the defeat of Coburn's Brigade at Spring Hill, in all, less than two hundred men of the Twenty-second Wisconsin, were encamped at Brentwood, Tennessee, from March 5 to 25. They had no work, and camped in an open piece of timber near the pike, between Nashville and Franklin, where the rail- [illegible]

[illegible]

A clean little kitchen, well-fitted up, with stove ware hanging conveniently on the wall, and, in a safe close by, salt, pepper, and any other condiments likely to be called for, seemed just the place to do our work.

Corporal Joe Shaw and myself were the cooks, and we went about it in a business-like manner. We soon had a fire started and the pig well under way cooking, when we were startled by a lively shooting on our left, and directly the gunboats commenced throwing shells over our heads. Joe and I consulted as to our best course, concluding that it was best to get out of the house, as we were in direct line of shell-throwing. We started to take our pig, but it was so hot, and not done by an hour, that we left it, hoping to return. We put one more stick of wood in the fire, grabbed our guns and started, but not a second too soon, for crash came a large shell through the house, and the air was full of splinters.

When we got out into the street our squad was some distance in the rear, and walking briskly to avoid the shells, which were now falling all around us, and plowing great furrows in the ground. As soon as we got back to [illegible] ers, while the Confederate flag still waved on the redoubt.

[illegible]

"'Colonel, you must capture that redoubt!' was the order that came from General Davis.

"Our men were now badly tired out, and the dead and wounded lay all around us; but I got our men together, and made the charge. Gods! what a charge! My horse was killed under me. The men went forward in a shower of bullets. I thought they were going straight for that flag; then all at once they wavered. The bullets flew like rain, and the advance men were all shot down. There was no one to lead, and I thought all was lost. Just then I saw a man rushing up from the rear. He grabbed a dead soldier's repeating-rifle, pushed right through the dead and dying, reached the head, and pushed up the redoubt. The boys saw him, took courage and followed. In a moment I saw the brave fellow swing his rifle around him on the top of the redoubt, grasp the flag-staff and break it off, while the boys struggled up the side and emptied their guns into the retreating rebels.

"The day was ours! As I came up I shouted.

"'Who took the flag, boys?'

"'It was Mason!' said the boys, and looking down, I saw a broken chain and a shackle still on his ankle." [illegible]

The Hero of Southern Illinois.

[illegible]

Shoulder That Arm.

[illegible]

Saved Their Bacon.

[illegible]

A Very Friendly Fable.

[illegible]

WHERE THEFT WAS UNKNOWN.

Remarkable Condition of California When Gold Was Discovered.

A remarkable state of affairs existed in California for the first year after the discovery of gold, says H. H. Bancroft in "Popular Tribunals." The first miners were made up in a great measure of men already living here. They were honest men, and had deserted the towns to dig gold, and not to defraud their neighbors. Many were known to each other, and few were wholly unknown. Peaceably and in a primitive way each for himself picked the precious metal from the river-beds and crevices, washed it from the sands that lined the streams, or sought a place of his own to dig for it, with no desire to encroach on ground chosen by another. Rights were respected; theft was unknown. A pick or shovel thrown upon the ground, sticks driven into the earth, or a written or posted notice that a certain spot was claimed was sufficient to secure it against all comers. Miners lived much in the open air, in cloth tenements or rude huts, leaving their gold-dust in bags or bottles unguarded in tent or cabin. The merchandise of the trader was secured only by walls of cloth, which could be easily cut through with a pocket-knife. Goods [illegible]

A Terrible Chamber.

[illegible]

A Lucky Position.

[illegible]

No State in That Saloon.

[illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, NOV. 2, 1887.

ENGULFED!

The Steamer Vernon Lost Off Manitowoc.

Over Thirty People Find Watery Graves---None Saved.

Capt. Lewis Gebo, of Charlevoix, One of the Victims.

Sunday noon a telegram was received at Charlevoix that the steamer Vernon, of the Northern Michigan Line, bound up, had foundered off Manitowoc, and all on board lost.

Later in the day it was confirmed, and yesterday's papers give full particulars, as far as they are known, for not one was left to tell the story of the terrible battle for life.

The Vernon was lost on Saturday morning, by foundering. Whether she sprung a leak, dissabled her machinery, or succomed after a straight battle with the tempest, no one will ever know. That fully thirty, if not thirty-five souls went into eternity is unquestionably true.

She was laden with pig-iron from St. Ignace. Vessels bound for Chicago reported Sunday having passed much wreckage, and later the Vernon's pilot house, with the name attached, was plainly seen by a passing schooner. Another schooner arriving in Milwaukee reported passing three dead bodies Saturday afternoon about six miles southwest of Manitowoc. One body was that of a woman with long black hair. She had a life-preserver on. The other t[illegible] bodies were those of men.

Then other vessels reported a larger number of bodies with life-preservers attached, and Sunday noon a steam barge reported passing a man yet alive and clinging to a raft. The Captain said: "When about six miles east-northeast of Manitowoc the cook, who had been keeping a lookout, called me on the deck with the information that a raft could be seen with a man on it. As I went on deck I could plainly see the man waving his hand to us. He was standing upright on the raft, which was about half a mile between us and the shore, and the seas were washing over it. It was apparently about twelve foot square, and looked as though it might be the top of a cabin. Poor fellow! he must have thought it cruel of us to pass by and leave him there to suffer. Ten minutes later we sighted another, also about half a mile inside of us. It was much smaller, apparently not more than four by eight feet and looked like a piece of bulwarks. On it was laying a man who, although still alive, probably did not discern us as he was too far gone. We could see him dip his head, as his frail little float was tossed about on the sea, as though he was about dead. We saw a yawl with three men and one woman in it a little further south. There may, however, have been more of them lying down in the boat. The three we saw being on the seats, one of the men was standing up holding his oar, with his coat swinging to attract our attention."

Three miles further south they sighted a piece of the top of a cabin in which lay a man wearing a buffalo overcoat. As they passed within ten rods of this piece and he made no move, they concluded he was dead, and there was too heavy a sea running for them to run any risks in securing a dead body. It was reported that the first mate wore a buffalo overcoat.

The Vernon not stopping here, no passengers were on board from this point. But Capt. Lewis Gebo, an old resident of Charlevoix, was a wheelsman. Captain Gebo leaves a widow and two grown up sons.

The Captain of the life saving crew at Two Rivers, Wis., describes the storm as the worst ever seen by him on the lake, the waves rising to the height of thirty or forty feet. The first information received by him was from the Sunday morning's papers, although the wreck is supposed to have taken place within seven miles of Two Rivers. It is his impression that no one has survived the wreck. It was bitterly cold on the lake, he said, "and a person could not have stood the exposure over night. The spray dashing over the men clinging to the wreckage must have frozen as it fell and completely encased the unfortunates, if, indeed, they hung on long enough to permit such a thing. My impression is that they are all at the bottom of the lake."

The Vernon had been chartered from A. Booth, her owner, to take the place of the Champlain the remainder of the season. She was a fine steamer, two years old, and cost over $80,000, although was not adapted to carrying freight. She was officered as follows: Master, George Thorpe; first mate, Capt. John Sullivan; second mate, Capt. Larry Higgins, late master of the barge Leland; clerk, Fred Burke; steward, Martin Bean, a survivor of the Champlain; Porter, Henry Bean, also of the Champlain. We are informed by good authority that the steward's wife was also on board. Both their children were lost on the Champlain.

The passengers who are known to have been on board were Miss Kate Gallagher, of Mackinaw; Miss Sallie Durkin, a cousin of Miss Gallagher; C. Baumgras, of Chicago; E. B. Borland, traveling for H. Bosworth & Sons, Milwaukee, and Mrs. James Dunlevy, of Beaver Harbor.

Marine Jottings.

The schooner Napoleon parted her lines at Pierport Sunday, went ashore, and is a total wreck.

During the severe gales of last week, the schooners Zach Chandler and James F. Joy were stranded near Cleveland, and went to pieces.

The big steam barge Polynesia foundered off Sheboygan, on the morning of the 24th. All hands took to the yawl-boat and were saved.

The iron propeller Westover, loaded with pig-iron from the Pine Lake furnace, ran on the pier at Michigan City, on the 27th, badly crushing her port side.

The Canadian barge Oriental, coal laden, broke away from the steamer Scotia, which had her in tow, Sunday, the 23d, and foundered two miles off Port Dalhousie. Her entire crew of five persons were drowned.

The steambarge W. H. Wolfe, commanded by Capt. Ed. Casey, formerly of the Champlain, undertook to go up the Chicago river drawing more water than there was in the creek. She stuck in the draws of three bridges, and the Inter-Ocean says the captain used some emphatic language over his ill luck.

The steam barge Oswegatchie arrived at Port Huron on the 26th, and reported that her consorts, the Morris and Dolphin, broke loose, and the Dolphin is supposed to have foundered. The crew of the Morris were picked up by the schooner Breck. They declare that the Dolphin went down with all on board.

The schooner Mockingbird, lumber-laden from Charlevoix to Chicago, was caught out in last week's gale. While other vessels sought shelter, Capt. Madison "stuck it out," and had a rough time of it. The vessel took to leaking badly, and the captain gave the order to throw over the deck load of lumber, but countermanded it when he discovered that the pumps were gaining on it. She reached Chicago with a split mainsail and covered with ice.

A telegram from Frankfort to the Inter-Ocean says that during a heavy fog one night recently, the propeller Lawrence struck the harbor pier a glancing blow, bringing up on the bar west of the pier. The tug Hall answered her distress signals, but she released herself before the tug arrived. When she landed, her cook fell overboard, and a deck-hand, in trying to assist him, also fell in. They were nearly drowned, and when pulled out it took half an hour to resuscitate them.

At daylight on the 25th, the Point au Beccies life station patrol discovered a vessel anchored about twelve miles northeast. At noon the craft hoisted distress signals, as she was getting in a perilous position, and fast dragging onto Platte reef. The tug D. P. Hall departed for the scene, and the Point Betsey life saving crew launched the life-boat to meet the tug to be taken in tow. When the surf-boat reached the outer bars a tremendous breaker swept over it, breaking the oars, capsizing her and throwing the crew into the ice-cold water. They made a desperate fight, clinging to the submerged craft, and were flung exhausted upon the beach after a long struggle. The tug reached the imperiled vessel at 3 o'clock, took her in tow bound for South Manitou Island. She was a large three-masted grain-laden schooner. The life saving station is in charge of Capt. "Tip" Miller, formerly of this place, whom water won't drown.

The rebuild of the burned steamer Champlain, at Milwaukee, is nearly completed. She is probably launched ere this. Practically a new boat has been constructed. Of the Champlain only the stern post and a few feet of the keel remain. Her dimensions are as follows: Length of keel, 176 feet; over all, 180 feet; beam, 29 feet; hold, twelve feet, six inches. In constructing the hull the model of the Champlain was preserved as nearly as possible, thus assuring speed, excellent seagoing qualities, and unusual strength. The new steamer will carry the engine of the Champlain, the working portions of which have been thoroughly overhauled, under the direction of engineer McCaffrey, late of the Champlain; also the boiler, the interior having been renewed at a cost of $3,000. Like the Champlain, the steamer will have a full length cabin provided with first-class accommodations for passengers. No name has been yet chosen for the craft, but it is pretty well understood that she will be called the City of Charlevoix. Capt. Bishop, who was mate of the Champlain, will probably command the new boat when she goes into commission, as he has had charge of her construction.

In view of the two terrible disasters which have occurred to the Northern Michigan line this year, considerable interest centers in the person of Mr. Burke, the manager and half owner of the line. Simeon S. Burke was born near Ogdensburg, N. Y., March 28th, 1834. At 18, having completed his studies, he was apprenticed to an Albany machinist, and in 1854, having mastered his trade, he went to Schenectady, and went to work in the locomotive establishment in that city. Having in the meantime been to Pittsburg, Mr. Burke, in the fall of 1857, entered the employ of the Northern Transportation Company, as engineer. In 1863 he was made general supervising engineer of the line, (sixteen boats) with headquarters in Cleveland. One year later he returned to New York and established a foundry and machine shop. In 1865, having sold out his shop, Mr. Burke came back to Chicago, and for the succeeding eight years was engaged as a grocer in that city. In 1875, selling out his mercantile business, he again became chief engineer of the Northern Transportation Company, which position he held until the final dissolution of the line. In 1883 Mr. Burke and Philo Chamberlain organized and incorporated the Northern Michigan Transportation Line, having purchased the propellers Lawrence and Champlain. Mr. Chamberlain was some time ago succeeded by Peter J. Klein, of Milwaukee.

RAILROAD MATTERS.

The Preliminary Work Progressing—The Right of Way.

The D. C. & E. engineer corps, operating on the northern extension, returned from Mackinaw Wednesday. Mr. Beardslee reports having found a very feasible and easy route north from Petoskey.

Thursday the railroad officials went to Petoskey, where they held a conference with prominent citizens in the matter of the right of way thro' that place. It is understood that everything will be arranged there in good time.

There is some friction encountered south of here by the committee, in securing right of way, but they are confident that the difficulty will be overcome.

It is passing strange that, in the prosecution of an enterprise of this kind, which means so much in the development of the entire region, and the consequent betterment of the condition of every farmer along the line of the road, there should be found people who are unwilling to cede right of way. That they stand in their own light, and that of their neighbors it needs no argument to prove.

The private damage merges into a general and growing benefit. These obstructionists should pre-empt homes in the steppes of Siberia or the deserts of the dark continent.

The Bellaire Breeze gives the following information concerning matters at that end of the line: A meeting of the directors of the D. C. & E. R. R. was held at the Inter-Lake hotel, at Bellaire, last Friday evening, and reports from committees for procuring rights of way were received. The committees for Charlevoix and Kalkaska counties have nearly completed their work, and considerable progress has been made in this county. With few exceptions, owners across whose land the road runs, freely donate the right of way, knowing that this is the only practical method of securing the road, and that it will bring them much more benefit than the value of land taken; a few in each county, however, hope to derive the benefit without rendering any share of the aid, and the only damage to the road comes from that class, but we think our citizens have too much intelligence to drive the road away by refusing the right of way across their lands. Some fault has been found because the survey is being made to Mackinaw; but the capitalists who are under contract to furnish the money to build the road require such survey before furnishing any money. When that survey is completed and the right of way secured, work will commence. As it is well known that there is a strong pressure being brought to bear to carry the road through on another route, it is hoped our people will get to the front with their rights of way, and pay up their assessments, both of which must be done to secure the railroad.

"The men who go down to the sea in ships" wish in these days of storm and disaster that they were in some other business.

Masonic.

There will be a special communication of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M., on Tuesday evening next, Nov. 9th, for work on the second degree. General attendance is desired.

W. A. SMITH, W. M.
H. LEE IDDINGS, Sec'y.

Ironton Notes.

A house over the school pump.

Mrs. Copeland is home after a prolonged absence.

The Misses Noyes and Lennox attended the teachers' examination at Charlevoix on Friday.

A farewell dance at Schoffen's last Thursday night.

Rev. Dorrance has moved into the Manney house.

Charlie Noyes has finished boating for the season and is at home.

Rev. Clark of Charlevoix, preached at 3 p. m. in Congregational church and Rev. Dorrance in M. E. church morning and evening.

Subject of Bible reading next Sunday evening at 7:30, "Consecration." Bring your Bibles.

Mrs. Purvis will return from her Lansing visit Thursday next.

It was a touching scene when Susie Schoffen's class bade her good bye and gave her an appropriate gift, at the school Friday afternoon.

James Friel, for years a resident here, returned to Detroit on the barge Thew bound for Cleveland with iron.

We are glad to note interest manifested by the patrons in our schools. Notwithstanding the storm on Friday, all that could comfortably be seated, attended the exercises by the C grade. This is a wonderful help to the pupils and accomplishes much good.

Teachers' Association.

The Charlevoix Teachers' Association will meet in the High School room at Boyne City, on the evening of November 4th at 7:30 o'clock and will hold over on the 5th. The following programme has been prepared and will be presented:

A paper on School Government by Miss Mason, of Charlevoix.

The Teacher's work outside the Text Book, by Principal A. C. Chew of Boyne Falls.

A reading by Miss Ellie Johnson of Boyne City.

A paper on How to Teach Language by Superintendent Miss Ida M. Garner of Boyne City.

How to teach Penmanship, Miss Maude Loveday, of East Jordan.

The Association will consider the organization of a branch of the State Reading Circle for this county at this meeting.

The members of the Association at Boyne City have kindly promised to furnish music for the occasion and the Ex. Committee urge every teacher in the county to endorse and help to make this meeting a success by being present and taking part in the discussions. The Query Box, now a prominent feature of the meetings, will be there, and time given for informal discussion after each paper has been presented.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent. Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

A new stock of confectionery just received at Hines & Co.'s drug store.

FOR SALE—A good cow.
J. MILO EATON.

When buying blank books you will find it to your interest to look over the stock of F. G. Hines & Co. They carry the largest stock in the county, and buying of manufacturers they can give bottom prices.

FOR SALE—One span of horses, one yearling colt, two spring colts, one yoke of oxen, two two-year old heifers, two yearling heifers; must be sold soon. Terms reasonable. Inquire at this office.

Mrs. Litney & Carr cordially invite the Ladies to call and examine their mammoth new stock of fall and winter millinery. Their stock comprises everything in all the latest novelties in their line. It will pay you to inspect their goods before purchasing elsewhere. adv

Horse for Sale.

A six year old gray mare, weight, 1,200 pounds; good, sound, kind and gentle. A good work horse, and a perfect horse for ladies' driving. Inquire at this office.

CLOTHING.

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.

My Prices are so Low

that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

GREAT EXCITEMENT!

OVER THE WONDERFUL BARGAINS IN LADIES,' CHILDRENS, AND GENTS' UNDERWEAR, AT

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO'S.

And there is no end to the comments on the Great Piles of CLOAK and Winter Goods, that they are offering at such remarkably low figures. And, too, their Gent's Gloves and Mittens, almost make one speechless, for never were such values given before, at least 25 per cent below all other competitors.

OCTOBER FASHION SHEETS FREE, AND ALL OF BUTTERICKS PAPER PATTERNS IN STOCK.

SEE THIS LIST!

WE ARE OFFERING

POSITIVELY UNEQUALLED BARGAINS!

IN ALL LINES OF SEASONABLE GOODS.

SPECIAL DRIVES IN

Cloaks, from $3.50 up.
Dress Flannels, 50 in. 50 Cents.
Dress Flannels, 6 qr. 75 Cents.
Dress Goods, mixed 2-fold, 15 c.
Shirting Flannels, Gray mxd, 15c
Shirting Flannels, High Color Plaids, 17 cents.
Cotton Flannels, 7 to 14 Cents.
Shaker Flannels, 8 to 25 Cents.
Heavy Blankets, $1 per Pair.
Horse Blankets, 80c to $3.00.

WE ARE

Headquarters For Lamps & Lamp Goods

Patent Extension Brass Hanging Lamps, $3.00.
Vienna Shades, 7 inch, 10 Cents.
Best Tubular Lift Lanterns, complete, 75 cents.

Good Japan Tea, 4 lbs for $1.00.
Maple Syrup, $1.00 per gallon.

J. L. HURD & CO.

The Best Groceries At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture

AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

Finest Job Work!

AT THE

Sentinel Office.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

Jno C Miller may21 8

VOL. XIX. NO.—28 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1887. WHOLE NO. 937

SCHOOL BOOKS

SCHOOL BOOK

BUY YOUR SCHOOL SUPPLIES AT HEADQUARTERS. WE HAVE EVERYTHING NEEDED IN THE SCHOOL ROOM, AT UNIFORMLY LOW PRICES.

F. G. HINES & Co.

We will furnish the new books adopted by the board at introduction price. Remember that we sell everything that can be called for in any of our Schools.

SCHOOL BOOK

SCHOOL BOOKS

Best in The World

"The Royal Jewel"

Call at our store and examine the incomparably fine line of Stoves now on exhibition.

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $ $ $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

EMREY BROS.

JUST OPENED!

A FINE LINE OF

Hanging Lamps for the Holidays.

A complete new line of Hosiery of every variety at the lowest prices you ever saw.

We are leading the GROCERY Trade

BECAUSE our goods are the best our prices the lowest.

We are closing out on Boots and Shoes and Crockery. What we have left in these lines will be sacrificed.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO

We are NOT CLOSING OUT

We never did
We do not want to
We are not going to close out

WE AIM TO KEEP OUR STOCK

Complete in Every Department

AT ALL TIMES.

OUR STOCK OF

STAPLE DRY GOODS

—AND—

BOOTS and SHOES,

FOR THE FALL AND WINTER TRADE WAS NEVER MORE COMPLETE THAN NOW.

UNDERWEAR! We have a good line of Ladies', Gents' and Childrens' Underwear.

CLOAKS AT A BARGAIN CLOAKS

We keep Lime, Cement, Stucco & Plastering Hair,

We carry a full line of

EVERYTHING

usually kept in a first class stock of General Merchandise. We aim to merit the patronage of the prompt paying trade by keeping good goods and selling everything at a uniformly reasonable price.

Resp'y Yours,

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

The Best Groceries At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture

AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

Finest Job Work!

AT THE

Sentinel Office.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year - $1 50 | Six months - $ .75

Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Dr. J. A. Carlstein is expected home this week.

—C. J. Lloyd of Detroit was in town over Sunday.

—Capt. Harrison Berdan and wife winter at Wayne, Michigan.

—H. H. Cook has been employed in Saunby's mill at Burgess as night watchman.

—The Boyne Citizen says the November term of the circuit court will be held in Lewis' Hall.

—Hon. John S. Dixon of this place was married at Reed City, on the 27th, to a Kalamazoo lady.

—The scow Lottie Mason brought 3,000 bushels of corn for the Rifenburg Milling Co., on her last trip.

—A postal card from Will See states that he has reached Los Angeles Cal., and "please send the SENTINEL to me here."

—S. M. See & Co., have just opened the finest line of willow rockers and stands you ever gazed at. Bear it in mind for the holidays.

—Prof. Jones of the State University who has succeeded to the chair of Mathematics formerly filled by Prof. Olney, has just completed one of the handsomest cottages on the south side resort. Will Francis of this place was the contractor.

—Act 33, of the laws of 1887, provides that a board of supervisors may purchase one or more lots in any cemetery or burial place, to be devoted to the purpose of burying deceased veterans of the war for the union. Several boards have been asked to do as the law says they may.

—A. F. Myers, who recently went to Ann Arbor to have his eyes treated by Prof. Frothingham, the eminent occulist, was referred to the latter's former assistant, Dr. Oven of Petoskey, who is gaining an enviable reputation throughout this region for successful treatment of the eye.

—The following are the newly elected directors of the Charlevoix Savings Bank: O. D. Wood, F. A. Smith, Jno. Nicholls, A. Buttars, J. L. Hurd, F. W. Mayne and M. H. Wood. At their meeting Monday the following officers were elected: President, O. D. Wood; Vice Prest., A. Buttars; Cashier, F. A. Smith.

—When a man crosses the threshhold of a Michigan Insane Asylum he is legally dead. He cannot own property, make a contract, vote or act as guardian to his own children, and although he may be transferred to the care of his friends as cured, these disabilities cannot be moved until he is legally discharged from the asylum.

—Grand Rapids Eagle: Henry E. Aldrich, of this city, and Miss Mary S. Sproat, of Wayland, are to be married some time next month. Mr. Aldrich is a son of Capt. Aldrich of the steamer Faxton, and was formerly mate of the steamer. Miss Sproat is a sister of W. J. Sproat, the well known newspaper man of this city. They will reside here.

—J. P. Woodbury, of Kalamazoo, one of Charlevoix's prominent resorters, who fell from a run-away wagon the 5th inst., died the same day. Mr. Woodbury was a leading man of that city, and aged eighty-two years. S. S. Cobb, who was with him is also seriously hurt. Mr. Woodbury's loss will be much felt on the resort where he was universally beloved and respected.

—We do not desire any controversy with our neighbor the Enterprise, and will have none. We will say once for all that we do not believe East Jordan parties fired the court house, never did believe, and never heard anybody else say they believed it. Therefore we never telegraphed or wrote any newspaper correspondence intimating such a thing. We picked the matter up because the only reference we saw to such a thing was the Tribune addenda, to which we supposed the Enterprise referred. Farthermore no such insinuation was sent over the W. U. wires from Charlevoix. Our English friend is not thoroughly enough Americanized yet to know that certain one-horse Michigan dallies manufacture specials, where there is a thread visible upon which to weave a story. With all the depravity which the Enterprise attributes to the SENTINEL, it cannot be charged with crawfishing. If the editor of the Enterprise is a gentleman, which we have always supposed to be the case, he will not hesitate to rectify a wrong which he has unquestionably done the senior editor of this paper. We unequivocally assert that any person who would send such information to outside papers is a sneak and a calumniator, and a denial of it, brands him as a coward. We have forwarded to the Enterprise the original copies of the specials wired by us and will verify them to the editor or any other citizen of East Jordan who will take the pains to call at the telegraph office in Charlevoix.

—Charley Gotham killed a large deer, Saturday.

—Miss Gladys Jeffries has a class in penmanship.

—Prof. Dewey left for Southern Michigan yesterday.

—Mr. N. Ainslie and wife returned from Detroit, Friday.

—Miss Rose Cody returned to Naperville, Ils., Thursday.

—Dern Burns is using the scissors at A. T. Washburn & Co's.

—The Cheboygan Manufacturing Co., are again running full blast.

—Miss Bertie Wood has a handsome new piano of the Fisher make.

—Alick Rosenthal in his new ad., announces bargains in all lines. Go and see him.

—District No. 6, Hayes, wants a lady teacher. Apply to Geo. O. Scott, director, Burgess.

—Ham Finney, formerly of East Jordan, but now of Philadelphia, Pa., was in town over Sunday.

—Apple buyers are shipping 1,000 bushels of choice winter apples from Frankfort to Delaware, O.

—D. A. Waterman, a prominent south side resorter, is prohibition candidate for Mayor of Detroit.

—Capt. Thorpe and Roy Hazleton of the crew of the Vernon were to have been married to Charlevoix young ladies this fall.

—The body of Capt. Louis Geboo, one of the victims of the Vernon disaster was recovered Friday off Two Rivers, Wis. His remains have been brought here and the funeral will occur this afternoon.

—The ladies of Christ church mission will give a Geography Social at the Bridge Street House, Wednesday, Nov. 16th. Supper from 6.30 to 9 o'clock – 10 cents. Programme of the social next week. Come all. A good time expected.

—John Denahy of Elk Rapids asked Lary Higgins last trip in of the Vernon where he intended to winter and Lary replied "at the bottom of Lake Michigan, probably." The poor fellow little knew that the prediction would be verified.

—The big derrick at East Jordan that stood over the drive well that was put down at the rink a year ago, was carried bodily down street and set up in front of Harry Branch's drug store Hallowe'en night, and now it bothers the authorities to know how to get it away.

—Don. M. Dickinson, if he wishes the office, is to be postmaster general in place of Vilas, who will succeed Lamar in the interior department. Mr. Dickinson spent Wednesday evening at the white house, was offered the place and will give the president a definite answer in a few days. He will probably accept, as both the president and Mr. Vilas are anxious he should.

From the East Jordan Enterprise we learn that: George Sweet cut at his mill 20,000 ties and 2,000,000 shingles; the Pine Lake company mills cut this season 9,000,000 feet of lumber; the Hoop company cut 7,000,000 hoops which are worth 7-8 of a cent apiece at the factory; the Glenn & Porter mills cut this season 4,000 ties, 2,000,000 shingles, and 7,000,000 of lumber.

—Elk Rapids Progress: The two young men named Bow, lost on the Vernon, one the steward and the other the porter, were nephews of Ed. Bow, of this place. H. B. Lewis, agent at this place, took dinner aboard of her Thursday and she then had ten passengers aboard. He loses 19 barrels of apples by her loss. Dexter & Noble only lose a small amount of freight. E. S. Noble of the firm says she ought not to have taken on a pound of freight after leaving here.

—A recent order of the postoffice department strictly forbids the delivery of Pension checks from the paying office, to any but the pensioner or a member of his family. This interests our merchants, many of whom have been in the habit of giving pensioners credit, and at the end of the quarter taking an order for the check in settlement. The language of the special ruling is as follows: "A letter addressed to a pensioner from the office of an agent for paying pensions must be delivered to the pensioner or some member of the family, even though addressed in the care of a third person; because such address is prohibited. A pensioners order, verbal or written, instructing the postmaster to deliver letters to him from a pension agent, or from the pension office, to an attorney, claim agent or broker, must be disregarded."—Independent.

Boyne Falls Items.

Jay Perry has established his tonsorial parlor in the Powers block.

James W. Hall, of Chandler, shot a marten while coming to town recently. The fur was in good condition.

H. O. Horn had a car load of corn shipped in last Monday.

David Howe is building a meat market adjoining H. Eaton's drug store.

George VanBuren has a residence well under way and expects to occupy it in a few weeks.

Cramer and Eaton are shipping potatoes quite extensively and are paying 75 cents a bushel.

Al. Garver has established himself in the Powers block, in the watch and clock repairing business.

Marine Jottings.

The schooner Charlie Marshall was dismasted in one of the recent gales.

The steamer Friant is doing a good freight business on the Petoskey route.

Owing to high wages and other expenses, bad weather, etc., owners are beginning to lay up sail and tow crafts.

The steamer Queen of the Lakes was up Saturday from Elk Rapids with a load of feed for up-lake points and remained here wind bound several days.

The steambarge Wolfe, Capt. Ed. Casey, was caught out in a blow on Friday and Saturday of last week, and felt the effects of it. She reached Duncan Sunday morning leaking some.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

A large congregation on Sunday morning helps the Pastor to preach, therefore come yourself and bring your friends. Our ushers will be glad to show you every courteous attention.

The Tuesday evening meeting at the usual hour is growing in interest and usefulness.

Thursday evening prayer service affords refreshment and strength for the rest of the week. All come.

W. H. M.

Women's Christian Temperance Union.

The W. C. T. U. will meet Friday at Jeffries' hall, it being the annual election of officers, every member is earnestly requested to be present.

SEC'Y.

Congregational Church.

Rev. A. Downs, the new pastor, will occupy the pulpit next Sabbath.

Teachers' Association.

The second meeting of the Charlevoix Teachers' Association for the current year, was held at Boyne City on Friday evening and Saturday forenoon of last week, Nov. 4th and 5th.

The programme of Friday evening consisted of a paper on Language by Miss I. M. Garner, of Boyne City, and a general discussion of the same by teachers present, together with a select reading by Miss Effie Johnson, and several pieces of music furnished by the local committee. The Intermediate room was filled by an appreciative audience of teachers, citizens and pupils of the schools.

On Saturday the attendance included a good number of teachers and a few citizens.

Miss Maude A. Loveday of East Jordan, gave a paper on Penmanship with blackboard illustrations, and Miss Lottie Mason of Charlevoix, a paper on School Government. Both these subjects were discussed with considerable spirit. The following resolution was offered and passed almost unanimously:

RESOLVED. That we recommend the adoption of a graded system in the schools of Michigan, and ask the State Teachers' Association to agitate the question and urge all teachers to endeavor to influence legislation to this end.

A resolution denouncing Harper's Readers and providing for a committee to circulate a petition to the school boards of the county asking that the use of those books in the schools be discontinued, was passed without a dissenting voice. This petition with signatures will appear hereafter.

Several pieces of vocal and instrumental music were rendered by the local committee, all which were heartily appreciated by the association.

The Query Box was filled at each session, and the questions were distributed among the teachers for answers. Nearly every one took part in the discussions thus introduced.

The attendance and interest manifested at this meeting clearly demonstrates that the Association is gaining in strength and usefulness. There is a marked increase in the evidences that the teachers of Charlevoix county are thinking.

The Association adjourned to meet at the call of the Executive Committee.

Obituary.

Mr. J. P. Woodbury died Saturday night, the 5th inst., from injuries received by being thrown from a carriage in which he was riding with three others.

In the death of Mr. Woodbury I feel the loss of a true friend, one with whom I have enjoyed many pleasant hours, whose friendship I have more fully appreciated from the fact that like myself, he had endured the hardships of a newly settled place that all had to endure in the early settlement of the state, and one who had by good judgment and perseverance projected and carried to a successful termination many enterprises that have been of so much value to his town, county and state. While he had accumulated wealth much beyond his own wants in accordance with his unassuming, unostentatious mode of living his great desire seemed to be to know how he could best use it for the benefit of his own family and needy relatives, and for such objects the most needed, and that would be the most benefit to his city, and for such objects of charity as were the most in need and deserving of aid.

Charlevoix and the southern resort in the death of Mr. Woodbury has lost one of the most noble and manly men that spent his summers with you.

H. BISHOP.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Nov. 7th.

—Sims Baker has leased the building in rear of Stockman & Iddings' and will open at blacksmithing next Monday.

MOTHER.

[illegible]

A MODERN MAGDALEN.

BY W. C. FARLEY.

CHAPTER VIII—(CONTINUED.)

[illegible]

the dining-room, leaning on the Captain's arm. They now all take their places at table, and the butler serves them.

It is well for her future peace of mind that Loo sits with her back to the butler, and that she cannot see the awful look of fear and hate in the butler's eyes. For, more plainly than words can say it, that look says—murder.

CHAPTER IX.

A MAN WHO ASKS FOR JUDITH DONITHORNE.

Six weeks had gone by since the dreadful N. Y. Z. Railway disaster. Miss Lafarge has convalesced rapidly, and her broken arm is doing very well, indeed.

In six weeks' time she has accomplished much. She has won Miss Phidley's affection and her unbounded confidence, and she rides out daily behind the dreadful black ponies, whose antics are a fresh source of amusement, for she laughs and applauds heartily, whether they stand still in utter rebellion, or go tearing madly over the country roads.

In six weeks' time she has improved her slight acquaintance with the inmates of Bywater Park, has gained the dislike of Madam Dundas, the hatred of Loo, and won from the Captain the warmest admiration.

During the six weeks Captain Hazard has made many calls upon the fair sufferer at Stubblefield, and appearances would indicate that his fickle heart has been almost caught in the meshes the enchantress has spread for him.

In six weeks, poor Loo finds that stone walls, and cushioned furniture, and silk gowns are no more conducive to perfect happiness than were the third-floor back bed-rooms, the sham pianos, and the cotton frocks of her former days.

She "gets on," however, most unexpectedly with Madam Dundas; and this is a comfort. But to outbalance this is the growing feeling of dislike which she feels for Miss Lafarge, whom she often meets now, and the overpowering jealousy which consumes her whenever she sees the Captain and Miss Lafarge together. Not that the gallant Captain suspects this feeling on Loo's part. To the Captain Loo is ice itself.

He shall never smile at the readiness with which she surrendered to him, she says angrily to herself. For the Captain thinks nothing of airing his supposed conquests in Loo's hearing, and rather boasts of his prowess as a lady's man, as is usual with men of this description, greatly over estimating himself.

To quite ward off the Captain's sus-

[illegible]

Loo paused for a moment in the doorway.

[illegible]

"You say she died in this room?"

The "motherly woman" again nods in the affirmative.

"In this room, near the spot where you now stand."

"Who was with her when she died?" he asks, biting his lip.

"Only the doctors."

"Was she conscious?"

"No. Directly after the train was wrecked, a number of the wounded were brought here. Among them was the lady you have asked about. She was terribly burned, and in an unconscious condition when she arrived. She lived but a few hours, and died without realizing her extremity."

"And she was alone?"

"Yes. But stop! There was a lady who——"

"A lady!" he ejaculates incredulously—"a lady?"

"A lady!" affirms the "motherly woman." "And the lady said she was a friend of the girl that died, and I guess she was. I know she sat by the body, and she paid the undertaker, and she followed the corpse to the burial ground. Then she went away. She said the poor dead girl had no friends of any consequence."

The visitor bit his lip again.

"Have you anything in your possession now that belonged to the lady that died?"

The "motherly woman" nods swiftly. She disappears presently, only to return again with a traveling-bag in her hand.

"This is all," she says.

"All!" He grasps the bag, opens it. There is the usual paraphernalia: combs, brushes, powder-box, pencil, and lastly—a diary.

The stranger snatches at this diary. He scans page after page in an eager fashion, then he closes the book suddenly. "It was hers," he says in a hushed tone, more to himself than to his interested companion.

"Still——"

Then he bites his nails savagely, and glowers at his companion.

"Where is her purse?" he asks.

The "motherly woman" colors indignantly.

"If the lady had a purse, it will be found in the traveling-bag."

He rummages through the bag.

There is no sign of a purse.

"Describe the lady. Was she fair?"

"Yes. I should say so. Though her face was so dreadfully burned that one could hardly tell what it must have looked like before the accident. She had brown hair and blue eyes. I am certain she was a blonde."

"How was she attired?"

"In black. I thought it was mourning; she had crape stones in her ears. I'm certain now that she was in mourning."

Then the visitor's head sank far down upon his breast. A sigh escapes him. He rouses himself to find the eyes of the "motherly woman" sternly fixed upon him.

"I am satisfied," he says shortly. "At first I thought perhaps it might be a case of mistaken identity; but your description has dispelled that thought. But about the lady you spoke of; the one who acted the part of the 'good Samaritan.' Who is she, and where is she now?"

The "motherly woman" draws a card from her pocket, and with some pride places the card in the outstretched hand of her visitor.

He reads the name easily, for it is written in a clear hand:

MARION LAFARGE,
Stubblefield.

Then he puts the card carefully in his pocket.

"With your permission, I will keep this," he says, speaking in a more civil tone. "I would like to call upon the lady and thank her in person for her kindness to my dead relative."

"Shall you take the bag?"

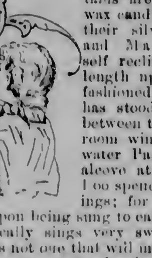
He shook his head in the negative.

"You may have it, and the contents too. I have no use for either."

Then he turned upon his heel, and walked quickly in the direction of the cemetery.

CHAPTER X.

THE QUESTION OF MARRIAGE.



Oo has been singing to Madam. The curtains are drawn, the wax candles lighted in their silver sconces, and Madam herself reclines at full length upon the old-fashioned couch that has stood for years between the drawing-room windows at Bywater Park. In the alcove at the piano Loo spends her evenings; for Madam insists upon being sung to each day, and Loo really sings very sweetly. Her voice is not one that will make her fortune as a cantatrice; but it is sweet and low, and fairly well cultivated—the kind of voice we all like to hear crooning old-time ballads in the twilight.

Evidently others besides Madam enjoy the poor little nobody's music; for Captain Hazard has somehow fallen into the habit of quietly seeking a corner of the drawing-room, as the shadows begin to gather and Loo takes her place at the piano.

Loo, however, is quite unconscious of this action on his part. She slips into her seat and sings the simple old songs Madam calls for, then when this is done she slips away as quietly as she had come.

The little cuckoo clock over the mantel sings out the hour nine as she rises now from the piano.

"Good-night, Madam," she says.

"Good-night, my dear," answers Madam, and the girl flits away.

"I've been thinking lately," says Madam Dundas, beckoning to the Captain, who leaves his shaded nook and now approaches his friend. "I've been thinking lately that you should marry."

Hazard laughs lightly.

"I once thought so too," he replies. "But you know I never could quite make up my mind to offer myself a sacrifice on the altar matrimonial, after all."

"Selfish creature," Madam smiles, then grows serious. "I have thought lately—since Miss Lafarge came to Stubblefield—that at last you had met your fate."

"Deuced fine girl, that Lafarge," says the Captain.

"Not to be compared with Loo."

"Loo is a little, flinty hearted, cold-blooded iceberg."

"She is very discreet. I never believed Frederic Bolton's daughter was what she has proven to be. I have thought lately, Captain, that perhaps you were right after all, and that it is my duty to provide for her future."

"I was sure you would come round at last," cries the Captain, enthusiastically. "Aunt Dundas, you are incomparable after all. Provide for Loo by all means."

"Though, by so doing, your own share of my fortune will be lessened that much?"

"Certainly."

Madam closes her eyes and sits silent for some time. Then she says slowly, and with evident hesitation, "I made a change in my will yesterday. In fact, made a new will entirely. Captain, I wish it might be so, that the money would remain undivided in your hands after my decease. If you could forget Miss Lafarge, and transfer your attentions to a lady a little nearer home, we might arrive at a solution of a difficulty that troubles me now."

The Captain colors. He understands what her meaning is.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Literature for Boys.

No, oh, no writes Bob Burdette, in the Brooklyn Eagle; we are not going to pitch into the five-cent blood and thunder novelette; not right directly, at any rate. We were just looking over a story in the June number of a most excellent and highly respectable juvenile magazine; a good magazine, that doubtless views with alarm, as do all the rest of us, the poisonous literature of the news stand. This story is about a boy, fifteen years old, who, while standing alone on his father's engine, on a lonely siding, saw a runaway train of cars, started by the wind, sweep past him down the grade. Unusual thing—the lightning express nearly due; the train dispatcher always manages to have a lightning express about due when anything of this kind happens. There is "no telegraph wire, either;" this is also usual; a road without a wire is apt to run lightning expresses and limited every fifteen minutes. The boy thinks quickly; boys of fifteen are always quick thinkers; he runs his engine out on the main line, setting the switches for himself, for his father has gone to supper, miles away in the country, presumably, as it is quite customary for railway engineers to take all their meals on distant ranches, leaving their engines in charge of children. The runaway cars "are miles away;" and he has "less than an hour" to catch them. He caught the runaways, which were flying like the wind; he slowed up "with excellent judgment"—we should think so—crept along the side of his flying engine, got on the pilot, lifted the "coupling bar with one hand" and reached over as he "made the coupling and dropped the pin in with the other;" had a struggle with the flying cars, but at last checked them; got them started back, he making thirty-five miles an hour and the "Lightning" in sight making sixty—on a road without a wire. He had ten miles to run in this shape, but he made it, got in on the siding, time to turn the switch, and the "Lightning" thundered by. Then "the boy fainted dead away." No wonder; it was enough to make a man faint to read it; it was high time somebody fainted. Now, the question is just this: Does the boy get anything better out of such nonsense than he does out of "Kid the Sleuth Hound; or, The Boy Terror of Gory Canyon?" Between ourselves and the comma, we really find "The Boy Terror" quite as easy to believe and much more interesting reading. We haven't the least objection to fiction; we rather like it, but great scot, even fiction for boys should have some sense in it. Not much, perhaps, but just some.

PIPES FOR SWORDS.

How Tact Prevented a Hostile Encounter.

A master in any art is properly more pleased than annoyed at finding a worthy rival; so far, among real artists, does admiration of fine work exceed jealousy of the artist. Robert Louis Stevenson tells the following characteristic story of two members of hostile clans, who, meeting in the hut of a common friend, Duncan, were thus skilfully turned from possible bloodshed to friendly rivalry:

"Mr. Stewart, I'm thinking," said Robin.

"Troth, Mr. Macgregor, it's not a name to be ashamed of," answered Alan.

"That's a kittle point, but I think I will have heard you are a man of your sword?"

"Unless you were born deaf, ye will have heard a good deal more than that."

It was a case of now or never, and Duncan thrust himself between.

"Gentlemen, I will have been thinking of a very different matter, whatever. Here are my pipes, and here are you two gentlemen who are baith acclaimed pipers. It's an auld dispute which one of yo's the best. Here will be a braw chance to settle it."

"Why, sir," said Alan, still addressing himself to Robin, from whom he had not so much as shifted his eyes, nor yet Robin from him, "have you music, as folks say? Are you a bit of a piper?"

"I can pipe like a Macrimmon," cried Robin.

"And that's a very bold word," quoth Alan.

"I have made bolder words good before now, and that against better adversaries."

"It is easy to try that."

The two enemies were still on the very breach of a quarrel; but down they sat, one on each side of the peat fire, with a mighty show of politeness, and after a great number of civilties, Robin took the pipes and played a little spring in a very ranting manner.

"Ay, ye can blow," said Alan; and taking the instrument from his rival, he played the same tune in a manner identical to Robin's and then wandered into variations, which, as he went on, he decorated with a perfect flight of grace-notes, such as pipers love, and call the "warblers."

"That's no very bad, Mr. Stewart, but you show a poor device in your warbler."

"Me!" cried Alan, the blood starting to his face. "I give ye the lie."

"Do you own yourself beaten at the pipes, then, that you seek to change them for the sword?"

"And that's very well said, Mr. Macgregor; and, in the meantime, I take back the lie."

Robin then proceeded to imitate and correct some of Alan's variations, which, it seemed, he remembered perfectly.

"Ay, ye have music," said Alan gloomily.

"And now be the judge yoursel', Mr. Stewart," said Robin; and taking up the variations from the beginning, he worked them throughout to so new a purpose, with such sentiment, and with so quick a knack in the grace-notes, that all were amazed to hear him. As for Alan, he sat like a man under some deep affront.

"Enough," he cried. "Ye can blow the pipes; make the most of that."

But Robin struck into the slow music of a pibroch, a piece peculiar to the Stewart's and a chief favorite with Alan. The first notes were scarce out before there came a change in his face, and long before that piece was at an end, the last sign of his anger died away, and he had no thought but for the music.

"Robin Oig," said he, when it was done, "ye are a great piper. I am not fit to blow in the same kingdom with ye. Body of me! ye have more music in your sporran than I have in my head. And though it still sticks in my mind that I could, maybe, show ye another of it with the cold steel, I warn ye beforehand it'll no be fair. It would go against my heart to fight a man that can blow the pipes as you can."

Thereupon the quarrel was made up, and all night long the pipes were changing hands.

The Scene at Lincoln's Nomination.

Though it was not expected to be decisive, the very first ballot foreshadowed accurately the final result. The "complimentary" candidates received tribute of admiration from their respective States. Vermont voted for Collamer, and New Jersey for Dayton, each solid. Pennsylvania's compliment to Cameron was shorn of six votes, four of which went at once for Lincoln. Ohio divided her compliment, 34 for Chase, 4 for McLean, and at once gave Lincoln her 8 remaining votes. Missouri voted solid for her candidate, Bates, who also received a scattering tribute from other delegations. But all these compliments were of little avail to their recipients, for far above each towered the aggregates of the leading candidates: Seward, 173½; Lincoln, 102.

In the ground-swell of suppressed excitement which pervaded the convention there was no time to analyze this vote; nevertheless, delegates and spectators felt the full force of its premonition; to all who desired the defeat of Seward it pointed out the winning man with unerring certainty. Another little wrangle over some disputed and protesting delegate made the audience almost furious at the delay, and "Call the roll!" sounded from a thousand throats. A second ballot was begun at last, and, obeying a force as sure as the law of gravitation, the former complimentary votes came rushing to Lincoln. The whole 10 votes of Collamer, 44 from Cameron, 6 from Chase and McLean, were now cast for him, followed by a scatter of additions along the whole role-call. In this ballot Lincoln gained 79 votes, Seward only 11. The faces of the New York delegation whitened as the balloting progressed and as the torrent of Lincoln's popularity became a river. The result of the second ballot was: Seward, 184½, Lincoln, 181; scattering, 99½. When the vote of Lincoln was announced, there was a tremendous vote of applause, which the Chairman prudently, but with difficulty, controlled and silenced.

The third ballot was begun amid a breathless suspense; hundreds of pencils kept pace with the role-call, and nervously marked the changes on their tally-sheets. The Lincoln figures steadily swelled and grew. Votes came to him from all the other candidates,—4½ from Seward, 2 from Cameron, 13 from Bates, 18 from Chase, 9 from Dayton, 8 from McLean, 1 from Clay. Lincoln had gained 50½, Seward had lost 4½. Long before the official tellers footed up their columns, spectators and delegates rapidly made the reckoning and knew the result: Lincoln, 231½; Seward, 180. Counting the scattering votes, 465 ballots had been cast, and 233 were necessary to a choice; only 1½ votes more were needed to make a nomination.

A profound stillness suddenly fell upon the wigwam; the men ceased to talk and the ladies to flutter their fans; one could distinctly hear the scratching of pencils and the ticking of telegraph instruments on the reporters' tables. No announcement had been made by the Chair; changes were in order, and it was only a question of seconds who should speak first. While every one was leaning forward in intense expectancy, Mr. Cartter sprang upon his chair and reported a change of four Ohio votes from Chase to Lincoln. There was a moment's pause,—a teller waved his tally-sheet toward the skylight and shouted a name,—and then the boom of a cannon on the roof of the wigwam announced the nomination to the crowds in the streets, where shouts and salutes took up and spread the news. In the convention the Lincoln river now became an inundation. Amid the wildest hurrahs, delegation after delegation changed its vote to the victor.—Nicolay and Hay's Life of Lincoln.

Caught by Apaches.

"What was the closest place you were ever in, in your frontier experience?" was the conundrum fired at Capt. Jack Crawford, "The Poet Scout."

The scout ran his fingers through his long hair, reflected a few moments and replied:

"Well, I'll tell you, but you mustn't give it away in print. It occurred in 1886 when Geronimo was on the war-path with his murderous Apaches. I was out deer hunting near a range of mountains west of my home, and about noon unsaddled my horse on a mesa, or piece of high table land, and after picketing the animal out in the grass sat down to eat some cold lunch from my saddle pocket. After finishing the lunch, I concluded to let the horse graze for a while, and leisurely strolled out on a long arm of the mesa the sides of which were very precipitous—a sort of perpendicular wall extending for fully 500 feet to the plain below.

"I stood there gazing from the giddy height for several minutes, and, then looked up. Imagine the uneasy feeling which crept along my spine when I saw a row of at least thirty savages between me and my horse. There I was utterly unable to defend myself, my rifle and pistols back with my saddle, a great precipice on three sides of me and that band of Indians in front. To jump over the cliff would be certain death; to rush upon the Indians unarmed and single-handed equally as certain in result; and if I remained where I stood it would be only a matter of a few moments before they would advance and kill me.

"I never was worse scared in my life. My blood seemed to freeze in my veins, and my long hair stood up like a ship's masts. To me it seemed there was absolutely no escape from sure and terrible death.

"I observed that the Indians were holding a discussion among themselves, and soon saw them drawing lots. I at once divined their purpose. They had discovered that I was entirely unarmed, and were drawing lots to see which one should advance and dispatch me with a knife. The lot fell on a stalwart warrior with a hideously painted face, and with a long knife in his hand he advanced toward me.

"If ever man made good time in reeling off a prayer, I did just then. I think I must have beat the record by several points. I thought I knew that I must die, but just when I was about to give up in despair a cold calmness came over me, and I resolved that the fiend should not murder me without a struggle. When he got near me I sprang upon him with the ferocity of a tiger, and we were soon engaged in a desperate hand-to-hand struggle. The savage band stood quietly enjoying the sport, for they knew I had no weapon.

"During the struggle I observed to my horror that we were nearing the edge of the cliff, and almost before I could realize it the savage grasped me by my long hair, bent me backward and over we went down, down to certain death on the rocks below!"

"And you fell on top of the Indian and escaped?"

"No; the Indian fell on top of me, with fingers still locked in my hair, and over and over we rolled, clear across the room."

"The room!"

"Yes, the bed-room. You see, it was an ugly dream, and in my desperation I had grabbed my wife and she retaliated by entwining her fingers in my hair. In our desperate struggle we rolled out of bed, and after I awoke my wife held on with her death-like grip until I explained. Then we both laughed until the echoes stirred up the whole Rio Grande valley, forgave each other and went back to bed. That was the most desperate fight in which I ever took a hand, but I have been in far more dangerous ones."

Ozone.

The curious substance known as ozone, the nature of which was so long a mystery, and about which so many conflicting hypotheses have been devised, is now, says the Lancet, becoming well known to us. Ozone is a denser form of oxygen. Its specific gravity is 24, that of common oxygen being 16, and that of hydrogen 1. It is highly probable that its molecules contain three similar oxygen atoms. In the concentrated state it is a powerful irritant poison, and is very unstable, decomposing with explosion and with evolution of heat, and exerting a most powerful action on oxidizable materials. For some time past it has been known that it liquifies under the influence of combined cold and pressure. The liquor is indigo blue, and its vapor, in a tolerably concentrated state, has a color which can only be compared to that of an Italian sky. It is a very dangerous substance to work with.

The Noble Boston Man.

A Boston broker lost a wallet containing $15,000 on the street and a newsboy found it and brought it to the owner. The man struggled with a terrible temptation to be mean and sordid for a moment, and then, forgetting self and casting to the winds his greed of gain as he trampled the temptation under his feet, gave the honest boy permission to go on the Common and play every day. "We can trust you," sobbed the grateful man; "we know that you will keep off the grass." O how often this opportunity to make others happy by a kind word, a gentle smile, or some little act of kindness knocks at our door and we heed it not, until it is too late. O that more people were like the Boston man. (P. S.—They are.)—Burdette, in Brooklyn Eagle.

THE quality of a man's Christianity is tested when he steps on a banana skin.

ONE of the most uncertain of all things is a sure thing—of the future.

Live and Let Live.

When we come to the laws which deal with classes we are apt to think them somehow different in nature from those which deal with individuals, and to attribute to them some mystic power of demanding obedience. We call them inexorable, and so they are. It is also an inexorable law that if we place fire and gunpowder together they will explode. That is why when we do not want an explosion we do not put them together. Now, what is the inexorable economic law about cheap buying? What, in other words, will be the inevitable consequences if we buy in the cheapest market? The law is this: Where buyers give the lowest price they can employers will try to produce at the lowest price they can, and the wages of the worker will tend to the lowest point at which it is possible for him to live. And the desire to take much and to give little, upon which this law rests, is a deeply-rooted principle of human nature. That is the very reason why we are bound to guard against it, in ourselves and in others, for ourselves and for others. But this desire is not the only element of our nature, and it is controlled in scores of instances already by other motives. We do not, for instance, give the least we can and take the most we can from our domestic servants. A gradual change in public opinion has made us feel it so shocking that it would be virtually impossible to starve or to maltreat a servant under our own roof. We could not endure to see our housemaid shivering in rags or pinched with manifest hunger. Moreover, public feeling would make it a disgrace to do so. Yet many a lady who would be horrified at the notion of keeping her servant short of food keeps her charwoman short of it by paying her no more than eighteen pence a day. The charwoman who gets five days' work in every week is an exceptionally fortunate woman; but the lady who employs her does not see with her own eyes what it means never to earn more than seven and sixpence per week, and pays at that rate without self-reproach. Human feeling has so far softened that we cannot bear to witness suffering; we are even advancing to the point of feeling pain when the existence of unseen suffering is brought home to us; but we have not yet come so far as to be unable to forget the existence of suffering. But surely it is not very Utopian to hope that sympathy may go on developing side by side with the growing desire for justice to all men until it forms an effective check upon the savage instinct to take as much as we can. There are already some individuals in whom this point has been reached.—Longman's Magazine.

Bears in the Rockies.

There is among western men much controversy as to the various kinds of bear inhabiting our western Alps, but the number of those who, from personal observation, are capable of forming an opinion is very small. In the first place, for all the sanguinary talk around the stove, there are not a great many men who have made a practice of hunting bear at all. One such incident as that which occurred two years ago in the Big Horn scares a good many. A poor fellow there came on a bear, a small cinnamon, feeding on an elk he had killed. He fired and wounded it; the bear retreated and he followed. Coming up with it, again he fired, when the bear charged him. Trying to reload (he used, I heard, a single-shot Sharp rifle), the extractor came off the empty shell, and, of course, he was defenceless. He evidently drew his knife and used it desperately; for when they found him the bear lay near him, dead, with many knife wounds in it, but it had killed him first. In short, both on account of the danger and by reason of the great difficulty in seeing them, it scarcely pays to hunt bears alone.

There are comparatively few men, I say, whose opinion is worth much, and some of these seem to have an idea that, for the credit of the mountain-land they love, they are bound to people it with as many different species of bear as they can. Now, as a matter of fact, I believe that almost all the bears ranging in the Rocky Mountains occasionally breed together; certainly, brown and black sometimes do. Our party once shot a black bear with a large brown cross, extending from the tail to back of head and down each shoulder. Just as certainly the brown and grizzly on occasions intermarry. My hunter assures me he has shot gray cubs with a brown sow. I may be wrong, but I cannot myself see any difference sufficiently marked to warrant the idea that the cinnamon bear of the Rockies is not the coarser, larger brown bear, the result of some crossing between the grizzly and the brown.

Then, some men insist that among the gray bear there are no less than three distinct varieties—silvertip, roach-back, and grizzly. As I have said before, I cannot say anything about the California grizzly, though I do not think, from skins I have examined, he differs materially from his neighbor of the mountain; but as to these differences of color indicating a distinct variety, I cannot believe it.—Scribner's

Plenty of Time.

A dude bound from Chicago to Omaha, took passage on the Rock Island road, and some minutes after the train stopped at Joliet, approaching the conductor remarked:

"Ah, say, conductor; is there time for a fellow to stop off and take dinner, you know?"

"Plenty of time," said the conductor; all the time you want, you know."

The dude started for a restaurant, and a few seconds later the conductor gave the signal for the train to pull out of the station.

The dude was entirely taken aback, when he returned to the depot and found that the train had gone. He made his grievance known to the ticket agent, saying:

"That biawsted conductor, you know, assured me there was plenty of time to get dinner, you know."

"I should say there was," returned the agent. "It'll be nine hours before the next train, on the Omaha route, and a man who can't eat enough to satisfy him in nine hours, must be an everlastingly big hog!"—Sunday National.

Purity of the Mid-Atlantic Air.

The purity of the mid-Atlantic air has been demonstrated by Prof. F. S. Dennis, of New York, by means of capsules of sterilized gelatine, which were exposed to it on the promenade deck, where there was free circulation of the atmosphere. In ten days a few points of infection were developed. When exposed in one of the state-rooms over 500 points of infection were developed within eighteen hours. But when a capsule was exposed over the bow of the ship it was found to be entirely untouched. The experiments show how pure was the mid-ocean air outside the inclosed spaces of the vessel.

PITH AND POINT.

THE sculler should be like the oyster, quite at home in his shell.

THE more reckless a ship captain is the more wrecks he is apt to have.

WHICH is the best of the four seasons for arithmetic? The summer.

IT'S a happy woman who can select her new bonnet on first sight.—Cincinnati Telegram.

WHEN trousers show signs of bagging at the knees it begins to be hard to pay for them.—Puck.

"BLESSED be the tie that binds," was never sung by the man who was going to be hung.—Carl Pretzel.

MARYLAND produces a man so old that he can remember when the earth was flat.—Alta Californian.

The June bug disappears in June,
The lightning-bug in May,
The bed-bug takes his bonnet off,
And says, "I've come to stay."

A SUBSCRIBER asks: "What causes ring-worms?" We do not know positively, but suspect that ring-worms are caused by the worms going into politics.—Newman Independent.

UNTIL once with a picnic party we stumbled over a wasps' nest we had never fully grasped all the outlying and circumjacent wisdom of the old saying that nothing runs like a woman stung.

THE man who raised a cabbage head has done more good than all the metaphysicians in the world," observed Professor Bronson. "Then," observed Professor Jones, "your mother ought to have the premium."

HUSBAND—Wife, hand me out my Sunday coat.—Wife—But, my dear, this is not Sunday; it is only Saturday. "I know it's only Saturday, but I'm going to attend a fashionable dinner, and it will be Sunday before I get back."—Texas Siftings.

STRANGER (in law office): I want to see Mr. —er— the gentleman with the red beard who usually sits at that desk by the window. Intelligent Lawyer's Clerk—Well, that gentleman's gone for the day, sir; but there's a gentleman with a long white beard who'll be back directly.

A VERMONTER, attending a prayer-meeting in Massachusetts, heard an elderly gentleman express his feelings in the following manner: "And we should all, my very dear friends, bless the Lord that we were not born in Africa or Vermont, nor any other dark corner of the earth."

OMAHA Girl—What! Art at funerals? Boston Girl—Yes, indeed. Hand painted coffins are all the style in Boston now. Some of the finest designs are most gloriously beautiful. "Beautiful!" "Distractingly. It is all we can do to keep people from committing suicide."—Omaha World.

"TERRIBLE storm that, last evening, George." "Didn't hear it, old man." "Didn't hear it? Man alive, it thundered fit to wake the dead!" "Ha, I thought I saw lightning, but I didn't hear any thunder. An old schoolmate of my wife's is visiting her and they haven't seen each other for ten years."—Burdette.

A SON of the Emerald Isle meeting a countryman whose face was not perfectly remembered, after saluting him most cordially, inquired his name. "Walsh," was the answer. "Walsh, Walsh," responded the Paddy, "are yo not from Cork? I know two ould maids there of that name. Was ayther of them yer mother?"

"BY the way," inquired the scholarly visitor, "I suppose you are well supplied with light literature, Mrs. Beanblower; have you on your shelves Arnold's 'Light of Asia?'" "Wall, no, Miss Vassarine, I don't b'leeve I have. Since Matilda Jerusha came so near being blown up with camphene ten years ago, Mr. Beanblower he's set his foot down flat agin any of them fool killers. I know well enough there ain't a drop of 'Light of Asia' in the house. You see we confine ourselves entirely to taller candles and kerosene, and Dan'l says them ain't no more dangerous than sperm ile, and they come a tarnal sight cheaper."—Carl Pretzel's National.

The Improvement of City Government.

If popular government and universal suffrage are to have any real meaning, the people must be placed in a position to know what is going on; whereas all our present arrangements, whether by the secrecy of committee-rooms, or by that of executive officials, who never appear before the public at all, are such that the people never know anything of that with respect to which they are yet to judge and to decide. In the New England town-meeting, the selectmen appear once or twice a year before the whole assembly of the inhabitants, and are cross-questioned by individuals. The test is so severe, and the judgment follows so swiftly at the elections, that corruption and even political intrigue are almost unknown. When a city becomes too large for such a meeting, the change is made to a city government, with one or two representative councils. In theory these councils should do the work of the town meeting—that is, watch the course of administration, enforce responsibility, and keep the people informed. In practice, they get possession of a large part of the administration, break up and destroy responsibility, and effectually conceal both their own doings and those of the executive. The offset and safeguard in entrusting extensive powers to a mayor is in providing a tribunal before which he and his agents may promptly, easily, and continuously be held to public account. If a body of one or two hundred men from all parts of New York were to assemble, say once a month, being debarred by law from any interference with administration, having no power to dictate any action or to vote any appropriation except upon proposal of the executive, but with full power of suggestion, of criticism, and of veto; if the mayor and his chief officials were to appear publicly before this body at each session to submit their plans, answer questions, and ask for votes of money, the people would be perfectly able to judge of the character and actions of their servants, and to express their opinions at the polls. Then, and not till then, can we hold universal suffrage responsible for failures of government.—Gamaliel Bradford, in Scribner's Magazine.

Paying His Own Way.

One of the boys at the Bryan, Texas, agricultural and mechanical college has been paying his own way by working on a farm. A few weeks ago he found that he must abandon his duties for a time or run in debt. Some of the other boys learned of the situation, put their heads and pocket-books together, raised $100 and loaned it to him for six years without interest. They also voted that the money, when repaid, should be left with the treasurer of the college as a permanent loaning fund for use in similar cases.—Cleveland Leader.

IN FEAR OF IMMINENT DEATH.

A Great Russian Novelist's Description of a Dying Man's Thoughts.

[illegible]

form and I may get well. Perhaps Mikhailoff alone will be killed and later I will tell how we were close together and how I was covered with his blood. No, no; it is nearer me; it will be I!" Then he remembered the twelve rubles he owed Mikhailoff and another debt left at Petersburg, which ought to have been paid long ago. A Bohemian air that he sang the evening before came to his mind. He also saw in his imagination the lady he was in love with in her lilac trimmed bonnet; the man who had insulted him five years before, and whom he had never taken vengeance on. But in the midst of these and many other souvenirs the present feeling—the expectation of death—did not leave him. "Perhaps it isn't going to explode!" he thought, and was on the point of opening his eyes with desperate boldness. But at this instant a red fire struck his eyeballs through the closed lids, something hit him in the middle of the chest with a terrible crash. He ran forward at random, entangled his feet in his sword, stumbled, and fell on his side. "God be praised, I am only bruised." This was his first thought, and he wanted to feel of his breast, but his hands seemed as if they were tied. A vise gripped his head, soldiers ran before his eyes, and he mechanically counted them: "One, two, three soldiers, and, besides, an officer who is losing his cloak!" A new light flashed; he wondered what had fired. Was it a mortar or a cannon? Doubtless a cannon. Another shot, more soldiers—five, six, seven. They passed in front of him, and suddenly he became terribly afraid of being crushed by them. He wanted to cry out, to say that he was bruised, but his lips were dry, his tongue was glued to the roof of his mouth. He had a burning thirst. He felt that his breast was damp, and the sensation of this moisture made him think of water. He would have liked to drink that which drenched him. "I must have knocked the skin off in falling," he said to himself, more and more frightened at the idea of being crushed by the soldiers who were running in crowds before him. He tried again to cry out "Take me!" but instead of that he uttered a groan so terrible that he was frightened at it himself. Then red sparks danced before his eyes—it seemed as if the soldiers were piling stones on him. The sparks danced more rapidly, the stones piled on him stilled him more and more. He stretched himself out; he ceased to see, to hear, to think, to feel. He had been killed instantly by a piece of shell striking him full in the breast.

The Last Place on the Earth.

A visitor describes Bruni as perhaps "the last place on the face of the earth;" and it is, perhaps, not accusing the world of too great geographical ignorance to say that there are not a hundred people in Britain who ever heard of it, though it is the capital of a kingdom. The whole city is built on piles—in the usual Malay fashion—over the river or creek, which here expands in broad shallows. This system is very convenient for the lazy inhabitants, who simply raise the flimsy bamboo floor and shoot all rubbish into the river beneath. It is also handy for those ladies who wish a flirtation without the risk of absenting themselves. The suitor paddles up under the house, when the signal of a white flag hung out informs him that the coast is clear; occasionally elopements are effected by the same means. All locomotion in Bruni is effected by means of canoes—the gondolas of the city—and there is a market held, in which the shops are goods-laden praus and canoes. There is not a path outside the city in any direction. On every side is trackless jungle. How the people all manage to live is a mystery, for a little rice will suffice a Malay for a whole week. One might be driven to suppose that, like the Scilly Islanders, they subsist by washing each other's clothes; but the general dinginess of the cotton garments forbids this hypothesis. The Chinese are the chief traders in the city, and though roguish, and often worse, they are infinitely the best class of the inhabitant—energetic, reasonable, liberal in their household arrangements, and altogether different personages from their countrymen at home. Many of them are intermarrying with the natives, and as a result of these marriages a new race is arising in Borneo, and other of the Malay Islands, though there are grounds for believing that at an earlier date there were Chinese colonies as far south as the Malay Archipelago. But so bad is the government that even the patient Celestials find it difficult to live in Bruni. Crime, if committed by the relations or followers of a high noble, is unpunished, as no one will act against him for fear of the enmity of his chief. Not long ago a noted thief lived quite unpunished in the city, and was even received in "good society," though his character was perfectly well known. When in want of funds he made visits of inspection to the different shops, where he was treated with a kind of "familiar deference," though for days afterwards the Chinese lived in a state of nervous suspense until the coup came off.

John Adams to His Wife.

John Adams, in one of his letters to his wife, made these remarks concerning woman's larger destiny and duties: "Your mother had a clear and penetrating understanding and a profound judgment, as well as an honest, a friendly, and a charitable heart. There is one thing, however, which you will forgive me if I hint it to you. Let me ask you rather if you are not of my opinion? Were not her talents and

[illegible]

Soda Water.

[illegible]

and foam that attend the mixing in water of carbonate of soda and tartaric acid. As the term "soda" is applied both to the fountain and to the drink issuing from it, one naturally supposes that there is soda in the foaming fluid he is taking.

It is not so, however. The water is charged with carbonic acid, and is flavored and sweetened with some one of the various syrups. The carbonic acid gas is forced into water with a pressure of 180 pounds to the square inch, and it is the escape of this gas when the faucet is turned and the water flows into the tumbler that causes the foaming.

The gas was formerly obtained from carbonate of soda, and hence the present name, which still clings to it; but it is now obtained from marble, which is a carbonate of lime. Marble is simply lime and carbonic acid chemically combined. The union is a weak one. Sulphuric acid has a much stronger affinity for the lime than the carbonic acid has, and upon being poured on powdered marble, releases the carbonic acid, which is then absorbed by the water. It makes no difference with the drink whether the carbonic acid is obtained from soda or marble, since nothing but the acid passes into the water.

In and in the neighborhood of large cities the sellers of soda-water do not charge their own fountains. It is done for them at large central establishments.

The question has been put to us if soda-water is wholesome. Almost any acidulated drink is pleasant in summer, and it often meets a real need of the system. Probably carbonated water is as wholesome as any.

We should advise less of the syrup than is commonly taken, partly because it is apt not to be pure, and partly because, even if pure, it is not very good for the stomach. "Plain soda" is better than soda with syrup, and, after a little time, quite as pleasant as that.

We believe that care is taken to have the water pure, and to keep the apparatus free from corrosive matter, and when this is done no harm is likely to result from a moderate resort to the fountain.—Companion.

A Racing Stable.

For centuries past racing has been styled a royal pastime, and a right costly one it is at that. When at the close of a season, the statement is made that a certain stable has captured $100,000 in stakes and purses, the idea prevails that all of the methods of gaining money this must be the most delightful and exciting of its class. But as the French axiom runs, there is a reverse side to the picture, and in many cases with somber colors, owing to the vast sums that are required to carry on a large establishment of thoroughbreds. Neither in Europe nor in this country can a case be mentioned where racing has yielded handsome returns when established on a grand scale and when entries are made in the principal stakes and purses throughout the country. This is the reason why the owners of such establishments are often obliged to back their horses in the books in order to balance their accounts at the end of the season.

Lord Falmouth, who is now the largest winner on the English turf, has often remarked that the keeping of more than a dozen horses in training simply meant money thrown away, and large stables in this country invariably met with the same experience.

Owing to the keen competition for thoroughbreds of high degree, the first cost of mounting an establishment is a very important item in the required expenditure, running on an average from $1,500 to $2,000 a head as yearlings. Next come the training expenses, about $5 a week; jockey's fees from $10,000 to $15,000 a year; then the entries to various stakes at all the racing centers, and lastly, the traveling expenses, which are very heavy, especially for stables that are winterelon this coast.

It is thus safe to say that such racing establishments as those of Haggin or the Dwyer Brothers cost annually from $70,000 to $100,000, counting merely the interest on the money expended in the purchase of stock.

There is also a constant danger from epidemic diseases in a large establishment, as one horse suffering from cold or influenza will often give the complaint to all his companions, and this, in the midst of a campaign, means almost an irreparable loss. Then, from some unknown cause, a stable gets out of luck and form, and not a horse can be brought to the post in proper condition.—San Francisco Chronicle.

He Had Forgotten His Own Name.

Alderman Allen sat in his chair on his magisterial dais busily engaged making a docket entry. There entered a couple, a young man and woman. The Alderman looked up inquiringly, and the young man said:

"We've come to get married, sur."

"Very good," remarked the magistrate, "what is your name?"

"Begorrah, I forgit," said the groom, with a look of horror on his face.

"As you are a son of your father perhaps by thinking of his name you can remember yours," suggested the Alderman.

"Bedad, I have it! Moike McShane, Your Honor, an' its the furst toime iver I forgot my own name."

"Then Mike and his bride were made one, the Alderman jocosely suggesting that he was doing a wise thing getting married, as he could consult his wife when he happened to forget who he was.—Chester Times.

[illegible]

ARE BLINDERS NECESSARY?

A Question That Concerns the Comfort of Man's Best Friend.

[illegible]

Early the next morning came a knock at the door of the Humane Society office, and when Mr. Thrall looked up there stood the man beaming with satisfaction.

"Top o' the morin' to ye! An' will ye step out an' take a sight at him, if ye please?"

Mr. Thrall went outside, and there was the horse, also satisfied, for he had had an extra feed and rub down, and his blinders had been cut off.

Mr. Thrall says that he frequently meets with this readiness of comprehension and willingness to act humanely as soon as the slightest intimation of unkindness is given, which proves that a great many well-meaning persons are cruel through thoughtlessness, and as soon as their attention is called to their mistakes they are thankful to remedy them. We hope there will soon be a fresh confirmation of this undoubted fact in the large number of "emancipated horses" which will be seen on our streets rejoicing at their freedom from unnecessary restraint. Already many horses are driven without checks, many more without blinders: but the number of those that are relieved in both directions is still comparatively small. We wish all persons who have adopted this humane method of driving, and all who may do so now that the subject has been brought to their consideration to know that there is a tide of sympathy and approval flowing toward them from every direction—a tide of humane feeling, of love for those lower orders of intelligence which it is the duty of man, supreme in power and will, to develop and protect.

Rice-Throwing at Weddings.

Says the Chinese Times: In the days of the Shang dynasty, some 1,500 years before Christ, there lived in the Province of Shansi a most famous sorcerer called Chao. It happened one day that a Mr. P'ang came to consult the oracle, and Chao, having divined by means of the tortoise diagram, informed the trembling P'ang that he had but six days to live. Now, however much we may trust the sagacity and skill of our family physician, we may be excused if, in a matter of life and death, we call in a second doctor for consultation, and in such a strait it is not to be wondered at that P'ang should resort to another source to make sure that there was no mistake. To the fair Peachblossom he went, a young lady who had acquired some reputation as a sorceress, and to the tender feminine heart unfolded the story of his woe. Her divination yielded the same result as Chao's; in six days P'ang should die, unless, by the exercise of her magical powers, she could avert the catastrophe. Her efforts were successful, and on the seventh day great was Chao's astonishment, and still greater his mortification and rage, when he met P'ang taking his evening stroll, and learned that there lived a greater magician than he. The story would soon get about, and, unless he could put an end to his fair rival's existence, his reputation would be ruined. And this is how Chao plotted against the life of Peachblossom. He sent a go-between to Peachblossom's parents to inquire if their daughter was still unmarried, and, receiving a reply in the affirmative, he befooled the simple parents into believing that he had a son who was seeking a wife, and ultimately he induced them to engage Peachblossom to him in marriage. The marriage-cards were duly exchanged; but the crafty Chao had chosen the most unlucky day he could select for the wedding, the day when the "Golden Pheasant" was in the ascendant. Surely as the bride entered the red chair the spirit bird would destroy her with his powerful beak. But the wise Peachblossom knew all these things and feared not. "I will go," she said; "I will fight and defeat him." When the wedding morning came she gave directions to have rice thrown out at the door, which the spirit bird seeing made haste to devour, and while his attention was thus occupied, Peachblossom stepped into the bridal chair and passed on her way unharmed. And now the ingenuous reader knows why he throws rice after the bride.

Spurious Archæological Artists.

A regular gang of manufacturers of spurious archæological articles has recently been convicted in the Canton of Neufchatel, whose scholars had long complained of the frauds practiced on hunters for relics of pile dwellings. One of the accused had invented the "horn age" for the benefit of an enthusiastic antiquarian, and dug out of him a number of skillfully prepared articles of horn. Another fraud consisted of forging the signature of the curator of the Archæological Museum of Neufchatel, and testifying thereby to the genuineness of a shield. The forgers were sentenced to terms of imprisonment varying from two days to half a year.—Home Journal.

Infant Theology.

A small boy not far from Boston was guilty of some outrageous mischief, which he performed alone in a closed room, but which was quickly brought to his door. When his mother remonstrated with the youth he met her reproof by the bold assertion:

"You didn't see me do it."

"No," she replied, solemnly, "but God did."

"Well," the urchin retorted with an air of contemptuous superiority, "I guess God ain't going round giving away all he see in this house."—Boston Courier.

THE only good thing that the daily newspaper artist can draw is his

[illegible]

HUNTING-LEOPARDS OF INDIA.

How the Animals Are Captured and How They Secure Their Prey.

A writer in the London Graphic thus describes hunting with the cheetah in India: The leopard is brought out in a bullock-cart, with a kind of mask that covers its eyes. A chain also is slipped round its loins. It is quite tame, knowing its keeper, and anticipating the sport. The cart drives along, accompanied by the sportsmen, to a spot which the herd of antelopes will presently cross in their course. The does all go first; the black buck—the pride of the flock—invariably brings up the rear. The motive is ascribed to jealousy and a desire to keep his females all under his eye. Whatever the motive, the position is fatal to him. At the proper moment the hood is slipped off the cheetah's head and his prey is shown him. Unlike the dog, he seems to hunt by sight and not by scent. He looks keenly about him for one moment and then drops off the cart, generally at the off side, using it for cover as long as he can. If there are trees, or any rising ground, he is quick to take advantage of them, and then makes his burst upon his quarry. He almost invariably chooses the buck, and he runs him down by sheer fleetness. This is the meaning of those dog-like claws and the great length of limb that makes him look almost out of proportion in the lion-house at the Regent's Park, where all the other cat-like creatures—tigers, leopards, jaguars, pumas and lions—are short-legged and crouching. The speed is scarcely to be credited; there is no English greyhound that can run down a doe antelope. But it is sorry sport at best—if, indeed, it can be called sport at all. The cheetah springs on the neck of the buck, strangles it, and laps up its blood. The huntsman comes up, cuts the throat of the antelope, and, letting the blood flow into a wooden cup, gives it to the cheetah, watching his time when the creature is gorged to slip the hood over his eyes and lead him back to the cart.

The natives give their account of the animal much more picturesquely, and the native accounts are still to be found in the natural history books. In a wild state the cheetah feeds only every three days, gorging itself on these occasions, and lying comatose during the intervals. Our specimen at the zoological gardens is pretty active all day, and falls in with the regulation hours as to food with great docility, and even with zest. In their pursuit of prey they are social, and in that way differ from most of the other carnivora. Two or three of them will meet at night, and go forth on their hunting expeditions in company. It is by ascertaining their places of tryst that the natives are able to capture them. It is very often by the trunk of a tree, which is found all scratched and barked by their claws. Nooses and meshes are driven into the ground. The leopards come bounding over the grass, and are soon caught. A blanket is flung over the head, and the creature is tied and carried off. One of the favorite theories of the natives, which is repeated over and over again in the books, is that when the trained leopard misses his stroke he cannot recover his breath quick enough for a second bound, and the herd passes from him in safety. Then he gets extremely agitated, runs up and down till his temper subsides, and is at last carted and again let slip on fresh quarry. It is a picturesque kind of notion, but most men who have seen antelope-hunting in the East will be able to qualify its application. The leopard does not show this temper to any extreme extent, and, in fact, is making another bound on his prey before the antelope can get off or the temper can rise.

Suddenly Enriched.

Several years anterior to 1858 I had an assistant editor by the name of Rockett, Frank Y. Rockett, the Y. standing for Yorick, I suppose, though if it did not, it ought to have done so, since he was a fellow of infinite jest, a very correct writer, a poet of much originality, and a gentleman of high tone and high principles, but sensitive and fastidious as a woman. He was considerably older than myself, and when the war came, having always been a strong Whig and Union man, he remained in Memphis after its conquest by the Federals and took no part in the bloody "wrassel" between the North and South. His health was bad; he was utterly unfit for the hardships of a soldier's life, and though anything but a coward, fighting was not his forte. While the war was going on—as he afterward told me—he found it a desperate struggle to live for some months, although, being a bachelor always, he had no one to provide for but himself. Indeed, he was only rescued from actual beggary by one of those accidents or special providences—call it what you will—which you would not be able to guess in a thousand trials.

The city was crowded with Federal soldiers, nearly all of Grant's army being there to be paid off. He said that on the morning after the first batch was paid off he rose very early, as was his habit, and was sauntering down the main street, immediately after the dawn of day, without a cent in his pocket; lean, ragged, and hungry, and not knowing how or where to get his next food. When in the neighborhood of the Paymaster's office, and still nearer an all-night saloon, he spied on the sidewalk a number of wads of green paper, which, on picking up, he found to be greenbacks. That morning his treasure trove amounted to nearly $300.

This money, of course, had been dropped by the drunken soldiers paid off the day before, while rowing and fighting among themselves the night before. Destitution was, of course, next to impossible, and, said Rockett, under the circumstances, hardly to be thought of by a Southerner; at any rate he confiscated it as contraband of war. From this time on to the close of the war Rockett said he lived like a fighting cock and dressed like Solomon in all his glory. The only toiling and spinning he did was to follow the example of the early bird and give the main street and front sidewalk a close inspection before any one else was stirring every morning after army payday. He rarely failed to pick up less than $100 and sometimes his findings were over $300.—Exchange.

His Mamma Could Beat Them All.

It is related that one of the little archduchesses of Austria was taken to a circus, where nothing amazed her and very little pleased her. On her return home the Emperor asked how she had enjoyed the performance. "Oh, very well," the young lady replied, "only mamma does everything the circus women did a great deal better. Why, I have seen her jump through six hoops." It appears that this is really true, and that the Empress has on more than one occasion given a strictly private entertainment to her intimates in which she has surprised them with feats rivalling those of the most skilled circus-riders.—Boston Journal.

[illegible]

The Indian Fowl.

The Indian fowl must be caught before he is cooked. A fowl with weak intellect, or a young and silly bird, may be inveigled by a handful of corn and fall an easy prey, but the veteran who has escaped many a design on his life is quite another thing. He will eat as much corn as the khansamah likes to give him, but he will keep his weather eye open and not get within reach. Then the khansamah girds up his loins and calls up his whole establishment and prepares for a hunt. And a hunt it will be. The veteran fowl has the fleetness of a greyhound and will give good sport. Avoiding the grasp of the bawarchee (cook), he takes refuge under the raised floor of the bungalow. Dislodged thence, he dodges between his would-be captors and goes sailing away under the compound railing, over the ditch, on to the road. This is an unlucky move. A pariah dog which has been sleeping on a dust heap on the road, oblivious of fleas and mange, and dreaming perchance of the last bit of carrion he finished half an hour before, wakes up and gives chase. In trying to escape this new enemy, the luckless bird flies into the clutches of the others. His fate is sealed; and shortly after he is dished up. As you survey him with a pitying eye that such pluck should be sacrificed for the table, for he is a most tasteless bird, you cannot but wonder at the enormous amount of bone and muscles he exhibits. In fact, he and his brothers seem to get fat. They will lead a lazy life and one of content, from a fowl's point of view, but they will not get fat. In this they are unanimous. Many are the allusions the hungry traveler makes on this peculiarity of the bird. The khansamah is, however, proof to this. So he smiles meekly and holds his peace.

The Indian fowl has periods of excitement to ruffle his otherwise smooth career. You are awakened early in the morning by a tremendous clucking. You are sleepy, and as you turn over dreamily, think perhaps a jackal has got into the hen house. This is explained later on, however, by the presence of an egg cup on the breakfast table. Out of the bottom of this you scoop an egg the size of a marble and eat it at one gulp. Alas for the motherly expectations thus cut short! But the Indian fowl is a philosophical bird, and does not make a fuss over the inevitable. She will go through the same experience day after day until she is consigned to the pot, and will appear at your table the same lean, muscular bird as the hundreds you have eaten before.

Honor to the Indian fowl and may its shadow never grow less! Some say we keep India by the sword, but it is our firm belief that if all the fowls emigrated from here to-morrow we should have to accompany them and leave the land to the Bengalee Baboo and the Russian.—Chambers' Journal.

A Maine Pedagogue.

Henry H. Hobbs, of Norway, years ago, was a school teacher of note. He was very successful, and always preferred to be the "master" in districts where they were wont to have trouble. His popularity arose as much from his free use of the rod as his knowledge of the three R's. He often alludes with pride to the fact that he "was never lugged out of the school-house." On one occasion he was kicked just as he was leaving the house at noon by a scholar whom he had punished. He coolly said nothing, but, getting his dinner, he opened the school in the afternoon as if nothing had happened. He saw several of the larger boys exchange significant glances, and he at once ordered some half dozen of them onto the floor. Thinking that they all combined were enough for him, they obeyed.

"Now," says Hobbs, "I do not know which one of you kicked me, but I shall be sure to get the right one, for I am going to lick you all. I shall begin at one end and go all through the class. And he is a mean, dirty fellow who will see others whipped for anything he alone is guilty of. If there is any man to him he will speak out. Step forward, sir!"

This was said to the boy nearest to him. As the rod descended the guilty one spoke out, "Master, I am the one."

"I thought so," was the reply.

The others took their seats, and the offender was punished.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

The Beau Ideal of a Family Medicine.

A remedy which promptly and completely relieves ailments of such common occurrence as indigestion, constipation, biliousness, and disorders of a malarial type, is assuredly the beau ideal of a family medicine. Such is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is not only capable of eradicating these complaints, but also counteracting a tendency to kidney troubles, rheumatism, and premature decadence of stamina. Taking it "all round," as the phrase is, there is probably not in existence so useful, effective, and agreeable a household panacea as the Bitters. Nor is it less highly esteemed by the medical profession than by the families of America. Numberless testimonials from professional sources of irrefragable authenticity evince its merit. The demand for it abroad, no less than in the land of its discovery, is certainly increasing, time and experience of its beneficent effects confirming the high opinion originally formed of it.

A Physical Phenomenon.

A curious "dead space" in chemical reactions has formed the subject of a communication by Herr Siebreich to the Berlin Academy. In this space the reaction going on in other parts of a uniformly mixed liquid does not occur, or occurs late or in less degree. In the test tube decomposition of chloral hydrate by sodium carbonate—yielding chloroform—surface layer of an eighth of an inch or less remains clear, while immediately below the solution is turbid from minute globules of chloroform. Contact with air is essential to the formation of dead space, and when the air is removed the reactions are uniform throughout.—Arkansaw Traveler.

THE first Methodist bishop in the United States was Thomas Coke, sent over by Wesley, and arriving in New York in 1784.

THE first Czar of Russia was Fedor, in 1585, and there have been twenty since.

"Not Bulk, but Business!"

Is the way a Western man put it in expressing to a friend his complete satisfaction in the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. So small and yet so effectual, they bid fair to supplant entirely the old-style pill. An ever-ready remedy for Sick and Bilious Headache, Biliousness, Constipation and all blood disorders. Mild in action, wonderful in effect! Put up in vials, convenient to carry. Their use attended with no discomfort! These sterling merits account for their great popularity.

IT isn't called high mass on account of steep pew rents; that is a mistaken idea.—Merchant Traveler.

A Fashionable Nile Town.

What a sight is Luxor! Turn the head as you will, you are certain to see some picture altogether different from anything you had previously beheld, for Luxor is "the metropolis of Thebes." Here the strange people of all quarters congregate. It may be considered the fashionable town of the modern Nile. The majority of sight-seers terminate their journey there, and so the natives make the most of their opportunities to sell their wares. The streets are of never-ending interest. One gets the impression that Luxor is the busiest mart in the world. Here are Nubian dancers; bead-sellers; sieve-makers; coppersmiths, who beat out their quaint vessels with the hammer; dealers in pottery; marble-cutters who, seated at the doors, let you into the secret of Arab tombstone nomenclature; bean-breakers who, with huge mortars and iron pestles five feet long, stand in rows and crush the beans into a mass for the baker; coffee-breakers, whose method is similar; makers of donkey trappings; shoemakers; decorators of candles for use in the mosque; Korn-sellers; jewelers; money-changers, and—idlers. What a bedlam and a babel they make! And then comes along the jocular street-sprinkler with a skin of water upon his back. As he moves he turns from side to side and scatters the cooling element, strike whom it may.—Scribner's Magazine.

Dangerous Drinks.

A bartender plaintively bewailed the necessity of having to rub congealed drops of sticky beer off the bar. "But if I let them remain," said he, in the tone of one seeking compassion, "they rot the wood."

"They rot the wood, do they?" fiercely repeated a beer bibber. "Then what in the name of common sense does beer do to my stomach?"

Replied the manipulator of drinks: "It is beyond me to tell. Of one thing I am confident, and that is man's stomach is made of cast-iron. Elsewise how could he withstand the fluids he pours into it? Let me show you something." He placed a piece of raw meat on the counter and dropped upon it a small measure of an imported ginger-ale. In five minutes the meat had parted into little pieces as though hacked by a dull knife.—Philadelphia News.

She scolds and frets,
She's full of pets,
She's rarely kind and tender;
The thorn of life
Is a fretful wife—
I wonder what will mend her?

Try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Ten to one, your wife is cross and fretful because she is sick and suffering, and cannot control her nervousness when things go wrong. Make a healthy woman of her and the chances are you will make a cheerful and pleasant one. "Favorite Prescription" is the only remedy for woman's peculiar ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case or money will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper. Large bottles, $1. Six for $5.

AS FOR the ballet-girl, whatever enchantment there may be in viewing her is lent by distance.—London Truth.

Humbug.

Barnum said "the American people like to be humbugged." This may be true in the line of entertainment, but not where life is at stake. A man with consumption, or any lingering disease, looking Death in the face and seeking to evade his awful grasp, does not like to be trifled with. So with confidence we place before our readers Nature's great remedy, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a sure relief for that long train of diseases resulting from impure blood, such as Consumption, Chronic Nasal Catarrh, Liver Complaint, Kidney Disorder, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Scrofula and General Debility. Time-tried and thoroughly tested, it stands without an equal! Any druggist.

THE missing links will arrive when the sausage season opens.

How to Gain Flesh and Strength.

Use after each meal Scott's Emulsion with Hypophosphites. It is as palatable as milk, and easily digested. The rapidity with which delicate people improve with its use is wonderful. Use it and try your weight. As a remedy for Consumption, Throat affections, and Bronchitis, it is unequaled. Please read: "I used Scott's Emulsion in a child eight months old with good results. He gained four pounds in a very short time."—THO. PRIM, M. D., Alabama.

IT'S curious how affection and confection seem to harmonize.

For Bronchial, Asthmatic and Pulmonary Complaints, "Brown's Bronchial Troches" have remarkable curative properties. Sold only in boxes.

IN a Parisian barber-shop: "How shall I cut your hair, sir?" "Without speaking of Gen. Boulanger."

A Popular Thoroughfare.

The Wisconsin Central Line, although a comparatively new factor in the railroad systems of the Northwest, has acquired an enviable popularity. Through careful attention to details, its service is as near perfection as might be looked for. The train attendants seem to regard their trusts as individual property and as a result the public is served par-excellence. The road now runs solid through fast trains between Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Minneapolis with Pullman's best and unequalled dining cars; it also runs through, solid sleepers between Chicago, Ashland, Duluth and the famous mining regions of Northern Wisconsin and Michigan.

SOME men find fault because they are never lucky enough to find anything else.

Purity and Strength

The former in the blood, and the latter throughout the system, are necessary to the enjoyment of perfect health. The best way to secure both is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which expels all impurities from the blood, rouses the kidneys and liver, overcomes that tired feeling, and imparts that freshness to the whole body which makes one feel perfectly well.

"I have taken not quite a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and must say it is one of the best medicines for giving an appetite, purifying the blood, and regulating the digestive organs that I ever heard of." MRS. N. A. STANLEY, Canastota, N. Y.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

This represents a healthy life, Throughout its various scenes.

Just such a life as they enjoy Who use the Smith's Bile Beans.

Smith's BILE BEANS purify the blood, by acting directly and promptly on the Liver, Skin and Kidneys. They consist of a vegetable combination that has no equal in medical science. They cure Constipation, Malaria, and Dyspepsia, and are a safeguard against all forms of fevers, chills and fever, gall stones, and Bright's disease. Send 4 cents postage for a sample package and test the TRUTH of what we say. Price, 25 cents per bottle, mailed to any address, postpaid. DOSE ONE BEAN. Sold by druggists.

The original Photograph, panel size, of this picture sent on receipt of 10c. in stamps. Address, BILE BEANS, St. Louis, Mo.

J. F. SMITH & CO., PROPRIETORS, ST. LOUIS, MO.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER Is The Best Waterproof Coat Ever Made.

None genuine unless stamped with the above trade mark. Don't waste your money on a gum or rubber coat. The FISH BRAND SLICKER is absolutely water and wind proof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. Ask for the "FISH BRAND" slicker and take no other. If your storekeeper does not have the "FISH BRAND" send for descriptive catalogue to A. J. TOWER, 20 Simmons St., Boston, Mass.

KIDDER'S PASTILLES. Sure relief ASTHMA. Price 35 cts. by mail. Stowell & Co. Charlestown, Mass.

Offer No. 173.

FREE!—TO MERCHANTS ONLY. An elegant silver-plated Water Pitcher, frosted and richly carved; height, 13 inches. Address at once, R. W. TANSILL & CO., 55 State street, Chicago.

PREVENT crooked boots and lateral heels by wearing Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners.

PENSIONS to Soldiers and Heirs. L. BINGHAM, Att'y, Washington, D. C.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

GOLD is worth $500 per pound. Pettit's Eye Salve $1,000, but is sold at 25 cents a box by dealers.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till cured. Dr. J. Stephens, Lebanon, Ohio.

PENSIONS Send for Pension Laws to U. S. Claim Agents FITZGERALD & POWELL, Indianapolis, Ind.

FREE By return mail. Full Description Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. MOODY & CO., Cincinnati, O.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

$250 A MONTH. Agents wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PATENTS R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Instructions and opinions as to patentability FREE. 17 years' experience.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $1.50, FREE. Lines not under the horse's feet. Write Brewster Safety Rein Holder Co., Holly, Mich.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PENSIONS All forms may be due. Address MILO B. STEVENS & CO., Metropolitan Blk. Chicago, Ill.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

HOME STUDY. Bookkeeping, Business Forms, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Shorthand, etc., thoroughly taught by mail. Circulars free. BRYANT'S College, Buffalo, N. Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

1,000,000 Ladies Wanted to use our "Magnolia Balm." They [illegible]
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

MUSIC ANY PERSON CAN PLAY the PIANO AND ORGAN without the aid of a teacher by using Soper's Instantaneous Guide to the Keys. No previous knowledge of music whatever required. Send for book of testimonials, FREE. Address SOPER MUSIC CO., Box 1487, NEW YORK, N. Y.

SURE CURE DISCOVERED FOR CATARRH Lauderbach's German Catarrh Remedy
Price $1. Sample free at Druggists. Mailed for 10c. in stamps. THOUSANDS CURED since the discovery of this method of treatment. Every mail brings letters from grateful persons cured. [illegible]
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

DR. BAIRD'S GRANULES Cure Dyspepsia, Malaria, Piles, Heart Disease, Impure Blood, Kidney Disease, Torpid Liver, Habitual Constipation etc. A new principle, a new remedy. Purely Vegetable. A full size Box sent FREE postage prepaid, to any invalid, or their friends sending their address at once. Give account of case, symptoms, etc. Address DR. BAIRD, 157 W. 23d St., N. Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

KIDDER'S DIGESTYLIN A SURE CURE FOR INDIGESTION and DYSPEPSIA.

Over 5,000 Physicians have sent us their approval of DIGESTYLIN, saying that it is the best preparation for Indigestion that they have ever used. We have never heard of a case of Dyspepsia where DIGESTYLIN was taken that was not cured.

FOR CHOLERA INFANTUM.

IT WILL CURE THE MOST AGGRAVATED CASES. IT WILL STOP VOMITING IN PREGNANCY. IT WILL RELIEVE CONSTIPATION.

For Summer Complaints and Chronic Diarrhea, which are the direct results of imperfect digestion, DIGESTYLIN will effect an immediate cure. Take DIGESTYLIN for all pains and disorders of the stomach; they all come from indigestion. Ask your druggist for DIGESTYLIN (price $1 per large bottle). If he does not have it, send one dollar to us and we will send a bottle to you, express prepaid. Do not hesitate to send your money. Our house is reliable. Established twenty-five years.

WM. F. KIDDER & CO., Manufacturing Chemists, 83 John St., N. Y.
MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN

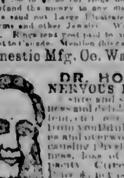
Cures Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Catarrh, Croup, Sore Throat, RHEUMATISM, Lame Back, Stiff Joints, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Wounds, Old Sores and All Aches and Pains.

The many testimonials received by us more than prove all we claim for this valuable remedy. It not only relieves the most severe pains, but It Cures You. That's the Idea! Sold by Druggists. 50 cts. SONG BOOK mailed free. Address WIZARD OIL COMPANY CHICAGO.

A GRAND OFFER! Solid Rolled Gold Rings almost GIVEN AWAY!

Engagement Ring, 10c. Lady's Gold Shield 10c. Fluted Band set with two lovely Blue Turquoise and a Brilliant, 15c. Fluted Band with ornamental cap, Austrian Diamond setting, 15c. Popular Flat Band, Rhine Diamond setting, 25c. Handsome Cameo, 20 cents.

The above cuts represent six of the latest and most popular designs manufactured in the ring line. The prices we name here are special, simply to introduce our goods. We warrant each of the above rings to be made of Solid 18k. Rolled Gold Plate. Other dealers charge from $1.00 to $2.50 for rings not half as good. We will cheerfully refund the money to any dissatisfied customer. With each ring we send our Large Illustrated Catalogue of Watches, Chains, Charms and other Jewelry. We take postage stamps the same as cash. Rings sent post paid to any postoffice in the United States but not to Canada. Mention this paper. Send your address to The Domestic Mfg. Co. Wallingford, Conn.



DR. HOBENSACK'S NERVOUS DEBILITY PILLS. [illegible] Cures Old and Young. [illegible] Send for circular.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, NOV. 9, 1887.

Shreds From The Shirt.

The states have the same constitutional rights to-day which they had when South Carolina seceded. What is the use of arguing that point? —Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.

In that triumphal procession Abraham Lincoln shall not move as the rightful president, but Jefferson Davis, the so-called "traitor" leader of a so-called "lost cause."—From Gen. Jackson's speech at Macon, Ga., Oct. 26, 1887.

"I am like that flag [confederate flag held up in front of him] torn and tattered by storms and old age. I love it for its own sake; I love it for your sake; I love it because it stands as a memento of what your fathers did and hoped that you would do."—Jeff Davis at Macon.

But, if the so-called new south be a base surrender of the old, a false confession—meanly false!—of shame in our past, shame in our sires, shame in our dead, which none but the silliest fool can honestly feel, then, with all of the power given to us by the God of truth; we cry: Avaunt! false south, avaunt!! Rotten trunk upon a cursed root, thy fruit must turn to ashes on the lip.—Gen. Jackson at Macon.

My brother soldiers: I have the infinite pleasure, in your behalf, to welcome to this great state your grand old chieftain. It is his great fortune, after a most eventful life, fraught with stirring scenes and vicissitudes, to look once more upon his countrymen. Mr. Davis can view his career and cannot find upon it one blot or stain. His life has been spent in the service of his country and for his country's liberty.—Gov. Gordon introducing Jeff Davis at Macon.

It was the triumph of this principle of which I spoke in my address. It was for this principle that Mr. Davis fought and against this principle that Mr. Lincoln fought. Mr. Davis represented state sovereignty. Mr. Lincoln stood for a centralized nation. When my prediction comes true, if it should come true, that the true principle of successful government is local rights lodged in local sovereignties, in that triumph Mr. Davis would take precedence by virtue of the triumph of the principle of government for which he fought.—Gen. Jackson's explanation of his Macon speech.

South of Mason and Dixon's line, Jeff Davis seems to be a bigger man than old Cleveland.

Little Benzie county is the first to start the local option procession. She will be the first in the state to vote prohibition under it.

When President Grevy and family returned to Paris a fortnight ago they went from the station to the Elysee by a circuitous route and entered the palace by a back door, fearing hostile demonstrations from the populace.

Western towns with a boom appreciate the power of the press. The people of Tucson, Arizona, buy 8,000 copies of their local paper every month for the purpose of sending it abroad and in addition pay it $200 a month for special "write-ups." The town of Lamar, Col., recently paid the local paper $1,500 for a "write-up."

Gen. Jackson supplements his infamous speech at Macon with a letter to the public in which he firmly plants himself on the doctrine of state's rights as held by Calhoun. His explanation of his speech is as bad as the speech itself. He still maintains that the war didn't settle the question. But don't wave the bloody shirt.

Gov. Gordon of Georgia, is stumping Ohio for the democrats. He came from Macon, where he made an eloquent speech landing to the skies that old arch traitor, Jeff Davis. In the Buckeye state he poses as a "truly loil" man. But the old rebel is on record, both as a union hater and a leading spirit of the Ku Klux Klan. He can't cover his hoof-prints no matter how expert a demagogue he may prove to be. He has come to Ohio as he says to "blast Foraker." He is fooling with a buzz-saw.

"In that triumphal procession Abraham Lincoln shall not move as the rightful president, but Jefferson Davis!" So says that distinguished democrat, Gen. Henry Jackson of Georgia, in speaking of the onward march of the principle for which the rebels fought, and which he says still lives. "And," he also says, "so surely as it moves it shall bring the day of triumph." These are the sentiments of the Calhounaties, who to-day boast of solid democratic south and are in absolute control of the democratic party. But republicans must not wave the bloody shirt.

Northern Michigan News.

D. T. Hunt, a pioneer of Alvance, died at that place recently.

Detroit people are soliciting subscriptions for "Chief Blackbird of Petoskey.

Antrim county claims an increase of 3,500 in population during the last two years.

The Sault Ste. Marie Herald says people of the booming burg have to pay $6 and $7 a cord for wood.

Gladwin county pays her game warden $3 a day, and instructs him to rigidly enforce the game laws.

'Tis said that the powers that be have decided to build the Kalkaska and Elk Rapids railroad next spring.

A brakeman got caught in one of those deadly frogs switching cars at Cadillac lately, and lost an arm and a leg.

C. L. Lockwood, of Petoskey, 64 years old, went up on the roof to look at the chimney, and fell 20 feet, breaking his thigh and two ribs.

James H. Putnam has purchased a half interest in the store of Capt. O. E. Wilbur, of Northport, and hereafter the firm will be known as Wilbur & Putnam.

Boyne Citizen: Ampasi Davis, proprietor of the village dray, skipped out early Monday morning, taking all convenient property with him. Frank Newville mourns his departure several hundred dollars worth, and others are weeping to a less extent.

Mr. Leach left with the Grand Traverse Herald, recently, a sample of the product, this season, of his Walton cranberry marsh. The yield was light this, the first yielding year, but the berries are exceedingly fine, and the undertaking is no longer an experiment.

At Bellaire lately a "grand hunt" was held which yielded forty chipmunks, one partridge, three red squirrels and one man. The latter was shot through the foot with a twenty-two cartridge from a rifle. The hunt was participated in by a number of men and boys.

The St. Ignace Watchman says: Judge C. R. Brown of that city, and Wilson Newton of St. Helena, have purchased the Island of St. Helena, that well-known and beatiful Island at the head of Lake Michigan, from A. P. Newton, of Cheboygan, for a private consideration.

Wm. Cole, a prominent young man of Plymouth, died recently after a four weeks' illness of typho malarial fever, aged 22 years. Mr. Cole was a pitcher and fielder for the Reed City Club of the Northern Michigan League the past season. He was widely known among base ball men throughout the State.

George W. Freeman, long chief clerk in the office of the secretary of state and later executive clerk at the Governor's office and clerk of the board of pardons has resigned, his resignation to take effect January 1. He will be succeeded by Hon. Wm. Crosby of Emmet county, who was formerly deputy secretary of state.

Cheboygan Tribune: George Riggs, formerly of Cheboygan, was one of the victims of the Vernon disaster. Mr. Riggs is the well known engineer, for years employed as engineer on the harbor tugs at this port. He served in the position under Capt. C. J. Kitchen, on the tug boats Eva English and Charles E. Pendell. We hope the report may prove unfounded.

Last week the Traverse Bay Eagle, which was established by Elvin L. Sprague 21 years ago, was sold to A. S. Barry. Mr. Sprague retires from the editorial chair regretted by a wide circle of newspaper friends. The senior editor of this paper helped to remove the Eagle from Elk Rapids to Traverse City twenty years ago this month, at which time he was a compositor on that paper.

Petoskey Democrat: Petoskey is to have a grain elevator, and work will be commenced on the same at once. It will be erected upon the ground now occupied by Connable's oil house. We are not at liberty at present to state full particulars, but this much we can confidently state, that a steam elevator will be erected immediately, and that it will be a great benefit to Petoskey is conceded.

Says the Chicago Lumberman: It is probable that the men, farmers mostly, who sell maple logs in the Charlevoix, Michigan, district, the coming winter, will get higher prices than they did last season. The most extensive maple manufacturing concern in that region did not get enough logs last winter to answer its purpose. The price last winter was $5 a thousand, but this season it will likely be $6.

Bellaire Breeze: With the exceptions of the farm of Ed. Boice, one mile above town, and that of Mr. Sisley, just south, the right of way for the D. C. & E. R. has been secured from the straits of Mackinaw clear through to Bellaire. It is certainly gratifying to know that so many residents of our part of the world are not only willing to afford this projected railroad the little assistance within their power, but are also so thoroughly alive to their own interests. Those who do nothing to help the enterprise, who put some little obstacle in the way of its furtherance, or who demand pay for what is most assuredly to their advantage to give, and then lay back waiting to reap a share of the reward of other men's shrewdness and generosity, do not partake of the true spirit of American patriotism.

Petoskey Record: Last Friday C. Case, professional apiarist, and this fall a honey capitalist, was up Bear Creek in his dug out setting mink traps about two miles this side of Clarion, and five miles south of Petoskey. As he paddled quietly along watching for "sign," he heard a rustling in the bushes on the bank, and looking around he saw a fine two year old bear reared up on his hind feet gathering the berries from the top of a high bush whortleberry only a few steps away. He had his gun lying in the bottom of the canoe, and reaching for it quietly, he sent a ball crashing through bruin's head. He was a fine fat fellow.——Mr. and Mrs. Louis Fasquelle returned from an extended bridal trip on Monday morning. They visited Chicago and the old homestead in Illinois where the childhood of Mrs. Fasquelle was spent, and various other points of interest, finally reaching Ashland, on Lake Superior. There they took the steamer Peerless, and were out in the terrible gale of Sunday, Oct. 23d, the boat being finally compelled to run back for shelter to the Apostle Islands. They have fitted up a suit of rooms in the Clifton House, where they will remain for the winter, Mr. Fasquelle making this the headquarters from which he will supervise the extensive drug trade he has built up in Northern Michigan.

Grand Traverse Herald: Hon. Perry Hannah, of this place, was unanimously elected president of the State Banker's Association, organized at Detroit recently. Hannah, Lay & Co.'s roller process flouring mill at this place is running night and day and is turning out 400 barrels of flour per day. During the year 30,000 barrels are made. Shipments are made mainly to lake ports, during the season of navigation, from Ludington to Sault Ste. Marie, and along the line of the St. Ignace and Marquette road. —— The supreme court has reversed the decision in the case of Balch vs. G. R. & I. R. R., in which the plaintiffs secured $4,000 damages for the death of Mr. Balch, by the cars, at Cadillac, a year or two ago.——Hon. D. C. Leach and wife leave this week for Springfield, Mo., where they will spend the winter, as usual.——The receipts of the Traverse City high school for the month of October, from tuition of foreign pupils, were $212.93.——The chief engineer of the C. & W. M. R. R. Co. has been over the ground, during the past week, between this place and the Manistee river, locating the line of the extension from Baldwin to this place. A corps of surveyors will follow immediately, preparatory to grading the road early in the spring, and completing the road through to Traverse City next season. This is what the officers of the road say.

Kalkaska Leader: Hunters are praying for a tracking snow. Farmers are praying for a continuation of the present good weather. Just now the farmers have their innings.——When you see a farmer with a broad grin and a don't-care-what-comes expression on his face, you can calculate that he is long on potatoes, and in shape to hold them for a good price. ——Nothing now prevents the commencement of the work on the D. C. & E. R. R. but the fact that in a few instances along the line satisfactory arrangements for securing the right of way can not be made. In this county three resident property owners in the country and three in the town stand out. The right of way through some non-resident property yet remains to be secured, but with this class no difficulty is apprehended. Also a few stockholders have failed to meet their assessments, though most if not all of those in this county who are behind with their assessments will doubtless meet their obligations soon. These little matters once adjusted, things will begin to move. — The numerous projected railroad extensions into Northern Michigan will open up vast tracts of valuable hardwood timbered lands, which, without railroads are practically inaccessible. Within the next decade marvelous changes in this region may be expected, and fortunate will be those who secure a foothold and a home in this beautiful country before these valuable lands are gobbled up by speculators, who will aim to get the lion's share of the mines of wealth in hardwood timber, to say nothing of the thousands of acres of splendid farming lands now covered with forests. The day of cheap homes in the Grand Traverse region will be a thing of the past, and those who contemplate securing a comfortable slice of land here for a moderate sum will do well to get it at an early day.

Dry Goods!

A good assortment of Plain and and novelty Dress Goods.

DRESS TRIMMINGS IN PLUSHES, VELVETS, CORDS, SETS, AND BRAIDS. Also Buttons.

Our stock of Ladies Jackets and Cloaks is of the best make, with prices to suit the times. It will be to your advantage to call and see our Ladies and Gents underwear before purchasing.

REMEMBER: A full line of staple Dry Goods in stock.

Cor. Bridge & Main sts.

B. SEE.

The Board of Supervisors of Osceola county recently voted down a proposition to submit the question of the removal of the county seat from Hersey to Leroy.

Capt. Nell Gallagher, of Harbor Springs who has been buying fish at the Beavers this fall, lost about $1,200 worth of fish which were on the ill-fated Vernon.

Another has been added to the list of newspapers at the "Soo." The Sault Herald, a semi-weekly five-column folio, made its first appearance week before last.

Mancelona Herald: Before leaving for Alabama, where he has accepted a call to preach, Rev. J. R. Savage was the recipient of a handsome gold watch charm from his Odd Fellow friends.

East Jordan Enterprise: For all the cry that there would be no potatoes this winter there seems to be no limit to the quantity grown throughout the county this season. They continue to arrive by loads. The market has no stronger tendency, the quotation being from 50c to 60c. per bushel, the latter price being paid only occasionally.

Bellaire Breeze: Bellaire is sure of a railroad right away if she will only bestir herself and get a railroad right o' way, but if it is not done right away the railroad will go somewhere else right away. Right o' way is the only thing that is holding back the cars. Can't our citizens get the right o' way, right away, and have the road right away?

The Anarchists Must Hang.

Chief Justice Waite, of the United States Supreme court, on the 2d inst., announced the decision of the court on the appeal of the seven condemned Chicago anarchist for a writ of error. The court reviewed all the claims separately and overruled them in every case. Chief Justice Waite closed by saying: "We are therefore of the opinion that no federal question has been presented warranting the interference of this court, and therefore we deny the writ." The only hope of the condemned men is now in Governor Oglesby, of Illinois, and this is but slight, as it is thought that he won't interpose clemency in their behalf. They are sentenced to be hanged Friday of this week.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the money secured by a certain mortgage, dated the 2d day of August, 1884, executed by Levi House, and Emily House, his wife, of the Township of Hayes, county of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, to Edwin M. Clark, of Charlevoix, Michigan. Said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds, in and for said county of Charlevoix. In Liber eight (8) of Mortgages, on page one hundred and ninety-one, (191) on the 25th day of August, 1884, and said mortgage was, on the 25th day of October, 1883, duly assigned by said Edwin M. Clark to Martha J. Ayers, of Plattsburg, [illegible] county, New York: said assignment was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said county, on the 25th day of October, 1883, in Liber ten (10) of Mortgages, on page four hundred and eighty-five, (485) and said mortgage is now due and owned by the said Martha J. Ayers. And, whereas, the amount claimed to be due on said Mortgage at the time of this notice, is the sum of Two Hundred and Nineteen Dollars and sixty-two cents, ($219.62) of principal and interest, and no proceedings having been instituted at law or in equity, to recover the debt now remaining due, or any part thereof. Now therefore, Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the said power of sale in said mortgage contained, and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises in said mortgage described, as all of those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the Township of Hayes, in the county of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Lot three, (3) and the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter, of Section Nineteen, (19) in Township Thirty-four, (34) North, of Range Seven (7) West, containing seventy (70) acres, more or less, according to the United States survey, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with the costs of this foreclosure, and the stipulated costs therein mentioned, which will be sold at public vendue to the highest bidder, at the front door of the Court House, in the Village of Boyne City, in said county of Charlevoix, that being the place where the Circuit Court in and for said county is held, at one o'clock in the afternoon, on the 15th day of November, 1887.

Dated, August 17th, 1887.

MARTHA J. AYERS, Assignee.

J. M. CLARK, Attorney for Assignee.

For Sale.

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix.

Land for Sale.

I have 6 acres just east of the cemetery, one mile from town, nearly all cleared, which I will sell cheap for cash, or approved paper. Address

JAMES METCALF, Charlevoix.

The Kalamazoo "DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Contains the Associated Press Dispatches

Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

MICHIGAN STATE LAND OFFICE, Lansing, Sept. 24th, 1887.

Notice is hereby given that the following described Swamp land, situated in Charlevoix county, heretofore licensed as Homesteads, which land has reverted to the State, will be Restored to market at this office on the 10th day of November, A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock a. m., and will be subject to sale according to the form prescribed by law.

ROSCOE D. DIX, Commissioner.

DESCRIPTION.	SECTION	TOWN	RANGE.
N E ¼ of S E ¼	7	34 N	7 W

MICHIGAN STATE LAND OFFICE, Lansing, Sept. 24, 1887.

Notice is hereby given, that the following described Primary School and Agricultural College land, situate in Charlevoix county, forfeited for non-payment of interest, will be offered for sale at public auction at this office on the 10th day of November, A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock a. m., unless previously redeemed according to law.

R. D. DIX, Commissioner.

PRIMARY SCHOOL LAND.

No. of Cert.	Description.	Sec.	Town	Range.
20630	SW¼ of SE¼	16	31 N	7 W

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE LAND.

No. of Cert.	Description.	Sec.	Town	Range.
1798	N½ of NW¼	32	32 N	4 W
1788	N½ of S E¼	32	32 N	7 W
20016	SW¼ of SW¼	32	32 N	4 W
20015	SW¼ of NW¼	32	32 N	4 W
20014	[illegible]	32	32 N	4 W
20016	[illegible]	32	32 N	4 W

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for said County, held at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, on Monday, the 3d day of October, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of James Otis, deceased. A. Buttars, Administrator of said estate, comes into Court and represents that he is now prepared to render his account as such Administrator. Thereupon it is ordered that Monday, the 7th day of November next at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for examining and allowing such account, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office in the Village of Boyne City, in said county and show cause, if any there be, why the said account should not be allowed. And it is Further Ordered, that said Administrator give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said account, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

(A true copy.)

JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Probate Notice.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix, holden at the Probate Office in the Village of Boyne City, on Monday, the 5th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the Estate of Isabella Wilson, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John H. Wilson, praying that an administrator be appointed for said estate. Thereupon it is Ordered, that Monday, the 7th day of November, at one o'clock in the afternoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the Village of Boyne City, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted. And it is further Ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County of Charlevoix, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

(A true copy.)

JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Bank of Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security

Is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its Capital and conservative management.

Its Officers

Never Speculate. Their business creed is: That to Speculate with ones own money, is folly; that to do so with the money of others, is criminal.

Security in Banking

Is the question of first importance to both Bankers and Depositors; and, believing that it furnishes unusual guarantees, therefore,

This Bank Invites

People generally to intrust their money to its keeping. Just liberality will mark its dealings.

This Bank Will

Borrow investment money when desired, paying as large interest thereon as shall be compatible with safe use of the money.

Parties Seeking

Productive employment for money, and desiring to escape the expense and trouble of the management of private investments, will find attractive security in this Bank's

Investment Notes,

Now earning Five per cent. yearly interest. These notes afford investors much more perfect security than Savings Bank deposits.

We Solicit Your Patronage.

Teacher's Examination.

Teachers examinations for Charlevoix county will be held as follows: At Charlevoix, on Friday, the 28th day of October; East Jordan, on Friday the 25th day of November, 1887. Examinations to commence at 8:30 and end at 5 p. m. WILLIAM HARRIS, Sec'y Board Examiners.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Detroit, Charlevoix and Escanaba Railroad Company, will be held at the general offices of the Company, at Charlevoix, Michigan, on Tuesday, the 15th day of November, 1887 at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of increasing the capital stock of said company and to vote on extending the line of said road from Charlevoix, its present terminus, to the Straits of Mackinaw.

Dated this 6th day of October, A. D. 1887.

J. MILO EATON, Sec'y.

CROSS & SONS.,

Buy and Sell all kinds of Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.

Charlevoix, - Mich.

CHARLEVOIX Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS.

Henry Bennett, O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls, A. Buttars,
A. H. Upright, A. Fox,
F. A. Smith.

CAPITAL, ... $25,000
SURPLUS, ... 2,000

The liabilities of Stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art. 3174, Sec. 40 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. Superior facilities for the transaction of every legitimate branch of Banking business extended to our customers on terms as favorable as are consistent with safety.

Drafts drawn direct on the leading commercial cities of the world in large or small amounts. Money to loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest. We respectfully solicit your patronage.

CORRESPONDENTS:

NATIONAL PARK BANK - - - NEW YORK.
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK - - - CHICAGO.
NAT. CITY BANK - - - GRAND RAPIDS.
DETROIT NAT. BANK - - - DETROIT.

160 Acres in MARION Township For Sale at a Bargain, Terms to suit.

MONEY TO LOAN ON Approved Real Estate Security THEODORE R. CHAPIN, Boyne City.

JOHN CONNOR,

Fashionable Boot and Shoe MAKER.

Hand Sewed French Calf Gaiters, $5; Men's Kip and Calf Boots, $4–6; Half-soling, 50 cents. Defy competition.

All Work Guaranteed.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,

ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR,

—ON—

Chalevoix Summer Resorts.

I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.

I employ only first-class workmen, both Carpenters and Painters.

Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention

J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller

Offer a Mammoth Stock OF

FALL —AND— WINTER

BOOTS, SHOES and other FOOT WEAR, —AT— LOWER PRICES

Than can be found elsewhere in the County.

We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.

NOTHING SHODDY.

Fox & Miller.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter.

RIFENBURG MILLING CO.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealer

3 EXTRA GRADES OF FLOUR

Feed, Corn Meal, Graham

We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL

Litney & Steimel LIVERY, And Feed Barn

Charlevoix, Mich.

Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the BEST BOATS!

The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references.

I will guarantee the best modelled easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the LEAST MONEY!

All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.

LEAVE ORDERS with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.

Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.

JOS. BEAUVAIS.

BETTER THAN MEDICINE!

KEEP YOUR FEET WARM.

You can't enjoy good health unless you clothe the feet properly.

D. SHERWOOD & CO. have just received the finest line of Fall and Winter

BOOTS & SHOES

ever brought to Charlevoix. Give them a call.

A. J. McLEOD,

Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail All kinds of

FRESH MEATS, SALT PORK, SMOKED & SALTED HAMS, Dried and Smoked BACON, DRIED BEEF, Bologna, Head Cheese, Sausage.

Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.

Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.

A. J. McLEOD.

Washburn & Ackert,

FOUNDREYMEN, MACHINISTS, And Manufacturers of The Charlevoix Plow.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN Boiler Works!

Builder and Manufacturer of

BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS,

Sheet Iron Work given special attention.

MARINE WORK a specialty.

HENRY BARTH, Prop.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at law, Charlevoix, Mich.

DAILTHORPE & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st., Charlevoix. Office hours 8 to 10 a. m, 6 to 8 p. m.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Bartlet Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 263, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 104, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 36, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.

President—Byron See.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—H. Stafield.
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. H. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Iddings, W. A. Brown and C. Y. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Geo. W. Crouter, S. W. Miller, S. M. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Iordan.

All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,

RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.

Charlevoix, - - - Mich.

Every convenience for the travelling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,

Lorenzo Cook, Manager

Charlevoix, - - - Mich.

The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE.

W. C. Newman, Prop'r.

Charlevoix, - - - Mich.

Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and Dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. R. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. R. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. [Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.]

DENTIST.

N. J. PERRY, Dentist. Office in Weed's Drug Store. Charlevoix, Mich.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R.R.

Time Card for Petoskey.

IN EFFECT, OCT. 1887.

Leave Going North 2 05 a. m. 8 18 p. m.
Leave Going South 8 20 a. m. †11 00 pm
† daily except Saturday.

Michigan Central

The Direct Route Between Mackinaw City & Detroit Jackson, The South and East.

Trains leave Mackinaw City 8 40 a m daily except Sunday and 10 p m daily arriving at

Detroit	:	8.10 p m and 11 a m
Jackson	:	10.30 p m and 11 20 a m
Toledo	:	10.65 p m and 4.45 p m
Buffalo	:	6.15 a m and 8.07 p m
Cincinnati	:	6.35 a m and 6.40 p m

WAGNER PALACE SLEEPING AND PARLOR CARS.

W. H. JONSTON, Mich. Pass Agt, Grand Rapids. O. W. RUGGLES, G. P. & T. Agt, Chicago.

DULUTH, SOUTH SHORE AND ATLANTIC R'Y.

"SOO-MACKINAW SHORT LINE."

Only Direct Route to Marquette and and the Iron and Copper Regions of Lake Superior.

Traversing the most Picturesque portion of Upper Michigan through a country unequalled for

Hunting, Fishing, Etc.

Two Through Express Trains daily in each direction to which are attached

NEW, ELEGANT and COMMODIOUS OBSERVATION PARLOR CARS & WAGNER SLEEPING COACHES

Tickets over this route are on sale at all principal ticket offices. Full information as to rates etc., maps and folders will be furnished. Address

E. W. ALLEN, Gen Pass. and & Tkt Agt, Marquette, Mich.

A BRAVE FELLOW.

A Young Soldier, Too Sick to Work, Ordered to be Shot by Gen. Bragg.

When Gen. Bragg's army evacuated Corinth, Miss., in 1862, there was a great deal of sickness among the soldiers, nearly one-fourth of the army being unfit for service.

Capt. S. R. Weston, of Company H 5th Georgia regiment, and myself (belonging to Company E, same regiment), were on the sick list and not able to march, but still able to do light duty. So we were put in charge of the sick of our regiment, who were to be sent down on a separate train. While we were at the depot getting the men aboard and looking to their comfort, we noticed another squad to our left, as we faced the town, loading another train with quartermaster's and commissary stores, and everybody seemed to be in a hurry and in some confusion. Every straggler was put to work, and many of the sick were made to work who ought to have been in bed. Some boisterous, overbearing fellow was bossing the job, and if he ordered a man to go to work and he refused he reported him at once to Gen. Bragg, who seemed to be superintending the whole movement in person.

Finally a young soldier came along on his way to the cars for the sick. He appeared to be about 20 years of age, tall and handsome, but pale and delicate. The man (or brute) commanding the work squad saw him and yelled out:

"Say, young man, fall in here and go to work! Heave these goods into these cars, and be quick about it."

The young man replied:

"I am not able to work. If I were I would be with my company."

"Eh? Won't work, eh? We'll see about that, General!" he hollowed out to Gen. Bragg, who was passing, "here's a man who refuses to work," pointing at the youth, who stood as firm as rock. Gen. Bragg stopped and gazed at the young man, his eyes blazing as no other man's eyes can blaze, and repeated the order to help load those cars at once. The young man repeated his former answer, that he was not able to work: had he been able to work he would be able to march, and would be with his command.

The general's eyes seemed to flash fire as he exclaimed:

"What! You dare to disobey my orders?"

"I do," calmly replied the young man.

The general called a lieutenant of a Louisiana company of regulars doing guard duty, and said:

"Take six of your company and carry this man to that grove and shoot him."

The lieutenant called out six of his men and ordered them to load their guns, and while they were doing so Gen. Bragg beckoned the lieutenant, stepped behind a garden wall, spoke to him in a low tone not heard by any one else and walked away. The guard marched the young man to the grove, about one hundred yards to our right, placed him upon a stool against a large oak and started to blindfold him, which he would not permit, but took off his gold watch and chain and a fine gold ring from his finger, handed them to the lieutenant, and requested him to send them to his mother, at the same time writing her name and address on a piece of paper and handing it to the lieutenant, resumed his position against the tree, and, with a proud smile upon his lips and without a tremor in his voice, said:

"Now, sir, I am ready."

The lieutenant stepped off ten paces, brought his men to "attention," and commanded, in a loud voice, distinctly heard by us: "Ready! Aim!"

I became so weak I thought I should faint, and caught hold of a small oak for support and closed my eyes to shut out the awful deed. There sat the young man, gazing into the muzzle of six muskets pointed at his heart, a single one of which might send his soul into eternity in the twinkling of an eye. He looked on as calmly as if he was looking at a camera and was simply having his photograph taken. But the lieutenant's next command was, "Recover arms!" which was willingly and promptly obeyed. The lieutenant then stepped up to the young man, bade him rise, grasped his hand in admiration, returned his watch and ring, which he received with a polite bow and the word "Thanks," and walked away as unconcerned as if nothing unusual had occurred.

The lieutenant and his men returned to their former position, in a few paces of where we were, and pretty soon Gen. Bragg returned and asked.

"Where is the boy?"

"Gone," said the lieutenant.

"What did you do?" asked the general.

"Just exactly as you directed," replied the lieutenant. "He handed me his watch and ring to send to his mother, took his position, refused to be blindfolded, said he was ready, and never batted his eyes even when we were at 'aim.' He's the bravest man I ever saw in my life!" And tears came into the lieutenant's eyes.

"Who is he, and where is he?" demanded the general, evincing much interest and looking in every direction.

"I don't know," answered the lieutenant. "Here's his mother's name and address, handing him a slip of paper. He glanced at it, put it in his vest pocket, and said:

"Well, find him. I'll promote him." And away they went to find the young hero.

But whether they ever found him, and if so, what came of it, I never knew.

When Gen. Bragg first gave the order to shoot the young man I suppose there were a hundred soldiers who heard it. They soon scampered away, some to work, some to hide out, others, —too sick to do either—took the places assigned them in the cars. And only Capt. Weston and myself, and perhaps two or three others, watched this episode to the end. Those others all thought, and those still living think to this day, that Gen. Bragg had that young man shot. Bragg was indeed a severe disciplinarian, but not so bad at heart as many deem him.

An aged colored woman in a Georgia town recently signified her intention of joining the church. She was reputed well-to-do, and two rival churches strove to win her. One of them sent a deacon of great eloquence to employ upon her his rare arts of persuasion. In normal circumstances it is probable that his mission might have been successful, but the aged woman recognized him as a person who had owed her $5 for fourteen years, and she joined the other church.—The Epoch.

There is in Florida a county composed entirely of islands.

Negro Stories from Louisiana.

An old negro woman was employed as cook in the family of a Mr. S——. Though a good servant in most respects, she had a propensity for petty thieving that was very annoying to her mistress. Mrs. S—— often missed small quantities of tea, coffee, sugar, etc., but the cook always stoutly maintained her innocence when questioned, and in this she was usually supported by Miss Florence S——, a kind-hearted daughter of the family. One day Aunt Tildy (the cook) was charged with a more serious theft than usual. At first she seemed at a loss for a reply, but she suddenly burst out with: "I doan' b'lieve I tuk dat thing—no, I doan'. But if Miss Flaw'nce done say I tuk it, den I b'lieve it. Miss Flaw'nce tell de truf; I b'lieve all what she say. Jus' you ax Miss Flaw'nce, an' if she say so, den I b'lieve it—no oder way, nohow."

The more uneducated negroes show a strange inability to understand what the simplest pictures even are intended to represent, and their interpretations of more complex pictures are strangely ludicrous. In the family of Mr. S—— was a negro servant named Aunt Lucy. One day Miss Florence showed her a small picture of Niagara Falls, and asked her what she thought it was. After holding the picture in every possible position, Aunt Lucy finally said, "Dat sure am Miss Eva; it sure am." Miss Eva was another daughter of the family.

"Is it a good picture of her?" asked Miss Florence.

Regarding the picture with a sage air, Aunt Lucy replied, "I tink it favor Miss Eva jus' a bit."

Negroes value preachers in proportion as they are able to excite emotion in their hearers. A darky was questioned as to the respective merits of two colored preachers, or "'zorters," which is short for "exhorters." His judgment was this: "Dey's bofe of 'em mighty pow'ful 'zorters, but dat Rob Sheldon he's de best, 'kase he's got de mos' tones."—Editor's Drawer, in Harper's Magazine.

Funny Things in Mexico.

Almost as good as a hacienda bull-fight is the spectacle of an Indian coachman in English livery. The dark face of the somewhat diminutive Aztec under a tall hat, his slight form incased in a thick cloth coat, make up a picture for a comic artist. Add a footman in the same stiff livery, and the sight is provokingly funny. Both sit, as per instructions, grimly on the box, and they essay that which is impossible to them, an absolutely indifferent air, which is relieved by a grin at the corners of the mouth. There is, too, a hopeless sort of look on the poor fellow's faces, as if they were inwardly saying, "We don't like this sort of thing, you must see, and only wish we were back in our sombreros and short jackets," in which these men always look artistically picturesque. It is a mistake to introduce English livery into this country. The men are not suited to it, and it only ends in giving them a ludicrous air, which adds nothing to the veldendar display.

There are some minor points of customs here which strike an American oddly. For example, it seems queer to purchase sage for the dressing of a fowl at the apothecary shops, to which one must also go for soda for cooking. Shoe stores do not have shoe-horns in stock, but you are referred from them to the hardware store. An apothecary does not sell whole packages; that is, you can't buy a bottle of patent medicine at your apothecary's, but you must go to a wholesale drug store. Rope takes the place of nails in temporary structures, and carpenters or masons erect stagings tied with cord for their work, and it is rare that one of these stagings falls, the cord making a stronger combination than nails. This is an idea that might be copied in the States. Milk is milked directly from the cow, at the big city dairies, into the cook's pitcher, thus making sure that even if the cow has been watered the milk has not.—Cor. New York Star.

Some Useful Knowledge.

To remove ink stains: Ink stains are very easily removed if put immediately in milk and slightly rubbed for a few minutes. If allowed to dry they are not so easily removed, but can be, by a little more effort.

To remove blood stains: Blood stains can easily be removed, from an article that you do not care to wash by applying a thick paste, made of starch and cold water. Place in the sun, and rub off in a couple of hours. If the stain is not entirely removed, repeat the process and soon it disappears.

To remove fruit stains: Hold the goods stained over a vessel in such a way that pouring boiling hot water on the opposite side of the stain it will run through the goods, and in a short time the stain will be seen to disappear.

To remove mildew: Soak and wash the spots in sour milk and you will have no trouble in removing the same.

To remove iron rust: Place a bright tin, pour a kettle steaming with boiling water. Moisten the goods with water and hold the iron-rust spots closely to the tin and rub them with oxalic acid. As soon as you see the rust disappear, rinse in cold water to remove the acid, as it tends to rot the goods, but if the process is performed quickly there is no danger of this.

To wash cotton goods: To wash cotton goods containing a black figure, pour boiling suds on the goods and let stand for a few minutes. This sets the color, and when neatly washed and ironed, instead of a faded garment, you have one as bright and fresh as when first made.

Ginghams and prints of various colors will hold their color better if washed in water thickened with flour starch. Flour is very cleansing and will dry the work of soap, without injury to bright colors, in one or two washings.

To clean lace: Fill a bottle with cold water; draw a stocking tightly over it, securing both ends firmly. Place the lace smoothly over the stocking and tack closely. Put the bottle in a kettle of cold water containing a few shavings of soap, and place over the fire to boil. Rinse in several waters and then drain and dry. When dry remove and place smoothly in a large book and press with weights. Very nice lace can be made to look like new by this process.

Care of silk: Never use a brush; it injures the goods. Instead wipe carefully with the face of a soft piece of velvet. Shake the velvet occasionally and wipe between every plait if you would preserve your garment and have it retain its new look.—Good Housekeeping.

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. Geo. V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two Bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved that she is able now to do her own work."

Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at Dr. G. W. Crouter's.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; everybody said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds. Trial Bottles of this Great Discovery for Consumption free at Dr. G. W. Crouter's.

"HACKMETACK," a lasting and fragrant perfume. Price 25 and 50 cents.

SHILOH'S CURE will immediately relieve Croup, Whooping Cough and Bronchitis. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

FOR DYSPEPSIA and Liver Complaint, you have a printed guarantee on every bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer. It never fails to cure.

A NASAL INJECTOR free with each bottle of Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. Price 50 cents. F. G. Hines & Co.

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

STANDARD TIME.

Charlevoix and East Jordan.

STR. NORTH STAR, ... CAPT. MEL THOMPSON

Leaving Charlevoix at 6:30 a. m and 1:30 p. m and returning leave East Jordan for Charlevoix at 9:30 a m and 4 p. m, touching at intermediate points both ways.

Charlevoix and Boyne City.

STR. JOSEPH GORDON .... CAPT. LEWIS GUARD

Leave Charlevoix at 6 30 a. m., and 1 p. m., and Boyne City at 9:30 a. m., 4 p. m., touching at way ports

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan.

STR. THOS. FRIANT .... CAPT. H. VANDERHOEF.

MORNING — Leave Harbor Springs, 7:30; Petoskey, 8:00; Charlevoix, 9:30, arrive, East Jordan 11:30. AFTERNOON — Leave East Jordan 1:30; Charlevoix, 4:00; Petoskey, 5:30, arrive, Harbor Spring, 6:00

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE.

PROP. LAWRENCE, ... Capt. Geo. Thorp.

Going North, Chicago, Fridays 8 p m; Charlevoix, Sundays 3 p m; Cheboygan, Mondays 5 a m.
Going South, Cheboygan, Mondays 4 p m; Charlevoix, Tuesdays 8 a m; Milwaukee, Wednesdays 4 p m; Chicago, Thursdays 12 m.

Eurey Bros., agents, Charlevoix.

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS.

CITY OF GRAND RAPIDS, ... Capt. O. E. Wilbur.

Going North, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays: leave Traverse City 7 a m; Northport 9:30; Charlevoix 11:30; Petoskey 1:30 p m; Harbor Springs 2, Cross Village 4:30; Mackinac Island 7:45 arriving at St. Ignace 8:20

Going South, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, leave St. Ignace 6 a m; Mackinac Island 7 Cross Village 10:15; Harbor Springs 12:45 p m; Petoskey 1:15, Charlevoix 2:45; Northport 5:15 p m, arriving at Traverse City at 7:45 p. m.

J. L. Hund & Co., Agents, Charlevoix.

MILLINERY,

FANCY GOODS, DRESS-MAKING.

We have just opened a large line of Fall and Winter Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.

DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.

ALDRICH SISTERS.

Ingleside Building.

C. H. Maddaugh,

MERCHANT TAILOR.

I have just received a fine line of Samples of first class Fall & Winter Tweeds. Call and look them over.

Fine Samples of OVERCOATINGS! now awaiting your inspection.

Call and see me, Satisfaction Guaranteed.

CHARLEVOIX Manufacturing Co.

Charlevoix, Mich.,

Manufacturers of

Sash and Doors, Blinds, Mouldings etc.

NEWELL Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails kept in stock.

Window & Door Frames made to order.

All Kinds of Building Material Kept constantly on hand.

PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS, Furnished on application.

Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building

Correspondence solicited.

Everything New

I have a nice new stock of Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc

which I will sell at Prices lower than the same goods can be purchased outside.

SILVER WARE, A Specialty.

All classes of Repairing done quickly.

C. R. BELLINGER.

Burns, Stevens & Co.

LIVERY STABLE

CHARLEVOIX.

The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.

Drivers furnished if desired. Rates Low

Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

W. A. Reynard,

Dealer in Fruit, Nuts and Confectionery.

I also keep in stock a full line of Tobaccos and Cigars.

Butter and Eggs a Specialty.

Farming Lands

500,000 ACRES Of Splendid MICHIGAN LANDS For Sale By The G. R. & I. R. R.

50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.

These lands are timbered with beach and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets

By Water and Rail

And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.

The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the center of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is

Not a Wilderness by any Means.

It contains a population of 250,000 souls and is rapidly filling up with settlers from almost every state in the Union.

Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.

Send for English or German Pamphlet, Address

W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner,

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.

TITLE PERFECT.

For Finest JOB WORK, Patronize The Sentinel.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY.

Will not stick to the iron or blister the goods, easy to use, makes your linen look like new at home. Ask your grocer for Celluloid starch. It is pure and economical.

HUMPHREYS'

DR. HUMPHREYS' BOOK Cloth & Gold Binding 144 Pages, with Steel Engraving MAILED FREE. Address, P. O. Box 1810, N. Y.

LIST OF PRINCIPAL NOS. CURES PRICE.

1 Fevers, Congestion, Inflammations .25
2 Worms, Worm Fever, Worm Colic .25
3 Crying Colic, or Teething of Infants .25
4 Diarrhea, of Children or Adults .25
5 Dysentery, Griping, Bilious Colic .25
6 Cholera Morbus, Vomiting .25
7 Coughs, Cold, Bronchitis .25
8 Neuralgia, Toothache, Faceache .25
9 Headaches, Sick Headache, Vertigo .25

HOMEOPATHIC

10 Dyspepsia, Bilious Stomach .25
11 Suppressed or Painful Periods .25
12 Whites, too Profuse Periods .25
13 Croup, Cough, Difficult Breathing .25
14 Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Eruptions .25
15 Rheumatism, Rheumatic Pains .25
16 Fever and Ague, Chills, Malaria .50
17 Piles, Blind or Bleeding .50
19 Catarrh, Influenza, Cold in the Head .50
20 Whooping Cough, Violent Coughs .50
24 General Debility, Physical Weakness .50
27 Kidney Disease .50
28 Nervous Debility 1.00
30 Urinary Weakness, Wetting Bed .50
32 Diseases of the Heart, Palpitation 1.00

SPECIFICS.

Sold by Druggists, or sent postpaid on receipt of price.—HUMPHREYS' MEDICINE CO. 109 Fulton St. N. Y.

STOVES!

AHEAD AGAIN!

THE Round Oak Heating' Stoves.

NEW STYLES Cook Stoves!

Saws & Axes

Job and Tin Work.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

F. A. COCHRAN & CO., (Successors to PERRY WEED.) Druggists and Pharmecists, A FULL LINE OF Drugs and Medicines.

We keep in stock a large assortment of well selected POPULAR MUSIC. Call and see it.

M. S. MOULTON,

WATCHMAKER & JEWELER,

Charlevoix, Mich.

Personal Atttention given to Watch Repairing.

Key-wind Movements changed to Stem-wind and warranted as good as the best.

JEWELRY Repairing done in the best manner.

Having had 30 years experience I am confident I can give the best of satisfaction

MARVELOUS PRICES!

BOOKS FOR THE MILLION

Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. The following books are published in neat pamphlet form, and all are printed from good type upon good paper. They treat of a great variety of subjects, and we think no one can examine the list without finding therein many that he or she would like to possess. In cloth-bound form these books would cost $1.00 each. Each book is complete in itself.

1. The Widow Bedott Papers. [illegible]
2. Winter Evening Recreations, a large collection of Acting Charades, Tableaux, Games, Puzzles, etc., for social gatherings, private theatricals, and evenings at home.
3. Back to the Old Home. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Hidden Perils."
4. Dialogues, Recitations and Readings, a large and choice collection for school exhibitions and public and private entertainments.
5. The Standard Letter Writer for Ladies and Gentlemen, a complete guide to correspondence, giving plain directions for the composition of letters of every kind with innumerable forms and examples.
6. The Frozen Deep. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
7. Red Court Farm. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne," etc.
8. The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott. [illegible]
9. In Cupid's Net. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
10. Amos Barton. A Novel. By George Eliot, author of "Adam Bede," "The Mill on the Floss," etc.
11. Lady Gwendoline's Dream. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
12. The Mystery of the Holly Tree. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
13. The Budget of Wit, Humor and Fun, a large collection of the funny stories, sketches, anecdotes, poems, and jokes.
14. John Bowerbank's Wife. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
15. The Gray Woman. A Novel. By Mrs. Gaskell, author of "Mary Barton," etc.
16. Sixteen Complete Stories by Popular Authors, embracing love, humorous and detective stories, stories of society life, of adventure, of railway life, etc., all very interesting.
17. Jasper Dane's Secret. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Aurora Floyd," etc.
18. Fancy Work for Home Adornment, an entirely new work upon this subject, containing easy and practical instructions for making fancy baskets, wall pockets, brackets, needle work, embroidery, etc., etc., profusely and elegantly illustrated.
19. Grimm's Fairy Stories for the Young. The finest collection of fairy stories published. The children are delighted with them.
20. Manual of Etiquette for Ladies and Gentlemen, a guide to politeness and good breeding, giving the rules of modern etiquette for all occasions.
21. Useful Knowledge for the Million, a handy book of useful information for all, upon many and various subjects.
22. The Home Cook Book and Family Physician, containing hundreds of excellent cooking recipes and hints to housekeepers, also telling how to cure all common ailments by simple home remedies.
23. Manners and Customs in Far Away Lands, a very interesting and instructive book of travels, describing the peculiar life, habits, manners and customs of the people of foreign countries.
24. 57 Popular Ballads. Same size as sheet music. Words of all the old and new songs.
25. Called Back. A Novel. By Hugh Conway.
26. At the World's Mercy. A Novel. By Florence Warden, author of "The House on the Marsh," etc.
27. Mildred Trevanion. A Novel. By "The Duchess," author of "Molly Bawn," etc.
28. Dark Days. A Novel. By the author of "Called Back."
29. Shadows on the Snow. A Novel. By B. L. Farjeon, author of "Bread-and-Cheese and Kisses," etc.
30. Leoline. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Brenda Yorke," etc.
31. Gabriel's Marriage. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "No Name," etc.
32. Reaping the Whirlwind. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Old Middleton's Money," etc.
33. Dudley Carleon. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc.
34. A Golden Dawn. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne," etc.
35. Valerie's Fate. A Novel. By Mrs. Alexander, author of "The Wooing O't," etc.
36. Sister Rose. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
37. Anne. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne."
38. The Laurel Bush. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
39. Robinson Crusoe. A thrilling narrative by Daniel De Foe describing the adventures of a castaway in the South Pacific Ocean.
40. How to Make Poultry Pay. A practical and instructive series of articles by Mr. P. H. Jacobs, Poultry Editor of "The Farm and Garden," Phila. Illustrated.
41. Parlor Magic and Chemical Experiments, a book which tells how to perform hundreds of amusing tricks in magic and instructive experiments with simple agents.
42. Gems of the Poets, containing charming selections from Tennyson, Longfellow, Whittier, Byron, Shelley, Moore, Bryant, and many others.
43. Building Plans for Practical, Low-cost Houses. A full description and plans of Eight modern houses, ranging in price from $500 to $4500. Illustrated.
44. Anecdotes of Public Men—Washington, Franklin, Webster, Clay, Tilden, Lincoln, Scott, Grant, Garfield, Gladstone, Butler, Hancock, Lee, and all the leading men of the century.
45. Æsop's Fables. The work of an ancient genius. Children have read them for centuries, and grown people quote them every day.

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.

We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $1.00; or we will send any five for 30 cts., or the whole 45 for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of

"SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

FRANK E. WOODS

Bath & Barber Rooms

Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS.

Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.

If you want a quiet place to get a shave, hair-dress or bath call and see me.

JAY L. PRICE.

JAS. A. GELLICK,

Dealer in

Choice Wines, Fine Liquors EXCELLENT CIGARS.

We call Special Attention to our Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES.

We also keep continually on draught Milwaukee Export and Lager Beer.

Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel.

W. H. FRANCIS

FURNITURE —AND— JOBBING SHOP,

Will also do Contracting & Building, In Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.

I keep in my shop a full set of hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc. on short notice.

Shop on South Terrace, Opposite Sheriff Berdan's residence.

NEW SHOP!

All kinds of Blacksmithing. At the Shop in the Foundry Building.

Horseshoeing a specialty.

ALL WORK GUARANTEED.

M. SCOTT.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

THE NEWS GRIST.

Important Happenings in Every Quarter of the Civilized Globe.

The Very Latest Intelligence Flashed Over the Telegraphic Wires.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

HOPE FOR PROHIBITION.

[illegible]

ROBBED THE TREASURY.

[illegible]

BAD APACHE INDIANS.

[illegible]

of seventy-one runs, against fifty-three by St. Louis.

Sparks from the Wires.

MR. A. J. DREXEL, the Philadelphia banker, says that the stories that have been published about a stringency in the money market have been greatly exaggerated. He speaks encouragingly of the business outlook for the coming year.

A DISPATCH from Valparaiso states the British bark Balaklava, from London to San Francisco, was dismasted during a gale and had her decks stove in off Cape Horn. During the gale nine men, including the mate, were washed overboard and drowned.

A CABLE dispatch states that the Czar visited Copenhagen with the view of taking decisive action with regard to Bulgarian affairs, and that he has formed an anti-German alliance between Russia, Belgium, Holland, Sweden, and Denmark. Other powers are expected to join the alliance.

EAST.

THE failure is announced of Woodman, True & Co., jobbers in dry goods at Portland, Me., with liabilities of $350,000.

AT a meeting of steel manufacturers held in Pittsburgh a change was made in the classification of the different grades of steel.

WEST.

THE report comes from Hillsboro, Ill., that, owing to the protracted drought of last summer, the honey product of that section, which is usually large, will amount to nothing.

A BAYFIELD (Wis.) dispatch says: "The lumber firm of Reed & Maxwell, of Washburn, the heaviest firm on this side of the bay, assigned to O. Flanders, of this place. The liabilities are estimated at $400,000. The firm claims that it can pay all it owes and have $100,000 left."

THE Michigan and Ohio Coal and Lumber Company, capital $50,000, whose yards and mills are located at Tecumseh, Mich., have assigned. Liabilities and assets about $20,000.

THE thermometer at Billings, M. T., on Monday night, registered 15 degrees below zero. Four inches of snow had fallen.

[illegible]

SOUTH.

[illegible]

WASHINGTON.

[illegible]

inst. The President expressed himself as heartily glad to get home, though as heartily glad that he went away. During the three weeks of his journey he traveled forty-five hundred miles, passed through seventeen States—crossing three of them twice—and saw and was seen by several millions of American citizens. There were no brass bands, no committeemen, no crowds at the station in Washington, and it is nothing uncomplimentary to the people whom the President has visited to say that everyone of the tourists was glad of it. After breakfast the President and Mrs. Cleveland drove out to their country home at Oak View, where they spent the day.

THE Treasury Department will issue no more silver certificates or other paper currency in denominations below five dollars.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

A WASHINGTON telegram says: Three more complaints from George Rice of Marietta, Ohio, against the Standard Oil Company have been received by the Interstate Commerce Commission, making thirteen in all. The commission had no hearing to-day. To-morrow it will hear arguments respecting the liabilities of express companies under the interstate commerce law. A communication has been received by the commission signed in behalf of fourteen commercial associations of Boston, antagonizing the project of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, which claims that the practice of allowing an export rebate on shipments from the West via Boston to foreign ports is an unjust discrimination against local consumers, and seeks to have the practice stopped. The communication, while favoring a revision of rates declares that any change compelling the export trade to pay more for shipments by way of Boston than by way of New York would ruin Boston's export trade.

GENERAL.

EXTENSIVE sugar-cane fields in the district of Iloquil, Cuba, have been submerged by springs which have suddenly appeared there.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has issued the following proclamation:

The goodness and the mercy of God which have followed the American people during all the days of the last year claim their grateful recognition and humble acknowledgment. By His omnipotent power He has protected us from war and pestilence, and from every external calamity; by His gracious favor the earth has yielded a generous return to the labor of the husbandman and every path of honest toil has led to comfort and contentment; by His loving kindness the hearts of our people have been replenished with fraternal sentiment and patriotic endeavor, and by His unerring guidance we have been directed in the way of national prosperity. To the end that we may, with one accord, testify our gratitude for all these blessings, I, Grover Cleveland, President of the United States, do hereby designate and set apart Thursday, the 24th day of November next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by all the people of the land. On that day let all secular work and employment be suspended, and let our people assemble in their accustomed places of worship and with prayer and songs of praise give thanks to our Heavenly Father for all that He has done for us, while we humbly implore the forgiveness of our sins and a continuance of His mercy. Let families and kindred be united on that day, and let their hearts, filled with kindly cheer and affectionate reminiscences, be turned in thankfulness to the source of all their pleasures and the giver of all that makes the day glad and joyous. And in the midst of our prosperity and happiness let us remember the poor, the needy, and the unfortunate, and by our gifts of charity and ready benevolence let us increase the number of those who with grateful hearts shall join in our thanksgiving.

HORACE WEBSTER & CO., the insolvent wholesale liquor dealers of New York, Chicago, and Philadelphia, owe $705,730. Their assets are valued at $250,000.

THE visible supply of wheat in this country is 32,388,581 bushels; of corn, 7,921,191 bushels; and of oats, 5,889,686 bushels. A year ago the stock of wheat in sight was 55,371,100 bushels; of corn, 13,431,840 bushels; and of oats, 5,389,940 bushels.

FOREIGN.

FOREIGN dispatches state that one of the first fruits of Italy's recent alliance with Germany and Austria is her firm footing on the Red Sea littoral at Massowah, contiguous to Abyssinia. France has withdrawn her opposition to the Italian colonization projects, and the tribes who have been besieging Massowah have proclaimed their friendliness. King John of Abyssinia has also made concessions which will allow the Italians to carry out their policy. It is further intimated that England, which has great influence with him, has been instrumental in preparing the way for peace between the Abyssinians and Italians in return for Italy's promised support of Prince Ferdinand's claims upon the Bulgarian sovereignty. The new situation of affairs is also significant in connection with the report that Austria and Germany are urging England to come into the alliance, which would make a quadruple union of immense strength.

EXCAVATIONS in Jerusalem have resulted in the discovery of remains of the ancient town wall and the position of the gates of the town during the lifetime of the Savior.

NEWS has reached Belgium that Stanley, the explorer, has advanced about 780 miles since last heard of. Aug. 25 he was in excellent health. He had met with a friendly reception from the natives in a hitherto unexplored country through which he had to pass. As a precaution Stanley has had intrenched camps constructed in all his halting places.

STATUE OF LINCOLN.

THE finest product of American sculpture yet achieved has become an ornament of Chicago. Says a special from that city:

The colossal bronze statue of Abraham Lincoln, by Augustus Saint-Gaudens, the foremost of American sculptors, was unveiled at Lincoln Park, on Saturday, the 21st inst., in the presence of a vast concourse of people. The veil was withdrawn by Abraham Lincoln, son of Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, and Hon. Leonard Swett, the distinguished lawyer and a life-long friend of the great emancipator, delivered the oration. Mr. Saint-Gaudens is a native of New York, and 35 years old. He devoted three years to this magnificent work of art. He sought to embody in the figure the dignity and nobleness of the President's character. His purity of artistic feeling made him scorn any accessories incongruous or inconsistent. Simple, lofty, strong, kind, but plain, honest, rugged Lincoln—this was the ideal of the work. That it is faithfully effectuated in bronze all who have seen [illegible] affirm. The figure of the great War President, which is eleven feet in height, stands just a little to the front and left of a chair of state. The idea meant to be conveyed by the sculptor is that he has just arisen to receive a delegation which has waited upon him. The left leg is advanced, the weight of the body resting mainly on the right, while the head is thrown forward a little, bringing Lincoln's stoop into prominence. The right arm is held at full length behind his back, while the left arm is thrown across his chest, the fingers grasping the lapel of the long, old-fashioned frock coat which Lincoln usually wore. The expression is thoughtful and what may strike many as melancholy. The chair from which the President is supposed to have risen is of large size, with a rounded back, and is highly ornamented with carvings of oak leaves, pine cones, and palms. On the back is an eagle with outstretched [illegible].

THE STATUE UNVEILED.

MARKET REPORTS.

NEW YORK.
CATTLE	$4.50	@ 5.73
HOGS	4.75	@ 5.25
WHEAT—No. 1 White	.85	@ .86
No. 2 Red	.81½	@ .85
CORN—No. 2	.52	@ .53
OATS—White	.35	@ .40
PORK—New Mess	14.50	@ 15.00
CHICAGO.
CATTLE—Choice to Prime Steers	5.00	@ 5.25
Good	4.00	@ 4.50
Common	3.00	@ 3.60
HOGS—Shipping Grades	4.00	@ 4.75
FLOUR—Winter Wheat	3.75	@ 4.25
WHEAT—No. 2 Red Winter	.71½	@ .72½
CORN—No. 2	.40	@ .41
OATS No. 2	.26	@ .27½
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	.24	@ .26
Fine Dairy	.18	@ .24
CHEESE—Full Cream, new	.11½	@ .12
EGGS—Fresh	.17	@ .18
POTATOES—Choice, per bu	.67	@ .73
PORK—Mess	13.50	@ 14.25
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—Cash	.70	@ .70½
CORN—No. 3	.40	@ .40½
OATS—No. 2 White	.28	@ .28½
RYE—No. 1	.50	@ .52
PORK—Mess	[illegible]	@ 14.25
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	.72	@ .72½
CORN—Mixed	.40	@ .40½
OATS—Cash	.24½	@ .25½
PORK—Mess	13.00	@ 13.50
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—Cash	.76	@ .76½
CORN—Cash	.44	@ .44½
OATS—No. 2 White	.28	@ .28½
DETROIT.
BEEF CATTLE	3.50	@ 4.50
HOGS	4.00	@ 4.75
SHEEP	4.00	@ 5.00
WHEAT—No. 1 White	.77	@ .78
CORN—No. 2	.44	@ .46
OATS—No. 2 White	.30	@ .30½
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	.74	@ .74½
CORN—No. 2	.43½	@ .44
OATS—No. 2	.28	@ .28½
PORK—Mess	13.25	@ 13.75
LIVE HOGS	4.00	@ 4.75
BUFFALO.
WHEAT—No. 1 Hard	.83	@ .84
CORN—No. 2 Yellow	.48	@ .49
CATTLE	4.00	@ 5.00
HOGS	4.00	@ 5.00
INDIANAPOLIS.
BEEF CATTLE	4.00	@ 5.00
HOGS	4.25	@ 4.75
SHEEP	3.50	@ 4.50
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	.72	@ .73
CORN	.40	@ .40½
OATS—Mixed	.25	@ .27
EAST LIBERTY.
CATTLE—Prime	4.50	@ 5.00
Fair	4.00	@ 4.50
Common	3.50	@ 4.00
HOGS	4.50	@ 5.00
SHEEP	4.00	@ 4.80

FRED DOUGLASS TO VOTERS.

A Ringing Republican Appeal to Colored Men—What the Party Has Done and Must Do.

[From the New York Tribune.]

Frederick Douglass has been asked by the Republican State Committee to speak for the Republican cause and candidates in New York State during this campaign. His uncertain health compels him to decline, but in the following letter he makes the duty of all good citizens, and particularly the colored voters, very clear:

Hon. C. N. Bliss.

DEAR SIR—I very deeply regret that, owing to the present unsteady condition of my health, I am compelled to decline your urgent call to take the platform during the present campaign in support of the Republican cause in the State of New York. Were it otherwise, there is no duty to which I would more readily respond.

I am sometimes reproached with being too much wedded to the Republican party. I am not ashamed of that reproach. In my own behalf and in behalf of the colored people generally, I confess myself largely in debt to that party, and especially to that part of it for which you now ask my earnest and active support. It was the Republican party of the State of New York which, first of all the Northern States, had the courage and the consistency to put the name of a colored man in a prominent place on its electoral ticket, and it was the Electoral College of that State that honored me by sending in my custody its electoral vote for Ulysses S. Grant to the President of the Senate of the United States at Washington. I shall have to forget this noble example of defiance to popular prejudice, and many other good things done by that party, and on the other hand I must cease to remember many bad things done by the Democratic party, before I can withhold my support from the former and cease to oppose the latter.

Though I cannot at present safely promise to take the stump, as I would gladly do, I can and will earnestly advise every colored citizen of the State of New York, as he values the rights and privileges already secured and those he has yet to realize, to support by his voice and vote and with all his might the New York State Republican ticket, and the whole Republican ticket, without the erasure of a single name. I do this and shall do this because I recognize the tremendous consequences for good and for evil involved in the approaching New York State election. In my judgment no political folly could be greater or more to be deplored than pursuing a course tending to endanger the success of the Republican party in its grand preliminary fight for ascendency in New York and ultimately in the nation. He is a fool who spends his strength in brushing away motes when a heavy beam is suspended over him and may crush his head. When a man is strong enough to stand squarely upon a Republican platform, and has been fairly nominated by the Republican party, I require something more than doubtful rumors of what he may have been weak enough to say a dozen years prior to his nomination to move me from his support. There is no question that, whatever may have been the faults and shortcomings of the Republican party, it has been, first and last, the party of justice, liberty, and progress. It is also plain that, in whatever the Democratic party has yet done in the same direction, it has derived its inspiration from the example set by the Republican party. It, in fact, has worn, when it has worn anything tolerably decent, the old shoes and second-hand clothing of the Republican party. Of course I am glad to have the Democratic party follow the Republicans, even in the ragged and worn-out garments with which it now and then covers itself. But that party is altogether too slow of foot, too heavily burdened with its ugly record and the Solid South, to be safely trusted to lead in the cause of liberty, enlightenment, and progress. It is bad enough to have that party hanging on to the skirts of the Republican party, doing its best to hinder it and dragged forward by it, but it is far more mischievous to thrust it in front where it can block the way of the Republican party.

It is a matter of deep surprise and regret that once in a while we find a colored man in a Northern State using his pen and tongue in denunciation of the Republican party and in laudation of the Democratic party. No honest Democrat to-day can respect either the head or the heart of the black citizen who pretends to be a Democrat and urges other black men to support the Democratic ticket. Pointing to such a man he generally says: "Why, that negro is not a Democrat. He is only the miserable tool of Democrats using his persuasive powers to entice votes from the Republican party." A Democrat thinks not much better of these colored men who call themselves "Independents." He knows as well as we know that their independence is a fanciful delusion; that while they profess independence of the Republican party, they are actually dependent upon the Democratic party and are casting hungry eyes thitherward in the hope of getting something they have sought and have not found in the Republican party. These men may deceive themselves, but they cannot deceive those from whom they secede and whom they denounce, nor those to whom they go with honeyed words of commendation. They make the mistake of finding bad motives for all the good ever done by the Republican party and try to excuse all the bad things done by the Democratic party. The intelligent Democrat may accept this service, but he is not blind to the character of which it is born. The colored men who say they have nothing to thank the Republican party for and brazenly proclaim their ingratitude, inform the Democratic party in advance that it will get no thanks from them for anything it may do. I have a strong desire to make new friends, but I must not be asked to make them by telling accusations against old ones.

If I could go upon the stump, as you have honored me by asking me to do, I would endeavor to impress upon the colored citizens of the State of New York the great and paramount importance of a Republican victory in that State this fall. I would endeavor to show them that such a victory would tend to the promotion of their cause. For, disguise it as we may, the welfare of the colored people, North and South, has not yet passed beyond the line of danger. While the negro can be dragged from railroad cars in the South, for no fault but the color of his skin; while he can be sold into slavery on the mere pretense of crime; while he can be doomed to work in chain-gangs while others are only put in prison for offenses against the law; while he is presumed when accused to be guilty until he can prove his innocence; while he is subjected to lynch law and the halter without pretense of judge, jury, advocate, or legal accusers; while he is compelled to work for nominal wages and defrauded by store orders; while he is deprived of equal means afforded to all other classes and races for the education of his children, and while a Republican Senate passes a bill for such equal education and a Democratic House of Representatives votes down that measure of enlightenment and statesmanship, while he may be driven from the ballot-box and his vote goes uncounted—it may be safely said that the negro has a cause, and a great cause, which will be favorably affected by a Republican victory in New York and the nation, and disastrously affected by a Democratic victory.

No colored man who is true to himself and to his cause will allow himself to be diverted from it by any merely side political issues. However worthy may be the ends sought by labor parties, prohibition parties or other parties, the first duty of every colored man is to support with all his might the party which thus far has done most and is doing most to cause his rights, liberty and manhood to be respected. The colored man who does not see this to be his duty, and allows himself to be used as the tool of the Democratic party, shows himself to be utterly blind to the highest welfare of his people, or willingly and wittingly sacrificing the interest of the whole to the personal interest of a few. FREDK. DOUGLASS.

GROVER'S PREPARED SPEECHES.

They Were Put in Type at the Government Printing Office Before He Started.

[Washington special to Baltimore American.]

President Cleveland's speeches in the West are causing much comment and talk here, and several men have boasted that, if they wished, they could deliver to-day the address Cleveland intends to make in Atlanta or any of the Southern towns he proposes to visit. For two weeks before the President left this city he used an immense amount of writing paper. Together with his private secretary, he spent many hours of the night and day writing, either at his desk in the White House or at Red Top. About four or five days before he left for the now famous trip, a large amount of manuscript came very secretly into the Government printing office.

About the same time the manuscript came so secretly to the Government printing office, Public Printer Benedict called forth his select force and gave them each odd pieces of manuscript. The same oath was taken as at message time, and the proofs gathered up and the type locked up in the great safe as soon as set up. The printers—the select few—began to talk among themselves about this strange circumstance, and remarked that "the copy read very much like an historical lecture on certain cities of this country, especially West and South." They wondered thereat—thought it strange that such copy should come from the White House.

Finally, the proofs began to come back to be corrected, and in a number of instances there were so many corrections necessary that the entire speech had to be reset. It was then discovered that these mysterious manuscripts contained President Cleveland's speeches to be delivered on this Western-Southern tour. The plan had been carefully studied and a speech prepared for every city to be visited, and, in a number of cases, three or four speeches for the same city, to be delivered under certain circumstances, in response to visits to fairs, boards of trade, or banquets.

"I know what I am talking about," said one of the printers, "for I set one of the speeches. It has not been delivered yet, but it will be before long. I will tell you the name of the city it is to be delivered in, but don't publish it, because it will give me away and cause my removal, for you know all on this work are sworn to secrecy." The question was asked me to-day what right had Public Printer Benedict to thus employ the Government printers on private work for the President, especially when the Government printing office is running so close on its annual appropriation? Under what head is he to charge this?

LEVYING FEDERAL SPOILS.

The Civil Service Law Being Defiantly Violated in Iowa—A Daisy Letter.

[From the Des Moines Register.]

While Cleveland is swinging around the circle in a palatial train on his tour for votes, and vaunting and being vaunted as the great purist and civil-service reformer, the committees of his party are waging an active campaign and levying on his office holders for money. In Iowa the levying for federal spoils is actively going on. Chairman Hunter of the State Committee, acting in collusion with the leading federal office holders of this city, have listed the office holders of the State and begun to send out notices for them to send in a good liberal portion of their salaries to use in connection with the saloon fund in the campaign. That the public, including Mr. Cleveland himself, may see just how defiantly the civil service law is being violated in Iowa, we give below the confidential letter in which the federal office holders are being notified to pony up and lose no time in doing so. The letter is a daisy in these civil service reform times, and is a plain demand, "your money or your office." Here it is:

HEADQ'RS DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE,
HAWKEYE CLUB ROOMS,
DES MOINES, Iowa, Oct. 6, 1887.

MY DEAR SIR—Our committee is now actively engaged in perfecting our organization, arranging to send speakers, documents, and workers into different parts of the State, more especially in close counties. You, as an intelligent Democrat, certainly must realize the importance of sustaining us in this work.

As you are receiving some of the fruits of our victory in 1884, I take the liberty to call on you for a voluntary contribution. Such a contribution at this time will be very acceptable, and will be instrumental, in a large degree, in aiding us in paying obligations already contracted and carrying on campaign work that we have laid out.

There is also other important legitimate campaign work that we should do, provided we are furnished the requisite funds. You have undoubtedly observed that the Republican State Committee are endeavoring to overwhelm us with speakers and workers, hoping thereby to regain their lost prestige in the State.

While you hold a Federal office it is not expected that you will engage in politics in an offensive way or to the neglect of your official duties, but, in the language of President Cleveland, "individual interest and activity in political affairs are by no means condemned." Office-holders are neither disfranchised nor forbidden the exercise of political privileges."

The question will naturally arise, how much should be contributed? Presidential postmasters are generally contributing from $25 to $50. Fourth class postmasters, from $2 to $25; railway postal clerks, $10 to $15; members of pension examining boards, $10 to $15, and other federal office-holders in proportion to the amount of salary received as compared with the officials named above. We make no demands nor assessments. Will you kindly reply to this communication at an early day? I am sincerely yours,

EDW. H. HUNTER,
Chairman.

Thus we have the regular list and schedule of the Federal spoils in Iowa. Presidential postmasters, $50 a head; second-class postmasters, $25; little postmasters, with salaries of from $5 to $25 each, $2 each; there is nothing mean about the Democratic Central Committee—it will take anything of a forced levy, however small in amount. Railway postal clerks, $15 each; same amount from surgeons of examining boards. After plainly making it appear that the money must come or the office probably be lost, the recipient of this demand is informed at the tail end of the letter, "We make no demands or assessments," but instantly adds, "Will you kindly reply to this communication at an early day?" Mr. Hunter must be a humorist as well as a Jack Cade in politics. He says it is a voluntary contribution that all officeholders should make, but for fear they should not think of it themselves, or will not send it if they do not think of it, he writes to tell them that it is expected and that it must be hurried up.

Villifying the G. A. R.

There is a certain class of newspapers that never let slip an opportunity to ridicule or traduce the veteran soldiers, representing them as an organized society of public plunderers—men bent on bankrupting the Treasury in their greed for pensions. That misnomer, the St. Louis Republican, has been diligent in casting reproach upon the men who saved the country by defeating rebels in arms—men to whom, more than to any other given number of citizens we are indebted for a united and prosperous nation and an overflowing Treasury.

The Copperhead sheet above referred to has likened the G. A. R. to the fish known as the gar, using as one word the initial letters which represent the veteran organization. Commenting on this wonderful discovery, which deserves to rank with the Baconian cipher in the Shakspeare controversy, the Louisville Courier-Journal, which hates a veteran soldier as the devil hates holy water, says: "Our observant contemporary, the St. Louis Republican, has discovered that the initials of the Grand Army of the Republic, minus the intervening periods, spell the word gar, and insists that the resemblance between the organization and the fish is so marked that the former 'should pull out the stops of the honored initials and come before the country in the plain and unvarnished shape of the gar.'"

With this preface, and with the qualification that the G. A. R. are not all pension-beggars, our contemporary looks into natural history with this result: "The American Cyclopedia, in discussing gars, might just as well, with the aid of a little figurative language, have been describing the methods by which the G. A. R. seeks to appropriate the United States Treasury. 'They frequent shallow places,' says the historian, 'basking in the sun and devouring prey with great veracity. The manner of seizing prey differs from that usually observed in fishes, and resembles that of reptiles; instead of taking their food at once with open mouth and swallowing it immediately, they approach it slyly and sideways, and then, suddenly seizing the prey, hold it until by a series of movements it is placed in proper position for being swallowed in the manner of alligators and lizards. The great length or its jaws will distinguish it from other species. It may well be called the shark of fresh water.'"

Rebels and traitors have a very vivid recollection of the character and habits of this peculiar fish or reptile, or whatever else Copperheads may choose to call it. Its manner of catching and devouring its prey in the bloody waters of rebellion are perfectly familiar to the class represented by the two papers quoted from. It was voracious—swallowed the entire Southern Confederacy at one gulp, leaving only such spawn and small fry as are still found in the mud-puddles and sloughs of the South. Let Copperheads, traitors and rebels beware of the gar.—Pittsburgh Commercial.

His Journey Will End in '89.

Those who find fault with the President for using his official time travelling around the country in a $200,000 car are inconsiderate. They forget that in the course of little more than a year that $200,000 car will be at the service of another man. Mr. Cleveland is only making hay while the sun shines.—New York Tribune.

THE happiest period of man's life is when he has a pretty wife, a beautiful child, more ready cash than he well knows what to do with, a good conscience, and is not in debt.

E. B. WASHBURNE DEAD.

Sudden Dissolution of the Former United States Minister to France.

Congestion of the Heart and Lungs Takes Him Away with Little Warning.

Chicago papers chronicle the death of Hon. Elihu B. Washburne. The fatal disease which carried him off was a conjunction of congestion of the lungs and heart. About a month ago Mr. Washburne was taken with congestion of the brain, and at the time it was thought he would hardly recover. He did, however, and, although of late he has been an invalid, yet he seemed to be getting better, and his family confidently expected him to soon regain as good a state of health as a man of his age could reasonably expect to enjoy. After breakfast a barber came in to shave him, and while he was sitting in the chair he complained of a pain at his heart, and it grew so severe that the barber and the servant had to assist him to a bed. A physician was sent for, who prescribed, and Mr. Washburne lay on the bed all the morning. Though he seemed uneasy, the pain had left him, and neither he nor the family felt any great alarm about his condition. Later in the day he again seemed better and in the afternoon he got up by himself to obtain a drink of water. Again he felt the pain at his heart, this time more severe than before, and again he had to be assisted to his bed. This time he seemed helpless and after he had lain a few moments, his daughter-in-law holding his hand, without saying a word he turned over on his side and was dead. He passed away seemingly without pain of any kind. Telegrams were at once sent to the members of the family—Mrs. W. Bishop, Jr., who lives at Bridgeport, Conn.; Mrs. Fowler, of Denver, Col.; E. B. Washburne, Jr., Kingston, N. Y.; and William Pitt Washburne, who is at Livermore Falls, Me.

Elihu B. Washburne was born at Livermore, Oxford County, Me., in September, 1816. He entered the office of the Christian Intelligencer at Gardiner, Me., in June, 1833. He afterward studied law, was admitted to the bar, went West and located at Galena, Ill., in 1840. Being a Whig he did good electioneering work for his party during the Harrison campaign and was a delegate to the Whig national convention which nominated Henry Clay in 1844.

Mr. Washburn was a member of the National Whig Convention which nominated General Scott in 1852, and the same year was elected to Congress through the support of the Free-soilers. He was re-elected in 1854 by a majority of 5,000. He continued to represent the district term after term, his majority in 1860 rising to 13,511. Mr. Washburne acted as Chairman of the Committee on Commerce in the Congress of 1862, and later became Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. He occupied a conspicuous position in the councils of the nation during the troublous years of the rebellion. After repeated re-elections he at length became the "father of the house," and as such swore in as Speaker Schuyler Colfax and James G. Blaine. He was the opponent of every kind of jobbery, receiving for his vigilance the sobriquet of "the watchdog of the treasury." Mr. Washburne was a stanch personal and political friend and supporter of Abraham Lincoln. He was also one of Gen. Grant's earliest and best patrons. Being Congressman of Grant's district, he used his influence at every step of Grant's career to secure the latter's promotion. It was chiefly through his efforts that Grant was made a Lieutenant-General and afterward General of the armies of the United States.

Mr. Washburne was appointed Secretary of State by President Grant in 1869, and resigned his seat in Congress, which he had held for twenty consecutive years. After a brief tenure of office his health compelled him to resign. President Grant offered him the French mission, which he accepted. The Franco-Prussian war shortly afterward broke out, and the delicate questions of diplomacy and international law that arose taxed his abilities to the utmost. He succeeded in securing from the Foreign Department of France protection and safe conduct out of that empire for all Germans who felt it dangerous to remain. When the Commune raised its banner in Paris, Mr. Washburne was the only foreign Minister who stuck to his post, and the foreigners of every nation looked to him alone for protection. He remained in Paris during all the carnage that followed in the wake of the Commune, and made a strong but ineffectual effort to save the life of Archbishop Darboy. He received the thanks and recognition of nearly every nation for his services to their subjects during the dark days of the siege of Paris. Shortly after the war the order of the Red Eagle was conferred on him by the Emperor of Germany, who also presented him with his portrait in oil and a letter expressing the warmest affection and regard.

After President Hayes' election Mr. Washburne expressed a desire to resign, and soon returned to his native country, making his home in Chicago. He received 41 votes for President in the Republican National Convention in 1880. The same year he withdrew altogether from political life and devoted his leisure to literary pursuits.

DAKOTA.

Wonderful Growth of the Territory—Gov. Church's Report.

[Washington special.]

L. K. Church, Governor of Dakota, in his annual report says the Territory has had another year of wonderful growth in population and wealth, due to the extensions of railroad lines into rich agricultural and mineral regions. Twenty-three million eight hundred and eleven thousand four hundred and forty-five acres of public land remain unoccupied. During the last six years over 32,000,000 acres of Dakota land have been entered. The population of the Territory is estimated at 568,477, an increase of 66,000 during the year. The assessment property of the Territory is $157,084,365, an increase of nearly $25,000,000 during the year. The bonded indebtedness of the Territory is $1,[illegible],800. The area of sown wheat this season is estimated at 3,899,389 acres; yield 60,000,000 bushels, or nearly double the product of last year. The value of live-stock in the Territory is $42,828,338, an increase of $5,000,000 per year for seven years. The growth of educational facilities has more than kept pace with the growth of population. On the question of the admission of Dakota as a State, the Governor says a deep interest is taken in the question of division and admission, and whether admitted as one or two States there are many reasons why the people should not be longer deprived of the right to manage their own affairs. He does not express himself as having a preference in the matter.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for November 6—"Confessing Christ."

[From Chicago Standard. By Rev. J. M. Coon.]

The lesson for the above date may be found in the tenth chapter of Matthew, from the thirty-second to the forty-second verses. Time, A. D. 29. Place, Galilee, particular place not known.

SPECIAL MENTION.

Confessing Christ.—A Benares [illegible] young Brahmin came to the missionary and asked him to baptize him, as he wished to be a Christian. When the missionary questioned him, he said, "I am an orphan, and have heard you preach in the city, and wish to be a Christian. My gods are [illegible], but Christ is the Saviour of men, and died for them." The missionary said, "You are but a young boy yet, and must consider what you will have to suffer if you become a Christian." The boy replied, "Sahib, your warning comes too late; I have already cut my Brahmin cord, string and lock of hair, have eaten with Christians, and so destroyed my caste." The next day his friends came to look for him. They were allowed to see him, but not to take him away by force. When they left, he threw himself at the missionary's feet and begged him to protect him. The next day his grandmother and aunt came to him, and about forty persons [illegible] upon them tried to [illegible] carry the boy off, but they were not allowed to do this. They wept bitterly, threw themselves at his feet, and knocked their heads on the ground. Next came the grandfather, nearly a hundred years old; he was a great enemy of Christ, and very proud and violent. He argued with his grandson, flattered, scolded, cursed him, and at length flew into a great passion, and said, "You good-for-nothing young fellow! I thought you would one day burn my poor old bones, instead of which you play me the trick of becoming a Christian." The boy replied, "Do not be angry; become a Christian, too, grandfather, and we can live together. I cannot remain a Hindoo; I wish to become a Christian, for Christ died for me." Strong in the strength which Christ supplies, he remained steadfast, and ultimately was allowed to remain with the missionaries. (Biblical Treasury.)

To Confess Christ.—It may help to a definite idea of what is meant in these words to note that the promise is to those "who confess in me." It is not a mere public confession of the sinner, before the church, that we are dealing with. The confession is to be made "before men," and, as interpreted by verses 17 and 18, this means councils, synagogues, governors, kings, and others, in time of peril, which costs something. It is to such a bold confession as this its root to Christ, and shows a living union with Him. Such a confession in Christ the apostles witnessed before the Sanhedrim, and such Christ Himself witnessed before Pontius Pilate (Acts iv. 13, 1 Timothy vi. 13). In so far as it involves similar motives and results, it may apply unto others besides the apostles. (Abbott.)

Cross-bearing.—The Roman custom obliged the crucified to carry his own cross to the place of crucifixion. To this custom reference is made here. The meaning is, whoever is not willing to deny himself freely, even unto death, and that the most painful and shameful, is not worthy of me. It is, of course, a prophetic reference to Christ's own death. Observe, also, that it is not only cross-bearing, but cross taking that is required of the disciple. Merely to submit to burdens which God's providence places upon one is not enough. There must be a voluntary assuming of the burdens of a Christian life. We take up our cross when we mortify the deeds of the flesh for the sake of those of the spirit. We must repress, renounce, destroy our vain, fleshly desires, so that we can rightly put ourselves into communion with the purpose and service of Christ. (Standard Eclectic Commentary.)

Respect for parents.—The Rev. Dr. Ginsburg writes: "The Egyptians to this day consider it highly indecorous for a son to sit down in the presence of his father without permission; still less would he think of smoking before him. Among the Persians, the child manifests love for the mother and reverence for the father. In his presence the son, even when grown up and aged, must neither sit down nor smoke without special permission, which is not always granted. All the property belongs to the father. Hence it never happens that the son lives in affluence and the father in poverty, as is sometimes the case in Europe." It was this great veneration and love which the Jews, in common with all Eastern nations, had for their parents, that made it so hard for them to act contrary to the religious convictions of those whom they tenderly cherished, and leave them altogether in order to follow Christ. It was this same laudable feeling to which our Savior refers when he says, "He that loveth father or mother more than Me is not worthy of Me" (Matt. 10: 37); and which called forth his comforting promise, "Verily I say unto you, there is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, . . . but he shall receive a hundred fold now," etc. (Mark 10: 29, 30). And it is this which gives such an awful reality to the picture when one with an Eastern mind reads the words, "The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father; the mother against the daughter," etc. (Luke 12: 53). (Cook's Comprehensive Quarterly).

CONNECTING LINK.

Our lesson to-day is the closing part of the instruction which our Lord gave to his twelve apostles. His discourse on that occasion consists of two parts. The first (Matt. 10: 5-15) contains particular directions for their immediate mission; the second (Matt. 10: 16-42) contains instructions suitable for their later ministry. The discourse is peculiar to Matthew, though some of its sayings are found in the other gospels. A number of reasons have been given to encourage the apostles to go forward "undeterred by the fear of men; first, the fact that if they are maltreated and slandered, it is no worse than their Master himself suffered (vs. 24, 25); second, that the truths they proclaimed are destined to be made known, and thus no opposition will prevent it (vs. 26, 27); third, that God's wrath is more to be dreaded than man's (v. 28); fourth, that he who cares for trifling things will certainly care for them (vs. 29-31); finally, that if we do not confess Christ before men he will not confess us before his Father in heaven." (Broadus.)

THE SUPREME REQUIREMENT IN FOLLOWING CHRIST.

This is self-denial. Self and Christ stand over against each other, and there is no compromise between them. All men are naturally followers of self, denying Christ; if, therefore, they would follow Christ, they must deny self. It is one or the other; it can not be both. "No man can serve two masters."

1. The nature of this requirement. It is (1) an individual requirement. "Whosoever," etc. "All the people were present," but he encircled each with a line of separation, and pressed the truth upon the individual conscience. It is (2) peculiar in each case. "Let him deny himself, and take up his cross," etc. What is self-denial to one may not be to another. You have your cross, he his, and I mine. Self-denials differ as souls differ, as souls differ. It is (3) for Christ's sake. "Whosoever will come after me, follow me." This is vital, the very root of true self-denial. The world is full of self-denials for home, for friends, for country, for self; but these are not genuine. That only is true self-denial which exalts Christ. It is (4) voluntary. "Whosoever will come," etc., i. e., wills, chooses, to come. "Let him take up his cross and follow me." It is (5) in life as well as in heart. It has its outward sign as well as its inward spirit—the obedient walk, the painful and shameful cross. Very much so-called self-denial never gets beyond the heart. It is (6) constant. This is implied in the verb "follow," indicating continuous action. "Let him take up his cross daily." There is no day without its cross. If truly lived we shall find this divine seal on it. A religion that costs nothing is worth nothing. The true follower of Christ must be ready to be the crucified one as well as to see the crucified One.

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS.

1. Our religious faith must speak out—manifest itself (32). We are not allowed to conceal our faith in Jesus; it would not only be cowardly, but extremely ungrateful, to fail to stand up, before a gainsaying world, for him who, in our behalf, "endured the contradiction of sinners against himself." As he loved us even unto death, we should be willing and ready to die for him.

2. To deny Christ is to fail to confess him (33). There is no middle ground. "He that is not for me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad."

3. We should not be driven from the service of Christ through the opposition of others (34-38). Christ has a supreme claim on our affections and service. If even father or mother should stand between Christ and us, we must prefer Christ. This is the supreme test of discipleship—the surrender of all for Christ. See Luke 14: 25-33.

4. Beware how you sacrifice future interests to present gains—the bliss of eternity to momentary ease (39). He is always the gainer who clings to truth and duty, for when these are forsaken all is lost.

5. In honoring the apostles we honor Christ, for they are His ambassadors (40).

Subject of lesson for Nov. 13: "Christ's Witness to John." Matt. 11: 2-15.

AT PEACE WITH ENEMIES.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon at the Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Why We Should Forgive—Ill Humor Exhausting to Physical and Mental Health—Those Who Preserve Their Temper in Debate Generally Come Out Ahead.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 23.—The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., preached in the Brooklyn Tabernacle this morning on the subject "Forgiveness before sundown." After explaining some passages concerning Hezekiah, Dr. Talmage gave out the following hymn, which was sung by the congregation:

'Tis glorious hope revives
Our courage by the way,
While each in expectation lives
And longs to see the day.

Prof. Henry Eyre Browne rendered on the organ an aria with variations, by Kramer. The text of the sermon was from Ephesians iv, 26: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath." Dr. Talmage said:

What a pillow embroidered of all colors hath the dying day. The cradle of clouds from which the sun rises is beautiful enough, but it is surpassed by the many colored mausoleum in which at evening it is buried. Sunset among the mountains! It almost takes one's breath away to recall the scene. The long shadows stretching over the plain make the the glory of the departing light on the tiptop crags and struck aslant through the foliage the more transplendent. Saffron and gold, purple and crimson commingled. All the castles of cloud in conflagration. Burning Moscows on the sky. Hanging gardens of roses at their deepest blush. Banners of vapors, red as if from carnage, in the battle of the elements. The hunter among the Adirondacks and the Swiss villager among the Alps know what is a sunset among the mountains. After a storm at sea the rolling grandeur into which the sun goes down to bathe the nightfall is something to make weird and splendid dreams out of for a lifetime. Alexander Smith in his poem compares the sunset to "the barren beach of hell," but this wonderful spectacle of nature makes me think of the burnished wall of Heaven. Paul in prison writing my text remembers some of the gorgeous sunsets among the mountains of Asia Minor, and how he had often seen the towers of Damascus blaze in the close of the Oriental days, and he flashed out that memory in the text when he says: "Let not the sun go down upon your wrath."

Sublime and all suggestive duty for people then and people now. Forgiveness before sundown. He who never feels the throb of indignation is imbecile. He who can walk among the injustices of the world, inflicted upon himself and others, without flush of cheek or flash of eye or agitation of nature, is either in sympathy with wrong or semi-idiotic. When Ananias, the high priest, ordered the constables of the court-room to smite Paul in the mouth, Paul fired up and said: "God will smite thee, thou whited wall." In the sentence immediately before my text Paul commands the Ephesians "Be ye angry and sin not." It all depends on what you are mad at and how long the feeling lasts whether anger is right or wrong. Life is full of exasperations. Saul after David, Succoth after Gideon, Korah after Moses, the Pasquins after Augustus, the Pharisees after Christ, and every one has had his pursuers, and we are swindled or belied or misrepresented or persecuted or in some way wronged, and the danger is that healthful indignation shall become baleful spite, and that our feelings settle down into a prolonged outpouring of temper displeasing to God and ruinous to ourselves, and hence the important injunction of the text: "Let not the sun go down on your wrath."

Why that limitation to one's anger? Why that period of flaming vapor set to punctuate a flaming disposition? What has the sunset got to do with one's resentful emotions? Was it a haphazard sentiment written by Paul without special significance? No, no; I think of five reasons why we should not let the sun set before our temper sets.

First, because twelve hours is long enough to be cross about any wrong inflicted upon us. Nothing is so exhausting to physical health or mental faculty as a protracted indulgence of ill humor. It racks the nervous system. It hurts the digestion, it heats the blood in brain and heart until the whole body is first overheated and then depressed. Besides that, it sours the disposition, turns one aside from his legitimate work, expends energies that ought to be better employed, and does us more harm than it does our antagonist. Paul gives us a good, wide allowance of time for legitimate denunciation, from 6 o'clock to 6 o'clock, but says: "Stop there!" Watch the descending orb of day, and when it reaches the horizon take a reef in your disposition. Unloose your collar and cool off. Change the subject to something delightfully pleasant. Unroll your tight fist and shake hands with some one. Bank up the fires at the curfew bell. Drive the growling dog of enmity back to its kennel. The hours of this morning will pass by, and the afternoon will arrive, and the sun will begin to set, and I beg you on its blazing hearth throw all your feuds, invectives, and satires.

Other things being equal, the man who preserves good temper will come out ahead. An old essayist says that the celebrated John Henderson, of Bristol, England, was at a dining party where political excitement ran high and the debate got angry, and while Henderson was speaking his opponent, unable to answer his argument, dashed a glass of wine in his face, when the speaker deliberately wiped the liquid from his face and said: "This, sir, is a digression; now, if you please, for the main argument." While worldly philosophy could help but very few to such equipoise of spirit the grace of God could help any man to such a triumph. "Impossible," you say. "I would have either left the table in anger or have knocked the man down." But I have come to believe that nothing is impossible, if God help, since what I saw at Bethshan faith cure in London, England, two summers ago. While the religious service was going on Rev. Dr. Boardman, glorious man, since gone to his heavenly rest, was telling the scores of sick people present that Christ was there as of old to heal all diseases, and that, if they would only believe, their sickness would depart. I saw a woman near me, with hand and arm twisted of rheumatism, and her wrist was fiery with inflammation, and it looked like those cases of chronic rheumatism which we have all seen and sympathized with, cases beyond all human healing. At the preacher's reiteration of the words: "Will you believe? Do you believe? Do you believe now?" I heard this poor sick woman say, with an emphasis which sounded through the building: "I do believe." And then she laid her twisted arm and hand out as straight as your arm and hand, or mine. If I had seen one rise from the dead I would not have been much more thrilled. Since then I believe that God will do anything in answer to our prayer and in answer to our faith, and He can heal our bodies, and if our soul is all twisted and misshapen of revenge and hate and inflamed with sinful proclivity, he can straighten that also and make it well and clean. Aye, you will not postpone till sundown forgiveness of enemies if you can realize that their behavior toward you may be put into the catalogue of the "all things" that "work together for good to those that love God." I have had multitudes of friends, but I have found in my own experience that God so arranged it that the greatest opportunities of usefulness that have been opened before me were opened by enemies. And when, years ago, they conspired against me, that opened all Christendom to me as a field in which to preach the Gospel. So you may harness your antagonists to your best interests and compel them to draw you on to better work and higher character. Suppose, instead of waiting until six minutes past 6 o'clock this evening, when the sun will set, you transact this glorious work of forgiveness before meridian.

Again, we ought not to let the sun go down on our wrath, because we will sleep better if we are at peace with everybody. Insomnia is getting to be one of the most prevalent of disorders. How few people retire at 10 o'clock at night and sleep clear through to 6 in the morning! To relieve this disorder all narcotics, and sedatives, and chloral, and bromide of potassium, and cocaine, and intoxicants are used, but nothing is more important than a quiet spirit if we would win somnolence. How is a man going to sleep when he is in mind pursuing an enemy? With what nervous twitch he will start out of a dream! That new plan for cornering his foe will keep him wide awake while the clock strikes 11, 12, 1, 2, 3, 4. I give you an unfailing prescription for wakefulness: spend the evening hours rehearsing your wrongs and the best way of avenging them. Hold a convention of friends on this subject in your parlor or office at 8 or 9 o'clock. Close the evening by writing a bitter letter, expressing your sentiments. Take from the desk or pigeon-hole the papers in the case to refresh your mind with your evening's meanness. Then lie down and wait for the coming of day, and it will come before sleep comes, or your sleep will be a worried quiescence, and, if you take the precaution to lie flat on your back a frightful nightmare. Why not put a bound to your animosity? Why let your foes come into the sanctities of your dormitory? Why let those slanderers who have already torn your reputation to pieces or injured your business, bend over your midnight pillow and drive from you one of the greatest blessings that God can offer sweet, refreshing, all invigorating sleep? Why not fence out your enemies by the golden bars of the sunset? Why not hand behind the barricade of evening cloud and say to them: "Thus far and no farther?" Many a man and many a woman is having the health of body as well as the health of soul eaten away by a malevolent spirit. I have in time of religious awakening had persons night after night come into the inquiry room and get no peace of soul. After a while I have bluntly asked her: "Is there not some one against whom you have a hatred that you are not willing to give up?" After a little confusion she has slightly whispered, "Yes." Then I said to her: "You will never find peace with God as long as you retain that virulence."

A boy in Sparta, having stolen a fox, kept him under his coat, and, though the fox was gnawing his vitals, he submitted to it rather than expose his misdeed. Many a man with a smiling face has under his jacket an animal that is gnawing away the strength of his body and the integrity of his soul. Better get rid of that hidden fox as soon as possible. There are hundreds of domestic circles where that which most is needed is the spirit of forgiveness. Brothers apart, and sisters apart, and parents and children apart. Solomon says a brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city. Are there not enough sacred memories of your childhood to bring you together? The rabbins recount how that Nebuchadnezzar's son had such spite against his father that after he was dead he had his father burned to ashes, and then put the ashes into four sacks, and tied them to four eagles' necks which flew away in opposite directions. And there are now domestic antipathies which seem forever to have scattered all parental memories to the four winds of Heaven. How far the eagles fly with sacred ashes! The hour of sundown makes to that family no practical suggestion. Thomas Carlyle, in his biography of Frederick the Great, says the old King was told by his confessor he must be at peace with his enemies if he wanted to enter Heaven. Then he said to his wife, the Queen: "Write to your brother after I am dead that I forgive him." Roloff, the confessor, said: "Her majesty had better write him immediately." "No," said the King, "after I am dead; that will be safer." So he let the sun of his earthly existence go down upon his wrath.

Again: We ought not to allow the sun set before forgiveness takes place, because we might not live to see another day. And what if we should be ushered into the presence of our Maker with a grudge upon our soul? The majority of people depart this life in the night. Between 11 o'clock p. m. and 3 o'clock a. m. there is something in the atmosphere which relaxes the grip which the body has on the soul, and most of the people enter the next world through the shadows of this world. Perhaps God may have arranged it in that way so as to make the contrast the more glorious. I have seen sunshiny days in this world that must have been almost like the radiance of Heaven. But as most people leave the earth between sundown and sunrise, they quit this world at its darkest, and Heaven, always bright, will be the brighter for that contrast. Out of blackness into irradiation. Shall we then leap over the roseate bank of sunset into the favorite hunting ground of disease and death, carrying our animosities with us? Who would want to confront his God, against whom we have all done meaner things than anybody has ever done against us, carrying old grudges? How can we expect his forgiveness for the greater when we are not willing to forgive others the less? Napoleon was encouraged to undertake the crossing of the Alps because Charlemagne had previously crossed them. And all this rugged path of forgiveness bears the bleeding footsteps of Him who conquered through suffering, and we ought to be willing to follow. On the night of our departure from this life into the next, our one plea will have to be offered in the presence of Him who has said: "If you forgive not men their trespasses neither will your Heavenly Father forgive your trespasses." What a sorry plight if we stand there hating this one, and hating that one, and wishing this one a damage, and wishing some one else a calamity, and we ourselves needing forgiveness for 10,000 times 10,000 obliquities of heart and life. When our last hour comes, we want it to find us all right. Hardly anything affects me so much in the uncovering of ancient Pompeii as the account of the soldier who, after the city had for many centuries been covered with the ashes and scoriae of Vesuvius, was found standing in his place on guard, hand on spear and helmet on head. Others fled at the awful submergement, but the explorer, 1700 years after, found the body of that brave fellow in right position. And it will be a grand thing if, when our last moment comes, we are found in right position toward God, on guard and unaffrighted by the ashes from the mountain of death. I do not suppose that I am any more of a coward than most people, but I declare to you that I would not dare to sleep to-night if there were any being in all the earth with whom I would not gladly shake hands, lest, during the night hours, my spirit dismissed to other realms, I should, because of my unforgiving spirit, be denied divine forgiveness.

"But," says some woman, "there is a horrid creature that has so injured me that rather than make up with her I would die first." Well, sister, you may take your choice—for one or the other it will be—your complete pardon of her or God's eternal banishment of you. "But," says some man, "that fellow who cheated me out of those goods, or damaged my business credit, or started that lie about me in the newspapers, or by his perfidy broke up my domestic happiness, forgive him I cannot—forgive him I will not." Well, brother, take your choice. You will never be at peace with God till you are at peace with man. Feeling as you now do, you would not get so near the harbor of Heaven as to see the light-ship. Better leave that man with the God who said: "Vengeance is mine, I will repay." You may say: "I will make him sweat for that yet, I will make him squirm, I mean to pursue him to the death," but you are damaging yourself more than you damage him and you are making Heaven for your own soul an impossibility. If he will not be reconciled to you, be reconciled to him. In five or six hours it will be sundown. The dahlias will bloom against the western sky. Somewhere between this and that take a shovel and bury the old quarrel at least six feet deep. "Let not the sun go down on your wrath."

"But," you say, "I have more than I can bear; too much is put upon me, and I am not to blame if I am somewhat revengeful and unrelenting." Then I think of the little child at the moving of some goods from a store. The father was putting some rolls of goods on the child's arm, package after package, and some one said, "That child is being over-loaded and as much ought not to be put upon her," when the child responded, "Father knows how much I can carry;" and God, our Father, will not allow to much imposition on his children. In the day of eternity it will be found you had not one annoyance too many, not one aspiration too many, yet one outrage too many. Your Heavenly Father knows how much you can carry.

Again: We should not let the sun go down on our wrath because it is of little importance what the world says of you or does to you when you have the affluent God of the sunset as your provider and defender. People talk as though it were a fixed spectacle of nature and always the same. But no one ever saw two sunsets alike, and if the world has existed 6,000 years there have been about 2,190,000 sunsets, each of them as distinct from all the other pictures in the gallery of the sky as Titian's "Last Supper," Rubens' "Descent from the Cross," Raphael's "Transfiguration" and Michael Angelo's "Last Judgment" are distinct from each other. If that God of such infinite resources that He can put on the wall of the sky each night more than the Louvre, and the Luxembourg, and the Vatican, and Dresden and Venetian galleries all in one is my God and your God, our provider and protector, what is the use of our worrying about any human antagonism? If we are misinterpreted, the God of the many-colored sunset can put the right color on our action. If he can afford to hang such masterpieces over the outside wall of Heaven and have them obliterated in an hour, he must be very rich in resources and can put us through in safety. If all the garniture of the western heavens at eventide is but the upholstery of one of the windows of our future home, what small business for us to be chasing enemies! Let not this Sabbath's sun go down upon your wrath.

Mahomet said: "The sword is the key of Heaven and hell, a drop of blood shed is better than fasting, and wounds in the day of judgment resplendent as vermilion, and odoriferous as musk." But, my hearers, in the last day we will find just the opposite of that to be true, and that the sword never unlocks Heaven, and that He who heals wounds is greater than he who makes them, and that on the same ring are two keys: God's forgiveness of us and our forgiveness of enemies; and these two keys unlock Paradise.

And now I wish for all of you a beautiful sunset in your earthly existence. With some of you it has been a long day of trouble, and with others of you it will be far from calm. When the sun rose at 6 o'clock it was the morning of youth, and a fair day was prophesied, but by the time the noonday of midlife had come and the clock of your earthly existence had struck 12, cloud racks gathered and tempests followed in the track of tempest. But as the evening of old age approaches I pray God the skies may brighten and the clouds be piled up into pillars as of celestial temples to which you go, or move as with mounted cohorts come to take you home. And as you sink out of sight below the horizon may there be a radiance of Christian example lingering long after you are gone, and on the heavens be written in letters of sapphire, and on the waters in letters of opal, and on the hills in letters of emerald: "Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw itself, for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light and the days of thy mourning shall be ended." So shall the sunset of earth become the sunrise of Heaven.

An Ingenious Spider.

Spiders are not looked upon with much favor by people in general, though they are a very bright, intellectual folk, with a decided aptitude for geometry. They are the only animals which are known to construct nets for the capture of prey. The following example of their ingenuity is from the notes of a traveler in New Guinea. "I saw," he says, "a small spider which had spun its web under the edge of one of my boxes, and taken a butterfly at least ten times its own size. No sooner did the latter find itself caught than it began to flutter. I then watched the spider's proceedings.

"It issued from its hiding-place, and threw itself upon its victim, but without injuring it. Looking attentively I saw that it attached a thread to the end of one wing, with which it ran away, and made it fast to the box, so that the butterfly could not stir this wing. The spider then descended again, and repeated the performance at the other wing. It went backward and forward on similar errands eleven times, on each occasion diminishing its poor victim's power to flutter, until at last it could neither move nor offer any resistance.

"I thought that now, probably, the time had come for the spider to begin to sup, but its work was not yet done.

"I saw it descend again, and unhook one wing from the side to which it was fastened; the spider then climbed up, endeavoring to raise it prey, and having secured the wing he re-descended and cut another thread: then mounting again, repeated the performance.

"It ascended and descended twenty-one times, loosening all the threads, and making them fast higher up, until it had hoisted its prey to the mouth of its den. Having accomplished this, it shut itself up to enjoy the fruits of its toil; but it seemed to me such an intelligent spider that I thought it worthy of being preserved in spirits of wine."

Current Coin of Society.

Good breeding is the current coin of society. He who is bankrupt therein ought not to take rank with the rest. The defaulting Lombard had his bench broken in full conclave, and was chased out of the street where his better endowed brethren carried on their business. What the old money-changers and money lenders did with their defaulting members society ought to do with the ill-bred—to the people who oppose all you say for the mere sake of opposing you, and not for anything approaching to a principle; who contradict you flatly and not apologize when they are proved in the wrong; who tell you home truths of a bilious complexion and vinegar aspect; who repeat ill-natured remarks made in their presence, or repeated to them, making you feel scorned and despised, you know not why, and vilified without the chance given you of self-justification; who abuse your own friends, and ascribe to them all the sins of the decalogue; who brutally attack your known principles in religion, morals, politics; who sneer at your cherished superstitions and fall foul of your confessed weaknesses; who take the upper hand of you generally, not counting your susceptibilities as worth the traditional button. Such people as these—and there are many of them masquerading as ladies and gentlemen of good position and irreproachable credentials—but, no matter what their lineage or fortune, they should be cashiered, and society would be all the sweeter and more wholesome for the want of them.—London Queen.

THE highest denomination of United States legal-tender notes is $10,000. No bills of the value of $100,000 have ever been issued in this country.

IN addition to steam, quite a number of private yachts are propelled upon credit.

GREAT GUNS.

Soldiers' Stirring Stories of Solid Shot, Screaming Shells,

Big Battles, Bursting Bombs, Buzzing Bullets, and Bright Bayonets.

Cover Them Over.

BY WILL CARLETON.

OW cover them over with beautiful flowers,
Deck them with garlands, those brothers of ours,
Lying so silent, by night and by day,
Sleeping the years of their manhood away,
Years they had marked for the joys of the brave,
Years they must waste in the sloth of the grave.
All the bright laurels they waited to bloom
Fell from their hopes when they fell to the tomb.
Give them the meed they have won in the past,
Give them the honors their future forecast,
Give them the chaplets they won in the strife,
Give them the laurels they lost with their life.

CHORUS.

Cover them over, yes cover them over,
Parent, husband, brother, and lover;
Crown in your hearts those dead heroes of ours,
And cover them over with beautiful flowers.

Cover the faces that motionless lie,
Shut from the blue of the motionless sky.
Faces once decked with the smiles of the gay,
Faces now marked with the frown of decay,
Eyes that looked friendship and love to your own,
Lips that the thoughts of affection made known,
Brows you have soothed in the hour of despair,
Cheeks you have brightened by tenderest care;
Oh! how they gleamed at the battle's first cry,
Oh! how they streamed when they bid you good-by!
Oh! how they glowed in the battle's fierce flame,
Oh! how they paled when the death angel came!

Chorus—

Cover their hands that are lying unfried,
Crossed by the bosom and low by the side,
Hands to you, mother, in infancy thrown,
Hands to you, father, clasped close to your own;
Hands where you, sister, when tired, dismayed,
Hung for protection and counsel and aid;
Hands that you, brothers, in loyalty know,
Hands that you, wife, wrung in bitter adieu.
Bravely the musket and saber they bore,
Words of affection they wrote in their gore,
Grandly they grasped for the garland of light,
Catching the mantle of death-darkened night.

Chorus—

Cover their feet that all weary and torn,
Hither by comrades were tenderly borne,
Feet that have trodden the flowery ways,
Close by your own in the old happy days,
Feet that have pressed life's opening shore,
Roses of pleasure and death's poisoned thorn.
Swiftly they rushed to the help of the right,
Firmly they stood in the shock of the fight;
Ne'er till the bugle of Gabriel sound,
Will they come out of their couch in the ground.

Chorus—

Cover the hearts that have beaten so high,
Beaten with hopes that were doomed but to die,
Hearts that have burned in the heat of the fray,
Hearts that have yearned for the homes far away,
Hearts that beat high in the charge's loud tramp,
Hearts that low fell in the prison's foul damp.
Once they were swelling with courage and will,
Now they are lying all pulseless and still.
Once they were glowing with friendship and love,
Now their great souls have gone soaring above,
Bravely their blood to the nation they gave,
When in her bosom they found them a grave.

Chorus—

Cover the thousands who sleep far away,
Sleep where their friends cannot find them to-day,
They who in mountains and hillside and dell
Rest where they wearied, and lie where they fell.
Softly the grass blades creep round their repose,
Sweetly above them the wild flowret blows,
Zephyrs of freedom fly gently o'erhead,
Whispering prayers for the patriot dead.
So in our minds we'll name them once more,
So in our hearts we'll cover them o'er,
Roses and lilies and violets blue
Bloom in our souls for the brave and the true.

Chorus—

When the long years have rolled slowly away,
E'en to the dawn of earth's funeral day;
When at the archangel's trumpet and tread,
Rise up the faces and forms of the dead;
When the great world its last judgment awaits,
When the blue sky shall swing open its gates,
And our long columns march silently through,
Past the great Captain for final review,
Then from the blood that has flowed for the right,
Crowns shall spring upward, untarnished and bright.
Then the glad ears of each war-martyred son
Proudly shall hear the glad tidings "well done,"
Blessings for garlands shall cover them over,
Parent and husband, and brother and lover,
God will reward those dead heroes of ours,
And cover them over with beautiful flowers.

Hard Tack and Soft Bread.

BY JAMES FRANKLIN FITTS.

Very thrilling and sensational is the title of this sketch. The civilian might wonder what could be written about it. But to the veteran those words mean a great deal; to him they stand for the light and the shady side of the soldier's life. There is very much to be said on the subject—so much that I can only glance at it in this column.

There were, first and last, in the volunteer army of the United States during the war no less than a million and a half of soldiers. There were so many of them that it is calculated that one out of every eight of the loyal male population was a soldier. In order that these immense hosts should be able to march and fight they had to be fed, and systematically fed. As to how this stupendous job was continually accomplished, we are still wondering; and the soldiers, who know better than anybody else the size of the job, wonder the most. What the soldiers do know about it ought to be put into print.

The subject naturally falls under two heads—the regular and the irregular feeding of the soldier. Anybody who imagines from this enumeration that it is the beginning of a sermon on army subsistence is recommended to read right on, and he will be soon undeceived.

Soldiers were accustomed to speak of a situation where there was little duty and plenty to eat, as a "soft thing." The expression particularly referred to the troops who garrisoned the forts or were barracked in the large cities as a permanent guard. These comrades, most of them, only wanted the occasion to show that there was fight in them; indeed the worst slaughter at Cold Harbor was among the heavy artillery regiments, fresh from the forts at Baltimore; but the duty first named was, after all, much like playing soldier. A comfortable bunk to sleep in, under a tight roof; full rations every day, so large in quantity that there was an excess to sell or swap, whereby delicacies were procured; all this, with the easy duty and no marching, was emphatically "a soft thing," but, in the eye of the soldier of two or three hot campaigns, it was not soldiering.

Often in passing some immense depot of commissary supply in the city or in the field, I paused to look at the vast structures of boxes of hard bread, the piles of coffee in sacks, the pyramids of bacon. These were the staples—hard bread, coffee, bacon. Next to gunpowder and cold steel, they were the sinews of war.

I think that the experience of all veterans will agree with mine. On actual campaign, we had the best of times and the worst of times; we were sometimes in regions of plenty—especially so in the Gulf States—where army rations were almost discarded, and the soldier waxed fat and merry as he lived on the country; we were sometimes so far out of the reach of the commissary, that half-rations were gladly accepted, when offered; but through it all, through plenty and leanness, the soldier always acknowledged the worth of his two steadfast friends—coffee and hard-tack.

As to coffee I do not doubt that it saved thousands upon thousands of lives in the army. The soldier absolutely could not do without it. It strengthened him for his work in a way that nothing else could possibly do. He learned by practice and experience the trick of making it ready for use in the briefest time, and amid surroundings where the thing seemed impossible. The reproachful epithet, "coffee-boiler," ought to be changed to something more distinctive of the class of skulks and cowards to whom it is commonly applied. All soldiers loved coffee. When the sutler was around, condensed milk could be obtained for it; when he was not, it could be taken and relished, clear and strong. It never hurt any of us, and it did "powers of good."

The Commissary Department ought to have large praise for its care in the issuing of pure coffee to the soldiers. At a time when it was the general practice and fashion to cheat the Government in contracting for everything the soldier ate, drank, and wore, and when colossal fortunes were thus coined out of the necessities of the soldier, it is pleasant to find one great commodity that entered so largely into the very life as well as the comfort of the armies in which there was no fraud. The coffee given us was uniformly good.

Perhaps some of my comrades will think that tobacco should be named as one of the chief indispensables of the soldier. It really was so, and there were times when it was issued free with the ration, and other times, pretty far down in Dixie, when the boys issued it to themselves whenever they could lay hands on it. Not using it myself, I still did not fail to observe the great consolation that it gave to all soldiers, high and low, whose lot was cast where mine was. I can do no better than to furnish to such comrades somebody's very picturesque lines on the subject:

Cooking Coffee.

I look upon this round, green ball,
Where poets sing and warriors fight,
Where death so surely sizes all,
And brave men struggle for the right;
Where, 'mid the din and woe and strife,
Stout hearts still bear this heavy life;
And see that all the mighty men,
Whose deeds, like beacons, shine afar,
Who wield the sword and wield the pen,
Each loves and smokes his good cigar!
In spite of all that has been spoke,
The wreath of Fame's a wreath of smoke.
And, turning hence mine eyes, I bend
To heaven, and see that every star
Is but the burning, flaming end
Of some tall angel's lit cigar;
And, where the Milky Way still dashes,
Is but the place they knock their ashes!

And the hard-tack.

For the benefit of ignorant citizens and the new generation it may be explained that this great staff of the soldier was issued habitually in exactly the shape of a soda cracker. The parallel ceases with shape. They were hard; emphatically hard.

A box of them was once noticed with the brand, "B. C.—663." The meaning was not evident, but the soldiers were not at a loss for an interpretation. "It is the date of making," said one, "663 years before Christ!"

The recruits, and all green soldiers, were shy of them at first; but they soon came to it. The hard-tack would stand any climate. They were never fresh, never stale. They were insect-proof. The bugs got into the holes, and could make no impression. They had to give it up. Experience made the soldier wise, and taught him that a haversack full of hard-tack was a blessing. He ate them with his bacon; he fried them; he stewed them; he even made puddings of them. No veteran will ever go back on hard-tack.

Soon after the close of the war one of the very best of soldier-songs, on "Hard Tack," was published anonymously. I would greatly like to learn who wrote it. Here it is:

Would you be a soldier, laddy?
Come and serve your Uncle Sam!
He henceforth must be your daddy,
And Columbia your dam.
Do you like salt-horse and beans?
Do you know what hard-tack means?
Jolly hard-tack, tack, tack, tack—
That's the stuff you have to crack!
Do you want to be a soldier?
Now's the time to put in play
What your good old granny told you
Of the Revolution day.
What had their brave jaws to chew?
Sometimes nothing—what have you?
Jolly hard-tack, tack, tack, tack—
That's the stuff you have to crack!
Want to be a soldier, do you?
You must march through swamp and sludge,
And though bolts go through and through you,
Blaze away, and never budge.
But when muskets go crack, crack,
Bite your cartridge and hard-tack;
Jolly hard tack, tack, tack, tack—
That's the stuff you have to crack!

A Remarkable Career.

General John B. Turchin is one of the notable men of the war, and has had a career of extraordinary vicissitude. He is a Russian by birth, and was educated for the staff of the Russian army and served in that capacity until his thirty-second year, gaining great distinction during the Circassian and Crimean wars. He then came to this country, and at the outbreak of the war organized and led to the field the Nineteenth Illinois, one of the very best regiments in the Army of the Cumberland. He was sent at first to Missouri, where he electrified his commanders by an application of the old military axiom that war must support war. It will be remembered at that time that we were vigorously engaged in the policy of guarding the rebels' chicken coops and onion beds, a line of operation that did not at all suit the vigorous Russian, who was determined to have his men well fed and cared for at whatever cost it might be to the enemy. In 1862 he was in command of a brigade in Mitchell's division, and was near Athens, Ala., when General Robert L. McCook was murdered by guerrillas. In revenge his brigade burned the town, and a very funny story is told of the General's part in that performance. Upon marching into the town he announced that he was going to sleep for two hours, and every person knew how much he disliked being aroused. When he finally awoke from his siesta the town was in flames, at which he expressed official surprise. For this he was put under arrest and court-martialed by General Buell, who was, perhaps, the most earnest executant of the hen-coop and onion-bed policy that we then had in the field. The Colonel was dismissed from his regiment by the sentence of the court martial, but found a commission as Brigadier General awaiting him when he returned home to Chicago, and was received there with a great ovation. He assumed command of his brigade in the Fourteenth Corps, and with it did splendid service in the Tullahoma, Chickamauga, and subsequent campaigns. He now makes his home at Radom, Ill., where he has settled a colony of Poles that he brought over from Europe, and, though sixty-two years old, is very vigorous and hearty, and one of the most interesting talkers that one can sit down with.

Closing the War.

The man who claims to have ordered the last shot fired on the Confederate side during the late unpleasantness is Mr. A. B. Faircloth, of Camilla, Ga., a gentleman as modest as he is brave. The incident was told us by Captain D. H. Sanders, an old comrade in arms of Mr. Faircloth, and forms a unique feature in the unwritten history of the great struggle. Mr. Faircloth belonged to Company C, 2d Georgia cavalry. This regiment was for some time associated with Terry's famous Texas Rangers, whose exploits are among the most highly prized traditions of the war. The intimacy that grew up between these two regiments was very close and tender, and remained unbroken to the end. A ranger would succor a 2d Georgia cavalryman in distress as quickly as he would his own brother. They fought together, bivouacked together, and together they went on many a wild, adventurous raid.

Lee had surrendered. Johnston had surrendered. Old Kirby Smith remained at the head of armed resistance. The Confederacy was in its death throes. Wheeler determined not to surrender his men, but to force his way across the country to join Smith west of the Mississippi. To this end he procured the removal of his command from Johnston's army, and started upon one of the most hazardous retreats in the annals of war. While everywhere Confederate troops were grounding their arms, taking the oath of allegiance to the United States Government, and returning to their homes, this little band under their gallant leader refused to lower the stars and bars.

Wheeler's bold movement was kept a profound secret, known only to his own men and General Johnston. All thought that the war was over. The Federals came freely into the lines of their late foes, and there was a general intermingling of the "blue and gray." It fell to the lot of Company C to guard Wheeler's rear. A barrel of brandy was discovered just inside the reserve picket line, and these old veterans, with true soldierly instinct, soon tapped it and were fast getting into a hilarious condition. The Lieutenant in command of the picket guards was in a short time unable to distinguish a Confederate from a "Yank," and was relieved by Mr. Faircloth, the Orderly Sergeant. The aroma of that brandy was wafted to the olfactories of the Union soldiers, and soon a troop of cavalry was seen coming at a headlong charge upon that barrel. Sergeant Faircloth obeyed the orders of his chief, and the dashing squadron was received with a volley from a picket line. They were dumfounded, and without returning the fire showed a white flag. The Sergeant advanced to parley with the bearer of the flag of truce.

"What the deuce did you fire for? Don't you know the war is over?" This was jerked out by the spokesman on the other side.

"I obeyed orders," calmly replied the Sergeant. "No troops can pass my line."

"But, man, Johnston has surrendered, and the war is over. Come, let us pass, we want to taste that brandy over there."

"I must carry out my orders," stoutly maintained Sergt. Faircloth, "and if your men advance they will be fired upon. But," he added, "I am expecting orders calling in my men every minute, and if you will wait perhaps you may get a drop of the brandy."

Strange to say the troops waited, and the order came. Then there was a grand rush for the barrel, and "Johnny Gray" and "Yank" got on a drunk together.

A New Cure for Cholera.

We had been on an expedition down the "eastern shore" of Virginia, between the Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic Ocean, under General Lockwood, and were returning to Pungoteague to take steamers back to Baltimore, in the latter part of 1861. I think the event happened at the first night's camp on our return from Eastville, the county seat of Northampton County. We were a large brigade, nearly the size of a division a couple of years later, and it took the space of several farms to give us camping room.

It was a cold, frosty night, and the dry fence-rails were freely used to cook for and keep warm the tired soldiers. Before our tents were fairly pitched the fields would be covered with rails, from two to four or five together, moving in the direction of camp. Also bundles of hay, straw, and corn-fodder coming to the same point. As soon as the fires were burning good it was astonishing what an amount of poultry, pigs, mutton, etc., would come to the fire to be cooked.

The Sixth Michigan Infantry, to which the writer belonged, had in Company H an inveterate lover of cooked goose, and every night Joe Snyder had his favorite waddler ready for cooking as soon as fires were lighted. On the night in question the goose came forth as usual, but Joe must have eaten the whole goose or failed to cook it thoroughly. About midnight we were awakened by the most heart-rending groans and earnest supplications for relief, which continued so long that every member of the company were awakened.

Finally George Perrine and Tom Walsh started for Dr. Moltram, and got as far as the cook's fire, which was yet warm and full of coals, where they sat down to have a consultation. The result was several pills composed of army bread and wood ashes. They soon returned to the tent, and reported the doctor not ready to come but sent some pills that would relieve the severe pains until he could come.

Joe took the pills in good faith, and sure enough relief came right along, for within fifteen minutes Joe was easy and soon went to sleep. The next day a history of the remarkable cure was generally circulated, and our march was enlivened by continual references to the bad effect of eating too much goose, and what a sudden cure for cholera bread and ash pills had proven themselves to be.

W. H. WEBBER,
Company H, Sixth Michigan Regiment.
LAMPASAS, Texas.

A Ghost in Tennessee.

From the time of the first settlement of the country there were ghost stories connected with the old stone fort on the Duck River, which about 1831 culminated in a remarkable episode, says the Nashville American. In 1833 six gentlemen, men of high standing, who lived in Murfreesborough, went out in the neighborhood of the old fort to have a fox hunt. The country was thinly settled, and there were many deer. After having camped out for several days one night they saw strange sights, which caused them to leave next day. They were not communicative, but the story got out and was much talked of. The next fall these same six gentlemen, with nine others, went back and camped upon the same spot. It was said they were quite anxious to see the same sights that had been seen before. But a week passed and they saw nothing, though they were quite successful in killing deer.

At the end of about a week a man named Latimer got two small boys in the neighborhood, and fixing up a dumb bull went out to see how they would stand a strange noise. It was in the fall, a frosty night, the hunters had a big fire and were in great glee. For three hours the dumb bull was made to do work from different points of the woods at a safe distance. At first the hunters were disposed to laugh, then they got quiet, finally they commenced shooting. Many guns were fired. This was kept up until the man and two boys left, which was about midnight. Between midnight and day the whole fifteen men left the camp, leaving their meat and other things, and went to a farmhouse, the house where the two boys who had been in the mischief were sleeping. Next morning the hunters told wonderful stories about what they saw, how it came close up to the fire, and how impervious it was to their bullets, how it changed about from an animal to a woman, and what it would say. The two boys were as still as mice, for they had stolen off from their father by the persuasion of Latimer, who was himself a hunter and wanted to drive these hunters away.

The fifteen men left that morning and went back to Murfreesborough to verify and make good the ghost story of the year before. The story got into the newspapers, and was the biggest sensation that had turned up for many years. But it got out that two boys and a hunter had scared them away. This was denied, and the ghost theory was maintained with heroic verity. One of the gentlemen, Jack Fletcher, was often a member of the Legislature afterward, but this ghost story always stuck to him. Another one of them, Leo Sims, was a member of Congress from Missouri and was a war Democrat in 1847. After making a war speech, a Whig, who was not for the war, told the Tennessee ghost story, with much coloring, on Sims. It was said to modify his war spirit very much.

This knighthood service in the land of ghosts took place fifty-three years ago. All the participants are dead but one of the boys who lives to write this story and verify its truth.

Natural Cotton.

"This bale of cotton seems to be unusually heavy, old man," said a cotton buyer to a negro whose cotton he had just weighed.

"Yas, sah; yas. Raised in mighty low groun' down naixt ter de bayou, sah. Ole Tom Neil had some raised down dar dat's heavier den dis."

"But this seems to be a little too heavy."

"Oh, it's nachul, sah; it's nachul. Mighty heavy dew down in dat low groun' at night. Almos' think dar'd been er rain ever' mawnin', sah. Yes, it's nachul."

"Yes, but I don't care about paying you until I open this bale."

"Dar ain't no use'n openin' de bale, sah; no use er tall. Cotton's all dar, nachul an' mighty fine. Look out, boss, doan t'ar de cotton ter pieces dat erway. Look out—injer it foolin' 'long wid it dat erway. Dar, dat'll do. Oh, yer see, it's nachul. Low groun'—"

The cotton buyer hauled out a log of green wood. "What do you call this?"

"Sah?"

"I say what do you call this?"

"W'y, sah, some o' de cuis things—"

"Never mind. What do you call this?"

"Looks like wood, sah; I'll be blame of it doan. Is it sho' 'nuff wood boss?"

"You know well enough what it is, you good for nothing old rascal."

"Who do?"

"You do, you thie[illegible]—"

"Ta kere, now; ta kere. Neber seed dat wood till dis minit, an' I doan know how it got dar. Muster dropped in w'en I wan't lookin'."

"I think it dropped in when you were looking. Take your cotton away from here. I don't want it."

"W'y, sah, jes pay me fur de cotton an' let de wood erlone. W'at yer mean by sich capers? Huh, I ain' axed yer to take de wood. I—I—I ain' er pusson to force nuthin' on er man w'en he doan' want it. Yas, sah, dat's mighty fine cotton. Raised down dar—"

"Take it away, I tell you. Take it away or I'll burn it up."

"W'al, come 'stroyin' er man's property widout gibin' him warnin'? Onreasonablest man I eber seed, an' it doan peer ter me like yer wanter ack hones' nohow; an' I wanter tell yer right yere dat I ain' gwine ter hab no mo' dealin' wid yer. Ef dar's anything I spizes it's er unhones' w'ite man."—Arkansaw Traveler.

The Highest Church in Europe.

The very highest church in Europe is the pilgrimage chapel of the St. Maria de Ziteil, above Salux, in the canton of Graubunden. It lies 434 meters above the sea level—nearly 8,000 feet high above the forest, near the limits of perpetual snow. It is only open during the summer time of that region—or, as the folk thereabouts reckon, from St. John the Baptist's day to St. Michael's day—and is used only by the Alp herders, who remain there through the summer with their cows and goats, and occasionally by hunters in search of the chamois and marmot. All the inhabitants of Salux climb up thither on midsummer days to assist at the first mass and to hear the first sermon of the year, and there is also a crowded congregation on Michael-mass day, at the last service of the year. From time to time a few stray pilgrims from the Graubunden Oberland and the Tyrol find their way there. The second highest church probably in Europe, that of Monstein, also open in the summer, belongs to Graubunden. At our visit the hale old preacher had five foreign tourists for his congregation.—Bundner Tagblatt.

DO NOT wait for extraordinary opportunities for good actions, but make use of common situations.—Goethe.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
Established, 1869.
WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.
CHARLEVOIX, NOV. 9, 1887.

THE ANARCHISTS.

Four Bombs Found in Lingg's Cell---Great Excitement in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—The cells of the condemned anarchists in the county jail were searched shortly after 9:30 this morning and four loaded bombs were found hidden away in a wooden box which was concealed under a pile of newspapers in the corner of the cell ocupied by Lingg. Engel's cell was first entered and examined, but nothing of consequence was found there. Then the officials entered Lingg's cell and made a search while Lingg was temporarily lodged in an adjacent cell, from whence he watched the officers with eager eyes. He was as pale as death and trembling like an aspen leaf as the searchers moved around in the little room he occupied so long. Suddenly two of the three officers jumped out to the corridor while the third man held at arms length a small wooden box which he carefully carried to the office of the jail and laid it on Jailer Folz's desk. The box contained four pieces of gas pipe each about six or seven inches in length, filled with some heavy substance and plugged at both ends. Jailer Folz picked up one of the pieces of gas pipe which was closed at one end with a round iron stopper, and was proceeding to examine it when officer Osborne, who was sitting near reading the morning paper, stepped forward and discovering the strange looking bit of iron, exclaimed

"MY GOD, MR. FOLZ! handle it carefully. That's a bomb." Just then Sheriff Matson arrived at ...

THE VERNON DISASTER.

Tale of the One Survivor---Twenty-Four Bodies Found.

The schooner S. B. Pomeroy, had the good fortune to discover and rescue the only survivor of the ill fated steamer Vernon. Between 4 and 5 o'clock Monday morning (Nov. 1st.), in the moonlight, while about eight miles off Sheboygan and going at the rate of ten miles an hour before a strong south wind and sea, a life raft bearing what appeared to be the form of a man was sighted. As soon as possible the Pomeroy was hove to, and the yawl lowered and manned. Half and hour later the raft was found. On it was one man barely alive, and one dead. They were with difficulty gotten into the yawl and landed on board of the schooner. The living man proved to be Axel Stone, a Swede, who had been employed on the Vernon, as a watchman, for two months. He was in almost helpless condition, after forty-eight hours' drenching and exposure to the frosty air. Stone is unable to give a clear idea of the cause of the disaster. He says the steamer left Cheboygan for Chicago about 7 o'clock last Thursday evening, (Oct. 28th). She then had besides her crew of twenty-five, two or three passengers. The boat stopped at St. Ignace and took on a quantity of pig iron and fifteen passengers, five or six of whom were women. Two or three passengers at each of the other ports were taken. Frankfort was the last port at which the boat touched. On leaving, there were twenty-five passengers aboard, all men but six. The boat left that port at 7 o'clock Friday night, with fine weather, the intention being to make Milwaukee her next port. Between 9 and 10 o'clock that evening, however, a heavy northeaster struck her when she was about abreast of Manitowoc light. The freight was piled between decks so ...

[illegible]

CLOTHING

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which I will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.

My Prices are so Low

that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

GO TO
A. T. WASHBURNE & CO'S.
FOR BARGAINS.

SEE THIS LIST!

WE ARE OFFERING
POSITIVELY UNEQUALLED BARGAINS!
IN ALL LINES OF SEASONABLE GOODS.

SPECIAL DRIVES IN

Cloaks, from $3.50 up.
Dress Flannels, 50 in. 50 Cents.
Dress Flannels, 6 qr. 75 Cents.
Dress Goods, mixed 2-fold, 15 c.
Shirting Flannels, Gray mxd, 15c
Shirting Flannels, High Color Plaids, 17 cents.
Cotton Flannels, 7 to 14 Cents.
Shaker Flannels, 8 to 25 Cents.
Heavy Blankets, $1 per Pair.
Horse Blankets, 80c to $3.00.

WE ARE
Headquarters For Lamps & Lamp Goods

Patent Extension Brass Hanging Lamps, $3.00.
Vienna Shades, 7 inch, 10 Cents.
Best Tubular Lift Lanterns, complete, 75 cents.
Good Japan Tea, 4 lbs for $1.00.
Maple Syrup, $1.00 per gallon.

J. L. HURD & CO.

ROSENTHAL LEADS THEM ALL.

WINTER HOSIERY

Wool, Cashmere, Fleeced Lined, Etc.

We have now received all of our Winter Importations and offer a very large assortment in all qualities of English, French and German manufactures.

Dry Goods. This department is well stocked from the largest manufacturies of the East.

Carpets. We have an unusual large assortment of Carpets and Rugs to select from. See our Curtains and Fixtures.

We have an elegant stock of

MEN'S OVERCOATS BOYS'

To select from, and would invite those in need of an Overcoat to call and see them.

Clothing. Our Clothing department can furnishe you a nice suit, a medium suit, and an everyday suit. Boys' and Youths' suitings a specialty.

Cloaks. Newmarkets, Short Wraps, and Jackets at low figures.

We are headquarters for everything in our line. Always glad to show goods whether you purchase or not.

RESP'Y YOURS,
ALICK ROSENTHAL,
LEWIS BLOCK.

Go to Rosenthal's for bargains.

MRS. D. C. BACON,
DRESSMAKER,
Cor. Bridge and Mason Sts.
S. I. Taylor System of Cutting and Fitting. Satisfaction guaranteed.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO.--29 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1887. WHOLE NO. 93

Joe C Miller

WHERE IS IT?
ANY PERSON CAN TELL YOU IT'S ON BRIDGE ST., NEAR THE SKATING RINK.

WHAT IS IT?
THE ONLY BEST PLACE IN THE CO. TO BUY ANYTHING IN THE LINE OF

DRUGS & STATIONERY.

AND THE FIRMS NAME IS
F. G. HINES & CO.

THEIR STOCK IS CARAFULLY SELECTED AND PRICES THE VERY LOWEST. GIVE THEM A CALL AND THEY WILL DO YOU GOOD.

"THAT'S RIGHT!"
THEY SELL THE BEST 5c CIGAR ON EARTH. TRY IT AND YOU WILL THINK ITS A STRAIGHT 10.

Best in The World

"The Royal Jewel"

Call at our store and examine the incomparably fine line of Stoves now on exhibition.

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $ $ $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

EMREY BROS.
JUST OPENED!

A FINE LINE OF
Hanging Lamps for the Holidays.

A complete new line of Hosiery of every variety at the lowest prices you ever saw.

We are leading the GROCERY Trade

BECAUSE our goods are the best our prices the lowest.

We are closing out on Boots and Shoes and Crockery. What we have left in these lines will be sacrificed.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO

We are NOT CLOSING OUT

We never did
We do not want to
We are not going to Close out

WE AIM TO KEEP OUR STOCK
Complete in Every Department
AT ALL TIMES.

OUR STOCK OF STAPLE DRY GOODS
—AND—
BOOTS and SHOES,
FOR THE FALL AND WINTER TRADE WAS NEVER MORE COMPLETE THAN NOW.

UNDERWEAR! We have a good line of Ladies', Gents' and Childrens' Underwear.

CLOAKS AT A BARGAIN CLOAKS

We keep Lime, Cement, Stucco & Plastering Hair,
We carry a full line of
EVERYTHING
usually kept in a first class stock of General Merchandise. We aim to merit the patronage of the public by keeping good goods and selling everything at a uniformly reasonable price.

Resp'y Yours.
Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

The Best Groceries
At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture
AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S
REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE,
AND LOAN OFFICE.
The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.
Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.
ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice.

Finest Job Work!
AT THE
Sentinel Office.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY
WILLARD A. SMITH,
Charlevoix, Michigan.
TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
One year - $1.50 | Six months - $.75
Invariably in Advance

Dissolution Notice.

[illegible]

WILLARD A. SMITH
ED F. PARMELEE.

A BIG CHANCE.

The SENTINEL will be sent free to all new subscribers to Jan. 1st 1888, who pay $1.50 in advance. To all such the paper will be sent to Jan. 1st '89. Avail yourself of this opportunity to get the SENTINEL six weeks free.

Local News.

Prof. Ferguson sold his yacht to G. R. Martin and Frank Martinek, of East Jordan.

Elmore Clark, an old resident of Norwood, died at his home last Monday morning.

—Notice our offer at the head of local page. The SENTINEL until Jan. 1st, 1889, for $1.50.

[illegible]

—Circuit Court is in session at Boyne City.

—Miss Ada Johnson, of Norwood, spent Sunday with Miss Mary Scroggie.

—Latney & Steinel have received two fine new cutters for their livery stable.

—The D. C. & E. railroad Directors held a meeting at the Secretary's office yesterday.

[illegible]

Religious.

M. E. Church.

Be present at the Thursday evening prayer meeting. Sunday morning and evening service conducted by the pastor. Sunday school at 12. Bible reading and normal drill on Tuesday evening. All invited.

Baptist Church.

Every Tuesday evening, song service, followed by study of Sunday school lesson. Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7. ...

[illegible]

A FASHIONABLE FAD.

There's a slang style of talking in vogue to-day ... [illegible]

"O, it's English, y' know ..." [illegible]

A MODERN MAGDALEN.

BY M. C. FARLEY.

CHAPTER X.—CONTINUED.

"The truth is," says the Captain quietly, "that I am not the obdurate one. You should bring your arguments to bear upon Loo herself. I have a dim recollection of a scene that was enacted here shortly after Miss Loo's arrival. She—why, she threw me over as coolly as you please."

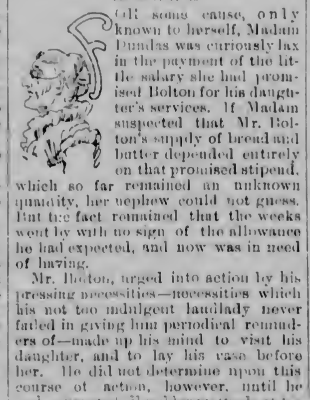
"Not Loo?"

Madam grasps the arms of her couch and stares hard at Hazard as he makes his confession, intense astonishment depicted on her withered face.

"Loo!" repeats the Captain sulkily. [illegible]

"Not Lost."

[illegible]



[illegible]

... that Madam has given her round and round upon her finger, then she draws herself up stiffly and marches past the wary Captain.

"Don't talk of matrimony," says she. "The subject is tiresome."

He catches at her gown as she goes by, and forces her to stop.

"The subject is tabooed from now on and forever more," he laughs. "But stop, Miss Loo, let me see your jewelry. That is Madam's ring, as I'm a sinner. She has taken a wonderful liking to you, or she never would have given you that."

She waits, while he, making a pretense of examining the emerald upon her finger, holds her hand.

"If you must give it such close attention, I will remove it," says Loo, impatiently taking the ring from her finger as she speaks. "It is a stone you must have seen many times, as Madam told me she had worn it herself for years."

"Yes," admits Hazard, flashing the emerald in the sun, and admiring its changing color. "I've often seen it before."

Loo waits for him to return the ring. The Captain evidently means to take his time about it, for he turns it about slowly, finally slipping it upon the little finger of his own hand. "If you don't mind, I'll wear it awhile myself," says he coolly.

"Wear it yourself!" Loo gasps in utter astonishment, gazing blankly at the Captain.

"Yes. And you shall wear mine in return," pulling off a diamond that has long been the secret admiration of his astonished companion. "Even exchange is no robbery."

This he says gayly, as the diamond slides upon her white finger, and there is so curious a look in his eyes that Loo blushes, catches her breath, and again feels that strange flutter about her heart.

She has no time, however, to either expostulate with the Captain upon his cool method of settling matters to his own satisfaction, or to scold herself for her part in the transaction, for the maid at this moment approaches them with a message from Madam.

She walks in silence by the Captain's [illegible]

Loo's heart quaked when she received this message. She was afraid to go to her father, yet because Bolton was her father she could not refuse. It was early twilight when she finally left the house to keep her appointment under the trees. He was already waiting for her when she appeared upon the scene.

"You are wonderfully improved, Loo," he says, after the first hurried salutations are over with. "Bywater Park must agree with you."

"Yes," Loo says, abruptly. "I think it does. But you——"

"I am no worse at least," he says, with a bitter smile; "but hush! I hear voices."

They listen. Only the low chirp of a nightbird in its nest breaks the dewy stillness.

"I must have been mistaken," Bolton speaks with evident relief. "Loo, what can you do for me, anything?"

"I wrote you that I had not a cent in the world."

"I know it," Bolton speaks harshly. "What a skinflint your old aunt is to be ——

Making a pretense of examining the emerald.

same. Loo, I feel certain she suspects how great my poverty is, and is withholding the beggarly salary expressly to punish me."

[illegible]

WAVING THE OLD REBEL FLAG.

Glorification of the Lost Cause by the Confederates at Macon, Ga.

Cleveland's Late Mexican Minister Declares Georgia Still a Sovereign State.

The reception of Jeff Davis at Macon, Ga., was characterized by open and defiant eulogy of the right of secession and of the anti-Union doctrine of State sovereignty, and by the broadest and most unblushing vindication of the "Lost Cause" of slavery, secession and rebellion, and of the part which Davis himself played in attempting to destroy the nation. It was further characterized, without any attempt at concealment, by a display of malevolence towards the North, and by insults to those who so gallantly preserved the nation.

The surroundings of the meeting were in keeping with the bitter words which were uttered. Old Jeff Davis himself, feebly but defiantly breathing out his hatred of the National Government, which, unfortunately, did not hang him ... [illegible]

BALL IN THE FAST.

[illegible]

NATIONAL FINANCES.

The National Debt Reduced Nearly $41,000,000 in the Last Four Months.

More Gold in the Treasury than Ever Before, but Silver Is Decreasing.

[Washington special.]

The statement of the Treasury for the month just closed presents several points of interest. ... [illegible]

ALASKA.

[illegible]

Thomas Jefferson's Ingenuity.

I think it is not generally known with what pleasure and zeal Jefferson brought his mind to bear, not only upon the development of his somewhat grand ideas in regard to a home, but upon the most minute and peculiar contrivances for convenience and adornment. He drew plans and made estimates for nearly everything that was built or constructed on his place. He calculated the number of bricks to be used in every part of his buildings; and his family now possess elaborately-drawn plans of such bits of household furnishing as "curtain valences" and the like. Many of his ideas in regard to building and furnishing he brought with him from France; but more of them had their origin in his brain. There were no bedsteads in his house, but in every chamber there was an alcove in the wall in which a wooden framework was built which supported the bed. His own sleeping arrangements during the lifetime of his wife were of a very peculiar nature; in the partition between two chambers was an archway, and in this archway was the double bed; one chamber was Mr. Jefferson's room, and the other was his wife's dressing-room; when he arose in the morning he got out of bed into his own room, and Mrs. Jefferson got out into her room. After his wife's death her room became his study ... [illegible]

Money in Mines.

[illegible]

Our College Presidents.

[illegible]

PITH AND POINT.

[illegible]

Carl Pretzel's Philosophy.

[illegible]

Credulity Insulted.

What is the sense in writing things that people cannot believe. Now Marryatt wrote "The Pacha of Many Tales," when everybody knows that a Pacha has none; and here comes Rider Haggard with "A Tale of Three Lions," which everybody knows is a thing impossible outside of a dime museum, and then even there it would probably be doctored. A lion with three tails there might be, but three with one—never! —Burdette.

Hideous in Every Guise,

Whether it be the best known form, chills and fever, or else ... [illegible] ... Stomach Bitters ... [illegible]

A Cold Day.

Family man, in great haste, rushes into drug store—b'g pawd'n—chemist's. "Can you put this up for me right away? In an awful hurry." [illegible]

Happy Homes.

[illegible]

Catarrh Cured.

[illegible]

CURIOUS INDUSTRIES.

Very Strange Means by Which Some People Live.

[Exchange.]

There are a few humble and peculiar industries connected with the cotton operatives of Lancashire. Perhaps the most peculiar is the little-known calling of the "knocker-up," whose business it is to wake up the factory people in time for their work. This industry requires no capital, and imposes no restriction as to sex.

All the stock-in-trade required is a long stick in joints—something like a fishing rod—with a number of wires tied to the end. This stick is raised so that the wires can be rattled against the bedroom window, and a more harmless, yet effective, plan could scarcely be invented, for one or two shakes of the stick will cause the wires to rattle against the glass loudly enough to awake the soundest sleeper.

A friend of ours can bear testimony to this fact. When he first visited Manchester, some years ago, a certain woman was given a knocker-up a few pence to operate on our friend's bedroom window at an early hour one morning. When he first woke he thought that there was a tremendous hailstorm, but this idea was soon dispelled. He sprang out of bed, rushed to the window and threw it open. He had never heard of a knocker-up, let alone seen one, and his astonishment was great on seeing a ... [illegible]

Snake Against Spider.

... fangs in the reptile and was clinging to it with the tenacity of a bulldog. In the popular parlance of the prize ring, the snake had thrown up the sponge, and, completely paralyzed, was quivering like an aspen leaf, and in a few seconds dropped limp and lifeless upon the ground. Even then the monster that had accomplished this result would not release its hold, and the two, the conqueror and victim, were dropped into a bottle of alcohol, the spider dying game and maintaining its grip.

Among the Cubans.

The island has more fine harbors than any other country of its size, and it is no wonder that the buccaneers of the Spanish main selected it as the center of their piratical enterprises. It has 260 rivers and plenty of fresh water springs. It never snows in Cuba, though the ice sometimes forms upon the mountains. The babies can go naked here the year around, and as for the stocking trade of Havana its customers are confined to the higher classes. Neither stockings nor suspenders are used by the laborers, and I doubt whether there are 1,000 pairs of suspenders worn by the 1,500,000 people who make up that island's population. They use instead a belt-strap, and the majority of the workingmen of the island confine their apparel to an undershirt and trousers. The better class of men dress in white duck, with Panama hats.

[illegible]

Insulting.

[illegible]

Their Poorest Friends.

[illegible]

The City of Melbourne.

[illegible]

POPULAR SCIENCE.

A Berlin company offers electricity for boiling water, and other heating purposes, as well as for lighting.

Wrought-iron expands and contracts with a force of about 200 pounds per square inch for each degree Fahrenheit.

The Argentine Republic is soon to have a weather bureau equipped with forty-five observatories in different parts of the country.

A sanitary engineer suggests the importance of building on streets running northwest and southeast, or northeast and southwest. Sunshine in all rooms at some time in the day can thus be insured, with a great gain in healthfulness.

At least 10,000 humming-birds are now embraced in the collection in the British Museum. The finest collection on this side of the Atlantic, containing about 2,000 specimens, has been presented by Mr. D. G. Elliot to the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

Flour is like butter, it absorbs smells readily. It should not be kept in a place where there are onions, fish, decaying vegetables or other odorous substances, or in a damp room or cellar. Keep it in a cool, dry, airy room, not exposed to a freezing temperature, or to one above seventy degrees, and always sift before using.

[illegible]

Lifelong Disappointment.

[illegible]

Mexican Wax Matches.

[illegible]

Fishing in California.

[illegible]

Man wants but little here below,
But wants that little strong.

This is especially true of a purge. The average man or woman does not precisely hanker for it, as a rule, but when taken, wishes it to be prompt, sure, and effective. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets leave nothing to be desired in point of efficacy, and yet their action is totally free from any unpleasant symptoms, or disagreeable after-effects. Purely vegetable, perfectly harmless.

The Indian name for a lunatic is the man-with his-train-of-thought-off-the-track.

Its thousands of cures are the best advertisement for Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

The leading man who is always trying to mash some of the girls in the audience might properly be called a leer-ical artist.

A Popular Thoroughfare.

The Wisconsin Central Line, although a comparatively new factor in the railroad systems of the Northwest, has acquired an enviable popularity. Through careful attention to details, its service is as near perfection as might be looked for. The train attendants seem to regard their trusts as individual property and as a result the public is served par-excellence. The road now runs solid through fast trains between Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Minneapolis with Pullman's best and unequalled dining cars; it also runs through, solid sleepers between Chicago, Ashland, Duluth and the famous mining regions of Northern Wisconsin and Michigan.

Itching Piles.

Symptoms—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in many cases removes the tumors. It is equally efficacious in curing all Skin Diseases. Dr. Swayne & Son, Proprietors, Philadelphia. Swayne's Ointment can be obtained of druggists, or by mail.

Offer No. 171.

FREE!—To Merchants Only: An elegant Carving Set (knife, fork, and steel), in satin-lined case. Address at once, R. W. Tansill & Co., 55 State street, Chicago.

The habit of running over boots or shoes corrected with Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners.

PATENTS R. S. & A. P. Lacey, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D.C. ... FREE. 17 years experience.

KIDDER'S PASTILLES Sure relief ASTHMA. ... Charlestown, Mass.

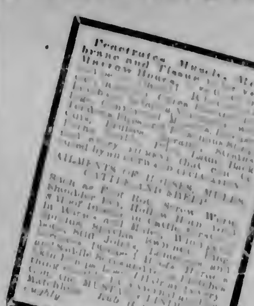
OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. ... Dr. J. Stephens, Lebanon, Ohio.

PILES Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment ... WILLIAMS MFG. CO., Cleveland, O.

JONES HE PAYS the FREIGHT 5 Ton Wagon Scales ... $60. ... JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

KIDDER'S DIGESTYLIN A SURE CURE FOR INDIGESTION and DYSPEPSIA. ... FOR CHOLERA INFANTUM. ... WM. F. KIDDER & CO., Manufacturing Chemists, 83 John St., N. Y.

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT

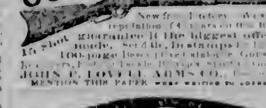


MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT

$250 A MONTH. Agents wanted. ... JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $1.50 FREE. ... Holly, Mich.

LOOK NEVER SUCH BARGAINS BEFORE $11 COLT REPEATING RIFLE



... JOHN P. LOVELL ARMS CO., ... Mass.

WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN

Cures Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Catarrh, Croup, Sore Throat, RHEUMATISM, Lame Back, Stiff Joints, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Wounds, Old Sores and All Aches and Pains.

It Cures You. That's the Idea! Sold by Druggists. 50 cts. ... Address WIZARD OIL COMPANY CHICAGO.

DR. HOBENSACK'S NERVOUS DEBILITY PILLS ... Cures Old and Young. ... No. 206 N. 2d St., Phila.

C. N. U. No. 45—87

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

Catarrh in the Head

Originates in scrofulous taint in the blood. Hence the proper method by which to cure catarrh is to purify the blood. Its many disagreeable symptoms and the danger of developing into bronchitis or that terribly fatal disease, consumption, are entirely removed by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which cures catarrh by purifying the blood.

"For several years I have been troubled with that terribly disagreeable disease, catarrh. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla with the very best results. It cured me of that continued dropping in my throat and stuffed up feeling. It has helped my mother, who has taken it for run down state of health and kidney trouble. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all as a good medicine." Mrs. S. D. Heath, Putnam, Conn.

Catarrh may affect any portion of the body where the mucous membrane is found. But catarrh of the head is by far the most common, and, strange to say, the most liable to be neglected. The wonderful success Hood's Sarsaparilla has had in curing catarrh warrants us in urging all who suffer with this disease to try the peculiar medicine. It renovates and invigorates the blood, and tones every organ.

"I have been troubled with catarrh a year, causing great soreness of the bronchial tubes and terrible headache. I read that Hood's Sarsaparilla would cure catarrh, and after taking only one bottle I am much better. My catarrh is cured, my throat is quite well, and my headache has all disappeared." R. Gibbons, Hamilton, Butler Co., O.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar.

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

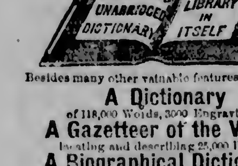
100 Doses One Dollar

A WET HEN

The man who has invested from three to five dollars in a Rubber Coat, and at his first half hour's experience in a storm finds to his sorrow that it is hardly a better protection than a mosquito netting, not only feels chagrined at being so badly taken in, but also feels if he does not look exactly like ... Ask for the "FISH BRAND" Slicker ... A. J. TOWER, 20 Simmons St., Boston, Mass.

... "SLICKER," ... TOWER'S FISH BRAND ... Tower's Fish Brand Slicker."

THE BEST INVESTMENT for the Family, the School, or the Professional or Public Library, is a copy of the latest issue of Webster's Unabridged.



A Dictionary ... A Gazetteer of the World ... A Biographical Dictionary ... All in One Book.

G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Publishers, Springfield, Mass.

PENSIONS ...

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

CHEAPEST AND BEST MEDICINE FOR FAMILY USE IN THE WORLD! A CURE FOR ALL SUMMER COMPLAINTS.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF ...

The Youth's Companion

FOR 1888.

A Remarkable Volume.

Increased in Size. Finely Illustrated. 400,000 Subscribers.

Eminent Authors.

Special Articles of great interest, written for the Companion, will appear from the following Eminent Authors of Great Britain and the United States:

Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Gen. Lord Wolseley,
Professor Tyndall, Clara Louise Kellogg,
Gen. George Crook, Justin McCarthy, M. P.,
Archdeacon Farrar, Louisa M. Alcott.

And one hundred other well-known and popular writers.

Six Serial Stories,

WILL BE GIVEN IN 1888, FULLY ILLUSTRATED AND BY FAVORITE AUTHORS, INCLUDING

J. T. Trowbridge, C. A. Stephens,

AND OTHERS. ALSO,

200 Short Stories; Tales of Adventure;

Illustrated Articles of Travel; Sketches of Eminent Men; Historical and Scientific Articles; Bright Sayings; 1000 Short Articles; Anecdotes; Sketches of Natural History; Poetry.

Twelve Pages Weekly, instead of eight pages, will be given nearly every week during 1888, increasing the size of the paper almost one-half, giving an extraordinary amount and variety of choice reading and illustrations, without any advance in the subscription price.

Two Millions of People Read It.

FREE TO JAN 1, 1888.

SPECIAL OFFER. To any New Subscriber who will CUT OUT and send us this Slip, with name and P. O. address and $1.75 in Money Order, Express Money Order, Registered Letter or Check, for a year's subscription to the Companion, we will send the paper free each week to Jan. 1st, 1888, and for a full year from that date to Jan. 1st, 1889. If ordered at once this offer will include

A $2.50 PAPER FOR $1.75.

The Double Holiday Numbers

For Thanksgiving and Christmas, twenty pages each, with Colored Covers and Full-page Frontispiece Pictures, which are a feature of the Companion volume. They will be unusually attractive this year.

Address PERRY MASON & CO., 39 Temple Place, Boston, Mass.

Specimen Copies and Colored Announcement and Calendar free, if you mention this paper.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
Established, 1869.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, NOV. 16, 1887.

Changing His Mind.

Editor Cressey, of the Center, has long had the reputation of being a most zealous theoretical Prohibitionist. There are signs that he intends to add to his many other accomplishments that of becoming also a practical Prohibitionist. The sign of a practical man in any department is that he is doing the best he can with the materials at hand. The sign of the theorist is that he can never do anything unless he has everything to his mind.

Editor Cressey has been a theorist in that he is unwilling his party should take up the work of local option, because they could not have state prohibition given to them. He has begun to show the practical side of his nature by urging the Prohibitionists to "do all in their power to secure prohibition under the local option law."

If local option is good for the state it is equally good for the county. Moreover, public sentiment in the county is much more easily kept up to the sticking point than is the case with a state like Michigan, in which one section is opposed to another on this subject. And without a strong public sentiment behind a prohibitory law it cannot be enforced. It is probably such considerations as these which have led Editor Cassey to take a more liberal view of the matter.—Detroit Journal.

With Bismark's rheumatism coming back on him and Emperor William in precarious health, the peace of Europe is in a shaky condition.

Congress will meet in a little less than a month. It will have plenty of important business to attend to, but the chances are that it will not attend to it.

After a four years' search the Lehigh Coal Company has finally discovered a great vein of coal estimated to be worth $3,000,000. As it cost the company $80,000 to find the vein, they immediately raised the price of coal, so that they could start in with a clean balance sheet. For cast-iron nerve the barons are not to be sneezed at.

The advisory committee of Plymouth church has decided to recommend the selection of Rev. Chas. A. Barry, of Wolverhampton, England, as pastor of the church. He recently preached before them. This action will undoubtedly be ratified by the society. Mr. Barry, who is 35 years old, is pastor of one of the most influential Congregational churches in England. He did not come to America as a candidate for the Plymouth pulpit, but he made a deep impression upon the congregation.

Wild geese hunters are having fine sport on Dakota prairies. A sportsman writes from Newark, Dak., that he frequently sees flocks of geese extending over acres, giving the ground an appearance of being covered by an immense snow bank. A good way to approach them is by horse and wagon; as the birds can not see a man in a wagon, the will not rise until the horse is very near. By urging the horse into a hard run, the hunter is carried directly under the birds by the time they are fairly up in the air. He then bangs away with telling results.

From China papers of recent date it appears that the authorities of Pekin have recently taken a census of the Empire, and as it was for taxing purposes the proneness to disbelieve in the large estimates must be modified accordingly. The figures returned by the village bailiffs make the population 319,383,500, which together with the estimate of five provices omitted makes the aggregate about 392,000,000. These figures are independent of the population of Corea, Thibet, and Kashgar. As the population of India exceeds 250,000,000, the Hindoos and Chinese constitute more than half the entire human race.

The proposed colonization of all the Dunkards of the United States in the "Panhandle" section of Texas is a very large undertaking. The Dunkards are a peculiar religious sect, whose chief tenets are a literal belief in the teachings of the Gospel, and in abhorrence of war. During the civil war both sides respected their scruples against fighting and exempting them from service in the army. A misprint in the Confederate statute on the subject made it appear that "drunkards" were exempted. This was good news to the red-nosed men of the south, but their satisfaction was short-lived, as the mistake was soon corrected. Texas is to be congratulated upon securing these honest, industrious people.

Western Union's capital stock has been increased $5,000,000, raising the total of $86,200,000.

Northern Michigan News.

Mackinac Island is having a wood famine.

St. Ignace wants water works, and will bond the village for the same.

Jacob Keller, an old settler of South Arm, this county, died a week ago yesterday.

It is expected that trains will be running on the T. & A. R. R. to Cadillac by Dec. 1st.

The union hospital at St. Ignace will shut up shop. No money in the business at that point.

The Elk Rapids Progress has declared war against the Antrim county Board of Supervisors.

The President has ordered the removal of the headquarters of the Mackinac Indian agency from Flint to Sault Ste. Marie.

The 1st of November was duly observed by the natives, in decorating their graves. They feasted in great style for two days.

The fight for the Traverse City postoffice is again reported to be opened. The present postmaster's commission will expire in a month.

During the past season not less than $60,000 has been expended in Mancelona in new buildings and improvements. A good showing certainly.

Cross Village people are holding railroad meetings, and are jubilant over the prospect of the T. & A. A. railroad letting them out of the back woods.

Petoskey Democrat: Mrs. Toll, mother of our popular townsman and postmaster, Col. I. D. Toll, is enjoying good health, is smart and active at the advanced age of 90 years.

The residents of Mancelona township have dug up the hatchet, put on their war paint against the Board of Supervisors of Antrim county, all because the Board raised their assessment $150,000.

Harbor Springs Republican: But one white resident has died in this village for more than a twelve month. This speaks volumes for the health of the place, in spite of the saloons, which are fast making an end of the Indians.

Col. Baker Post, G. A. R., of Kalkaska, are arranging for a grand hunt, to take place on Monday, Nov. 21. The captains will choose sides and notify their hunters in time to take part in it. All game to be brought in by 10 p. m.

The Frankfort and Southeastern R. R. bed is graded and ready for the iron a distance of 15 miles. Iron will be put down next spring. $20,000 already expended; 10 cars are being built. The engine is ready to whistle any time steam is made.

The necessary number of signatures having been obtained in Grand Traverse county, and presented to the County Clerk, asking for the submission of the question of liquor selling to the voters of the county, he has issued an order for the holding of a special election December 5th, to decide the question.

There were shipped from the port of Cheboygan during October, 13,400,000 feet of lumber, 25,000 pieces of cedar, and 410,000 pieces of lath. There were quite a number of shingles shipped that were not reported at the custom house. It is safe to say that $80,000,000 feet of lumber have been shipped from that port this season.

Petoskey Record: Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Campbell, formerly of the Occidental, were at that hotel over Sunday, waiting for the boat to Manistique. The assume charge of the Ossawinamakee House at Manistique about the 15th. They have many friends here who will wish them a prosperous business in that live little city.

Traverse Bay Eagle: The first arrest here, and perhaps in the State, under the new law carrying concealed weapons, was made yesterday. Joseph Warner was arrested for the offense, and arraigned before Justice Roberts. He plead guilty and was let off with a light fine, it being the first offense. Everybody will do well to remember that the carrying on the person of concealed weapons is a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not more than $100 or imprisonment not exceeding three months, or both.

A gentleman of Grand Rapids, quite prominent in military affairs, said to a reporter recently: "The next annual encampment will undoubtedly be held on Mackinac Island. While I was at Lansing recently, I learned of the existence of quite a sentiment in the state in favor of a change of location next year. The State Military Board are all in favor of Mackinac Island, providing the troops can be transported to that place as cheaply as to Brighton. They are now investigating the matter, and I am confident that they will find it just as economical to choose the island. There are a large number of companies in the upper peninsula to whom Mackinac will be much nearer than Brighton, and then the cheap rates of water transportation can be taken advantage of.

Ansil H. Davis an old pioneer of Grand Traverse county, has bought a fruit farm on the peninsula, and has moved there.

W. H. Ransom, from Cross Village, has leased the old pioneer store, at Clarion and moved his stock of boots and shoes thereto.

There are seven more spans of the great "Soo" bridge to be built, and the contractors say they will put them up in seven weeks.

John Long, formerly of Long & Draper, South Arm, is in partnership with F. E. Fogg in the directory business, now "doing" St. Ignace.

St. Ignace Republican: We learn that the state swamp lands on Bois Blanc Island, advertised for the last time in this issue, will be bid in by a number of Lapeer county farmers, who intend locating on the same.

A Yuba correspondent of the Herald says that W. H. Fife, off 18 acres got 150 bushels of wheat, and this too of a variety that brings the highest market price. His oats averaged him 17½ bushels per acre.

A match game of base ball was played by the Omena "Sure Hitters" and the Northport "Light Footers." The score stood 28 to 21 in favor of the home club, the Omenas making 17 tallies while the Northports made their last one.

Mr. Hagenkalb, of Traverse City, had loaded revolver under pillow. A three-year-old child found it while mother was in another room. In some way managed to shoot itself. Ball passed through stomach. Lived but a few days.

The Grand Traverse Herald says that the smoke that has been so thick during the past week came from the forest fires that have been causing much destruction in Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin. The smoke has been thick in this vicinity.

Tuesday night, the 8th, the house of Josiah Newell, Treasurer of Torch Lake Township, was entered by burglars, and about $100 in Township money stolen. Mr. Newell and son were sleeping up stairs, and knew nothing of the robbery until morning. The money was down stairs in what was deemed a safe place.

Petoskey Independent: Mr. O. F. Blood, whose eye was so terribly injured recently, when he was at work in his mill at Clarion, has at last been compelled to have the injured organ removed. The operation was performed by Drs. Calkins and Ovens, and Mr. Blood is feeling as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

Harbor Springs column Petoskey Independent: The steam pile-driver John Naylor came in last week on her way to St. Ignace, and Captain Crysler immediately set her at work putting down the piles for a new dock which he will put in this winter. The driver has a "siren" whistle, which emits a shriek like nothing yet heard on earth, and only to be likened to the wail of a lost soul. When its first wail was heard all the babies in town set up a yell of terror, and the Indian braves in the Catholic burying ground turned over in their sleep and dreampt that they again heard the war cry of their dusky foes.——We are pleased to state that Harbor Springs will soon have the largest lumber yard north of Cadillac. Thos. Eneale and J. S. Hair have formed a partnership to go into effect Jan. 1, and these gentlemen propose to put in a first-class yard.

Boyne Citizen: Mr. Charles Watkins died Sunday, the 6th inst., from consumption, aged 60 years.——The books in the county clerk's office, which had the bindings and edges charred by the fire, have been uniformly rebound with patent binding, and present a very neat appearance. The Kalamazoo Publishing Co. did the work.——The Pine Lake Iron Company have leased the Eaton dock and property at the foot of Main street, and will buy furnace wood here this winter.——The Register's new books have been received, and the deputy register is kept busy recording papers.——Recent letters from H. C. Miley announce his location at Findlay, Ohio, in the new natural gas region, where he is interested in the insurance business.——The court house will not be rebuilt until spring. This is caused by the action of the insurance companies, who seem disposed to delay payment of a loss as long as possible. They have sixty days to pay it in, and while there is no doubt of the ultimate payment, the delay is vexing, as it prevents rebuilding. Our adjuster who did not come by way of Charlevoix did his work in a few hours and offered to pay the whole amount due on furniture at once, with a slight discount for the sixty days. The others, from their actions and remarks dropped, were influenced by their long journey round, and perhaps by the suggestions of their neighbors, and will endeavor to delay payment. The comparison of the two adjustments is open to reflection, and the delicate tracks of two or three individuals may be traced in the sand.

Dry Goods!

A good assortment of Plain and and novelty Dress Goods.

DRESS TRIMMINGS IN PLUSHES, VELVETS, CORDS, SETS, AND BRAIDS. Also Buttons.

Our stock of Ladies Jackets and Cloaks is of the best make, with prices to suit the times. It will be to your advantage to call and see our Ladies and Gents underwear before purchasing.

REMEMBER. A full line of staple Dry Goods in stock.

Cor. Bridge & Main sts. B. SEE.

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. Geo. V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two Bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved that she is able now to do her own work."

Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at Dr. G. W. Crouter's

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head, everybody said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds. Trial Bottles of this Great Discovery for Consumption free at Dr. G. W. Crouter's

"HACKMETACK," a lasting and fragrant perfume. Price 25 and 50 cents.

SHILOH'S CURE will immediately relieve Croup, Whooping Cough and Bronchitis. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co.

FOR DYSPEPSIA and Liver Complaint, you have a printed guarantee on every bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer. It never fails to cure.

A NASAL INJECTOR free with each bottle of Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. Price 50 cents. F. G. Hines & Co.

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS
STANDARD TIME.

Charlevoix and East Jordan.
STR. NORTH STAR, ... CAPT. M. [illegible]
[illegible]

Charlevoix and Boyne City.
STR. JOSEPH GORDON .... CAPT. LEWIS GEARE
Leave Charlevoix at 6:30 a. m. and 1 p. m., and Boyne City [illegible]

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan.
STR. THOS. FRIANT, ... CAPT. E. VANSLOOTEN.
[illegible]

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE.
PROP. LAWRENCE .... Capt. [illegible]
[illegible]
Emrey Ross, agents, Charlevoix.

Probate Notice.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for said county, held at the Probate Office in the Village of Boyne City, on Thursday, the [illegible] day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, Jones A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the Matter of Estate of Henry H. Van [illegible], deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Willard A. Smith and [illegible] [illegible]
(A true copy.)
JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Teacher's Examination.

Teachers' examination for Charlevoix county will be held at [illegible], on Friday, the 25th day of [illegible]. Examinations to commence at 9 a. m. and end at 4 p. m. WILLIAM HARRIS. Sec'y Board Examiners.

Land for Sale.

I have 5 acres just east of the cemetery, one mile from town, nearly all cleared, which I will sell cheap for cash, or approved paper. Address
JAMES METCALF, Charlevoix.

Bank of Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security
[illegible]

Its Officers
[illegible]

Security in Banking
[illegible]

This Bank Invites
[illegible]

This Bank Will
[illegible]

Parties Seeking
[illegible]

Investment Notes,
[illegible]

We Solicit Your Patronage.

C. H. Maddaugh,
MERCHANT TAILOR.

I have just received a fine line of Samples of first class Fall & Winter Tweeds. Call and look them over.

Fine Samples of

OVERCOATINGS!

now awaiting your inspection.

Call and see me, Satisfaction Guaranteed.

MILLINERY,
FANCY GOODS,
DRESS-MAKING.

We have just opened a large line of Fall and Winter Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.

DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.

ALDRICH SISTERS.
Inglside Building.

CROSS & SONS.,
buy and Sell all kinds of
Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.
Charlevoix, - Mich.

The Kalamazoo
"DAILY TELEGRAPH."
Contains the Associated Press Dispatches
Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

CHARLEVOIX
Manufacturing Co.
Charlevoix, Mich.,
Manufacturers of
Sash and Doors,
Blinds, Mouldings etc.
NEWELL
Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails
kept in stock.
Window & Door Frames
made to order.
All Kinds of
Building Material
Kept constantly on hand.
PLANS &
SPECIFICATIONS,
Furnished on application
Cottages made a specialty
also contracting and building
Correspondence solicited.

MRS. H. C. BACON,
DRESSMAKER,
Cor. Bridge and Mason Sts.,
S. T. Taylor System of Cutting and Fitting. Satisfaction guaranteed.

CHARLEVOIX
Savings Bank.
Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan

Henry Bennett, Pres. John Nicholls, Vice Pres. F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS.

Henry Bennett,	O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls,	A. Buttars,
A. R. Upright,	A. Fox,
F. A. Smith.

CAPITAL, ... $25,000
SURPLUS, ... 2,000

The liability of Stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art 3174 sec 40 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. [illegible]
Drafts drawn direct on the leading commercial cities of the world in large or small amounts. Money to Loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest.
We respectfully solicit your patronage.

CORRESPONDENTS:
National Park Bank - New York.
Commercial Nat. Bank - Chicago.
Nat. City Bank - Grand Rapids.
Detroit Nat. Bank - Detroit.

160 Acres in MARION
Township For Sale at a Bargain. Terms to suit.
MONEY TO LOAN ON
Approved Real Estate Security
THEODORE R. CHAPIN,
Boyne City.

JOHN CONNOR,
Fashionable
Boot and Shoe MAKER.
Hand Sewed French Calf Gaiters, $5, Men's Kip and Calf Boots, $4.00; Half-soling 50 cents. Defy competition.
All Work Guaranteed.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,
ARCHITECT
AND CONTRACTOR,
—ON—
Chalevoix Summer Resorts.

I have the Plans of 30 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.

I employ only first-class workmen, both

Carpenters and Painters.

Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention

J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller
Offer a
Mammoth Stock
OF FALL
----AND----
WINTER
BOOTS, SHOES
and other
FOOT WEAR,
--AT--
LOWER PRICES
Than can be found elsewhere in the County.

We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.

NOTHING SHODDY.

Fox & Miller.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.
The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter

RIFENBURG MILLING CO.
Charlevoix, Mich.
Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealer
3 EXTRA GRADES OF
FLOUR
Feed, Corn Meal, Graham
We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL
Litney & Steimel
LIVERY,
And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.
Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the
BEST BOATS!
The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references.
I will guarantee the best modelled easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the
LEAST MONEY!
All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.
LEAVE ORDERS
with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.
Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.
JOS. BEAUVAIS.

BETTER THAN MEDICINE!
KEEP YOUR FEET WARM.
You can't enjoy good health unless you clothe the feet properly.

D. SHERWOOD & CO.
have just received the finest line of Fall and Winter
BOOTS & SHOES
ever brought to Charlevoix. Give them a call.

A. J. McLEOD,
Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail!
All kinds of
FRESH MEATS,
SALT PORK,
SMOKED & SALTED
HAMS,
Dried and Smoked
BACON, DRIED BEEF,
Bologna, Head Cheese,
Sausage.
Highest Prices Paid
FOR HIDES and PELTS.
Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.
A. J. McLEOD.

Washburn & Ackert,
FOUNDREYMEN,
MACHINISTS,
And Manufacturers of The
Charlevoix Plow.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!
Builder and Manufacturer of
BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.
Sheet Iron Work given special attention.
MARINE WORK
a specialty.
HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED. W MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Buttars Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

DAILTHORPE & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

J. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office and residence, [illegible], Charlevoix. Office hours 9 to 10 a. m. 6 to 8 p. m.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC. Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 291, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157 meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 101, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 1[illegible], K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.
President—Byron See.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. I. Straug.
Financial Secretary—B. Sulfield.
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Uhlinger, W. A. Brown and C. Y. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Casper, Geo. W. Crouter, B. W. Miller, S. M. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Berdan.
All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequaled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Every convenience for the travelling public, and head quarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
Lorenzo Cook, Manager
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 150 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE.
W. C. Newman, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Travelling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. R. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. R. and J. S. DIXON Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. (Deputy County Surveyor in Charlevoix county.)

DENTIST

N. J. PERRY, Dentist.
Office in Wood's Drug Store,
Charlevoix, Mich.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card for Petoskey.

IN EFFECT, OCT. 1887.

Leave Going North	2 05 a m.	8 18 p m
Leave Going South	8 20 a m.	†11 10 pm

† daily except Saturday.

Michigan Central

The Direct Route Between
Mackinaw City & Detroit
Jackson,
The South and East.

Trains leave Mackinaw City 8 a m daily except Sunday and 10 p m daily arriving at

Detroit	9.10 p m and 11 a m
Jackson	10.21 p m and 11 20 a m
Toledo	10.55 p m and 4.45 p m
Buffalo	6.15 a m and 8.07 p m
Cincinnati	6.35 a m and 6.10 p m

WAGNER PALACE SLEEPING AND PARLOR CARS.

W H JOHNSTON, Mich. Pass Agt, Grand Rapids
O W RUGGLES, G. P. & T. Agt, Chicago

DULUTH, SOUTH SHORE AND ATLANTIC R'Y.

"SOO-MACKINAW SHORT LINE."

Only Direct Route to Marquette and and the Iron and Copper Regions of Lake Superior.

Traversing the most Picturesque portion of Upper Michigan through a country unequalled for

Hunting, Fishing, Etc.

Two Through Express Trains daily in each direction to which are attached

NEW, ELEGANT and COMMODIOUS

OBSERVATION PARLOR CARS & WAGNER SLEEPING COACHES

Tickets over this route are on sale at all principal ticket offices. Full information as to rates etc., maps and folders will be furnished. Address
E. W. ALLEN,
Gen Pass. and & Tkt Agt, Marquette, Mich

Garfield's Memory.

Let me tell you an anecdote of Garfield's power of memory. He related it to me himself. It seems that when Decoration Day was first started by the voluntary action of the people at Washington City, and before it became a legal celebration, Garfield was chosen to deliver the oration over the dead at Arlington. It was to him an important occasion, for General Grant was to be there, and that galaxy of people who would rule events for some time to come. Garfield was a good deal pressed by work in Congress, and he finally had to sit up most of the night to write his speech out. He got it done somewhere about 4 o'clock in the morning, and, going to his wife's chamber, he woke her up and read her the manuscript. It was his habit to communicate to her his performances and get her criticism. After he read it he went to bed and slept. The next morning he went over to Arlington with the procession, and had the manuscript in his pocket. When he arose to speak he put it down before him and said to himself: "I will watch the eyes of Grant and these other people and see how long they are interested before I take my manuscript up." So he commenced and delivered his whole address without looking at the paper at all. There were shorthand writers present, and when they wrote their notes out that afternoon these were sent to Garfield to be revised. He was astonished himself to find that he had delivered almost literally a transcript of the manuscripts he had composed and that in the few instances where he had departed from that mode he had strengthened the expression.—Ex-Postmaster General James.

Trees with a History.

A buttonwood tree supposed to be 150 years old has just been felled at Burlington, N. J., that was twenty feet in circumference.

A silver maple sixteen feet in circumference, in Middletown, Ill., was grown from a twig which a traveller stuck into the ground while passing through in 1810.

The fruit and foliage of the buckeye of Arkansas is death to cattle. Indians fish with it tied in a bag, which they drag through the water, and in an hour the fish rise to the surface and die.

A gooseberry bush is growing amazingly fifteen feet from the ground in the forks of a large elm tree at Newton, N. J. It is now two feet in height, and supposed to be the product of a seed deposited there by birds.

The remains of what was probably the largest cedar tree on the continent may be seen six miles from Oakville, Chehalis county, W. T. The hollow stub stands 56 feet high and is 73 feet in circumference 2½ feet from the ground.

The two oldest trees in the world are supposed to be the one in Calaveras county, Cal., that is believed to be 2,565 years old and the cypress of Somma, in Lombardy, Italy, that is 1,911 years old, or planted forty-two years before Christ.

Morosini's Curios.

J. P. Morosini devotes four rooms of his residence, near Kingsbridge on the Hudson, to his main collection of curios. One room is filled with guns of all makes, from Cromwell's time to our own, and some cannons, and all nations are represented in the collection. Swords, plain, quaint and curious, ancient and modern, ornamented and unornamented are also in the collection, as well as the weapons of ruder and savage races. He also has some human thigh bones that were saved and polished by cannibals. A two-handed sword seven feet long, said to have been used by the Spanish inquisition, also decorates a niche. A museum of curious watches, remarkable specimens of art from India, a French flag, which had been divided into pieces by a troop of soldiers to save it from the enemy and afterward put together, are in the collection; but most prized of all by its possessor is a letter which was written to him by Garibaldi, showing that a warm friendship existed between the two.

A Boy's Idea of a Thunder Storm.

A little boy about four years old, living in a New Jersey town, ran to the window one evening lately during a heavy thunder storm. As he looked out, long, glancing lines of forked, zigzag lightning ran across the black sky, then came a broad flash, lighting up all the west and northwest. "Oh, mamma! mamma!" sobbed the little fellow, "God's house is all on fire! Will he be burned up in it?"

A few moments after, hearing the rain pouring in torrents, he ran to her, crying, exultantly: "Mamma! mamma! God has turned on his hose. Now his house won't burn up."—Editor's Drawer in Harper's Magazine.

Preparing Olive Oil.

The olives are placed between two mill-stones and ground into a paste, stones and all. This paste is put in jute bags, which are piled up in an ordinary press and subjected to pressure furnished by a screw. The oil oozes through the bags, and is caught in pans or vessels, and then bottled. The most remarkable feature of the process is that some four or five different qualities are obtained from one lot of olives. This is explained by the fact that the oil oozing out at first is the result of slight pressure, consequently is sweeter and lacks the ranker flavor of the second, third, and fourth grades, which partake more or less of the taste of the olive stones. The last grade is frequently so rank that it cannot be used for eating purposes, but instead is used as the basic matter in the manufacture of soap, etc. The residue or paste left after the oil has been extracted undergoes chemical treatment, and the oil obtained from this is used a lubricant.—Weekly Herald of Trade.

A man dug a well twenty-five feet from a eucalyptus tree, lined it with cement, and placed over it a substantial cover. The water was carried to the house from the well in a wooden pipe. In that wooden pipe was a knot-hole. In time the well began to give out. The water, too, was acquiring a strange taste. Explorations developed the fact that the well had been filled up with masses of eucalyptus roots. The tree had run a root straight for the knot-hole, twenty-five feet off, and by that method gained the well itself.—San Francisco Bulletin.

A cow whose owner had once refused $10,000 for it was recently sold to an Oil City (Pa.) butcher for $50.

Wild Bill Was Alarmed.

"With the six-shooter he was simply wonderful," said Capt. Jack Crawford, speaking of "Wild Bill" Hickok to a Kansas City Times reporter. "Witness the double shot he made out at Hays City, Kas., in the early days, when he shot two soldiers, one in front of him and one directly behind him, each endeavoring to shoot him before he could draw his gun. He killed one and mortally wounded the other, and the two reports of the revolver seemed almost as one. The marvelous feat was the talk of the country for a long time. In fact, when I came by there a few days ago one of the residents who witnessed the killing mentioned it to me and said he could scarcely believe it after seeing it. Bill never missed his mark. I have seen him take a pistol in each hand and fire right and left pistol at a can thrown in the air, hitting it with both bullets. By the way, I heard a very funny story told of Bill some time ago. If you remember, he married Mrs. Agnes Lake, widow of Lake, the circus man. Bill fairly worshipped his wife, but despite his great love for her she never could induce him to quit drinking. He would come home full of bad whisky, and one day Mrs. Hickok said to him:

"Bill, if you don't quit this drinking pretty soon you will actually begin to see monkeys."

"Monkeys?" said he. "What do you mean, little one?"

"Why, you know, when people back east drink too much of the kind of whisky they get back there they see snakes, but this awful stuff out here makes them see monkeys."

Bill laughed at her and did not give the matter a second thought, little dreaming that she had 'put up a job' to break him of his intemperate habits. There was a tame monkey in the town—Cheyenne, I think it was—and Mrs. Hickok had induced its owner to loan it to her for a fortnight. Bill came home that night comfortably drunk, and after he had gone to sleep his wife secured the monkey and chained it to the foot of the bed. Then turning down the light a little she, too, retired and awaited results. Bill woke up in the night burning with thirst and raised up into a sitting posture, intending to get out of bed and get a drink of water. There, perched up on the footboard, was the monkey, staring him in the face with hideous grimaces. He rubbed his bleared eyes, looked again, and a horrible suspicion came into his befuddled brain. Had his wife told him the truth? Did he really have 'em? Finally, he sprang out on the floor, seized his six-shooter, which lay on a table near, leveled it at the grinning creature, and said:

"Now, old man, if you are a monkey your in a bad fix; if you ain't a monkey I'm in a bad fix." At the same instant he fired, and the monkey fell over in the agonies of death. His wife, who had been watching the working of her scheme, sprang up in the bed with a scream, and Bill, turning to her with a broad smile of the most intense satisfaction, said:

"Little woman, congratulate me, for I have just had a wonderful escape. I ain't as drunk as I thought I was, an' there's a monkey layin' there on the floor that'll never intrude itself into the domestic felicity of another happy family and make a gentleman think he's got the jim-jams."

The Strange Blanket Fish.

"This blanket fish," said an American, "is nothing more nor less than a big ray—the raola diabolis of science—and these yarns, though founded on fact, are a good deal overdrawn, though I am willing to confess I have been as badly scared as the Mexican you speak of. It was in this way: Some time ago I was down the coast on a trip and one evening I saw what I supposed to be a shark sailing about near the vessel. Wishing to have some sport, I put out the small boat, and taking two or three men pulled over to it. As it came by I put a harpoon into it. The next moment there arose from the water a ray that must have been twenty-five feet across, at least. It looked as big as a house, and as soon as it showed up my men screamed out: 'The blanket fish!' They were Mexicans and half scared to death. A moment later we were rushing over the water faster than I ever went before or since. The fish took us up the little bay, then turned and came down toward the schooner, going like a steam engine. We piled up in the stern to keep her from sinking. Just as we got opposite the schooner the fish dove right under her about amidships. Before we could make a move to cast off we struck the schooner. To make a long story short, we found ourselves in the water alongside. The rope had broken and the blanket fish gone. The force of the contact had smashed the cut-water of the boat in pieces."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Results of Emancipation.

The negro who was a slave was not lost to the south by the emancipation proclamation. That document did not destroy $400,000,000 in property; it simply changed the ownership from the master to the man. Confiscation of the land would not have destroyed the land, nor would the land be lost to the south. Houses burned, fences destroyed, crops carried off or consumed—all this was a loss of wealth—but emancipation was only changing the ownership of the slaves from the white man to the black. As a matter of fact, it was not a "loss" to "the south," though it was a loss to the former owner.

What the south lost by the war and what it lost by emancipation are matters entirely different. War is a destructive agent, but emancipation is not so, as far as the public or the state is concerned. Emancipation disturbed for awhile the labor system of the south, and for a time it prevented labor reaching its full productive power, but that was all.

It is no longer possible to assess and tax the negro as property, but he exists as he did before emancipation, and just so far as he is industrious he is worth to the public as much now as then. The cotton production of the southern states under free labor has certainly kept pace with the growing population. The population has increased more than 50 per cent.; the cotton crop for the ten years ending 1861 averaged 3,499,490 bales; for the ten years ending with the crop of 1886 it averaged 5,707,699, or say 60 per cent. more. In addition, other agricultural products have greatly exceeded this increase. So we see that whatever may have been the loss to the master, or whatever the new burdens imposed on the slave by emancipation, there has been no loss to society, no impairment of its productive capacity.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

German and American Canaries.

"I notice that as spring approaches you advertise German canaries," to a bird dealer. "Now, what's the difference between a German and an American canary, and how do you tell, or can't you tell?" The dealer deposited and gave a fluttering canary a piece of hard-boiled egg that stopped its whooping, and said: "The German canaries are superior songsters to the American birds, and there are several differences that enable dealers to tell. In the first place, the German birds sing at night, while the American birds tuck their heads under their wings and go to sleep but the great difference is in the notes. In canaries there are four notes recognized: the flute note, that is clear and has ring to it; the whistling note, which has a fine expression to it; the water note, that calls to memory the murmuring water over a rocky bed on a hot July day, and, lastly, the roll or note; which rises and falls, apparently dying away almost in a hushed silence, then gradually, slowly, but melodiously rising into a grand, ravishing swell. This last note the American birds can't reach. Any experienced dealer can easily tell a Hartz mountain bird as soon as he hears it sing."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

But Then It's English, You Know.

For several weeks young gentlemen and ladies—Heaven bless 'em—of the Syracuse University have been walking about the streets with mortar-boards on their heads. While they are at perfect liberty to wear coal-scuttles if they choose, or to appear in public clad in a coat of mail, or while some of the athletic young gentlemen might be excused for baring their legs and wearing Highland plaids, yet such a course might not seem advisable. The mortar-board is about as well adapted to the purpose of wearing apparel as a toboggan slide. In the first place, it is a trifle homelier than a map of the Sahara. In the second place, it is at the mercy of the wind and leaves the wearer at the mercy of the sun. In the third place, it is heavy and hot, and in every other place it is in the way. Mortar-boards worn with gowns are liked by some people on commencement day, and are thought to impart a mediæval and scholastic air to the possessor; but, worn alone and at all times, the ugly piece of headgear is about as much in place as a Roman toga in a modern ball-room or a Zulu clout at a picnic.—Syracuse Standard.

How Young Cossacks Are Trained.

A splendid idea was given of what the hardy Cossack race really is by two whole regiments, of twelve sotnias, of boys, about 1,400 strong, from 9 years old up to 14, drawn for the occasion from all the stanitsas of the Cossack territory. Mounted on lean, shaggy native horses and wielding long swords, bigger than themselves, and lances eight feet long, they formed the most wonderful infant cavalry ever seen. These boys can already ride at a headlong pace, cling on to their stirrups like monkeys, and pick up handkerchiefs from the ground as they career along. His Imperial Majesty, who arrived at the saluting point at 10 o'clock amidst tremendous cheering, was greatly interested and amused by these Cossack youngsters as they rode by in lines of sotnias two deep, headed by their choirs, singing Cossack songs to the beat of tambourines. Their swords and lances were found to be rather too unwieldy for such children, so they were taken away just before the ride past.—Russian Letter.

A Cincinnati Jew owed a clothing firm in that city $20 for an overcoat, which he did not seem inclined to pay. An attorney induced him one day to take a Turkish bath, and while he was enjoying himself a constable came in and took all his clothes, not even leaving him his shirt-stud. After a three hours wait his brother brought him his old suit.

KING SILICA
[illegible]
GRIFFITH, TUTHILL & CO.
110 Reade St., N. Y.

TO MANUFACTURERS
We are constantly represented on the road, and in all principal cities, by traveling salesmen, at [illegible] [illegible]
GRIFFITH, TUTHILL & CO.
BROKERS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
110 Reade St., New York City.

STUMP PULLER, $35.
The Best Machine made.
Fully guaranteed.
No Horses.
Two men can lift 40 tons.
It is better than any other machine because of its Power, its Strength and Durability, it requires no horses and will lift rocks as well as stumps. The price places it within the reach of everyone. It will save time, money, labor, patience and trouble.
We want active and reliable Agents all over the country.
Send for Circulars.
Address:
SUTTON BRO'S & BELL,
INDIANA, Penn.

TO GROCERY SALESMEN
[illegible]
YOU KNOW
[illegible]
GRIFFITH, TUTHILL & CO.
Brokers and Commission Merchants,
110 Reade St., New York.

Everything New
I have a nice new stock of
Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc
which I will sell at Prices lower than the same goods can be purchased outside.
SILVER WARE,
A Specialty.
All classes of Repairing done quickly.
C. R. BELLINGER.

Burns, Stevens & Co.
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

W. A. Reynard,
Dealer in
Fruit, Nuts and Confectionery.
I also keep in stock a full line of
Tobaccos and Cigars.
Butter and Eggs a Specialty.

Farming Lands
500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.
These lands are timbered with beech and maple [illegible]
By Water and Rail
[illegible]
Not a Wilderness by any Means.
[illegible]
Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.
[illegible]
W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner.
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.
TITLE PERFECT.

For Finest
JOB WORK,
Patronize The
Sentinel.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY.

A NOVEL INVENTION!
REQUIRES NO COOKING
For Collars, Cuffs, Shirt Bosoms and fine Laundry purposes, prepared by a New Process. The Celluloid Starch has no equal, look for the name and trade mark and take no other.
CELLULOID STARCH COMPANY, SOLE MANUFACTURERS, NEW HAVEN, CONN. U.S.A.
Will not stick to the iron or blister the goods, easy to use, makes your linen look like new at home. Ask your grocer for Celluloid starch. It is pure and economical.

HUMPHREYS'
DR. HUMPHREYS' BOOK
Cloth & Gold Binding
144 Pages, with Steel Engraving,
MAILED FREE.
Address, P. O. Box 1810, N. Y.
[illegible]
HOMEOPATHIC
[illegible]
SPECIFICS.
[illegible]

STOVES!

AHEAD AGAIN!
THE Round Oak
Heating Stoves.
NEW STYLES
Cook Stoves!
Saws & Axes
Job and Tin Work.
L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

F. A. COCHRAN & CO.,
(Successors to PERRY WEED.)
Druggists and Pharmecists,
A FULL LINE OF
Drugs and Medicines.
We keep in stock a large assortment of well selected POPULAR MUSIC. Call and see it.

M. S. MOULTON,
WATCHMAKER & JEWELER,
Charlevoix, Mich.
Personal Atttention given to Watch Repairing.
Key-wind Movements changed to Stem-wind and warranted as good as the best.
JEWELRY Repairing done in the best manner.
Having had 30 years experience I am confident I can give the best of satisfaction

MARVELOUS PRICES!
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION
Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. [illegible]
[illegible]
OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.
We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00; or we will send any five for 25 cts. or the whole forty-five for $1.00. Address all orders to "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms
Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS.
Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.
[illegible]
JAY L. PRICE

JAS. A. GELLICK,
Dealer in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS.
We call Special Attention to our
Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES.
We also keep continually on draught
Milwaukee
Export and Lager Beer
Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel.

W. H. FRANCIS
FURNITURE
—AND—
JOBBING SHOP,
Will also do
Contracting & Building,
in Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.
I keep in my shop a full set of Hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc. on short notice.
Shop on South Terrace,
Opposite Sheriff Berdan's residence.

NEW SHOP!
All kinds of Blacksmithing,
At the
Shop in the Foundry Building.
Horseshoeing a specialty.
ALL WORK GUARANTEED.
M. SCOTT.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

A DAY'S DOINGS.

Eventful Happenings in Every Hemisphere, as Transmitted by Telegraph.

Political, Social, Financial, Commercial, Industrial, Criminal and Other News.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

DEATH OF JENNY LIND.

The Celebrated Swedish Songstress Passes Away Quietly at Her English Home.

JENNY LIND GOLDSCHMIDT, the celebrated Swedish singer, passed away quietly at her home near London on the 2d of November. She was born in Stockholm, Sweden, Oct. 6, 1821. From infancy she showed a remarkable talent for singing, and at 9 years of age was given admission to a musical academy. She made such progress that in a year she was declared fitted for the stage, on which she made her appearance in juvenile parts attracting considerable attention by her were few passengers aboard the Vernon, says a Chicago special. As that was the last port at which she stopped his statement is probably correct. The crew was composed of twenty-six men, and as there are no survivors the most accurate estimate of the loss of life that can be made is thirty-six persons. The agent at Glen Haven does not know the names of any of the passengers, but says that one was a traveling salesman for a Milwaukee drug house. Charles Kropp, a merchant of Good Harbor, Mich., is reported to have been aboard, and it is known that William Albers, of Sackville, Wis., was a passenger. Three ladies who were supposed to have been on the steamer when she went down are now reported safe. Henry Wright, of Harbor Springs, telegraphs that Miss Durkin and Miss Gallagher left the steamer at Beaver Island, Mrs. Dudeavy, who was to join them there, not being quite ready. They intended to take the next boat for Chicago.

A CHICAGO dispatch of Tuesday says: "Every union job printer in the city of Chicago, about four hundred in number, will be out of work to-day, the Typothetæ, the association of employing printers, having refused to accede to the demand of the Typographical Union that nine hours instead of ten shall constitute a day's work. The strike promises to be a determined and protracted one, as both sides are stubborn."

TWO MEN were killed by the caving of the bank of a gravel-pit at Paris, Ill.

INTERNAL revenue collections in the Fifth District, in which Peoria, Ill., is located, for the month of October amounted to $1,810,075, the largest in three years.

ONE of the mills of the American Cotton-seed Oil Company, at Cincinnati, was destroyed by fire, the loss reaching $100,000, with heavy insurance.

"BUD" SMITH, a desperate Chicago criminal, who was serving a twenty years' sentence at Joliet, choked himself to death by placing his neck in a loop made by hanging his suspenders from his bedstead and letting the weight of his body rest thereon.

AT Cincinnati, Mrs. Katie Miller threw her 2-year-old daughter from a third-story window, and instantly leaped after her. The woman, who was insane, was killed, and the child fatally injured.

A ST. LOUIS dispatch gives particulars of a terrible explosion by which eight or nine persons were instantly hurled into eternity and a number of others maimed and shockingly mangled.

[illegible]

WASHINGTON.

[illegible]

SOUTH.

[illegible]

GENERAL.

[illegible]

FOREIGN.

[illegible]

MARKET REPORTS.

[illegible]

REFUSED THE WRIT.

Adverse Decision of the Court of Last Resort in the Anarchist Case.

Nothing in the Record Calling for the Interference of the Supreme Tribunal.

Why Objections to Most's Letter and Jurors Sanford and Denker Were Overruled.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.

The Supreme Court of the United States yesterday denied the motion for a writ of error in the anarchist cases. The decision was delivered by Chief Justice Waite and was that of the full bench. It occupied thirty-seven minutes in rapid reading. [illegible]

People, 53 New York, 164 to 172, decided June 10, 1873, and it has been acted upon without objection ever since. So far as we have been able to discover no doubt has ever been entertained in Michigan or Nebraska of the constitutionality of the statutes of those States respectively, but they have always been treated by their Supreme Courts as valid, both under the Constitution of the United States and under that of the State. [illegible]

ELSEWHERE.

New York and St. Louis Anarchists Wild with Rage—Vengeance Threatened.

[illegible]

AT CHICAGO.

How the Prisoners Received the News.

[illegible]

A. T. STEWART'S BODY.

Extraordinary Story of the Stealing and Whereabouts of the Millionaire's Bones.

The Grave Robbers Demanded $250,000 for the Return of the Ghastly Prize.

How the Remains Were Recovered—The Strange Means Taken to Guard Them.

The mystery which has so long enveloped the whereabouts of the body of the millionaire dry goods dealer, Alexander T. Stewart, forms the subject of a chapter in Superintendent George W. Walling's book, "The Recollections of a New York Chief of Police." A New York special says.

The ex-Superintendent professes to give the only true story of the stealing of the body, and also alleges that the body was subsequently returned to representatives of Judge Hilton.

The remains were buried in St. Mark's churchyard, corner of Second avenue and Tenth street, in an underground vault, the entrance to which was covered by a flagstone, which in turn was sodded over level with the surrounding surface, so that there was no outward evidence of its location.

[illegible]

MASQUERADED AS A WOMAN.

[illegible]

Hundreds Murdered.

[illegible]

The Man in the Moon.

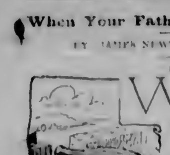
[illegible]

A Case of Conscience.

[illegible]

When Your Father Went to War.

BY JAMES NEWTON MATTHEWS.



[illegible]

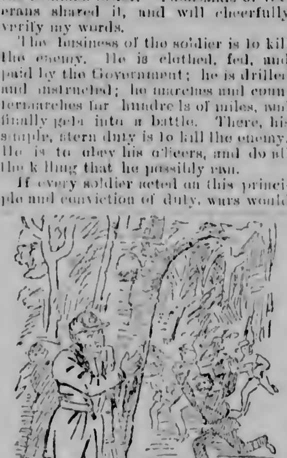
Government in all kinds of war material. I doubt not that with his large experience in the field, no man would more fully admit this than Sheridan himself.

I never saw much of the rear of the army, either in march or battle. I take no credit for the fact. The plain, simple duty of the soldier under arms is at the front, where the fighting is likely to occur; and the soldier who was not at the front at such a time has got an explanation to make as to why he was not there.

Yet, disorderly and ill-managed and weak against any attack of the enemy as was the rear of most of our armies in the field, I suppose it could bear no comparison to the aspect of things in the rear during the progress of a heavy battle.

Practically, I know little of this, either. But I have heard much from comrades who had a right to be in the rear at such times as to the disheartening appearance of affairs, and what I saw at the front will account for something of the disgraceful state of things that was visible in the rear while a battle was going on. There is nothing about my experience that was out of the common order. Thousands of veterans shared it, and will cheerfully verify my words.

[illegible]



Rallying to the rear.

[illegible]

The Rear of the Army.

BY JAMES FRANKLIN FITTS.

[illegible]

the beginning of the second year of the war; but soldiers did not change much for three years after that. There continued to be real soldiers, and those who merely wore the uniform and bore the name. By soldiers, I mean to include officers, too. The men of true blood and grit did the fighting, and won the victories, when they were won. They were animated by a sentiment well expressed by the old poet, Motherwell, which the runaways could not understand:

"Our business is like men to fight,
And, hero like, to die."

Doctor Didn't Know He Was Sick.

[Revised by H. S. Barlett, Bell Centre, Wis.]

WITH us there was a fellow who was always complaining of not feeling well. The doctors thought there was nothing much the matter with him; then, of course, no one else believed that he was really very badly off. In short, we thought that he was "playing off" to get relieved of duty. One day, after he had done guard duty the day previous, he reported at sick call. After [illegible]

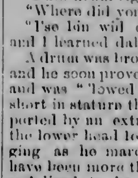
"I Kin Drum, Boss."

[illegible]

"I kin drum, boss."

[illegible]

Mutton.



[illegible]

DEFENSE OF YOUNG MEN.

Divine Service in the Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Dr. Talmage's Advice to Those About Starting in Life—No Way to Genuine Success Except Through Toil of Either Head or Hand.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 30.—Six thousand people, sitting and standing in the Brooklyn Tabernacle, and all the adjoining rooms packed and people turned away! Such was the scene to-day. The congregation sang:

Awake, my soul, stretch every nerve,
And press with vigor on.

The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., preached on the subject, "Defense of Young Men," and took his text from II. Kings vi. 17: "And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man." He said:

One morning in Dothan a young theological student was scared by finding himself and Elisha, the prophet, upon whom he waited, surrounded by a whole army of enemies. But venerable Elisha was not scared at all, because he saw the mountains full of defense for him, in chariots made out of fire, wheels of fire, dashboard of fire, and cushions of fire, drawn by horses with nostrils of fire, and manes of fire, and haunches of fire, and hoofs of fire—a supernatural appearance that could [illegible]

the saw, and the hammer. He is afraid of those weapons. But woe to that man when this coming lion meets with his hands in his pockets. Do not demand that your toil always be elegant, and cleanly, and refined. There is a certain amount of drudgery through which we must all pass, whatever be our occupation. You know how men are sentenced a certain number to years of prison, and after they have suffered and worked out the time, then they are allowed to go free. And so it is with all of us. God passed on us the sentence: "By the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat bread." We must endure our time of drudgery, and then, after a while, we will be allowed to go into comparative liberty. We must be willing to endure the sentence. We all know what drudgery is connected with the beginning of any trade or profession, but this does not continue all our lives, if it be the student's or the merchant's or the mechanic's life. I know you have at the beginning many a hard time; but after a while these things will become easy. You will be your own master. God's sentence will be satisfied. You will be discharged from prison. Bless God that you have a brain to think, and hands to work, and feet to walk with, for in your constant activity, O young man, is one of your strongest defenses. Put your trust in God and do your level best. That child had it right when the horses ran away with the load of wood, and he sat upon it. When asked if he was frightened he said: "No, I prayed to God and hung on like a [illegible] training, or your pride of character; nothing short of the arm of Almighty God will be sufficient to uphold you. You look forward to the world sometimes with a chilling despondency. Cheer up! I will tell you how you all may make a fortune. "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all other things will be added unto you." I know you do not want to be mean in this matter. Give God the freshness of your life. You will not have the heart to drink down the brimming cup of life and then pour the dregs on God's altar. To a Saviour so infinitely generous you have not the heart to act like that. That is not brave, that is not honorable, that is not manly. Your greatest want in all the world is a new heart. In God's name I tell you that. And the Blessed Spirit presses through the solemnities and privileges of this holy hour. Put the cup of life eternal to your thirsty lips. Thrust it not back. Mercy offers it, bleeding mercy, long-suffering mercy. Reject all other friendships; be ungrateful for all other kindness, prove recreant to all other bargains, but despise God's love for your immortal soul—don't you do that.

I would like to see some of you this hour press out of the ranks of the world and lay your conquered spirit at the feet of Jesus. This hour is no wandering vagabond staggering over the earth; it is a winged messenger of the skies whispering mercy to thy soul. Life is smooth now, but after a while it may be rough, wild, and precipitate. There comes a crisis in the history of every man. [illegible]

A Celestial Sunday-School.

[illegible]

Hawthorne and the "Solitary Horseman."

[illegible]

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for November 13—"Christ's Witness to John."

[From Chicago Standard. By Rev. J. M. Coon.]

The lesson for the above date may be found in the eleventh chapter of Matthew, from the second to the fifteenth verses. Time, A. D. 28. Summer, soon after the events of lesson 1. Place, in Galilee, probably at Capernaum or Nain.

SPECIAL MENTION.

John the Baptist.—He was the son of Zacharias, an aged priest, and Elizabeth, his wife (Luke i., 13), and was born about six months before Christ. His birth and work were predicted by the angel Gabriel (Luke i., 5-15), and by Isaiah (xl., 3), and Malachi (iv., 5). He grew up in solitude, and when about thirty years of age began to preach in the wilderness of Judea. The preaching of John seemed to have been of a very awakening and alarming kind, and to have produced a lively impression on the minds of his hearers; but, with most, it was but temporary—they rejoiced in his light for a season. Among the hearers of John was Herod, the tetrarch of Galilee. This wicked prince not only heard him, but heard him with delight, and reformed his conduct in many points in consequence of his solemn warning (Mark vi., 20); but there was one sin which he would not relinquish. [illegible]

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

A DAY'S DOINGS.

Eventful Happenings in Every Hemisphere, as Transmitted by Telegraph.

Political, Social, Financial, Commercial, Industrial, Criminal and Other News.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

DEATH OF JENNY LIND.

The Celebrated Swedish Songstress Passes Away Quietly at Her English Home.

JENNY LIND GOLDSCHMIDT, the celebrated Swedish singer, passed away quietly at her home near London on the 2d of November. She was born in Stockholm, Sweden, Oct. 6, 1821. From infancy she showed a remarkable talent for singing, and at 9 years of age was given admission to a musical academy. She made such progress that in a year she was deemed fitted for the stage, on which she made her appearance in juvenile parts attracting considerable attention by her dramatic talents as well as by her vocal accomplishments. At 16 she had become the reigning prima donna of the Stockholm opera. In 1840 she went to Paris and received instruction from Garcia, the first singing-master of Europe. In 1844 she first appeared before an audience outside her native city in Berlin. From this time her reputation grew with each performance, and she was received with enthusiasm at all the leading musical cities of Europe. She made her first appearance in London in 1847, and in September, 1850, was brought to the United States by P. T. Barnum, and was everywhere received with the wildest enthusiasm. In 1852 she was married in Boston to Otto Goldschmidt, a young pianist who accompanied her. Since her marriage she has refused all offers to appear on the stage, only singing occasionally in concerts. She resided in Germany until 1858, when she removed to England, where she has since lived.

A WHISKY HORROR.

A Drunken Swiss Shoots His Wife and Burns His Two Children.

A NEW HAVEN dispatch says that John Hodel, a silk-weaver living at Hebron, Conn., shot his wife and then set fire to the house. Two children were burned to death. Hodel fled, but is now under arrest. He had been on a spree for about a week, and when himself was a quiet, good-natured fellow, but drink made him crazy.

The Vernon Horror.

THE jury sitting on the body of "Bill," the fireman of the ill-starred propeller Vernon, found dead on a raft in Lake Michigan, recommended that the inspector who had last inspected the life-preservers of the wrecked steamer be arrested and held for trial. The preservers were stuffed with sea rushes, and not fit for the work required of them. Many of the bodies of the victims of the wreck are coming ashore near the scene of the disaster. Nineteen were brought into Two Rivers, Wis., on Thursday. One of them was identified as that of the captain, and another as that of E. R. Boland, a traveling salesman for a Milwaukee firm.

[illegible]

REFUSED THE WRIT.

Adverse Decision of the Court of Last Resort in the Anarchist Case.

Nothing in the Record Calling for the Interference of the Supreme Tribunal.

Why Objections to Most's Letter and Jurors Sanford and Denker Were Overruled.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.

[illegible]

A. T. STEWART'S BODY.

Extraordinary Story of the Stealing and Whereabouts of the Millionaire's Bones.

The Grave Robbers Demanded $250,000 for the Return of the Ghastly Prize.

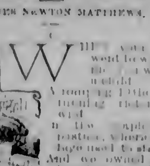
How the Remains Were Recovered—The Strange Means Taken to Guard Them.

The mystery which has so long enveloped the whereabouts of the body of the millionaire dry goods dealer, Alexander T. Stewart, forms the subject of a chapter in Superintendent George W. Walling's book, "The Recollections of a New York Chief of Police." A New York special says.

[illegible]

When Your Father Went to War.

BY JAMES NEWTON MATTHEWS.



[illegible]

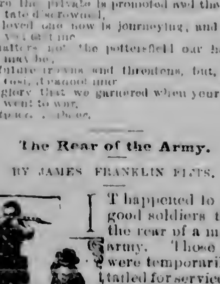
Doctor Didn't Know He Was Sick.

[illegible]

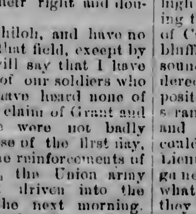
"I Kin Drum, Boss."

"I Kin Drum, Boss."

The Rear of the Army.



[illegible]



[illegible]

DEFENSE OF YOUNG MEN.

Divine Service in the Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Dr. Talmage's Advice to Those About Starting in Life—No Way to Genuine Success Except Through Toil of Either Head or Hand.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 30.—Six thousand people, sitting and standing in the Brooklyn Tabernacle, and all the adjoining rooms packed and people turned away! Such was the scene to-day. The congregation sang:

Awake, my soul, stretch every nerve,
And press with vigor on.

The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., preached on the subject: "Defense of

[illegible]

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for November 13—"Christ's Witness to John."

[From Chicago Standard. By Rev. J. M. Coon.]

The lesson for the above date may be found in the eleventh chapter of Matthew, from the second to the fifteenth verses. Time, A. D. 28. Summer, soon after the events of lesson 1. Place, in Galilee, probably at Capernaum or Nain.

SPECIAL MENTION.

John the Baptist.—He was the son of Zacharias, an aged priest and Elizabeth, his wife (Luke i., 13), and was born about six months

[illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.
Established, 1866.
WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
CHARLEVOIX, NOV. 16, 1887.

THE OTHER SIDE.

Things Said About the Vernon and her Master Said to be False.

Mr. D. H. Day of Glen Haven, has been interviewed by a Detroit reporter. He had a talk with Capt. Thorpe and looked over the vessel at Glen Haven, the last port at which the Vernon touched previous to the disaster.

"The statement that the Vernon was overloaded is a mistake," Mr. Day said to a Free Press reporter. "She had only an ordinary load of general merchandise, with which it is next to impossible to load a vessel beyond her capacity. There was not the slightest sign of a storm, and while smoking a cigar with Capt. Thorpe after putting aboard of his vessel some freight of my own, I asked him how many passengers he had. He replied that there were ten or twelve, naming some of them as he pointed them out. The cabin windows were open and several of the passengers were sitting at a table playing cards. One other of whom Capt. Thorpe pointed out and stated was a drummer for a wholesale drug firm in Milwaukee, has not been mentioned in the dispatches as among the lost. The Captain did not tell me the name of the passenger, simply mentioning him as being connected with a firm at Milwaukee. Fifteen minutes after the Vernon left port it began to blow, and an hour later the wind had increased to a gale. The Vernon was such an ungainly craft and drew so much water, even when light, that she may have appeared to persons unacquainted which her peculiar build as being overloaded. That she was not I am positive, and it hardly seems probable that Capt. Thorpe, in stating the number of his passengers, would have said there were but ten or twelve had there been thirty or forty. All who went down with the Vernon were aboard when the vessel was at Glen Haven, and then there could not have been more than the number stated by Capt. Thorpe, else I would have noticed them, as I was aboard the vessel several times while superintending the loading of my freight."

P. J. Klein, part owner of the Northern Michigan line, when asked concerning the Chicago reports that Capt. Thorpe was drunk on the night of the accident, said: "I knew Capt. Thorpe for fifteen years and never knew him to be a drinking man further than taking a glass of beer. My book-keeper, Mr. Warner, was raised with him and he says he never saw him drink. Mr. Burke, my partner, was for three years engineer on the Lawrence while Capt. Thorpe was captain, and don't you suppose he would have known it had Capt. Thorpe been a drinking man? Then, too, Mr. Burke's son, an intelligent young man, was clerk of the Vernon under Capt. Thorpe. He would undoubtedly have mentioned to his father or myself had he seen Capt. Thorpe drunk on the boat. Then there was Capt. Bishop, who sailed with him, and John McCaffrey, who was engineer with him, both of whom I saw to-day, and they say that they never saw him under the influence of liquor. He had been a great many years with the line—first as mate with Capt. Casey in the Champlain, and for six years had been master of the Lawrence. We took him out of the Lawrence and put him into the Vernon because we knew she wanted a careful master and we knew he was a first-class pilot. Had he been a drunkard we would not have kept him three minutes. But, poor fellow, he is gone now and cannot defend himself against such slanders.

"The story is as inconsistent as some of the others told by Stone, the survivor. As to shutters of the forward gangways having been left open while the boat was crossing the lake, I don't believe it. It may be that the shutters were left open while the boat was going from Good Harbor to Glen Haven, where the distance is ten miles. This I can account for from the fact that the dock at Glen Haven is quite high, and the freight taken there may have been put through the open shutters."

S. S. Burke, the local manager and half owner of the Northern Michigan line, was seen by a reporter and referring to the statement published, alleging that Captain Thorpe had an attack of delirium tremens the day of the Vernon horror, said: "Nothing more cowardly or cruel has ever came under my notice. It appears that some papers will go to any extreme for the purpose of printing a sensation. Look at the matter in a cool and unprejudicial light. My son—my own flesh and blood was on that boat as clerk. Be my methods ever so reprehensible, do you for one moment think I would place my boy's life in the hands of a man given to excessive use of liquor? Captain Thorpe never can refute the charge. Poor fellow! he can't defend himself, and this is what makes the attack more cowardly. Mr. D. H. Day, of Glen Haven, saw and spoke to Captain Thorpe before the Vernon left the Glen Haven dock. He stood near the gang-plank and had a long talk with Thorpe. He emphatically denies that the latter was drunk, and he saw him last. But, aside from Mr. Day's testimony, I was too well acquainted with the Commander of the Vernon. He has been in my employ since the Lawrence came out. I need no man's testimony to satisfy me that in Thorpe I had a sober, competent man."

The Elections.

The recent election gave Ohio to the Republicans by 25,000 majority.

Massachusetts, Iowa and Nebraska went Republican, and New Jersey elected a Republican legislature, insuring a gain of a Republican U. S. Senator.

New York remains Democratic.

Chicago cleaned out the Democrats, but Detroit elects a Democratic Mayor.

A PALACE ON WHEELS.

The Beautiful New Car For the Use of the McGibeney Family.

From the Davenport (Iowa) Times.

Since the McGibeney Family have been in Rock Island they have received a beautiful car for their own use. So many of our society people have the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with the Family that a little description of the car will be of interest.

This new car is called the Edwin Forrest, although we believe it is to be re-christened "The McGibeney Family," and there is but one other car in the United States as large as this car, "Yellowstone," owned by the Worcester Car Co., which is the same length as the Edwin Forrest 74 feet. The largest car on the C. B. & Q. road is 70 feet in length, an ordinary Pullman is 66 feet and an ordinary passenger coach but 43 feet long. The great length of the Edwin Forrest causes it to ride very easily and one scarcely feels different than when in his own drawing room while riding fifty miles an hour in its sumptuous apartments.

On entering the car one finds himself in a cosy stateroom which is used by the family for a sitting room, as well being the office and private compartment of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGibeney. Next comes a splendidly appointed ladies toilet room with hot and cold water and other conveniences; after this is a handsome state room with folding bed used by Mr. and Mrs. McGibeney. Then comes the drawing room 26 feet in length. This is also used as a dining room and at night is turned into a sleeping apartment with numerous upper and lower berths. This room is as handsomely furnished as any ladies parlor need be and is as cozy and convenient as heart could wish. After this comes the gents toilet room, the cutest pantry in the world and finally the kitchen, with the most complete appointments, presided over by "King John," one of the most noted railroad cooks in the land.

The car interior is of finely carved roswood with panels of other woods and the whole car is richly upholstered. The car is provided with electric bells throughout, is thoroughly heated by steam and is as complete as any residence in Davenport in every way. There are the lockers on the car in which are carried provisions for a month, half a ton of ice, a ton of coal, kindling and other things needed to live pleasantly. Four hundred gallons of water are kept in the tank for the use of the car. There are silver closets, china closets, bath rooms and all conveniences which go to make life agreeable. The McGibeney family are now fixed so that they can live almost as comfortably as at home, and all owing to the perfection of modern car building. The Edwin Forrest with its observation platform and all complete cost an even $20,000.

The Schools.

Report of the Charlevoix schools for 2 months fall term ending Nov. 11th, 1887.

NO. ENROLLED.
First Department, Mrs. Upright,	60
Second Department, Miss Mason,	42
Third Department, Miss O'Neill,	45
Fourth Department, Miss Nelson,	48
Fifth Gram. Section, Miss Gray,	50
Fifth High School,	27
Total,	272

NO. BELONGING.
First Department,	46
Second Department,	36
Third Department,	42
Fourth Department,	43
Fifth, Grammar Section,	46
Fifth, High School,	26
Total,	239

DAYS ATTENDANCE
First Department,	836
Second Department,	701
Third Department,	805½
Fourth Department,	772
Fifth, Grammar Section,	814
Fifth, High School,	457½
Total,	4386

DAYS LOST BY ABSENCE.
First Department,	31½
Second Department,	12½
Third Department,	3½
Fourth Department,	17
Fifth, Grammar Section,	20
Fifth, High School	11
Total,	127½

AVERAGE ATTENDANCE.
First Department,	44
Second Department,	36.9
Third Department,	42.4
Fourth Department,	40.6
Fifth, Grammar Section,	42.8
Fifth, High School,	24.8
Total,	230.8

CASES TARDY.
First Department,	7
Second Department,	6
Third Department,	2
Fourth Department,	7
Fifth, Grammar Section,	2
Fifth, High School,	2
Total,	26

NO. OF PUPILS NEITHER ABSENT NOR TARDY FOR THE MONTH.
First Department,	20
Second Department,	21
Third Department,	17
Fourth Department,	22
Fifth, Grammar Section,	25
Fifth, High School,	17
Total,	122

ATTENDANCE AND PUNCTUALITY PER CENT OF NO. BELONGING.
First Department,	97.7
Second Department,	98.7
Third Department,	97.7
Fourth Department,	98.4
Fifth, Grammar Section,	98.6
Fifth, High School,	98.6
Average,	98.2

The pope has rushed into a field where angels fear to tread. He recently declared in the most serious terms that there are but three colors suitable for young women white, blue and black—and that old women should wear nothing but gray or brown.

Old papers at this office.

THE ANARCHISTS.

Closing Up of the Great Case of The People Vs Anarchy.

The last act of the great Haymarket drama has been enacted and the law is vindicated.

On Wednesday Gov. Oglesby commuted the sentences of Schwab and Fielden to imprisonment for life and preparations were at once made for the execution of the remaining five—Spies, Lingg, Fisher, Parsons and Engel.

Thursday, in the midst of the preparations, a violent explosion was heard in Lingg's cell, and when the deputies rushed through the corridor they found Lingg prostrate, with his lower jaw, left cheek and neck blown into shreds. He had taken a dynamite cartridge which had been smuggled to him, and deliberately lighted it with a candle. He lived but a few hours.

On Friday at 11:54 a. m., Spies, Engel, Parsons and Fisher were hanged in the lower corridor of the jail. They ascended the scaffold with firmness, showing no remorse or regret, but rather with their last words sending out to their followers words of cheer and encouragement.

None of their necks were broken, and their death was hard.

So perish all enemies of good government.

Boyne Falls Items.

Geo. Petts moved to Macomb county, Tuesday.

Will Barnes came up from Kalamazoo Wednesday to visit his brother.

The pound social held for the benefit of the M. E. pastor held at the residence of Wm. Mears last Tuesday evening, was a success in every respect.

Wellington Kelch died in this village, Thursday, at the residence of Frank White. He was sick a few only from the effects of an internal injury.

Geo. Van Buren moved into his new residence last Thursday.

Bob Herron and Miss Alma Barringer were married Thursday, the 10th inst.

Jacob Cramer has a position as engineer in a mill at Brutus.

Geo. Kelch of Lansing, came up to visit his brother, and arrived the day after his burial. He did not learn of his sickness and death until after his arrival.

The Boyne Falls school has an enrollment of 74. The average attendance for the month ending Nov. 11, was 57.

Ironton Notes.

John Frenz is among us again.

Mr. Thompson has moved into the Frizzell house.

The Quarterly meeting services in M. E. church were well attended.

The Company advertise for wood choppers at 85 cents a cord for furnace wood.

Mr. Mosher, who has been visiting with his daughter Mrs. Purvis during the summer, returned to his home in Canada on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hammond are enjoying themselves in southern Michigan for awhile. Owen is doing the farming and already talks about bagas, etc., as if he had always farmed.

Report of Ironton schools for month ending Nov. 11th:

WHOLE NO. ENROLLED.
Grammar Department,	28
Primary Department,	49
Total,	77
AVERAGE NO. BELONGING.
Grammar Department,	27.5
Primary Department,	46.5
Total,	74
WHOLE NO. OF DAYS ATTENDED.
Grammar Department,	498
Primary Department,	841
Total,	1339
PER CENT ATTENDANCE OF WHOLE NO. OF DAYS.
Grammar Department,	90.5
Primary Department,	90.5
Total per cent,	90.5
AVERAGE DAILY ATTENDANCE.
Grammar Department,	25
Primary Department,	42
Total,	67

Results of regular monthly examinations as follows: Grammar Department, A. Grade. Average standing of class 92.6. Arthur Miller, 95; Pearl Lennox, 93; Walter Bird, 91; Katie Moroney, 95; Nellie Hammond, 93; Daisy Allen, 93; Mary Kuendson, 89; Cassie Box, 85; Lewis Hammond, 93; Erwin Parrish, 94.

B. Grade, average standing of class 86.6. Eddie Williams, 87; Bertie Waldron, 75; Jennie Hunt, 89; Nettie Waldron, 96; Mena Ericks, 88; Martha Saunders, 95; Mary Boyer, 89; Mary Maroney, 82; Frankie Box, 88; Wilbur King, 77.

C. Grade, average standing of class 91.25. Archie Miller, 89; Lizzie Garland, 91; Emma Bird, 93; Hester Saunders, 92.

Primary Department, A. Grade: Average standing of class, 89. Thos. Maroney, 94; Daisy Bradley, 88; Harry Purvis, 88; Marry Holland, 99; Georgie Garland, 90; Johnnie Mitchell, 85.

TO SELL.—RESIDENCE IN BOYNE CITY. A very fine location, commanding the entire view of this part of Pine Lake. Will take one or two good horses in exchange. Address Box 209, Boyne City, Mich. 41

Small Farm For Sale.

The farm known as the Bagley place, in Banks, Antrim County, near Atwood, is offered for sale. Twenty acres, twelve cleared and in good state of cultivation. Small bearing orchard, and good water. About half a mile from church, school and stores. Address this office.

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. Notice is hereby given, that by an order of the Probate court for the county of Charlevoix, made on the 13th day of October A. D. 1887, six months from that date were allowed for creditors to present their claims against the estate of Hugh Miller, late of said county, deceased, and that all creditors of said deceased are required to present their claims to said Probate Court, at the Probate office, in the village of Boyne City, Charlevoix county, Michigan, for examination and allowance, on or before the seventh day of May next, and that such claims will be heard before said court on Tuesday, the Third day of January and on Monday, the Seventh day of May, next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of those days.
JAMES A. KENT,
Dated Oct 13th, A. D. 1887. Judge of Probate.

JOHN LITZAU,
Manufacturer of and Dealer in
HARNESS,
Robes, Saddlers' Goods, Etc.
Old Chamberlain Building.

G. A. R.

At a meeting of Baxter Post G. A. R., Monday evening, the following resolutions were adopted:

[illegible]

M. J. STOCKMAN,
D. C. CHAMBERLAIN, } Com.
BYRON SEE,

The SENTINEL 13½ months for $1.50.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

FOR SALE—A good cow.
J. MILO EATON.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE—One span of horses, one yearling colt, two spring colts, one yoke of oxen, two two-year old heifers, two yearling heifers; must be sold soon. Terms reasonable. Inquire at this office.

Mrs. Litney & Carr cordially invite the Ladies to call and examine their mammoth new stock of fall and winter millinery. Their stock comprises everything in all the latest novelties in their line. It will pay you to inspect their goods before purchasing elsewhere. adv

CLOTHING.
I am Still In The Ring!
AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.
I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.
My Prices are so Low that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.
GEO. W. MILLER.

GO TO
A. T. WASHBURNE & CO'S.
FOR BARGAINS.

SPECIAL DRIVES!
THIS WEEK.
Mens Heavy Fulled Mitts, 25c. 5 pairs for $1.
Mens Heavy Loop Mitts, 40c.
Mens Alaska Socks, $1.15: others sell them at 1.40.
Lumbermens Socks, long, 75cts other dealers ask 1.00.
Bargains in CLOAKS EVERY DAY.
POSITIVELY LOWEST PRICES IN LAMPS & LAMP GOODS.
Full Brass Hanging Lamps, complete, $2.70.
Ditto decorated Shade and full prisms, $4.90
Night Lamps, complete, - - 20c.
GOOD JAPAN TEA, 4lbs for $1.
BRANCH STORE AT SMITHSON'S PIER, NORWOOD.
All Goods at Charlevoix Prices.
J. L. HURD & CO.

ROSENTHAL LEADS THEM ALL.
WINTER HOSIERY
Wool, Cashmere, Fleeced Lined, Etc.
We have now received all of our Winter Importations and offer a very large assortment in all qualities of English, French and German manufactures.
Dry Goods. This department is well stocked from the largest manufacturies of the East.
Carpets. We have an unusual large assortment of Carpets and Rugs to select from. See our Curtains and Fixtures.
We have an elegant stock of
MEN'S OVERCOATS BOYS'
To select from, and would invite those in need of an Overcoat to call and see them.
Clothing. Our Clothing department can furnish you a nice suit, a medium suit, and an everyday suit. Boys' and Youths' suitings a specialty.
Cloaks. Newmarkets, Short Wraps, and Jackets at low figures.
We are headquarters for everything in our line. Always glad to show goods whether you purchase or not.
RESP'Y YOURS,
ALICK ROSENTHAL,
LEWIS BLOCK.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO.—30 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1887. WHOLE NO. 939

WHERE IS IT? ANY PERSON CAN TELL YOU IT'S ON BRIDGE ST., NEAR THE SKATING RINK.
WHAT IS IT? THE ONLY BEST PLACE IN THE CO. TO BUY ANYTHING IN THE LINE OF DRUGS & STATIONERY.
AND THE FIRMS NAME IS
F. G. HINES & CO.
THEIR STOCK IS CAREFULLY SELECTED AND PRICES THE VERY LOWEST. GIVE THEM A CALL AND THEY WILL DO YOU GOOD.
"THAT'S RIGHT!"
THEY SELL THE BEST 5c CIGAR ON EARTH TRY IT AND YOU WILL THINK ITS A STRAIGHT 10.

EMREY BROS.
JUST OPENED!
A FINE LINE OF
Hanging Lamps for the Holidays.
A complete new line of Hosiery of every variety at the lowest prices you ever saw.
We are leading the GROCERY Trade
BECAUSE our goods are the best our prices the lowest.
We are closing out on Boots and Shoes and Crockery. What we have left in these lines will be sacrificed.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO
We are NOT CLOSING OUT
We never did
We do not want to
We are not going to close out
WE AIM TO KEEP OUR STOCK
Complete in Every Department
AT ALL TIMES.
OUR STOCK OF STAPLE DRY GOODS
---AND---
BOOTS and SHOES,
FOR THE FALL AND WINTER TRADE WAS NEVER MORE COMPLETE THAN NOW.
UNDERWEAR! We have a good line of Ladies', Gents' and Childrens' Underwear.
CLOAKS AT A BARGAIN CLOAKS
We keep Lime, Cement, Stucco & Plastering Hair,
We carry a full line of
EVERYTHING
usually kept in a first class stock of General Merchandise. We aim to merit the patronage of the prompt paying trade by keeping good goods and selling everything at a uniformly reasonable price.
Resp'y Yours.
Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

Best in The World

"The Royal Jewel"
Call at our store and examine the incomparably fine line of Stoves now on exhibition.
We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.
REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $ $ $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.
Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

The Best Groceries
At The Lowest Prices
ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF
A. E. MASON.
I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture
AT S. M. SEE & SONS!
We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.
Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.
UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S
REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE,
AND LOAN OFFICE.
The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.
Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.
ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

Finest Job Work!
AT THE
Sentinel Office.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY
WILLARD A. SMITH,
Charlevoix, Michigan.
TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
One year - $1.50 | Six months - $.75
Invariably in Advance.

Dissolution Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the co-partnership heretofore existing between Willard A. Smith and Ed F. Parmelee, under the firm name of Smith & Parmelee, is this day dissolved by mutual consent, Mr. W. A. Smith continuing. All book accounts due the old firm can be paid to E. H. Green. All subscription accounts must be paid to W. A. Smith, who also assumes all liabilities of said firm.
Dated at Charlevoix, Mich., this 15th day of November, 1887.
WILLARD A. SMITH.
ED. F. PARMELEE.

A BIG CHANCE.

The SENTINEL will be sent free to all new subscribers to Jan. 1st 1888, who pay $1.50 in advance. To all such the paper will be sent to Jan. 1st '89. Avail yourself of this opportunity to get the SENTINEL six weeks free.

Local News.

—The Florida colony have gone.

—We want apples on subscription.

—The county tax is a "holy terror" this year.

—Remember Thanksgiving service at the Congregational church.

—Regular meeting of the Common Council this evening.

—Capt. R. W. Tulloch has bought a fine Emerson piano.

—D. S. Way and wife are back from their outside visit.

—James A. Gellick has been quite ill of fever, but is improving.

—The wife of C. A. Barker, the Chicago tie man, died last week.

—J. T. Kirkpatrick and Geo. Clark returned from St. Ignace Friday.

—Mrs. J. W. Kirby has been critically ill, and is not yet out of danger.

—Mr. Cherrie will go to New York again soon in the interest of the railroad.

—James Inwood has returned from his Indiana visit looking as well as usual.

—The Sheboygan Manufacturing Co., which recently collapsed, is again in full blast.

—The mother of Supervisor Ava Smith, of Eveline, died Sunday at the home of her son.

—Hon. John S. Dixon and bride have returned home after their wedding tour.

—To the first twenty names handed us we will send the SENTINEL four weeks free.

—Arthur Connable, of Petoskey, is a frequent visitor at Charlevoix, on fish business.

—The last advices from Mrs. Dr. Crouter, now in California, state that she is slowly improving.

—Stroud's mill, at Horton's Bay, will saw for the Pine Lake Lumber Co. again this winter.

—With just snow enough to say snow, Dr. Lewis was out with his cutter and bells on Monday.

—W. C. Newman left Monday for East Saginaw, where he hopes to put in one of his patent bridge gates.

—Mrs. J. A. Cameron, of Boyne City, has been quite ill the past week at the residence of A. J. McLeod.

—Capt. H. G. Edwards, who has been mate of the schooner Cuyahoga this season, is home for the winter.

—If you have a relative or friend somewhere, hand us the name and we will send them the SENTINEL four weeks free.

—The County Superintendents of the Poor meet the first Tuesday of each month at the Newman House, in this village.

—The ten cent tea at the Bridge Street House Wednesday evening netted the Episcopal Ladies' Guild the sum of $12.

—Geo. H. Van Pelt, of Norwood, received a horse from Chicago Thursday, and C. G. Von Platten, of Advance, received a team.

—Just at this time, more than at any other during the year, we are in need of the amounts due us on subscription. Please respond.

—As a Thanksgiving offering we want to give away twenty copies of this paper four weeks. Hand us in a name of some friend or relative.

—The stockholders of the Charlevoix Manufacturing Co. are to meet Dec. 15th to consider the question of making an assessment on the stock.

—Mr. Hale, who was stricken with paralysis some time ago and brought to Charlevoix for a time for treatment, died at his home in Hayes on Monday. His funeral occurred at Burgess yesterday, Rev. W. H. McCartney, of this place, officiating.

—The O'Neill boys are still fishing at Northport with the tug Minnie Warren, and report good catches.

—Byron See, the enterprising dry goods man, has a new advertisement in this issue. Mr. See especially desires the ladies to call and examine his stock.

—L. D. Bartholomew & Co. have a broad smile on their faces, as illustrated in their new ad this week. An advertisement well illustrated is an attraction.

—H. S. Cook, of this place, has worked 55 years on the bench as a shoemaker, and can yet, even at his advanced age, drive pegs like a toad lapping lightning.

—W. H. Downer goes to Wisconsin this week for a two weeks' visit. On his return here he will buy all the posts and ties he can get at the highest market price.

—Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Gale, and Mrs. Ada Iddings Gale, of Albion, and Mrs. Phippany, of Colorado, will spend Thanksgiving at "The Pines," as guests of H. Lee Iddings and wife.

—Prof. J. W. Ewing, President of the State Teachers' Association, has issued a call for a convention to be held in Representative Hall, at Lansing, on Tuesday, Dec. 27, and to continue until the 29th.

—A. T. Washburn's new advertisement, announced last week, appears this week. It is so conspicuous and well arranged that it cannot escape your notice. When you read it go and see if it is true.

—The parishioners and friends of Rev. A. O. Downs will hold a reception for the Rev. gentleman and his wife at the residence of E. M. Clark this (Wednesday) evening. Let them receive a cordial welcome among us.

—The new election law of Michigan provides that the counting of the ballots shall begin at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and be carried on thereafter while the voting is in progress. This will have the effect of giving us quicker returns than we have been in the habit of getting.

—Miss Gladys Jeffries' writing school closed Saturday evening, after a successful term. Miss Florence Smith took the prize for best writing, and Charlie Jeffries took that for greatest improvement, but declined it in favor of the next on the list. Miss Jeffries contemplates opening a term at Atwood.

—The third in the series of union recitals of the music classes of Miss Alice Cochran and Mrs. R. W. Kane, occurred Monday evening at the residence of Dr. Lewis. There were 35 present, and, besides exhibiting the fact of marked progress, the programme constituted an interesting musical entertainment.

—Petoskey Independent: Willard A. Smith, the pioneer publisher of Northern Michigan, is again sole owner of the Charlevoix Sentinel, which he founded nearly twenty years ago, and which has done such grand work for this region. If the Sentinel is as profitable as it is readable, Bro. Smith will soon be able to retire with a fortune.

—Cadillac News: Rev. A. O. Downs stopped over in Cadillac last night. He is on his way to Charlevoix, where he becomes pastor of the Congregational Church. As minister of the gospel in this city, Mr. Downs greatly endeared himself to those who understood his devotion to principle, and esteemed justice to be a counterpart of Christian piety.

—The railroad engineer corps is in from the line, and the headquarters of Chief Engineer Beardslee is a place of activity as Mr. Beardslee and his assistant, Jos. R. Dixon, work at the long table upon which are stretched the maps and profiles of the line. If any one has doubts that the railroad movement means business, a visit to the engineers' office will dispel them. Mr. B. expects to begin work on "cross sections" within 30 days.

—School officers should be sure that they employ only legally qualified teachers. A contract with one not legally qualified is not valid, and a school officer is liable to fine and imprisonment for paying any school moneys to such a teacher. The fine may reach $1,000. A teacher holding a Normal school certificate is not a qualified teacher under the law until the certificate is recorded in the office of the secretary of the board of county examiners.

—The K. of L. Literary Society hold regular meetings on Wednesday evenings of each week, at their hall, at 7:30 p. m. The question for discussion this evening is: "Resolved that the best interests of this people demand a graduated land tax in America." Wm. Black and G. W. Jeffries, chief contestants. A cordial invitation is extended to the public. These meetings are intended for the dissemination of useful knowledge, and the promotion of the welfare of all. Attend the meetings.

Sounds Like Cate.

Citizen Amos Fox last week received a letter from Chicago, written on one of the letter heads of the Commercial hotel, which read as follows:

A. FOX, SIR:—You see what they do with Anarchists here in Chicago. Now they do the same thing with Michigan pedro players. Take warning! Advise your friend Downer, and take warning yourself.
CITIZEN'S COMMITTEE, COOK CO.
P. S.—If Frank Wood should come down here they would hang him in a second. Geo. Miller will order goods by mail hereafter. CHIEF OF POLICE.

Fox says it is Cate, and adds that if they hang pedro players in Chicago, and Cate lives until he is hung for that, he will be an older man than Long John Wentworth. Amos says he can't play a little bit.

We Are of the Opinion

That if Sheriff Jerrue has not resigned, he should do so at once, and make room for a better man.

That Boyne City folks, if the Citizen truly represents their sentiments, are "off the rug," so to speak, in that matter of filling the insurance adjusters full of blue mud.

That the Charlevoix driving park project, so energetically inaugurated, should be pushed forward this winter.

That about ten more bushels of potatoes on subscription will fix us all right for the winter.

That it is a hard-hearted delinquent who will not contribute toward so worthy and deserving a cause.

That the shoal water in the lower river is due as much to the low stage of water as to drift.

That there is a great deal of moonshine in the current criticisms of the Northern Michigan line, and the late Capt. Thorpe, in connection with the loss of the Vernon.

That if potatoes are much higher we shall have to fall back on turnips before spring.

That the Charlevoix Improvement Association should crawl out of its hole this winter, and prove its title to the name it bears.

That the Thanksgiving services at the Congregational church to-morrow should be largely attended.

That we have much to be thankful for, notwithstanding the fact that potatoes are 75 cents per bushel.

That ex-Sheriff Berdan should inform his friends here of his whereabouts, and how he is conducting himself.

That we shall have to go for our Banks correspondent with a club, if he don't send us more letters.

That if we had Bill See by the scuff of the neck we would more or less forcibly remind him of his promise to write the SENTINEL from his new California home.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

Tuesday evening bible reading is an important element of church work. It is highly educational, and therefore of value to all.

Thursday evening prayer meeting as usual. Give heed to the following suggestive formula for a good prayer meeting:

1. Think—about the subject at day beforehand.
   Find illustrations of it in business, newspaper or home.
2. Pray—as you come, for a blessing on the meeting.
   —through the the same prayer.
   —for each one taking part.
   —God to use you in the meeting
3. Expect—confidently, an answer to these prayers.
4. Speak—to others of coming.
   —to others about taking part.
5. Start—early for meeting.
   —early to speak or pray in the meeting.
   —a hymn in the meeting.
   —questions in the meeting.

Sunday services as usual, to which all are cordially invited. W. H. M.

General Church Matters.

The annual meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Church Extension Society began its session at Philadelphia on the 15th, Bishop Bowman presiding. There were present Bishops Merrill, Fowler, Walden, Hurst and Andrews. The report of the President showed that the past year has been the most successful in the history of the church. The total receipts during the year have been $309,000 and the disbursements $[illegible].

By The Teachers.

A meeting of the Charlevoix County Teachers' Association held Nov. 5th, adopted a resolution denouncing Harper's series of Readers, and unanimously signed a memorial, of which the following is the text:

"We, the Teachers' Association of Charlevoix county, do hereby, with one accord denounce Harper's series of Readers as being detrimental to the mental development of our pupils; as giving them a distaste for instructive reading, and, as being in the method of teaching a relic of the Dark Ages. And we most respectfully and earnestly petition all school officers of this county to immediately take the matter in hand, and banish Harper's Readers from this county forever."

Masonic.

The next regular communication of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M., will occur on Tuesday evening next, Nov. 29th. As this is the regular preceding the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, the annual election of officers will occur at that meeting. The attendance of every member is desired. Special communication on Wednesday evening, Dec. 7th, for work on third degree. Note the change of evening.
W. A. SMITH, W. M.
H. LEE IDDINGS, Sec'y.

Historical Society.

A pleasant evening was spent in the parlors of Hon. John Nicholls on Friday evening. About forty persons were in attendance. The programme consisted of a select reading by Miss Phila Wood entitled "Jennie McNeil's Ride;" an instrumental solo by Miss Cochran; the paper of the evening by W. A. Brown, and a conversation led by Mrs. W. G. Clark. The next meeting will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Allen, Friday evening of this week. Mrs. C. Y. Cook will present a paper on "The Reign of Richard I." W. P. Brown and Mrs. Kane will lead the conversation on "Ivanhoe."

Charlevoix Sentinel.
Established, 1869.
WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
CHARLEVOIX, NOV. 16 1887.

THE OTHER SIDE.

Things Said About the Vernon and her Master Said to be False.

Mr. D. H. Day of Glen Haven, has been interviewed by a Detroit reporter. He had a talk with Capt. Thorpe and looked over the vessel at Glen Haven, the last port at which the Vernon touched previous to the disaster.

"The statement that the Vernon was overloaded is a mistake," Mr. Day said to a Free Press reporter. "She had only an ordinary load of general merchandise, with which it is next to impossible to load a vessel beyond her capacity. There was not the slightest sign of a storm, and while smoking a cigar with Capt. Thorpe after putting aboard of his vessel some freight of my own, I asked him how many passengers he had. He replied that there were ten or twelve, naming some of them as he pointed them out. The cabin windows were open and several of the passengers were sitting at a table playing cards. One other of whom Capt. Thorpe pointed out and stated was a drummer for a wholesale drug firm in Milwaukee, has not been mentioned in the dispatches as among the lost. The Captain did not tell me the name of the passenger, simply mentioning him as being connected with a firm at Milwaukee. Fifteen minutes after the Vernon left port it began to blow, and an hour later the wind had increased to a gale. The Vernon was such an ungainly craft and drew so much water, even when light, that she may have appeared to persons unacquainted which her peculiar build as being overloaded. That she was not I am positive, and it hardly seems probable that Capt. Thorpe, in stating the number of his passengers, would have said there were but ten or twelve had there been thirty or forty. All who went down with the Vernon were aboard when the vessel was at Glen Haven, and then there could not have been more than the number stated by Capt. Thorpe, else I would have noticed them, as I was aboard the vessel several times while superintending the loading of my freight."

P. J. Klein, part owner of the Northern Michigan line, when asked concerning the Chicago reports that Capt. Thorpe was drunk on the night of the accident, said: "I knew Capt. Thorpe for fifteen years and never knew him to be a drinking man further than taking a glass of beer. My book keeper, Mr. Warner, was raised with him and he says he never saw him drunk. Mr. Burke, my partner, was for three years engineer on the Lawrence while Capt. Thorpe was captain, and don't you suppose he would have known it had Capt. Thorpe been a drinking man? Then, too, Mr. Burke's son, an intelligent young man, was clerk of the Vernon under Capt. Thorpe. He would undoubtedly have mentioned to his father or myself had he seen Capt. Thorpe drunk on the boat. Then there was Capt. Bishop, who sailed with him, and John McCaffrey, who was engineer with him, both of whom I saw to-day, and they say that they never saw him under the influence of liquor. He had been a great many years with the line, first as mate with Capt. Casey in the Champlain, and for six years had been master of the Lawrence. We took him out of the Lawrence and put him into the Vernon because we knew she wanted a careful master and we knew he was a first-class pilot. Had he been a drunkard we would not have kept him three minutes. But, poor fellow, he is gone now and cannot defend himself against such slanders.

"The story is as inconsistent as some of the others told by Stone, the survivor. As to shutters of the forward gangways having been left open while the boat was crossing the lake, I don't believe it. It may be that the shutters were left open while the boat was going from [illegible] Harbor to Glen Haven, where the distance is ten miles. This I can account for from the fact that the dock at Glen Haven is quite high, and the freight taken there may have been put through the open shutters."

S. S. Burke, the local manager and half owner of the Northern Michigan line, was seen by a reporter and referring to the statement published, alleging that Captain Thorpe had an attack of delirium tremens the day of the Vernon horror, said: "Nothing more cowardly or cruel has ever came under my notice. It appears that some papers will go to any extreme for the purpose of printing a sensation. Look at the matter in a cool and unprejudiced light. My son—my own flesh and blood—was on that boat as clerk. Being methods ever so reprehensible, do you for one moment think I would place my boy's life in the hands of a man given to excessive use of liquor? Captain Thorpe never can refute the charge. Poor fellow! he can't defend himself, and this is what makes the attack more cowardly. Mr. D. H. Day, of Glen Haven, saw and spoke to Captain Thorpe before the Vernon left the Glen Haven dock. He stood near the gang-plank and had a long talk with Thorpe. He emphatically denies that the latter was drunk, and he saw him last. But, aside from Mr. Day's testimony, I was too well acquainted with the Commander of the Vernon. He has been in my employ since the Lawrence came out. I need no man's testimony to satisfy me that in Thorpe I had a sober, competent man."

The Elections.

The recent election gave Ohio to the Republicans by 25,000 majority.

Massachusetts, Iowa and Nebraska went Republican, and New Jersey elected a Republican legislature, insuring a gain of a Republican U. S. Senator.

New York remains Democratic.

Chicago cleaned out the Democrats, but Detroit elects a Democratic Mayor.

A PALACE ON WHEELS

The Beautiful New Car For the Use of the McGibeney Family.

[illegible]

Since the McGibeney Family have been in [illegible] and they have [illegible] a beautiful car for their own [illegible]. So many of our society people have the pleasure of a personal acquaintance with the Family that a little description of the car will be of interest.

This new car is called the Edwin Forrest, although we believe it is to be rechristened "The McGibeney Family," and there is but one other car in the United States as large as this car, "Yellowstone," owned by the Worcester Car Co., which is the same length as the Edwin Forrest—74 feet. The largest car on the C. B. & Q. road is 70 feet in length, an ordinary Pullman is 66 feet and an ordinary passenger coach but 44 feet long. The great length of the Edwin Forrest causes it to ride very easily and one scarcely feels different than when in his own drawing room while riding fifty miles an hour in its sumptuous apartments.

On entering the car one finds himself in a cosy stateroom which is used by the family for a sitting room, as well being the office and private compartment of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGibeney. Next comes a splendidly appointed ladies toilet room with hot and cold water and other conveniences; after this is a handsome state room with folding bed used by Mr. and Mrs. McGibeney. Then comes the drawing room 26 feet in length. This is also used as a dining room and at night is turned into a sleeping apartment with numerous upper and lower berths. This room is as handsomely furnished as any ladies parlor need be and is as cozy and convenient as heart could wish. After this comes the gents toilet room, the cutest pantry in the world and finally the kitchen, with the most complete appointments, presided over by "King John," one of the most noted railroad cooks in the land.

The car interior is of finely carved rosewood with panels of other woods and the whole car is richly upholstered. The car is provided with electric bells throughout, is thoroughly heated by steam and is as complete as any residence in Davenport in every way. There are the lockers on the car in which are carried provisions for a month, half a ton of ice, a ton of coal, kindling and other things needed to live pleasantly. Four hundred gallons of water are kept in the tank for the use of the car. There are silver closets, china closets, bath rooms and all conveniences which go to make life agreeable. The McGibeney family are now fixed so that they can live almost as comfortably as at home, and all owing to the perfection of modern car building. The Edwin Forrest with its observation platform and all complete cost an even $20,000.

The Schools.

Report of the Charlevoix schools for 2 months fall term ending Nov. 11th, 1887.

NO. ENROLLED.

First Department, Mrs. Upright	60
Second Department, Miss Mason	42
Third Department, Miss O'Neill	45
Fourth Department, Miss Nelson	48
Fifth Gram. Section, Miss Gray	50
Fifth High School	27
Total	272

NO. BELONGING.

First Department	36
Second Department	35
Third Department	42
Fourth Department	43
Fifth, Grammar Section	46
Fifth, High School	26
Total	230

DAYS ATTENDANCE.

First Department	836
Second Department	701
Third Department	805½
Fourth Department	772
Fifth, Grammar Section	811
Fifth, High School	157½
Total	1386

DAYS LOST BY ABSENCE.

First Department	31½
Second Department	12½
Third Department	[illegible]
Fourth Department	17
Fifth, Grammar Section	21
Fifth, High School	11
Total	127½

AVERAGE ATTENDANCE.

First Department	44
Second Department	36.9
Third Department	42.4
Fourth Department	40.6
Fifth, Grammar Section	42.8
Fifth, High School	24.8
Total	230.8

CASES TARDY.

First Department	7
Second Department	6
Third Department	2
Fourth Department	4
Fifth, Grammar Section	2
Fifth, High School	2
Total	26

NO. OF PUPILS NEITHER ABSENT NOR TARDY FOR THE MONTH.

First Department	20
Second Department	21
Third Department	17
Fourth Department	22
Fifth, Grammar Section	25
Fifth, High School	17
Total	122

ATTENDANCE AND PUNCTUALITY PER CENT OF NO. BELONGING.

First Department	97.7
Second Department	98.7
Third Department	97.7
Fourth Department	98.4
Fifth, Grammar Section	98.6
Fifth, High School	98.6
Average	98.2

The pope has rushed into a field where angels fear to tread. He recently declared in the most serious terms that there are but three colors suitable for young women—white, blue and black—and that old women should wear nothing but gray or brown.

OLD papers at this office.

THE ANARCHISTS.

Closing Up of the Great Case of The People V. Anarchy.

[illegible]

On Wednesday [illegible] commuted the sentences of Schwab and Fielden to imprisonment for life and preparations were at once made for the execution of the remaining five—Spies, Lingg, Fisher, Parsons and Engel.

Thursday, in the midst of the preparations, a violent explosion was heard in Lingg's cell, and when the deputies rushed through the corridor they found Lingg prostrate, with his lower jaw, left cheek and neck blown into shreds. He had taken a dynamite cartridge which had been smuggled to him, and deliberately lighted it with a candle. He lived but a few hours.

On Friday at 11:51 a. m., Spies, Engel, Parsons and Fisher were hanged in the lower corridor of the jail. They ascended the scaffold with firmness, showing no remorse or regret, but rather with their last words sending out to their followers words of cheer and encouragement.

None of their necks were broken, and their death was hard.

So perish all enemies of good government.

Boyne Falls Items.

Geo. Petts moved to Macomb county, Tuesday.

Will Barnes came up from Kalamazoo Wednesday to visit his brother.

The pound social held for the benefit of the M. E. pastor held at the residence of Wm. Means last Tuesday evening, was a success in every respect.

Wellington Kelch died in this village, Thursday, at the residence of Frank White. He was sick a few only from the effects of an internal injury.

Geo. Van Buren moved into his new residence last Thursday.

Bob Herron and Miss Alma Barringer were married Thursday, the 10th inst.

Jacob Cramer has a position as engineer in a mill at Brutus.

Geo. Kelch of Lansing, came up to visit his brother, and arrived the day after his burial. He did not learn of his sickness and death until after his arrival.

The Boyne Falls school has an enrollment of 74. The average attendance for the month ending Nov. 11, was 57.

Ironton Notes.

John Prenz is among us again.

Mr. Thompson has moved into the Frizzell house.

The Quarterly meeting services in M. E. church were well attended.

The Company advertise for wood choppers at 85 cents a cord for furnace wood.

Mr. Mosher, who has been visiting with his daughter Mrs. Purvis during the summer, returned to his home in Canada on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hammond are enjoying themselves in southern Michigan for awhile. Owen is doing the farming and already talks about bagas, etc., as if he had always farmed.

Report of Ironton schools for month ending Nov. 11th:

[illegible]

Results of regular monthly examinations as follows: Grammar Department, A. Grade. Average standing of class 92.6. Arthur Miller, 95; Pearl Lennox, 93; Walter Bird, 94; Katie Moroney, 96; Nellie Hammond, 93; Daisy Allen, 93; Mary Kuendson, 89; Cassie Box, 89; Lewis Hammond, 95; Gawin Parrish, 94.

B. Grade, average standing of class 86.6. Eddie Williams, 87; Bertie Waldron, 76; Jennie Hunt, 89; Nettie Waldron, 96; Mena Ericks, 88; Martha Saunders, 95; Mary Boyer, 89; Mary Maroney, 82; Frankie Box, 88; Wilbur King, 77.

C. Grade, average standing of class 91.25. Archie Miller, 89; Lizzie Garland, 91; Emma Bird, 93; Hester Saunders, 92.

Primary Department, A. Grade. Average standing of class, 89. Thos. Maroney, 91; Daisy Bradley, 88; Harry Purvis, 88; Marry Holland, 90; Georgie Garland, 96; Johnnie Mitchell, 8[illegible].

[illegible]

Small Farm For Sale.

[illegible]

Probate Order.

[illegible]

JOHN LITZAU,
Manufacturer of and Dealer in
HARNESS,
Robes, Saddlers' Goods, Etc.
Old Chamberlain Building.

G. A. R.

At a meeting of Baxter Post G. A. R., Monday evening, the following resolutions were adopted:

[illegible]

M. J. STOCKMAN,
L. C. CHAMBERLAIN, } Com.
BYRON SEE,

The SENTINEL 13 months for $1.50.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

FOR SALE.—A good cow.
J. MILO EATON.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent. Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE—One span of horses, one yearling colt, two spring colts, one yoke of oxen, two two year old heifers, two yearling heifers; must be sold soon. Terms reasonable. Inquire at this office.

Mrs. Litney & Carr cordially invite the ladies to call and examine their mammoth new stock of fall and winter millinery. Their stock comprises everything in all the latest novelties in their line. It will pay you to inspect their goods before purchasing elsewhere. adv

CLOTHING.

I am Still In The Ring!

AND I CHALLENGE ANY CLOTHING HOUSE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN TO SHOW UP AS FINE A LINE OF CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS AS I HAVE JUST RECEIVED.

I have a line of Goods which it will do you good to call and see and find out what the styles are, for I keep to the front with everything new.

My Prices are so Low that you cannot help buying even if you don't need the Goods.

GEO. W. MILLER.

GO TO
A. T. WASHBURNE & CO'S.
FOR BARGAINS.

SPECIAL DRIVES!
THIS WEEK.

Mens Heavy Fulled Mitts, 25c. 5 pairs for $1.
Mens Heavy Loop Mitts, 40c.
Mens Alaska Socks, $1.15: others sell them at 1.40.
Lumbermens Socks, long, 75cts other dealers ask 1.00.

Bargains in CLOAKS
EVERY DAY.

POSITIVELY LOWEST PRICES
IN LAMPS & LAMP GOODS.

Full Brass Hanging Lamps, complete, $2.70.
Ditto decorated Shade and full prisms, $4.90
Night Lamps, complete, - - - 20c.

GOOD JAPAN TEA, 4lbs for $1.

BRANCH STORE AT SMITHSON'S PIER, NORWOOD.
All Goods at Charlevoix Prices.

J. L. HURD & CO.

ROSENTHAL LEADS THEM ALL.

WINTER HOSIERY

Wool, Cashmere, Fleeced Lined, Etc.

We have now received all of our Winter Importations and offer a very large assortment in all qualities of English, French and German manufactures.

Dry Goods. This department is well stocked from the largest manufacturies of the East.

Carpets. We have an unusual large assortment of Carpets and Rugs to select from. See our Curtains and Fixtures.

We have an elegant stock of
MEN'S OVERCOATS BOYS'
To select from, and would invite those in need of an Overcoat to call and see them.

Clothing. Our Clothing department can furnish you a nice suit, a medium suit, and an everyday suit. Boys' and Youths' suitings a specialty.

Cloaks. Newmarkets, Short Wraps, and Jackets at low figures.

We are headquarters for everything in our line. Always glad to show goods whether you purchase or not.

RESP'Y YOURS,
ALICK ROSENTHAL,
LEWIS BLOCK.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO. 30 | CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1887. | WHOLE NO. 939

WHERE IS IT? ANY PERSON CAN TELL YOU IT'S ON BRIDGE ST., NEAR THE SKATING RINK.

WHAT IS IT? THE ONLY BEST PLACE IN THE CO. TO BUY ANYTHING IN THE LINE OF DRUGS & STATIONERY.

AND THE FIRMS NAME IS F. G. HINES & CO.

THEIR STOCK IS CAREFULLY SELECTED AND PRICES THE VERY LOWEST. GIVE THEM A CALL AND THEY WILL DO YOU GOOD.

"THAT'S RIGHT!"
THEY SELL THE BEST 5c CIGAR ON EARTH TRY IT AND YOU WILL THINK ITS A STRAIGHT 10.

EMREY BROS.
JUST OPENED!
A FINE LINE OF
Hanging Lamps for the Holidays.

A complete new line of Hosiery of every variety at the lowest prices you ever saw.

We are leading the GROCERY Trade
BECAUSE our goods are the best our prices the lowest.

We are closing out on Boots and Shoes and Crockery. What we have left in these lines will be sacrificed.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO

We are NOT CLOSING OUT
We never did
We do not want to
We are not going to close out

WE AIM TO KEEP OUR STOCK
Complete in Every Department
AT ALL TIMES.

OUR STOCK OF STAPLE DRY GOODS
---AND---
BOOTS and SHOES,
FOR THE FALL AND WINTER TRADE WAS NEVER MORE COMPLETE THAN NOW.

UNDERWEAR! We have a good line of Ladies', Gents' and Childrens' Underwear.

CLOAKS AT A BARGAIN CLOAKS

We keep Lime, Cement, Stucco & Plastering Hair,
We carry a full line of
EVERYTHING
usually kept in a first class stock of General Merchandise. We aim to merit the patronage of the prompt paying trade by keeping good goods and selling everything at a uniformly reasonable price.
Resp'y Yours.
Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

Best in The World

"The Royal Jewel"

Call at our store and examine the incomparably fine line of Stoves now on exhibition.

We take pleasure in informing you that our stock which you know is always at the head was never in such fine shape for your inspection as at the present time.

REMEMBER YOU SAVE YOUR $ $ $ BY BUYING YOUR HARDWARE, STOVES & IRON OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

The Best Groceries
At The Lowest Prices
ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF
A. E. MASON.
I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture
AT S. M. SEE & SONS!
We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every description.
Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.
UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S
REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE,
AND LOAN OFFICE.
The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.
Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.
ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

Finest Job Work!
AT THE
Sentinel Office.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY
WILLARD A. SMITH,
Charlevoix, Michigan.
TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
One year $1.50 | Six months $.75
Invariably in Advance.

Dissolution Notice.

[illegible]

WILLARD A. SMITH
LUCY F. PARMELEE.

A BIG CHANCE.

The SENTINEL will be sent free to all new subscribers to Jan. 1st 1888, who pay $1.50 in advance. To all such the paper will be sent to Jan. 1st '89. Avail yourself of this opportunity to get the SENTINEL six weeks free.

Local News.

—The Florida colony have gone.

—We want apples on subscription.

—The county tax is a "holy terror" this year.

—Remember Thanksgiving service at the Congregational church.

—Regular meeting of the Common Council this evening.

—Capt. R. W. Fullock has bought a fine Emerson piano.

—D. S. Way and wife are back from their outside visit.

—James A. Gellick has been quite ill of fever, but is improving.

—The wife of C. A. Barker, the Chicago tie man, died last week.

—J. T. Kirkpatrick and Geo. Clark returned from St. Ignace Friday.

—Mrs. J. W. Kirby has been critically ill, and is not yet out of danger.

—Mr. Cherrie will go to New York again soon in the interest of the railroad.

—James Inwood has returned from his Indiana visit looking as well as usual.

—The Sheboygan Manufacturing Co., which recently collapsed, is again in full blast.

—The mother of Supervisor Ava Smith, of Eveline, died Sunday at the home of her son.

—Hon. John S. Dixon and bride have returned home after their wedding tour.

—To the first twenty names handed us we will send the SENTINEL four weeks free.

—Arthur Connable, of Petoskey, is a frequent visitor at Charlevoix, on fish business.

—The last advices from Mrs. Dr. Crouter, now in California, state that she is slowly improving.

—Stroud's mill, at Horton's Bay, will saw for the Pine Lake Lumber Co. again this winter.

—With just snow enough to say snow, Dr. Lewis was out with his cutter and bells on Monday.

—W. C. Newman left Monday for East Saginaw, where he hopes to put in one of his patent bridge gates.

—Mrs. J. A. Cameron, of Boyne City, has been quite ill the past week at the residence of A. J. McLeod.

—Capt. H. G. Edwards, who has been mate of the schooner Cuyahoga this season, is home for the winter.

—If you have a relative or friend somewhere, hand us the name and we will send them the SENTINEL four weeks free.

—The County Superintendents of the Poor meet the first Tuesday of each month in the Newman House, in this village.

—The ten cent tea at the Bridge Street House Wednesday evening netted the Episcopal Ladies' Guild the sum of $12.

—Geo. H. Van Pelt, of Norwood, received a horse from Chicago Thursday, and C. G. Ven Platten, of Advance, received a team.

—Just at this time, more than at any other during the year, we are in need of the amounts due us on subscription. Please respond.

—As a Thanksgiving offering we want to give away twenty copies of this paper four weeks. Hand us in a name of some friend or relative.

—The stockholders of the Charlevoix Manufacturing Co. are to meet Dec. 15th to consider the question of making an assessment on the stock.

—Mr. Hale, who was stricken with paralysis some time ago and brought to Charlevoix for a time for treatment, died at his home in Hayes on Monday. His funeral occurred at Burgess yesterday, Rev. W. H. McCartney, of this place, officiating.

—The O'Neill boys are still fishing at Northport with the tug Minnie Warren, and report good catches.

—Byron See, the enterprising dry goods man, has a new advertisement in this issue. Mr. See especially desires the ladies to call and examine his stock.

—L. D. Bartholomew & Co. have a broad smile on their faces, as illustrated in their new ad this week. An advertisement well illustrated is an attraction.

—H. S. Cook, of this place, has worked 55 years on the bench as a shoemaker, and can yet, even at his advanced age, drive pegs like a toad lapping lightning.

—W. H. Bowyer goes to Wisconsin this week for a two weeks' visit. On his return here he will buy all the posts and ties he can get at the highest market price.

—Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Gale, and Mrs. Ada Iddings Gale, of Albion, and Mrs. Phippany, of Colorado, will spend Thanksgiving at "The Pines," as guests of H. Lee Iddings and wife.

—Prof. J. W. Ewing, President of the State Teachers' Association, has issued a call for a convention to be held in Representative Hall, at Lansing, on Tuesday, Dec. 27, and to continue until the 29th.

—A. T. Washburn's new advertisement, announced last week, appears this week. It is so conspicuous and well arranged that it cannot escape your notice. When you read it go and see if it is true.

—The parishioners and friends of Rev. A. O. Downs will hold a reception for the Rev. gentleman and his wife at the residence of E. M. Clark this (Wednesday) evening. Let them receive a cordial welcome among us.

—The new election law of Michigan provides that the counting of the ballots shall begin at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and be carried on thereafter while the voting is in progress. This will have the effect of giving us quicker returns than we have been in the habit of getting.

—Miss Gladys Jeffries' writing school closed Saturday evening, after a successful term. Miss Florence Smith took the prize for best writing, and Charlie Jeffries took that for greatest improvement, but declined it in favor of the next on the list. Miss Jeffries contemplates opening a term at Atwood.

—The third in the series of union recitals of the music classes of Miss Alice Cochran and Mrs. R. W. Kane, occurred Monday evening at the residence of Dr. Lewis. There were 35 present, and, besides exhibiting the fact of marked progress, the programme constituted an interesting musical entertainment.

—Petoskey Independent: Willard A. Smith, the pioneer publisher of Northern Michigan, is again sole owner of the Charlevoix Sentinel, which he founded nearly twenty years ago, and which has done such grand work for this region. If the Sentinel is as profitable as it is readable, Bro. Smith will soon be able to retire with a fortune.

—Cadillac News: Rev. A. O. Downs stopped over in Cadillac last night. He is on his way to Charlevoix, where he becomes pastor of the Congregational Church. As minister of the gospel in this city, Mr. Downs greatly endeared himself to those who understood his devotion to principle, and esteemed justice to be a counterpart of Christian piety.

—The railroad engineer corps is in from the line, and the headquarters of Chief Engineer Beardslee is a place of activity as Mr. Beardslee and his assistant, Jos. R. Dixon, work at the long table upon which are stretched the maps and profiles of the line. If any one has doubts that the railroad movement means business, a visit to the engineers' office will dispel them. Mr. B. expects to begin work on "cross sections" within 30 days.

—School officers should be sure that they employ only legally qualified teachers. A contract with one not legally qualified is not valid, and a school officer is liable to fine and imprisonment for paying any school moneys to such a teacher. The fine may reach $1,000. A teacher holding a Normal school certificate is not a qualified teacher under the law until the certificate is recorded in the office of the secretary of the board of county examiners.

—The K. of L. Literary Society hold regular meetings on Wednesday evenings of each week, at their hall, at 7:30 p. m. The question for discussion this evening is: "Resolved that the best interests of this people demand a graduated land tax in America." Wm. Black and G. W. Jeffries, chief contestants. A cordial invitation is extended to the public. These meetings are intended for the dissemination of useful knowledge, and the promotion of the welfare of all. Attend the meetings.

Sounds Like Cate.

Citizen Amos Fox last week received a letter from Chicago, written on one of the letter heads of the Commercial hotel, which read as follows:

A. FOX, Sir:—You see what they do with Anarchists here in Chicago. Now they do the same thing with Michigan pedro players. Take warning; Advise your friend Downer, and take warning yourself.
CITIZEN'S COMMITTEE, Cook Co.
P. S.—If Frank Wood should come down here they would hang him in a second. Geo. Miller will order goods by mail hereafter. CUTER OR POTTER.

Fox says it is Cate, and adds that if they hang pedro players in Chicago, and Cate lives until he is hung for that, he will be an older man than Long John Wentworth. Amos says he can't play a little bit.

We Are of the Opinion

That if Sheriff Jerrue has not resigned, he should do so at once, and make room for a better man.

That Boyne City folks, if the Citizen truly represents their sentiments, are "off the rug," so to speak, in that matter of filling the insurance adjusters full of blue mud.

That the Charlevoix driving park project, so energetically inaugurated, should be pushed forward this winter.

That about ten more bushels of potatoes on subscription will fix us all right for the winter.

That it is a hard hearted delinquent who will not contribute toward so worthy and deserving a cause.

That the shoal water in the lower river is due as much to the low stage of water as to drift.

That there is a great deal of moonshine in the current criticisms of the Northern Michigan line, and the late Capt. Thorpe, in connection with the loss of the Vernon.

That if potatoes are much higher we shall have to fall back on turnips before spring.

That the Charlevoix Improvement Association should crawl out of its hole this winter, and prove its title to the name it bears.

That the Thanksgiving services at the Congregational church to-morrow should be largely attended.

That we have much to be thankful for, notwithstanding the fact that potatoes are 75 cents per bushel.

That ex-Sheriff Berdan should inform his friends here of his whereabouts, and how he is conducting himself.

That we shall have to go for our Banks correspondent with a club, if he don't send us more letters.

That if we had Bill See by the scuff of the neck we would more or less forcibly remind him of his promise to write the SENTINEL from his new California home.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

Tuesday evening bible reading is an important element of church work. It is highly educational, and therefore of value to all.

Thursday evening prayer meeting as usual. Give heed to the following suggestive formula for a good prayer meeting:

1. Think—about the subject at day beforehand.
   Find illustrations of it in business, newspaper or home.
2. Pray—as you come, for a blessing on the meeting.
   —through the the same prayer.
   for each one taking part.
   —God to use you in the meeting
3. Expect—confidently, an answer to these prayers.
4. Speak—to others of coming.
   —to others about taking part.
5. Start—early for meeting.
   —early to speak or pray in the meeting.
   —a hymn in the meeting.
   —questions in the meeting.

Sunday services as usual, to which all are cordially invited. W. H. M.

General Church Matters.

The annual meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Church Extension Society began its session at Philadelphia on the 18th, Bishop Bowman presiding. There were present Bishops Merrill, Fowler, Walden, Hurst and Andrews. The report of the President showed that the past year has been the most successful in the history of the church. The total receipts during the year have been $309,000 and the disbursements $[illegible].

By The Teachers.

A meeting of the Charlevoix County Teachers' Association held Nov. 5th, adopted a resolution denouncing Harper's series of Readers, and unanimously signed a memorial, of which the following is the text:

"We, the Teachers' Association of Charlevoix county, do hereby, with one accord denounce Harper's series of Readers as being detrimental to the mental development of our pupils; as giving them a distaste for instructive reading, and, as being in the method of teaching a relic of the Dark Ages. And we most respectfully and earnestly petition all school officers of this county to immediately take the matter in hand, and banish Harper's Readers from this county forever."

Masonic.

The next regular communication of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M., will occur on Tuesday evening next, Nov. 29th. As this is the regular preceding the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, the annual election of officers will occur at that meeting. The attendance of every member is desired. Special communication on Wednesday evening, Dec. 7th, for work on third degree. Note the change of evening.

W. A. SMITH, W. M.
H. LEE IDDINGS, Sec'y.

Historical Society.

A pleasant evening was spent in the parlors of Hon. John Nicholls on Friday evening. About forty persons were in attendance. The programme consisted of a select reading by Miss Philla Wood entitled "Jennie McNeil's Ride;" an instrumental solo by Miss Cochran; the paper of the evening by W. A. Brown, and a conversation led by Mrs. W. G. Clark. The next meeting will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Allen, Friday evening of this week. Mrs. C. Y. Cook will present a paper on "The Reign of Richard I." W. P. Brown and Mrs. Kane will lead the conversation on "Ivanhoe."

ADOWN THE DATE.

Seemed but heaven's joy be[illegible]
Down through dusky, purpl[illegible] leaves,
Till the scarlet ivy's climbing
Showed a purple, clustered pleading
Long the blacken'd windswept eaves.

Then the woodland echoes dying,
Sound like vanquished spirits sighing
Thro' the lonely hollows, [illegible]
'Mid the cold lights glinting there;
And I vex too with a question,
Is this death, or but suggestion?
Is this sobbing sound a prayer?

I lament for hours departed
For the summer happy-hearted
When my pulses so warmly started
At the pressure of her hand,
When she kissed me, sweetly smiling,
And my ardent soul beguiling
With the fragrant rose wreathed band.

Then I brood for red buds showing,
[illegible]
In the love of [illegible] growing
Clinging to the [illegible]
And there follows a loneliness [illegible]
And a vision glides before me
Of a summer [illegible] recall.
[illegible], Mich.

A MODERN MAGDALEN.

BY M. C. FARLEY.

CHAPTER XII—[CONTINUED.]

"Then I will fetch it. Remember—Tuesday evening—and here, under the trees."

"I'm not likely to forget the date nor the place. Good-night, my dear."

"Good night."

Bolton turns upon his heel. He advances two steps, stumbles, and falls headlong over some strange object that suddenly springs up from the path in the darkness.

"Kibbey," ejaculates Loo, in terror.

"Yes, Kibbey," says the butler. "Now, miss, what will Madam say when I tell her—as I shall—about this affair with a strange man in the Park grounds."

Bolton had recovered himself, and as the butler's insulting words reached his ears the father rushed upon him.

"That voice!" ejaculated Bolton, as he seized the newcomer. "Who are you? Good God! it's Searth!"

The butler writhes away from the

The father rushed upon him.

grasp of the angry father. In the rapidly growing darkness his face is rendered indistinguishable. Could Frederic Bolton see that face as it looks now, he would fear for his life.

"I am Kibbey, the butler at Bywater Park," the butler says, coldly. "It may be to the future interest of this young lady here to make some kind of terms with me. If I should repeat to Madam Dundas the story of this meeting here it would be all up with the young lady, so far as Bywater Park is concerned."

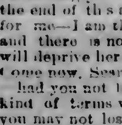
"Searth!" again ejaculates Mr. Bolton. "I am not mistaken in that voice."

Before Kibbey is aware of Bolton's intention, Bolton strikes a match, and holds it exultingly in the butler's face. "I think if this young lady should go to Madam, and tell her the past history of Kibbey the butler, that Kibbey the butler would be summarily dismissed from Bywater Park," said Bolton tantalizingly. "I feel sure that is what the end of this affair will come too. As for me—I am this young lady's father, and there is no law in America that will deprive her of her father's society. Come now, Searth—for you are Searth—had you not better try to make some kind of terms with us, in order that you may not lose your present situation?"

"Send the lady away and I will talk with you," Searth says sullenly.

Loo does not wait for Bolton to tell her to go away. She is already flitting, scared and trembling, toward the house.

CHAPTER XIII.



"NOW then," says Bolton, as Loo disappeared, "what have you to say in defense of your conduct?"

The butler was rummaging in his pockets, and did not at once reply.

"Come, speak out! What do you say?"

"Nothing much." Searth's voice is curiously choked and low. "Only it seems as if I am never to get a start in life again. Curse me, no sooner do I get into a good place than something happens to prevent me from enjoying it."

"No crookedness around Bywater Park," says Bolton, warningly.

"Of course not. I'm going away now; or, at least, I will go directly after Madam's party. She gives a party Tuesday evening in honor of Miss Loo."

"She does?" Bolton is interested.

"It is to be a swell affair," says Kibbey, disconsolately. "I'm so sorry to leave Bywater Park before it comes off. Just my infernal luck, though."

"Are you trying to live honestly?"

"Trying! Why, I am."

The butler is fumbling with a roll of something which he has drawn from his pocket.

"I was doing fine till Miss Loo came here. She knew me, or thought she did, which amounts to the same thing, you know. I've lived in terror ever since, for fear she'll split on me."

"She won't tell if you behave yourself," Bolton says, shortly.

"I hate to lose my situation," Kibbey replied, insinuatingly; "and I ought to be let alone a earning a honest living, it seems to me. Every man has the right to earn a honest living if he can."

"Yes," [illegible] Bolton.

"And I am sa[illegible]ving up money," goes on [illegible] more insinuatingly still. "It is [illegible] luck to be thrown out [illegible] just because of a sin [illegible] of more'n a hundred [illegible]

"[illegible] you had no designs on [illegible]," [illegible]ns Bolton, evidently [illegible] half relenting.

"[illegible]ven't," asserts Kibbey, [illegible]

"[illegible]t go away and not re-[illegible]

"[illegible]ly would!"

[illegible] the "something" which [illegible]mbling into Bolton's [illegible]

"[illegible] hundred dollars as I've [illegible] I'll lend them to you [illegible] you came to the Park for hoping you'll excuse the liberty. I mean no harm. Mr. Bolton, do please let me keep on here a trying to be honest: do!"

There is something exceedingly persuasive to Frederic Bolton in the feeling produced by the roll of notes in his palm.

He hesitates, but it is for an instant only.

"Well," he begins, "if you really are trying to do right, why, I—I——"

"I really am," breaks in the anxious butler, "and you may take your own time in paying back the money. I shan't want it—not for a long, long time."

"Very well," says Bolton; "it's a bargain. But there shall be no monkeying with the plate at Bywater Park. Remember that."

"No," replied the butler, hurriedly; "no monkeying, I promise you."

And before Bolton can say another word, Kibbey rushes away, leaving Bolton standing alone with the money in his hand.

"I shan't need Loo's locket, after all," Bolton thinks, as he leisurely makes his way back to his hotel, "and I'm glad of it. I dislike having to put things in pawn. Here's enough to keep Mrs. McGillicuddy quiet for months to come."

Mr. Bolton reaches his inn, writes a few lines to Loo, telling her that he has unexpectedly received a remittance and that he will therefore cancel the engagement for Tuesday evening, blows out his candle, and in high good-humor with himself and the world, jumps into bed.

Not so with the butler.

Kibbey rushes away to his room at Bywater Park, throws himself furiously into a chair, shakes two fists at an imaginary somebody, whom he anathematizes as "that d—— d Bolton," and curses until the very air is blue.

His fury exhausted, he goes to a cupboard, takes down a jar, and pouring out the contents, which proved to be notes and gold pieces, proceeds to count his money. "Not enough," he mutters, gloomily. "If I leave, and of course I'll have to leave after this, we must crack the crib. There's nothing else to be done. That Bolton—blast him—why did he ever come to Bywater Park?"

Now the butler fetches pens, ink and paper, and proceeds to scrawl in his turn the following epistle:

BYWATER PARK.

Cap.:

This is to let you know that everything is up with me in this here situation. The time is ripe—and everything is ready. Let me know date when I am to expect a visit from you.

SEARTH.

"The thing's got to be done," says the butler, eying his blurred epistle with satisfaction. "Now, Miss Loo, look out for what's in the atmosphere. You and your precious pa will feel a smiting hand soon, or I am no prophet."

It was barely possible the butler himself was soon to feel a "smiting hand;" but of this, more anon.

CHAPTER XIV.

TO SEE MISS LAFARGE.

MISS LAFARGE has now quite recovered from her late railway accident. Her broken arm is healed, and for some weeks the silken sling has been discarded. She has fascinated Miss Chidley. That worthy spinster wonders how in the world she managed to exist before her dear Marion came to Stubblefield. Even the wicked little ponies themselves seem to have succumbed to the spell of her presence, for they behave with tolerable decency whenever Miss Lafarge rides behind them.

With one exception, everybody at Stubblefield adores Miss Chidley's "Dear Marion." Obe is the solitary exception. But, as Miss Chidley very truly remarked, "Obe was always on the contrary side, anyway, and his opinion was of no consequence."

At first Miss Lafarge refused to believe in Obe's dislike of herself. But at last, perceiving it was true, she determined that she would "stoop to conquer," and thereupon brought the entire battery of her sweet smiles, her pleasant words and her engaging manners to bear upon the black boy.

Proceeded to scrawl in his turn.

But her efforts were all without the desired effect. Obe remained obdurate, and only watched her the more closely from the corners of his big eyes, and felt more suspicious still of the charming young lady.

"Obe would feel suspicious of anybody who could tame the terrible ponies," Miss Chidley says.

And perhaps this was true.

Finding her efforts were wasted upon the colored boy, Miss Lafarge changed her tactics, and whereas she had once been kind to him, she is quite the contrary now. Sometimes, even, when they are quite alone together, she carries her dislike so far as to lean forward and snap her little white teeth at him in a way that makes his wool stand up on top of his head, and brings little cold chills creeping along his spinal column.

And there is something so strange in the steely gleam of the blue eyes as they meet his own, something so irresistibly wolfish in the way the little white teeth snap together, that Obe almost believes Miss Lafarge means to eat him up some day, body and boots, when no one knows it and he unable to resist her.

"She's like dem hosses," Obe says, with an ominous shake of his woolly head; "de debbil is in dem lugin hosses; and 'pears to me dat de debbil hisself must be in her, or she couldn't come it over 'em all de way she does. Something mighty curis 'bout hit. Something mighty curis 'bout her, too."

She sits now, quite unconscious of everything around her, the toe of her small red slipper peeping coquettishly out from the hem of her white gown, and Madam Dundas' card of invitation in her hand.

Miss Chidley, round and roly-poly, reclines comfortably on a divan near the enchantress.

"Dear Marion" has often these spells of complete abstraction, and Miss Chidley has at last become well enough acquainted with her young relative to know when a "fit is on," and keep silence accordingly.

Miss Lafarge starts from her reverie with a suddenness that takes the spinster's breath away.

"You blessed old thing," cries dear Marion, springing up from her chair, and embracing her relative affectionately, "you haven't said a word for a month. Speak now, and say if we are to accept the invitation to Bywater. I'll own that I am longing to go there."

"Then the affair is settled," says the spinster, placidly. "We'll go. Bywater Park is quite the show place of this part of the country."

"I long to see the interior of that

Fell lightly beneath the table.

old, old house." Miss Lafarge has subsided from her momentary spasm of affection, and again takes her seat. "Do you know that I almost believe I shall have the opportunity offered me to reign over Bywater Park as its mistress at some time not distant."

"The Captain is considered a great catch," says Miss Chidley, with a genteel smile. "It would be an excellent match all around."

Dear Marion bursts into a sudden silvery gush of laughter.

"Yes," she says, "all around. Do you think Madam Dundas would consent to it—the marriage, I mean?"

"She has made Captain Hazard her heir. I don't think she would object, for she thinks Hazard the finest and best specimen of his sex living to-day."

"And you?"

"Oh! if I must give you in marriage to anyone, Captain Hazard is as good as another. All men are alike to me. I regard mankind as a sort of necessary evil, to be tolerated accordingly." Miss Lafarge laughs again and opens her rosy mouth to speak. But the words die on her lips, for at this instant the door bell rings. And there is something so peculiar and imperative in the sound of the bell that dear Marion springs to her feet in alarm and consternation.

All the lovely pink color in her blonde face fades away; involuntarily her hands clench upon her breast.

She stoops slightly, with her ear inclined toward the door. She shakes, trembles. Obe has answered the bell, and she hears the measured voice of the caller as he says, coldly:

"I wish to see Miss Lafarge."

The look of fright upon her face deepens into one of abject terror. Her teeth chatter. A chill shakes her from head to heel. Her face is ghastly; her lips livid. "Lost!" she mutters huskily between her dry lips, "lost!"

Miss Chidley gazes at her in astonishment. "You are ill, Marion. What is it?"

Miss Lafarge evidently does not hear the question. Certainly she does not heed it.

"Marion, you need see no one, if you choose not to," Miss Chidley says, reassuringly. "What has frightened you?"

Miss Lafarge is shaking like an aspen; still she makes no reply.

The parlor door swings open and Obe's woolly head is thrust into the room. "A gentleman to see Miss Lafarge," says Obe, placing a card in front of the trembling girl.

Her blue eyes glance over the name written on the card, and a wilder terror leaps into them.

She shrinks down—down; she seems to actually grow smaller—to wither and shrivel up within herself. Her hands clench more tightly; the white foam gathers about her blue lips.

There is a great square table standing between herself and the door. A heavy silken scarf drapes this table, whose fringed ends come down to the floor. Miss Lafarge suddenly sways forward, and falls lightly beneath this table, as a short, squat man, with broad shoulders and a sweeping black beard, enters the parlor. From where he stands he cannot see her, and does not see her.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Did Not Know the Step.

Young Clergyman (who is broad church and believes in dancing)—Miss, may I have the pleasure of the next waltz?

Young Lady—I would be very happy, Mr. Chasuble, if it were not for one thing.

Young Clergyman—What is that, I pray?

Young Lady—I am looking forward to a better whirled.

MAMMA—Ethel, dear, I noticed that young Mr. Spriggs kept his eyes on you all through the sermon. Ethel—Why, isn't Sunday the best day for him to show his devotional feelings?—Tid-Bits.

IT is usually a warm day when a coal man gets left.

AN ODD MAN IN TENNESSEE

A Man Who Can Outrun a Horse in a Long Race—Fishing with His Hands.

Wesley Welsh is an athletic prodigy, says the Nashville American. He has gone barefooted every summer of his life. His first shoes he paid for with quails that he trapped. He never took medicine; was never sick. His speed and endurance on foot are wonderful. A noted fox chase is recalled in which he caught the fox after a run of four hours, when all but two of twenty-five hounds had held out in the run of from fifteen to twenty miles. He refers to Mr. Goodwin and Maj. Jones, of Memphis, who saw him catch the fox. About twenty-five men on horseback started in the chase. He is confident that he can excel in speed and endurance both hound and horse in a long race. He has made a mile in 1:58, and ten miles in eighty minutes. His longest and best walk was from Atlanta to Chattanooga in a day and night, 140 miles. He had two companions on the start, but left them behind. On a hard journey of this kind he wants no food but sweetened coffee, and he will refrain from eating the day or so beforehand. He says we all eat too much. He prefers wild game and then mutton and beef to hog meat, and regards chicken as the worst of meats.

As a fisherman he is a noted expert. He "won't monkey with a hook." In an emergency he will take a sledge-hammer and pound on the rocks under which they hide in clear streams and the fish will soon float from under and on the surface dead. He illustrated for Dr. Safford some time ago the power of dynamite. He went to a very deep hole in the Turnbull, disturbed the water so as to have the fish go down to the deep part, and threw in the dynamite tied to a rock, and says it not only killed everything, but split the base rock in twain. The water is so clear that the rent rock may be seen easily. His usual method is to dive after fish, feeling for them under rocks. The greatest fight of his life occurred on such an occasion. He had dived and was pressing a fine cat, which got in a hole or crevice in the rocks, when by a turn of his hand he found he was fastened. The idea of losing his life so foolishly mortified him, and he made a desperate pull, leaving part of the flesh in the crevice. He determined to pull loose, even if he should have to pull the arm off if possible. He did another perilous thing in exploring the Murrell Cave. Dr. Vance and Frank Senff, of Memphis, went in with him; they all went to where the oil would not burn in their lamps, and then he went out, got a torch, and went farther in, he thinks farther than anybody else ever went. He arrived at a lake and could go no further. Murrell's name is in the cave. He had an interesting experiment with fish in winter. He managed to drive a fine lot under ice to the end of a slough. He cut a trench in the ice dropped a plank in, and then caught them with his hand, throwing them on the ice. They froze rapidly, some of them adhering to the ice. On taking them home he said he did not like to clean them frozen, and a friend who was present suggested that he put them in the spring and let them thaw. He did put them in the spring, and he was amazed to see them go to swimming.

A California Bear Story.

"Liar by the clock" is a new slang phrase that is becoming quite popular. It is not exactly a pretty phrase, but in most cases it is forcible. If a man attempts to spin a yarn that has its impossibilities or improbabilities, and a listener fails to believe it, he is liable to exclaim. "You're a liar by the clock."

One-half of the phrase is ancient enough and has caused many a drop of blood to be spilled, but the latter half of it is new. As to the origin of the "clock" portion of it, Billy Wolf, the comedian, says:

"If I am not mistaken, the saying originated in San Francisco. There was quite a number of well-known business, theatrical, and newspaper men chatting away in the club rooms. They were trying to outdo each other on yarns, when an old, but jolly, bald-headed fellow—I don't remember his name—got up for his turn. He was leaning by the mantle-piece at the time, and commenced with some of his early days in California.

"'In those days,' said he, 'there wasn't any finery in these parts like now, but we had to live on what we could procure with the aid of our gun. Quite a number of us were out hunting for supper one evening, when a family of bears came into view. There must have been 100 of them. At the sight everybody cut and run but me. I stood my ground alone like a man. I had a brave record, and it was necessary for me to keep it up. Well, on came the bears, and away went my comrades. The hairy family came straight toward me, but I didn't flinch a bit. I knew my old muzzle loader would do no good in that crowd, so I coolly throw it away, folded my arms complacently, and looked the bears square in the eyes. I had always believed the human eye was the strongest weapon man could have in close quarters, so I determined to try it. As I said, I didn't budge. When within a foot of me the foremost bear halted and seemed paralyzed at my cool reception. The others saw him stop, and followed his example. I didn't move a muscle. Then they all fell on all-fours before me, as when they started for me they came on their hind feet.

"'My eyes were so powerful that every one of the fearful huggers glanced suspiciously at me, and turned one at a time and ran into the woods, leaving me.'

"At that instant the clock gong on the mantle rung solemnly, and the narrator paused a moment. When he was about to resume some one in the crowd cried: 'O, that's too thin, you know; you're a liar by the clock.'

"This cut the story short, and the old 'forty-niner' set 'em up all round. The next day the story got on the streets, and the phrase became common. Since then it has spread all over the States."—St. Louis Sunday Sayings.

Prejudice to the Stage.

Some girls there are with intellectual proclivities so strong as to constitute a vocation, the fulfillment of which it would be cruelty to deny them. Of these the artist girl and the writing girls and the singing girls, have already won the day. Where the inclination and the talent are so powerful as to force the gates of prejudice, the result is certain. There will be one worker more in the field, with what commercial success remains to be seen. The one profession, however, which still is barred, is the stage. However strong the passion, and however profound the dramatic power of a girl, the ordinary mother puts a veto on "the boards," and would rather see her daughter in her grave than on the stage. Something has been done of late years to lessen this prejudice—to remove this prohibition—by the social status and moral character of certain actresses. It is felt now that the women who play "Juliet" and "Lady Macbeth," "Lady Teazle" and "Lady Spanker" are not persons whose society no good man seeks and no honest woman entertains. There are actresses by the score whose private lives are unspotted as the coats of so many snow-white ermines; and, pace Mrs. Grundy, more will join the band before the end of all things. But the prejudice is very stiff and stout and we will have to go through a few years more before we have battered down the old palisading to let in the tree frank maids of Dian's train—those who have no desire to "be of, my other, but who have the histrionic faculty as their sisters have the artistic, the literary, or haply the philanthropic or the scientific. All things come in time—if not always to those who know how to wait. For many a Mrs. Siddons or a Patti, a Giulia Grisi or a Mme. Vestris has faded away in obscurity and within the four walls of a meager home who, had she been suffered to appear before the footlights, would have charmed the world and made her own fortune.

How He Learned to Smoke.

